Promptly at seven o'clock Past President Charles A. Saxton, who presided as toastmaster, sounded the banquet call. It was a jolly party that assembled about the beautifully decorated tables in the handsomely decorated dining-hall. The decorations were exceptionally artistic in their soft tones of green and yellow, brightened in places with red roses. The flowers used in the decorations were daffodils, jonquils and red roses set off with palms, laurel and smilax. The decorations were by Otto Ernst the florist member of the club, who incidentally later in the evening was voted the handsomest member of the club.

After the offering of grace by Rev. "Alex" Abbott, the sky-pilot of the club, the following excellent menu was served:

Fruit Cocktail
Celery Radishes Olives
Fried Filet of Sole
Tartar Sauce
Julienne Potatoes
Filet Mignon with Mushroom Sauce
AuGratin Potatoes Green Peas
Dinner Rolls
Saxton Salad
Campbell Ice Cream
Assorted Cakes
Cigars Cigarettes

Seated at the head table were President and Mrs. Hugh B. Campbell, Past President and Mrs. Charles A. Saxton, President and Mrs. Edward Regan of the New London club, Secretary and Mrs. J. Nelson Weymouth, Treasurer and Mrs. Clarence A. Spear, Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Clapp, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Tirrell, Miss Frances Foskette of New London, Rev. William A. Keefe and Timothy C. Murphy.

Never is a Rotary Ladies' Night a success without "Bill" Park as songleader so Bill was the choice to lead in the singing of Rotary songs. One guest remarked, after Bill had led in an especially lively number, "I'll bet when Bill departs this earthly sphere he will be presented a harp and made leader of the celestrial choir—if he goes that way." Besides the singing during the dinner there was much spirited by-play between various members of the club. This amusing part of the programme was clamed under the caption, "Freedom of Speech," by those who feel that they have some "serious" matters for discussion.

The first Rotarian to propound something of a "serious" nature was Arthur M. Brown, "silver-tongued orator from that beautiful little village nestled in the hill where the stately waters of the Pachaug mingle with those of the more stately Quinebaug." Arthur spoke feelingly on what he considered a great slight, claiming that after he had been pronounced the most eloquent man of the club he was thwarted at every attempt at displaying his oratodical ability. He was just soaring into some artistic flights of oratory when he was again squelched and Bert Leroy was given the floor. Bert demanded that a vote be taken as to the handsomest man in the club with the result that Otto Ernst was acclaimed to be the Adnois of Rotary. Otto was made the recipient of a vanity case and powder-puff, and being quite overcome at the unexpected honor conferred upon him was almost, but not quite, speechless.

One other pleasing feature of the programme was the telling of two bedtime stories by Lucius Briggs. It was not, however, until Lucius had been sufficiently urged and finally threatened that he courageously consented to narrate two really humorous anecdotes about two well known members of the club. Lucius after long suffering, has redeemed himself.

Gift to Past President Saxton.

President Hugh B. Campbell at this time presented a beautiful caraffe set to Past President Saxton on behalf of the club. In making the presentation President Hugh Campbell voiced the appreciation of the club for the wonderful and untiring service given by Mr. Saxton during his term as president. Mr. Saxton gracefully responded, thanking the members of the club for the gift and said that his term of office had indeed been an enjoyable one and that when he was chosen to be prsident it was one of the happiest moments of his life.

Henry J. LaFontaine, who is always in the best of voice at a Rotary Ladies' Night, sang two delightful selections, Major and Minor (Spross), and In the Time of Roses (Reichardt). Each number was heartily received and Mr. LaFontaine responded with an encore. Mrs. Charles A. Saxton played the accompaniment.

Another delightful treat was the two solos by Miss Frances Foskette, of New London, formerly a member of the Chicago Grand Opera Co. Miss Foskette's numbers were Break O' Day (Sanderson) and Rain (Curran). Both were rendered in a most pleasing voice rich in tone and with remarkable clarity. She reponded with Annie Laurie as an encore. Arnold J. Goldstein played for Miss Foskette.

As has been the custom for the past four years a large number of beautiful prizes are given out to the women who as the programme stated, are lucky investors who receive a dividend. Each woman guest present received a corsage bouquet of roses.

Edward Regan, president of the New London club, was called upon for a brief talk and responded by extending the best wishes of the New London to the Norwich Rotarians, saying that he hoped that during his term at the helm of the New London club the friendship that exists between the two clubs would be even more firmly cemented.

Following the dinner programme an uproariously humorous sketch was given, entitled "Not by a Dam Site." This was supposed to have been "a thrilling movie in three heartrending parts by Carl Webster Pierce." The cast was as follows:

Ma Sweet, herself, E. Lane Bliven.
Pa Sweet, grist mill owner, Lewis M. Young.
Tootsie Sweet, their daughter, Joseph C. Worth.
Caesar Penny, a skinflint, Edwin A. Harris.
Percival Penn, an author, Frank P. Welch.

The portrayal of the various parts was exceptional every character affording no end of tmusement. The sub titles that were thrown on the screen were in themselves a source of mirth.

Between the reels a specialty, Gager's Gambols was staged with Bert Gager playing the star role of Philip Graves. Playing with Bert was Bert Cary as Jay, Al Bliven as Hortense and Hugh Campbell as the vamp-ire. This was received with enthusiasm and the Gamboliers were forced to return several times.

Following the last act of the sketch the dining hall was cleared and dancing was enjoyed. The music, which was exceptionally good, was furnished by Harry Feltcorn's orchestra, Mr. Feltcorn having recently returned from a lengthy New York engagement. The orchestra also rendered a delightful dinner concert during the serving of the menu.

The programme was in charge of William G. Park and Russell A. Clapp as chairman of the committees.

No evidence that dissemination of news by radio would affect the publication or demand for newspapers was reported by a committee on radio at the opening session of the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' association.

TONY BARBER FINISHES FIRST HALF OF MATCH LEADING FILMORE 36 PINS

Tony Barber of Danielson came from behind Wednesday night and defeated Roy Filmore of this city by 36 pins in the first ten strings of their 20 string match for a purse of $400. Starting off with a handicap of 39 pins piled up by Filmore in the first three games, Barber cleaned up two big strings and at the end of the fifth string led by one pin. This was enough to start with and the up-state bowler beginning on the last lap of the match piled up a lead of 42 pins in the next four strings, losing the final game by 6 pins, leaving him a net score of 1106 to Filmore's 1070.

Filmore started out strong and won the first game by 15 pins, adding another 5 pins in the second string and then jumping to a 39 pin lead on the third string when he collected 113 to 94 for Barber. Hare Filmore's jinx came in and bad breaks featured. Barber, hitting the head pin for good breaks took the fourth string 109 to 89 and in the fifth won out 117 to 97, driving Filmore for the first time into the small side of the score.

The last five strings were sad and weird ones for Filmore. Working out of bad breaks he would climb up within a few pins of Barber only to have the Danielson bowler start on the strike and spare outing. Both bowlers went strong in the eighth game Filmore piling up 113, but Barber hit better and counted 123.

The last game was a fast one Filmore overcoming a lead of 15 pins piled up by Barber in the first two xxes, only to have his score bettered by Barber in the ninth. Going into the tenth Filmore spared and took seven, winning by six pins.

The match will wind up at Danielson Friday night when Filmore goes there to endeavor to cut down Barber's 36 pin lead and win out.

The scores for last evening were:

| Filmore. | Barber. |
|---|---|
| 116 | 101 |
| 96 | 97 |
| 113 | 94 |
| 89 | 109 |

CHAPMAN HIGH LOSES TO PRATT HIGH, SCORE 5 TO 4

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Essex, April 23.—The Chapman each nine lost its third game in as many starts, losing to Pratt High this afternoon by a 5 to 4 score. Tech played good baseball in the field and hit when hits meant runs but the Pratt High team was a share better in either department of the play and that shade was enough to win.

The game was arranged early this morning, being originally scheduled to be played yesterday, but due to the inclement weather the game had to be cancelled. The weather this afternoon was suited for football rather than baseball and on one or two occasions a batted fly ball into the outfield was at the mercy of the wind. The ball was misjudged and the batter was awarded a two base hit.

Linkletter occupied the mound for the Red and Black and gave a good account of himself on the elevated plateau. His pitching this afternoon was a decided improvement over his attempted start of the season against Old Saybrook High. Linkletter went the route and he kept the Pratt High hits well scattered. He deserved to win but his teammates behind him were at times inclined to bpal erratic in the field.

Mr. Weaver of the faculty had charge of the team, Coach E. Stanley Taylor being out of town.

PLAINFIELD WINS CLOSE GAME FROM BARTLETT HIGH

(Special to The Bulletin)

Webster, Mass., April 23.—Plainfield High school won from Bartlett High here today by a score of 4 to 3 in a hotly contested game. The hits were even, both teams collecting 14, but the visitors made theirs count more.

Plainfield started with 3 runs in the first inning and added one each in the fifth and sixth frames enough to win. Bartlett got one in the third and had a chance to tie in the 7th, but ended by getting two runs. The scores:

YANKS HAVE EASY TIME AND WIN FIRST HOME GAME

New York, April 23.—The New York Yankees opened the American league season here today with an easy victory from Boston by a score of 13 to 4. Pennock had no difficulty in holding the Red Sox in check, while the Yankees knocked out Ehmke in three innings, and continued to pile up runs on Fuhr and Howe, his successors. The champions made fifteen hits for thirty-one bases, Ruth leading with a homer, double and single.

The game was accompanied by the usual opening day band concert and parade, and was attended by Mayor John F. Hylan, Judge Landis and a military detachment from Governors Island, which rolled in the big baseball, which was started on its way in Chicago a week ago. The Yankees raised the American league pennant, while Judge Landis presented each of the New York world champions diamond studded watches to celebrate the winning of the world's series last October. ## How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Fordham Star and Giant

Runners on first and third. Fifth inning. Score 2-1 in favor of team in the field. Left hander at bat. He's a good hitter. One man is out.

How should the infield play?

In such a situation the infield should play half-way in; not on the grass, but close to it. A good hitter may either hit a fast one to the infield, thus giving the fielders a good chance for a double when thew are in this position, or he may hit a slow one. In the latter case the infielders are in a position to come in and field the ball in time to catch the runner going home from third at the plate.

Th infield should switch around a little toward right field with a left hander at the bat under these conditions to prevent him him hitting the ball through them.

LEONARD WILLING TO BUY STATUE FOR GOOD LUCK

New York, April 23.—Benny Leonard is willing to buy a statue, if necessary, to preserve his good luck in the ring.

Diana is the lightweight champion's good omen and his faith in her was disclosed today when he made a bid to purchase the figure of the Goddess of the Chase atop the town of Madison Square Garden, historic arena which is to be razed to make way for a business skyscraper.

ZEV, 1923 THOROUGHBRED CHAMPION, ENTERED IN THE PAUMONOK HANDICAP

New York, April 23.—Zev, thoroughbred champion of 1923 and greatest money winner of all time, is expected to make his debut as a four year old next week in the Padmonok handicap, feature of the opening day of Metropolitan racing at Jamaica track.

The Rancocas stable star opened his brilliant campaign last year by triumphing in the Padmonok. From that race Zev won on to triumph spectacularly in the Kentucky derby, the International match with Papyrus and to divide honors with In Memoriam, great Kentucky colt, in two special races.

Zev's record winnings now stand at $296,675 and the colt's campaign this year including three prospective races for rich purses against Epinard, French crack, in the fall, promises to add substantially to this amount.

Two Kentucky derby favorites, the unbeaten Sarazen and St. James, also may be seen under colors for the first time this year in the Paumonok.

SINGLES IN FIFTEENTH WIN FOR BOSTON, 3 TO 2

Boston, April 23.—Singles by O'Neil, Stryker and Bancroft in the last of the 15th, with none out, scored the run which gave Boston a 3 to 2 win over Philadelphia in the opening game of the National league season here. Stryker pitched the last seven innings, held the visitors to two singles, no runs and made two hits himself. Stengel's triple and Padgett's infield single tied it for Boston in the ninth. Couth pitched the full game for Philadelphia.

Before the game a wreath was placed at third base in memory of the late Norman "Tony" Boeckel and Mayor Curley gave a short memorial address. He pitched the first ball with Major General Clarence R. Edwards at bat, Lieutenant Governor Alvan T. Fuller catching and John A. Heydler, president of the National league, acting as umpire. The score:

DEMPSEY HERO OF THE BULKELEY SOPH-SENIOR GAME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 23.—Youth must be served, the Bulkeley seniors took no stock in this old saying and as a result found themselves on the end of a 12 to 4 score this morning at Morgan park. The sophomores demonstrated that though they are only in the second year they can easily beat the students that will graduate this year. For three innings the teams were playing fine ball, but then there is always an ending to a good thing and when the sophomores up and struck—no not for an increase in wages for they are not bricklayers—but for a few runs, they were successful and four runs trickled across the platter in the fourth frame. After this inning it was only a procession around the bases that the sophomores began. But then every parade or procession must have a leader and what a leader is to an army, Peanut Dempsey was to the Sophomores. He was the inspiration of the entire second year men and time and again he stirred up a revolt against the fourth year men that was put down only after some difficulty by the latter named students. Dempsey was appropriately named when he was nicknamed Peanut. For he is no taller than a peanut. But this morning, if he ever had any enemies in the sophomore class, they were his friends for this occasion. Many times he was called Shrimp or Peanut on the campus but did not mind it and took this name instead of his own, James. If his mother expected James to be a minister when he grows up she will be mistaken, for he has the making of a ball player and there are not many ball players converted into ministers. It is also expected that James Dempsey will not be called Peanut or Shrimp for same time to come at least. He is a hero to be worshipped and the sophs are worshipping him. Naturally they will refrain from calling him Peanut Dempsey, the name he was dubbed the first time he made an appearance on the campus.

A triple, two doubles and a single is a good day's work for a player even in the majors. Well, that was all that young Dempsey walloped the ball for. Nobody can stop to wonder why he is being held an idol at Bulkeley. It was young Dempsey that was really responsible for the sophs going to the top of the ladder in the standing.

Led by young Dempsey, the sophomores made it so uncomfortable for Murphy, the senior hurler, that he was forced to retire in the fifth inning. Bugs Silva replaced him and the sophs still kept on adding runs until their total reached 19.

Phillian for the sophomores twirled a good game throughout. He took things rather easy while he occupied the mound. He received good support from his teammates also. They were out to take the game and nothing could stop them.

BULKELEY TEAM GETS IN SOME REAL PRACTICE

New London, April 23.—The Bulkeley High baseball nine held its first practice of the week at Morgan park this afternoon. The team was in charge of J. Milton Phillips, former coach at Bulkeley, but now at Mount Vernon, N. Y. Coach Robert T. Aldrich is still in Springfield, Mass., endeavoring to arrange a home and home series with Springfield Tech. Before Coach Aldrich returns home, he will make an attempt to arrange a game with the Hartford and New Britain High nines. Although nothing official has been received as to whether Bulkeley would travel to Springfield and engage the Tech High school of that city in a game on Saturday, there is a rumor afloat that Coach Aldrich has secured this game and that the Bulkeley team would depart for Springfield Saturday morning.

If Bulkeley does play on Saturday the team will be without the services of two players, George Sheflott and Joe Barry. Sheflott was unable to play Saturday afternoon against Plainfield due to the inflamation of his tonsils. He was under the knife this afternoon at Dr. Hugh P. Lena's hospital on Broad street. He was told by the doctor to not engage in baseball games for at least two weeks. During practice this afternoon, Joe Barry had one of his fingers badly split that will probably keep him out of the lineup for a week at least. If the Bulkeley team is scheduled to play any games this week, there will be two positions that will not be easily filled.

N. F. A. SCORES EASY VICTORY OVER LYMAN HIGH

Using second string players for the greater part of the game, the Norwich Free Academy piled up 34 runs against Lyman Memorial High of Lebanon, Wednesday afternoon at the Academy campus, winning by the score of 34 to 4.

The visitors fielded poorly and in the first inning with two hits the Academy collected 18 runs, nearly all coming in as a result of errors. Busch, shortstop for the Academy was the star, getting two home runs, two doubles and a single in five trips to the plate. Phil McNamara also hit well, getting a circuit clout. Steinman pitched 3 innings for the local team, allowing only two hits and getting seven strikeouts. Segal, the Academy first string pitcher was on the mound in the ninth and last inning. Three Lyman High men reached the bases and then Segal fanned the next three men, ending the inning.

The Academy players Wednesday were, Hollander and Milecki, catch; Steinman, Courture and Segal, pitch; Gee, 1b; Haslam 2b; Busch, ss; Cimikowski, 3b; Covey, lf; Kilroy cf; Pitt rf.

The score by innings:
L. H. S. ..... 1 1 0 0 2 0— 4

On Saturday the Academy meets Putnam High on the campus here and it is expected that a victory will be chalked up for the local team. Plainfield will come here May 17th and the Academy expects to be in shape to beat that fast team by that date.

UNOFFICIAL DENIAL OF CHARGES AGAINST TILDEN

New York, April 23.—Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the Davis cup committee of the United States Lawn Tennis association, declined today to comment upon William T. Tilden's rejection of an invitation to further discuss his amateur status with the committee here next Friday but intimated that no further steps were contemplated at present in the controversy growing out of Tildens player-writer activities.

Unofficially, however, denial was made that there was foundation for Tilden's charge that the wording of the amateur rule committees report on the player-writer ineligibility interpretation was changed after his recent conference with executive committee of the U. S. L. T. A. The executive committee it was pointed out, was vested with power to interpret the decision of the association, but not to alter its phraseology.

Tilden's amateur status, it was further pointed out, was a question for the amateur rule and not the Davis cup committee to decide. So far as the latter body is concerned, he is eligible for Davis cup or Olympic games competition this year as the player-writer rules does not go into effect until next January.

THREE AMERICAN GOLF STARS TO GO TO ENGLAND

New York, April 23.—Three American professional golf stars will sail June 11 for England to seek honors in the British open championship. They are Walter Hagen, former holder of the British title, who finished second in last year's tourney; MacDonald Smith, who was third in the 1923 British event, and Gene Sarazen, P. G. A. champion.

Sarazen and Hagen plan an English exhibition tour before starting in the open championship, beginning June 23. The former intends later to visit the continent and participate in the French open title tournament.

LOOSE FIELDING COSTS YALE TEAM THE GAME

New York, April 23.—Loose fielding by Yale players at critical moments gave Columbia a 4 to 3 victory over the Eli nine here today. The game was a pitchers' battle between "Ducky" Pond, Yale football star, and Captain Jack Van Brocklin, Columbia leader, Pond allowing only five hits and Van Brocklin being found for six safe blows.

Columbia scored the winning run in the fifth when Moeschen started to center, took second when Wadd muffed the ball and scored on successive infield outs. Yale had tied the score in its half of the same inning when Van Brocklin threw wild to right field, two men scoring. Score:

Van Brocklin and Shattuck; Pond and Mallory.

MIDDIES TAKE 1 TO 0 GAME FROM PENN STATE

Annapolis, Md., April 23.—The Middy nine defeated Penn State in a splendidly contested game today, 1 to 0. Heimer let State down with one hit, a two bagger, and was given great support. Navy got its lone tally in the third inning as a result of McKee's triple, followed immediately by Fenne's single. Fine work of the navy fielders often prevented what seemed to be sure hits. Score:

Harrison and Kerstter; Heimer and Haerlin.

AMERICA WILL ENTER MANY OLYMPIC GAMES

New York, April 23.—The American Olympic committee today officially notified the French Olympic committee that America would be represented in the track and field gymnasts, swimming, boxing and catch-as-catch-can wrestling competitions at the 1924 games. Decision as to entrances into the Graeco-Roman style of wrestling has been deferred.

America will enter four men in each of the 25 track and field events and six men in the marathon. Individual entries are not necessary before June 26.

SENATORS BUNCH HITS TO WIN FROM BRIDGEPORT

Bridgeport, April 23.—Bunched hitting coupled with Bridgeport's errors gave Hartford a five to nothing victory over the Bears in the opening game of the Eastern league season here today. The batting and fielding of Rodrigues featured.

The third day of the April sessions of superior court for Washington county Wednesday was when the petit jurors under summons reported.

Thomas Caswell and Albert W. Corkum were sentenced to serve one year in Providence county jail by Judge Edward W. Blodgett, on charges of breaking and entering and larceny. They were indicted Monday for entering a house owned by Nathaniel Smith of Providence on the Post road at Matunuck, March 23, last, when they were arrested and held by the Westerly police, before being returned to Kingston jail.

When first presented, Corkum pleaded guilty and Caswell not guilty. Caswell told the court that he was not in the Smith house the night of the break. Corkum was sentenced on the indictment returned last Monday, and Caswell on an old one, charging breaking, entering and larceny at the home of Howard M. Webster at Narragansett Pier, upon which he had pleaded nole and had been given a deferred sentence. Sheriff John H. Wilcox told of Caswell's previous record in the vicinity. Assistant Attorney-General John F. Hartigan represented the state.

A surprise miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Edwina A. Krebs Wednesday evening, at her home, 198 Beach street, by some twenty friends. The party was in anticipation of her marriage with Raymond E. Pendleton, of Pawcatuck, to whom her engagement has been announced. Miss Krebs, who is very popular, has been in the employ of the Westerly branch of the Industrial Trust company for a number of years. Following the festivities of the evening sandwiches, fruit salad, cake, ice cream and coffee were served.

The funeral of Patrick H. Morrison, 78, whose death occurred Monday morning, following seven months' illness, at his home, 6 Grove avenue, was held from his home at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. Requiem high mass was sung at 9.30 at the Immaculate Conception church by Rev. Daniel F. Sullivan, S. M. Jesus, Lover of My Soul, was rendered by Martin H. Spellman. The bearers were six brothers, Richard, James, William, Thomas, John and Pierce Morrison. Burial was in St. Michael's new cemetery. Representing Narragansett council as a delegation were present W. Lester O'Brien, Philip Dowd, Jerry McMahon, Michael O'Connor, Daniel Casey and Thomas Cowley.

Mr. Morrison was born in Ireland, the son of James and Elizabeth Morrison. He came to this country with his parents when but three years of age and has been a resident of Westerly practically all his life. For many years he was employed as a cutter at the New England Granite company.

Mr. Morrison was an active member of Narragansett council, No. 21, Knights of Columbus, and was a past grand knight of the council. He also had membership in the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Healey Morrison, his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Morrison, a sister, Miss Katherine Morrison, and six brothers, Richard, John, Thomas and Pierce Morrison of Westerly, James and William Morrison of Newark, N. J.

Ulick J. Burke of Carolina was in Westerly Tuesday.

Reporting to a committee of which Arthur N. Nash is the chairman, have been many knights templar, members of Narragansett Commandery, No. 27, K. T., of Westerly, who have signified their intention of visiting Norwich on the afternoon and evening of Monday, May 5th, as guests of Columbian commandery, No. 4, K. T. Other guests invited are the Grand Commandery K. T. of Conn., Palestine commandery, No. 6, K. T. of New London and St. John's commandery, No. 11, K. T. of Willimantic. The Westerly band has been engaged to accompany Narragansett commandery, Em. Sir Charles M. Kebbe, commander, leaving Westerly at 3 o'clock for the Norwich street parade at 4 o'clock, with dinner at 6 and entertainment at 8 o'clock in the state armory. The other members of the Narragansett commandery committee are Thomas McKenzie, William Mitchell, Albert E. Barber and John O. Mills. Wednesday evening at the Masonic hall on High street the officers of Narragansett commandery with Charles M. Kebbe as eminent commander, conferred the Temple degree on a class of candidates.

At the home of John D. Traggis, 4 Lincoln avenue, Pawcatuck, Sunday last, at an announcement party, Mr. Traggis made known the engagement of his niece, Miss Irene Koulbanis of Westerly to George Voulas, of New Haven. Mr. Voulas is a business man in the Elm city. Refreshments were served to many guests from Norwich, Bridgeport, New Haven and Westerly. Vocal and instrumental music was provided, the guests staying until an early hour the next morning.

The Assistant Attorney General assigned all criminal appeals to Wednesday, April 23, at Kingston.

The history of Westerly's sewage problems was explained to members of the municipal section of the Providence Engineering Society and of the American Society of Civil Engineers, by Thomas McKenzie, superintendent of the water and sewer departments of that town, at a joint meeting of the two organizations held in their rooms on Washington street Tuesday night. Stephan DeM. Gage was chairman.

The meeting also marked the annual election of the municipal section and these new officers were named: Chairman—Frederick W. Waterhouse; Vice Chairman—Walter M. Massee; secretary—Earl C. Craig. They were nominated by a committee of which Francis B. Marsh was chairman.

In his address on sewage problems, Superintendent McKenzie covered a period of more than 30 years, telling of the many changes that were made before the present sewage system, declared to be one of the best in the state, was constructed. Total costs were close to $500,000. The costs were covered by the tax laid upon persons living in the districts benefited, as provided in a special act of legislature to this effect. He also told of the workings of the system and of the work still going on toward the construction of proper filtering beds.

Three cases of assault with a dangerous weapon against Thomas Fisher of Providence in the Washington county superior court, which arose out of an attempt to land a load of liquor at Wickford, Sept. 23, 1923, were passed temporarily Wednesday by Justice Edward W. Blodgett. Judge Blodgett's action followed a legal tilt between Assistant Attorney General John P. Hartigan and Benjamin Cianciarulo, counsel for Fisher, over a petition filed late this afternoon by Mr. Cianciarulo.

The petition urged that the case be removed to another county by reason of local prejudice in the matter and by reason of newspaper attacks in this case. Mr. Hartigan stated that notice had not been served on the state, and Mr. Cianciarulo stated that he would serve notice on the Attorney General if possible today. Judge Blodgett announced that he would set a date for a hearing on this petition as soon as possible.

John I. Way, a prohibition officer under Director Sheldon, who is a most important witness in the case against Fisher, and who was summoned three weeks ago to appear in court this morning, did not appear.

A statement was sent to the court by Chief Raiding Officer Raymond T. Sewall of Providence from Dr. Truesdal, head of the Truesdale Sanitarium in Fall River, stating that due to conditions resulting from an operation in December, 1923, he deemed it necessary for Mr. Way to cease all activities for a period of several days.

It has been learned that Mr. Way was performing his duties as prohibition officer in Providence last Monday.

Mr. Cianciarulo moved "that the cases be passed until September due to the Attorney General's insinuation we are not honest in this matter."

The court denied the motion, and Mr. Cianciarulo asked that his exception be noted.

The members of St. Michael's branch, Connecticut Council of Catholic Women, conducted a rummage sale Wednesday afternoon and evening at the parish hall. The proceeds will be used in the charitable work being done by the organization. Mrs. Patrick Mullaney chairman is of the committee in charge.

MYSTIC

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Richard William Morgan Post, American Legion, held Tuesday evening in the Legion Room at the Community House, for the purpose of completing organization of the auxiliary. The meeting was called by the temporary president, Mrs. Adaline Tedford. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Adaline Tedford; first vice president, Mrs. Margaret A. Palmer; second, Mrs. Wilhelmina Gramley; secretary, Mrs. Charles Stribl; treasurer, Miss Jane Edwards; sergeant-at-arms, Miss Eva Edwards; chaplain, Mrs. Blanche Sparks.

Following the election, plans for the future were discussed and it was decided to hold a cake sale.

The bazaar held Tuesday by the Home Missionary Society of the Methodist church was a very successful affair and a substantial sum was realized, for the work of the society. In the evening a stereopticon lecture on "Rural New England" gave pleasure and instruction to a good sized audience.

In a recent issue of the Hartford Times an account is given of the delegates to the general assembly of the National Society of Daughters of the American Colonies, held recently at the New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., one of the delegates being the registrar of the Connecticut Branch of this society, Mrs. Louis F. Allyn, one of Mystic's best known residents; the name of Mrs. Bessie Ludwig appears as an alternate. Mrs. Ludwig is very well known here where she spends a portion of time each year. Another delegate well known here were Miss Ethel J. R. Noyes, of Washington, D. C., who had a report on the memorial bench presentation at Plymouth, Mass., last August.

Miss Annie E. Greenman, Miss Eleanor Fish, Miss Annie A. Rathbun and Miss Joanna W. Burnet attended the meeting of the Stonington Travel Club Tuesday afternoon at which President Benjamin T. Marshall of Connecticut College gave readings on contemporary British and American poets.

Alonzo B. Cellis is ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George H. Sherburne on Denison avenue.

Helen Starkey Chapter of St. Mark's church is to meet this (Thursday) afternoon.

Stonington Lodge, No. 24, I. O. O. F., met Wednesday evening.

Benjamin F. Burrows is seriously ill at his home on West Mystic avenue.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret E. Buckley was held Wednesday morning at her home on High street at 8.30. Requiem high mass at St. Patrick's church was sung by Rev. W. J. Fitzgerald. Burial was in St. Patrick's cemetery.

Rev. Elmer Higley, D. D., superintendent of Methodist work among the American Indians, was the speaker at the Wednesday evening service at the Methodist church and gave a most interesting account of work in this field. This was one of the special services being held through out the week in observance of World Service Week drive which it is planned to cover the missionary field of the church.

Parties from Bridgeport have rented the blacksmith shop of the late Thomas Melvin and are soon to start business there.

During the storm Monday evening, lightning struck the chimney on Mrs. C. D. Wiggin's house on Borodel avenue and damaged it to such an extent that it will have to be re-built. The resident of Fred Gledhill at the top of Reynolds Hill was struck also, the lightning striking the peak on the north side of the house and doing slight damage.

The schools on the west side closed Wednesday afternoon to permit the teachers to attend the teachers' meeting in Groton.

LEONARD BRIDGE

Miss Fannie Vinegrad, a teacher in New York city and her sister, Mrs. L. B. Pioney are spending the Easter vacation with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Vinegrad.

Everett Chappell's household goods were moved last week from Plainville to the B. F. York house. The truck encountered such deep mud by the Electa Brown farm that a horse team had to be procured and the goods unloaded on a wagon and transported the remaining distance, barely a quarter of a mile. This little stretch of road is shaded by pine trees and the frost is later in coming out and after most roads are dried out this spot each year continues to be deep mud and handicaps the farmers in that section in getting out with their cars. A good coating of gravel might work wonders in bettering spring traveling conditions here, to the convenience of many Goshen taxpayers.

Mr. and Mrs. David Walsh with John G. Kneeland and two sons of Lebanon, motored to Hartford Sunday and spent the day with their cousins, Mrs. E. H. Bosworth and Mrs. F. S. Shakleton and their families. Mrs. John A. Kneeland and daughter Esther, who have been spending a week with Mrs. Kneeland's mother, Mrs. George L. Dewey at Canton Center and with cousins at Hartford returned home with them.

George B. Watrous was in Hartford Monday.

William Brown, who was taken to the Backus hospital, Norwich recently has been transferred to the Norwich state hospital at Brewster's Neck.

H. T. Bland has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Luella Jacobs in Willimantic.

Mrs. Marx Lubetsky, Mrs. Israelson and Herbert Watrous were in Willimantic Saturday.

Lloyd Grant of Prankline has moved to the Electa Brown farm, which he recently purchased.

Fred Royce of Monson, Mass., was a caller at S. H. Cummings' Friday.

STATE'S ATTORNEY HADLAI A. HULL CRITICALLY ILL AT NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 23—Practically all hope has been abandoned for the recovery of State's Attorney Hadlai A. Hull, who has been confined to his home, 73 Vauxhall street, many weeks as a result of a general decline in health. In reply to an inquiry as to Mr. Hull's condition today, Dr. Winthrop McGinley stated that there was a slight improvement noticeable.

Mr. Hull's condition assumed one of extreme gravity Sunday when a change occurred and since that time has been confined to the bed. Mr. following Sunday's relapse, but he Hull responded partially to treatment extremely weak.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles R. H. Stoeckel today caused the operator's license of Arthur Weeks, 24 West Coit street, to be returned to the owner.

Fortunato Felia of Grand street will be in the police court tomorrow morning charged with non-support, for today Mrs. Felia declared to Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin that her husband was not living up to an order of the court to properly provide for her. Felia was found at his place of employment this afternoon and was ordered to defend tomorrow the action instituted by his wife.

Thomas Fowler has sold a house and lot on Ocean avenue to Absolom Bellefleur.

Mrs. Sterling King of Bank street, Mrs. Albert Patterson and infant son of Noank, Mario Cassani of Westerly, Herbert Rix of Stonington, Mrs Stewart Caulfield and infant son of Morse avenue, Groton, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Murphy, wife of Michael Murphy of Fleming court, Groton, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at Sacred Heart church, Groton, where a mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William J. Fox, the pastor. The bearers were Edward, John and Lawrence O'Mara and Michael Murphy, four grandsons of Mrs. Murphy and Patrick Falvey and Michael Devine. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Amelia C. Bisbing, wife of Henry F. Bisbing of Gales Ferry, were held this morning at 9.30 o'clock at her home. The services were conducted by Rev. W. D. Woodworth and Rev. Allen Shaw Bush of Gales Ferry. Rev. George R. Atha, pastor of the Groton Heights Baptist church, sang "Abide With Me." The body was forwarded to Philadelphia for burial.

The funeral of Miss Margarette Oliphant Stearns, daughter of Rev. John H. Stearns, pastor of Montville Baptist church, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the parsonage and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. The services were conducted by Miss Stearns' father. Burial is to be in Philadelphia.

Patrolman Timothy T. Sullivan has been off duty because of illness since last September. He has been suffering from asthma, but he believes he has succeeded in getting the best of the ailment and he anticipates returning to his duties on the police force the first of May. Officer Sullivan has been under treatment by several physicians.

Dr. Winthrop McGinley went to Warren, R. I., today, to accompany his mother to her home in this city. Mrs. McGinley has been visiting relatives in Warren.

Lorenzo Montalli and Tony Pierfederici, sent to jail for violation of the liquor laws, have completed the terms of imprisonment and have been released.

Genaro Gentilicia, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at a local hospital, will be able to return home this week.

City Manager Holt and Director of Law McGuire are undecided as to the course they will pursue in the case of Louis Elfenbein, who erected a garage under a representation that he was to "inclose a veranda" at his newly acquired property on Hempstead street. The permission granted to Elfenbein has been revoked, but the officials are undecided till they have studied all the circumstances of the case as to whether they will proceed against Elfenbein criminally or secure the removal of the garage. That the garage will be removed there seems to be no doubt, but how that will be accomplished is not so clear. It was erected without any authority and so is unlawfully on the site it occupies, but there are details about securing its removal are yet to be decided upon.

Bankers declare that there never was a time when so many checks were presented to the banks without funds being on deposit to meet them. A statute provides against this practice, but when depositors hide behind the excuse that they did not realize that their accounts were overdrawn creditors hesitate to prosecute. However there is a limit to patience exercised in this way and the arrangement of some of the lax debtors is likely soon.

The Metel Griswold will open for the season this year the middle of June. C. A. Judkins will again manage the hotel.

With work well under way on State street, between Meridian and Huntington streets, where a stretch of paving is to be laid, traffic is compelled to make a detour, through Meridian street to Church street, to Broad street. While the detour is made no parking will be allowed on Meridian street so as not to create a congested condition.

Mrs. Jane Cassidy of Norwich and New London, recently appointed policewoman here by City Manager William A. Holt, will assume the duties of her office next Thursday. Mrs. Cassidy is in New Haven, in which city she has been for a week receiving information as to the duties of policewoman from Mrs. Mary Nevins, policewoman of the New Haven department. Mrs. Cassidy will return to New London early next week and will hold conference with Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney relative to the conduct of her work.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Max Yavner of Jersey City, N. J., to Miss Anna Rappaport, daughter of Mrs. Bessie Lebowitz of Linden street.

Allen Penhallow of Fairo Harbour place, who is at his summer home at Montville recuperating from a severe attack of stomach trouble, has practically regained his health and anticipates returning to New London the latter part of the week or early next week.

Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Taylor have returned to their home at Best View, Waterford, after having spent the greater part of the winter at Wabasso, Fla. They made the trip by automobile.

Miss Movies Matteson, of 28 School street, employed as teller by the Savings Bank of New London, is a patient at Lawrence hospital, having recently undergone an operation for appendicitis. Her condition is said to be improving rapidly.

Mrs. O. S. Youngs of South Norwalk is the guest of her son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. O. M. Youngs of Lincoln avenue.

Mrs. Nora O'Conner of Montauk avenue was operated upon recently at Lawrence hospital for appendicitis. Her condition is reported as improving.

Mrs. Buck, wife of Rev. Walter P. Buck of 357 Broad street, who has been confined to her home since January as a result of a severe attack of neuritis, is planning to go to the highlands of Pennsylvania as soon as her condition will permit.

There is universal hope here that the advent of mild weather will bring activity to Groton Iron Works. The loss of that establishment to New London is considerable for a great many men were employed there during the progress of the war and a large sum of money was disbursed in wages weekly. That great patronage for New London stores they do not receive from that source now. The works were sold at auction some weeks ago. The buyer may have a purpose to which he will apply the establishment, but it is believed the intention is not to engage in the production of marine craft, a business the establishment is fitted for. The purchaser evidently has no intention of dismantling the establishment as he has made no move in that direction since he acquired the property. It is understood there is very valuable machinery in the buildings and that indeed some of it has never been taken from the cases in which it reached the establishment from the manufacturers. Little is doing at the Ship and Engine company plant at present, another source of diminished business for New London.

A disposition is manifested on the part of lot owners in Cedar Grove cemetery to improve the appearance of their possessions there. Recently there has been a demand for the lots provided in the northeast section of the grounds and the revenue of the association has thus been increased. The cemetery has not been a source of any profit to the management in recent years, but it is hoped that a change has come now.

The City bank of New London is to erect a clock that will be some six feet in height and three feet in width as soon as the timepiece can be procured and put in place, corner of Bank and Golden streets. The clock will be a convenience there and will be something that section has not had. To those who recall when there was a horsechestnut tree in the center of the walk and a two-story brick building occupied the corner, the change that has taken place there seems a great one.

Traffic Officer John Courtney suffered an attack of pleurisy this afternoon and was compelled to obtain relief and go to his home and receive medical treatment.

Frank A. Cantwell, formerly manager of the Crocker house, now manager at the Belleview-Stratfield at Bridgeport, was calling on friends in New London yesterday.

The last cottage service of the year was held at the Congregational parsonage Wednesday evening. The meeting was in charge of Rev. William C. Prentiss, with Roy Barstow pianist. A short social period with music was enjoyed after the meeting.

The third class social of the year is to be held in the high school symnasium this (Thursday) evening, when the Class of 1925 and 1926 will unite and hold a freshman-sophomore social. There will be dancing, joint committee chosen from the two classes.

A special meeting of Plainfield Grange, P. of H., No. 160, was held in the grange hall, Tuesday evening, with Worthy Master William F. Hall in the chair. There were several new members, upon whom the first and second degrees were worked by the degree team which was as follows: master of the degree team, William Hall; overseer, Harold Burgess; lecturer, Carrie Gardiner; chaplain, George H. Dewley; secretary, Mr. Devlin; treasurer, Harold Hopkins; steward, Ernest Buell; assistant steward, Irving Dawley; ladies' assistant, Henrietta Buell; Ceres, Emily Hopkins; Pomona, Helen Gardiner; Flora, Marian Barber; gate keeper, Fred Lyon. After the team had concluded its excellent degree work, the sisters of the grange served the supper which was the prize for the winning of the entertainment contest by the men a few weeks ago. The menu was as follows:

Baked Beans
Frankforts Salad
Rolls
Cake Coffee

A short business meeting was held, at which it was voted that the next meeting be held May 6, when the third and fourth degrees will be worked. The old fashioned dance, planned to be held May 3, has been postponed to May 9. A large number of members are planning to visit Wolf Den, Saturday evening, to be invested with the fifth degree, or Pomona degree of the grange.

The Ladies' Aid society met Wednesday afternoon, with Clarence Jeffers, in the New Village.

The meeting of the Young Men's Bible class of the Congregational church, which was to have been held Wednesday, has been postponed to this (Thursday) evening. The meeting will be held in the woods, supper to be cokced over an open fire, the formal meeting to be held after.

Maurice Foster, of Moosup, who has recently opened a store in Danielson, and another in Putnam, has made arrangements to open one in this village, in the building to be vacated by the Salisbury store, when the latter moves into its new quarters, where Dearnley & Clarke formerly operated.

Mr. and Mrs. John Geroso and three children, of New York city, have returned to their home after a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Henry Richardson, who has been for three years an employe of Harry Greene, has concluded his work there and is now employed on a farm in Rhode Island.

Charles Hopkins, who was home for the Easter vacation, has returned to Brown university for the last term of the year.

The members and friends of Canterbury church on the green have been invited to attend the evening service at the Congregational church next Sunday. The service will be in charge of the pastor, and Cecil L. Butler.

Thomas Ryan and an unidentified companion were found dead from illuminating gas in a rooming house on Meadow street, New Haven. Their bodies were discovered by the landlady who went to the rom to make the bed.

LIBERTY HILL

The Liberty Hill church was well filled Sunday morning, about 60 persons being present. The floral decorations in charge of Mrs. Horace Foot were unusually attractive. Rev. W. S. Woolworth preached a fervent Easter sermon from the text, Romans 14th, 9th verse. For to this end Christ died and rose and revived that he might be Lord, both of the dead and living. Mrs. E. E. Caples sang in excellent voice, 'The Garden of Prayer.

There was no church service Sunday evening on account of an invitation from the Baptist church, Lebanon Center, to attend a Easter concert there, which was attended by a large number from here, who declared the service of high order and very impressive.

There was quite a heavy thunder storm from 3 to 4 Tuesday morning. The rainfall was not very great.

New desks have been installed in the local school room.

Dandelions are above ground sufficient so that a local man had a taste with his dinner on Monday.

Grass is looking well, but the weather being cool and very wet, only a few peas have been planted as far as known.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis, who have lived with Mrs. Lewis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hyde of Village Hill the past year, have moved to Jewett City on a large farm.

Dorothy Latham and her brother Richard of Yonkers, N. Y., visited their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Clark, Wednesday and Thursday, this week being their Easter school vacation week.

Walter Cleland and son Walter, Jr., and daughter Marion and Bert Whistle of Plainfield, visited Mr. and Mrs. John Kinnaird Friday and Saturday. Miss Vivian Cleland and a friend from Plainfield were also visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Kinnaird.

WEST KINGSTON

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Rawdon spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Ethel Blanche Knowles, wife of Thomas T. Knowles, died Thursday morning, April 17th. Mrs. Knowles had been in ill health for several years—but had been steadily failing during the winter. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 1 p. m. at Wallis Corner church of which she was a member. Rev. Warren Dawley, pastor, spoke comforting words to the bereaved family. Mrs Annah Tucker, a Friend's minister and cousin of Mrs. Knowles assisted in the service.

The attendance was large as she was a life long resident of this vicinity. Miss Bessie Cross sang Lead Kindly Mrs. Knowles, assisted in the funeral was in the family lot at Usquepaugh cemetery. Mrs. Knowles was a member of Richmond grange and of Pomona grange, so the grange conducted the ceremony at the grave. She leaves her husband, mother, one sister and abrother.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Tucker had a family gathering Sunday. All their children and grandchildren were home

G. T. Marsh of Kingston lectured at the West Kingston church Wednesday evening. He spoke on his travels and showed pictured of the different places he has visited.

B. C. Locke and J. Reed of Usquepaugh were callers in this village Monday.

S. C. Webster, Jr., of Westerly was a visitor Sunday with relatives here.

The man who achieves self-mastery has accomplished much.

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

Now She Can Walk "I'm Happy," Says Peterson

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big-hearted rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment.

"Read this letter by Mrs. Albert Southcott. It seems like a miracle but it is true, every word of it.

"Is it any wonder I am happy!"

Dear Sirs:

"I was a sufferer from an old running sore and ulcer. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars worth I am cured. The ulcer was 2 inches by 6 1-2 inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's Ointment.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Lyndonville, N. Y. Price 35c.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Getting Ready for Bed

"She's a dear little bird," said kind, sleepy Uncle Lucky, as the tiny sparrow ended her song, and the nice old gentleman rabbit hopped up from the hammock and into the kitchen to get some crumbs for the little baby birds. Just then, the Old Red Rooster sang at the top of his voice:

"No, it won't make a fine house."

"Oh, I'm a Red Rooster with ginger and pop,
I'm crazy to work and never to stop.
The garden is spaded, the clock striking three,
But nobody wants an old rooster like me.

So all I can do is cockle do dee,
Cockle do dee, and cockle do do.
How happy I am when my work is all through,
Cockle do dee, and cockle do do."

"To wit, to woo!" all of a sudden went an old owl in a barn nearby so frightening the Old Red Rooster that he crept under the front porch and wouldn't come out till the next morning.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Uncle Lucky, "Roosters are more afraid of owls than rabbits!" But you see, Uncle Lucky happened to know this old owl and so wasn't afraid of him.

"Well, it's almost time for bed," said the old gentleman rabbit, hopping into the house and locking the front door. "As soon as I wind the clock we'll be ready," and taking the key out of a vase on the mantlepiece, he turned it around till the old clock struck thirteen.

"Oh, dear me!" cried Little Miss Mousie. "That's a dreadfully unlucky number. I'm afraid of a clock that strikes thirteen all at once!" and, scampering across the room, she jumped into Uncle Lucky's old wedding stovepipe hat. "This will make a very fine house," she laughed, peeping over the rim to wink at the little rabbit. But he never said a word, knowing how excited it would make the old gentleman rabbit to think that Little Miss Mousie was going to live in his dear old wedding stovepipe hat.

"No, it won't make a fine house. I'll never part with that old hat of mine," answered anxious Uncle Lucky, hopping over the rag carpet. But before he reached his old hat, Miss Mousie had climbed up the lace curtains.

"Thank you," sighed dear Uncle Lucky, sitting down at the piano.

"My dear old wedding stovepipe hat,
I'll never part from you:
I wore you on the happiest day
I ever, ever knew.
She wore a wreath of orange buds,
Upon her golden hair,
And on her finger, white as milk,
A diamond solitaire."
But, Oh, it's long ago since then!
Those happy dreams I have today
Are those I once have known."

And, picking up the candle stick, the old gentleman rabbit hopped upstairs with his little bunny nephew.

FIRE INSURANCES WERE COMPANIES HIT HARD IN 1923

New York, April 23—Although the volume of fire insurance business was the greatest in the history of the United States during 1923, underwriting was transacted at a loss, according to the annual report of The Spectator, official insurance journal.

Premium income of the 249 stock companies which report to the New York insurance department and which transact about 90 per cent. of the country's business amounted to $844,641,891, or $8,000,000 more than the similar group in the peak year of 1920. To offset this gain there was net loss in surplus of almost $7,000,000 and a large decrease in dividend payments.

Comparison of fire insurance statistics of 1923 with those of 1906, the year of the San Francisco fire, reveals the rapid expansion of business. Loss payments in 1906 totaled $230,000,000 as against $453,000,000 last year. Assets at the end of 1906 aggregated $418,599,406, whereas the present figure is $1,474,165,850. Capital and surplus have increased from $181,165,118 to $613,597,662 during the same period.

WHEN TO TRANSPLANT

It is ancient and common sense advice that the best days for transplanting are cool, cloudy ones and that it is best to transplant before a shower, a proceeding which is a matter of guesswork at best but with fair chances during showery April.

The beds in the garden where the plants are to be placed should be in fine tilth to receive them. The tiny roots from the sifted earth of the seed boxes and frames will not penetrate lumpy soil as quickly as if they have a fine prepared soil as in the bed well pulverized and fertilized.

Set the seedlings deeper than they stood in the seed box or frame. Often they will have long necks from stretching towards the light. Plant them halfway to the first pair of leaves. In the case of cabbages and members of its family, many gardeners plant so that the seed leaves are just above the surface of the soil.

Unless the seedlings can be moved with their root system unbroken and some soil clinging to it, the best plan is to snip off the ends of the leaves about halfway to equalize for the root disturbance so that the broken root system will not have the burden of supporting a full leaf system. The plants adjust themselves much more quickly with this snipping process carried on consistently. Seedling onions should be cut off a third of the way and transplanted lettuces should have half the leaf cut off.

Firm the seedlings well into the ground and water thoroughly. It is a good plan to pour a little water into the hole as the seedling is set into it and then water again after the soil is filled in and firmed. A dibber is an excellent instrument for rapidly making the holes for the tiny plants and it makes a tapering cavity adaptable to the taper of the roof system.

Usually a gardener is likely to forget his distances and start to setting the seedlings closer and closer together as the tiny plants look lonely when first set out at proper distances. The safest way is to carry a ruler in your pocket or to cut a stick the required distance and use it for each plant. Then the distances will be uniform and the bed will present a much neater appearance when the planting is completed.

CARROTS AS A DELICACY

Carrots have become such a steady staple in the groceries of the larger cities that it may be a waste of space for the owner of a small garden to grow them for winter use. But for the summer garden they are an ideal vegetable to grow and as easily raised as radishes with the exception that they need a longer period of growth. Fresh pulled and cooked sugarary young carrots are a much esteemed delicacy, although within the memory of our parents they were seldom seen on the table and were regarded as "cow fodder" or bait for muskrats and a few other fur bearers. Every garden needs a row of carrots for the unusual value of this vegetable as a flavoring for soups and stews and the convenience of having them always at hand in the garden will save many a trip or telephone call to the grocery in addition to cash.

The seed germinates a little slowly and should be sown as soon as the ground can be worked. It will not begin to appear for two weeks or even later. It is so fine that it is almost an impossibility to sow it thinly, so thinning must be practiced thoroughly as soon as the plants make leaves enough to make the task of pulling easy. Leave not less than two inches at the least between them and three is a much surer and safer distance. However, if they are to be pulled for baby carrots, two inches is about right. If to be left until half grown, three inches is best. If they are to mature for winter storage four to six inches is necessary.

The Danvers and Chantenay strains are favorites for the home garden. As carrots are a faster maturing crop than other root crops it will be necessary to make two or three sowings during the course of the summer to maintain a succession of young carrots for the table. The early strains are advisable for young carrots, growing the long and half long types for the matured root crop. Carrots are now a staple in the diet of babies which is an added reason for maintaining a supply of them in the home garden. Young carrots are best for this purpose.

HOW TO TRANSPLANT

Transplanting, in addition to its practical uses in lengthening the season and giving vegetables and flowers that could not mature in the short growing season in the open ground, has real cultural value. Each transplanting gives a thicker and more sturdy root system to the plant. Plants which, left to themselves, would depend largely upon a single root sent straight down, are induced to make a large system of branching roots by transplanting and this, in the long run, gives a more extensive feeding system.

This fact is recognized in the frequent transplanting of nursery stock, the fibrous roots developing through transplanting and enabling the nurseryman to remove larger shrubs and trees with balls of earth held by the mass of fibrous roots than if they had been left to grow without moving. Transplanting also gives a wide scope in the selection of good individual specimens and a wider choice in location.

It is the chief work of the late April and early May gardening operations when seedlings crowd the seed boxes and the hot beds and cold frames. From a trowel full of seedlings the sturdiest may be selected and the rest discarded, as a packet of seeds with ordinary care usually produces a great many more plants than are needed of can be well used in the average garden.

With seedlings in convenient boxes or frames, the gardener has time to give ground for the young plants thorough preparation and to study out locations if he has not already prepared a plan of his garden which too often happens. The seedlings, both in boxes and frames, should have a period of hardening off by as much exposure to the open air as is practicable before they are moved into permanent quarters. Some of them will have to be transplanted into other boxes before they can be put into the open ground, but the second transplanting will do no harm and they should have bigger root systems when the final move into permanent quarters is made and take hold much more rapidly than those which are given only one move direct from seed box or bed to their garden quarters. Transplanting is careful work, slow, and at times tedious, but important and necessary for garden success.

BEET TOPS AND ROOTS

Some people do not like the root of the beet and some do not like the tops as greens but it is difficult to find a person who does not like one or the other. The large majority that like both makes the beet a garden standby. It is also one of the very easiest vegetables to grow and one that it is difficult to plant without being able to harvest some kind of a crop even if nothing more than a mess of greens.

Young beets are one of the delicacies of the summer menu pulled when they are not more than two inches in diameter. It may be noted here that a mistake often is made in cooking beets. The skin must not be broken or the beet is to retain its rich red color. If the tails are cut off close to the solid portion or if the tops are cut down into the flesh, the red coloring matter will boil away and the sliced beet will be anaemic.

Beets will always be planted too thick and no vegetable demands early thinning as rigorously. They like moist conditions at time of planting but will stand considerable drought later in their growth.

FEW GOOD GARDENS CAN DO WITHOUT COLD FRAMES

Although there might be some question as to the necessity of hotbeds only, each gardener with any ambition to produce the earliest vegetables such as beans, peas, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, kohlrabi, lettuce, parsley, radishes, spinach, etc.

There is often some confusion caused by people misunderstanding the difference between a hotbed and a cold frame. A cold frame is a box-like frame covered usually with glass, although sometimes with cloth, that is used for plants in advance of their normal season without receiving any heat except the rays of the sun. The frame of a cold frame resembles very much that of a hotbed but the sides of a cold frame are placed on the surface of the soil and are not embedded in it.

Like a hotbed, a cold frame is so arranged that the sash slopes toward the south in order to take advantage of the direct rays of the sun. The board that forms the north side of the cold frame is usually not over 12 inches wide and that on the south side is usually about 8 inches wide. These boards, which may be of any kind of lumber, are usually one inch thick and are held in place by stakes driven about four feet apart, on alternate sides of the boards. These stakes are usually six inches wide, one inch thick and from 18 inches to 24 inches long.

Cold frames are sometimes made temporary so that they can be removed as soon as the plants are taken from them. In market gardens such frames are often located in the field where plants are to be grown and are moved as soon as the plants are transplanted.

Sometimes an exhausted hotbed, that is, one from which the heat has been exhausted, is used as a cold frame.

Cold frames are usually made of the same dimensions as hotbeds, that is, 6 feet wide and some multiple of 3 feet long. A cold frame 3 feet x 6 feet is usually ample for a small home garden.

The soil on which a cold frame is to be put up should be well fertilized before the frame is built. Sash and mats are used on cold frames the same as on hotbeds. If the weather conditions are likely to be severe it is usually desirable to bank the lower part of the frame with manure or with soil.—S. W. Shoemaker.

Your Next Car

Will be this Light-Six, if you learn the truth

We made a canvass of men who bought rival cars in this class. And we found that 96 in each 100 bought without knowing these facts.

So, for your sake and our sake, we want to present them to you.

Save $200 to $400

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. It builds in model factories, modernly equipped. It has spent $38,000,000 in the past five years on new-day plants and equipment.

By quantity and up-to-dateness it saves large sums per car. A car like this Light-Six, built under ordinary conditions, would cost $200 to $400 more.

11.4% less to run

This supreme quality means lower operating cost. Owners of fleets of cars in this class made audited records to prove this.

They compared 329 cars, running up to 25,000 miles each. And they found that the Studebaker Light-Six cost 11.4% less to operate than the average of its rivals. This includes depreciation. The saving was nearly one cent per mile.

The reasons are these

The Studebaker Light-Six, in its chassis, represents the best we know. In steel and in workmanship it is identical with the costliest cars we build.

It is designed and superintended by an engineering department which costs us $500,000 yearly.

Each steel formula has been proved the best for its purpose by years of tests. On some we pay 15% premium to makers to get them exactly right.

Each car in the building gets 32,000 tests and inspections.

* * *

The crankshafts are machined on all surfaces, as was done in the Liberty Airplane Motors. This extra care costs us $600,000 yearly, but it means perfect balance in the motor.

There are 517 operations in making this car exact to 1/1000th of an inch. And 122 are exact to one-half that.

Made by the leaders

This is one of the cars which has made Studebaker the leader in quality cars. Our sales have almost trebled in three years. The trend toward Studebakers has become a sensation.

Back of this car is an honored name, which for 72 years has stood for high ideals.

Behind it are $90,000,000 of assets, staked on pleasing you better than others.

* * *

Before you pay $1,000 or more for a car, these are facts you should know and compare. You owe that to yourself.

Send for the book

Mail us the coupon below. We will send you free our new book that will inform you on five simple things which reveal the value of a car. For instance: It will enable you to look at any car and tell whether it's been cheapened to meet a price or offers true quality.

It will tell you why some cars rattle at 20,000 miles and others don't. It shows one single point in a closed car which measures whether you're getting top or medium quality. The book is free—clip the coupon below.

Capitalizing April

Now with a tender growth the dear-eyed green
And silver mist and dim-discovered gold
Put forth on tree and bush; bright clouds are rolled
About the sky, of many dove-like sheens!
Quick threats of storm that mutiny, interweave
With sudden interchange of warmth and cold:
Oh, what a loss, if April should withhold
Winter has done his worst, yet failure smiles,
With coy persistence, from her recent shroud.
Fraught with expressive chorus of youth's caprice;
Lovely with green, each transient mood beguiles—
The cloud turns flame, the flame returns to cloud—
Joy trembles on the threshold of release.
—Bernard C. Jackson in Boston Transcript.

Spring Duties

The breakfast dishes in a row
Stand by, like soldiers grim,
And dusty rooms—how dust does thrive!—
Murmur of brooms to come.
But . . . all the birds are calling me
To come and twitter, too—
And there are brand new skirts to see
And skies are oh, so blue!

Before me is a basket low,
With socks of many a darn,
And every hole in heel or toe
Shows Duty leads that way.
But . . . there's a tiny breeze astir,
A baby daffodil,
Who nods a greeting, sweet and shy,
While sunbeams gild each hill.

I ponder on the How and Why,
Likewise on Ought and Must,
I call to mind my mission high—
Each housewife's sacred trust.
But . . . out beyond beckons the fields,
With lure of happy hours,
Glad birds, the call of each wild thing,
Red dawns and fragrant flowers—
Why should I work when every one's at play?
My duty's clear—I'll take a holiday!
—Louise Lombard Thomas in New York Sun.

WESTMINSTER

The platform of Westminster church was beautiful on Easter, with choice flowers in pots and in vases. A large jardienere of Easter lilies, several smaller with pussy willows and other greens from the woods; several other large arrangements of great delicate jonquils, given to the children and others present at the close of the services; cut and potted oxmas, geraniums and other flowers, formed the setting.

Children of the church school had the first part of the service and presented a playlet, "The Church school Builders" in interesting animated fashion with the following cast: Pastor, Miss Goodman, John Soderberg; deacon, Wm. Barton, Theron Brassil, Mrs. Olga Streator, president of Ladies' Aid, Olga Deviatac; Mrs. Hiram Bushwick, president of the trustees, Anna Deviatac; Chas. Newman, leader of the Boy Scouts, Harry Holstrom; Marie Holwell, leader of Girl Scouts, Louisa Soderberg; Mark Elwell of Boston, representing the Eastern States, in charge of an air ship party of visitors, Earl MacLeod; representative of twelve southern states, Annie Vitis; representative of Pacific Coast and the west, Wasco Vitiaz; representative of the middle west, Nicholas Vitiaz.

After the playlet and singing the old hymn, I love Thy Kingdom, Lord, with prayer by the superintendent of the church school the Easter Communion service was begun by a solo by George Inglis of Plainfield, who received expressions of sincere appreciation at the conclusion of the service.

A number from town, representing Buell union, W. C. T. U., are planning to attend the Norwich Golden Jubilee celebration Thursday afternoon to hear the address of Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith of Iowa, national superintendent of Christian Citizenship, and of the state president, Mrs. Mary B. Wilson.

MARKET WAS STRONG.

New York, April 24.—Stock prices moved up briskly today under the impetus of a broad covering movement which apparently was based on the realization that the short interest was becoming unwieldy as indicated by the unusually large number of stocks loaning "flat" and at a premium. Net gains of 1 to 2 points were quite common at the close, with the sugars, oils and motors giving the best demonstrations of group strength.

While sentiment is still divided as to the immediate trend of prices, opinion of traders was quite general that the so-called short interest in the market is one of the largest in history. Several brokers reported that the size of the "loan crowd" demanding stock to make delivery on short contracts this morning was the largest in their experience, the unprecedented number of 34 issues loaning "flat," that is, without payment of interest to the borrower.

Trade news, as a rule, was favorable. Loadings of revenue freight in the week ending April 12, which was made public today, showed a substantial increase after several weeks of decline. This was construed as an indication that there had not been any further sharp curtailment in business. Encouragement also was derived from the steel trade reviews which reported that the volume of construction work and of railroad consumption this month compares favorably with March.

United States Steel common closed nearly a point higher at 97 3-8. Baldwin rallied 2 points to 111 and then eased to 110 3-4. Strength of American Can, which closed nearly 2 points higher at 90 1-4, was attributed in part to reports that the company has settled the government's claim of about $4,000,000 for back taxes. Ample reserves had been set aside for this contingency. Studebaker closed more than 2 points higher at 33 7-8.

Short covering in the motor group was prompted to some extent by the statement of President Sloan of General Motors that sales of cars and trucks in the first quarter of the year were well above those of the last spring. Gains of 1 to 3 points were scored by more than a dozen stocks in this group including Chandler, Stewart-Warner, Stromberg Carburetor, Mack Truck, and the Yellow Cab issues.

Rich raw and refined prices, together with rumors of favorable dividend action, contributed to the strength of the sugar shares. Cuba Cane preferred rising more than 2 points and American Sugar Refining, Cuban-American, Punta Alegre and South Porto Rican rising 1 to 2. Resumption of dividends by Mexican Seaboard and reports of an increased consumption of gasoline stimulated the buying of the oils.

French and British exchanges mounted to new high levels for the year on what was described here as active short covering by European speculators, particularly in the London and Amsterdam markets. French francs crossed 6.30 cents and sterling sold above $4.40.

Call money again held at four per cent. all day. Time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with no change in rates.

BOND MARKET.

New York, April 23.—General improvement was shown in the bond market tone today, although trading was dull and uneventful. The upward turn in stock prices was reflected in stiffening quotations for virtually all classes of bonds. New issues totaling about $36,000,000, which were offered today, were readily absorbed.

A recovery of 4 1-2 points in the Wilson and Company convertible 7 1-2s followed announcement that the new recapitalization programme would be announced within a few weeks, and that a large majority of bankers holding company's notes had agreed to a six months' extension.

Despite strength of American Refining stock, the company's 6 per cent. bonds were subjected to selling pressure, a decline of more than 3 points representing about the only weak spot in the industrial list. Punta Alegre Sugar 7s moved higher.

Application of the "Nickel Plate" railroad to the interstate commerce commission to sell $26,058,000 5 1-2 per cent. refunding mortgage bonds and to issue $36,016,000 additional securities from time to time for refunding purposes, marks the first step in the road's financing programme. Offering of the $26,000,000 issue is not expected until authority of the commission has been obtained.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, April 23.—Influenced to some extent by the present favorable crop outlook and by the estimate that 105,000,000 bushels of domestic wheat would be carried over into the new crop season, the wheat market today underwent a moderate setback. Closing prices were unsettled, 1-2@ 5-8 to 3-4c net lower, May $1.03 7-8@ $1.03 and July $1.04 5-8 to $1.04 5-8@ 3-4. Corn finished 1-8 to 5-8c down, oats at 1-8c off to a shade advance, and provisions varying from 3c decline to 5c gain.

Most of the downturn in wheat values came during the last half of the board of trade session, the market in the first part of the day showing no decided change. The bulk of the earlier transactions consisted of adjustment of open accounts, substituting May delivery for July. Meanwhile, neither sellers nor buyers were apparently willing to take any determined new stand. Later, however, crop reports and the carry-over prospect had an evident bearish effect, and so too, did announcement that additional amounts of wheat were being put into store here for delivery on May contracts. Nevertheless, the declines which followed were due more to absence of demand than to any special attack from the selling side.

Corn weakened as a result of scattered selling based on the slowness of shipping call from the east and on reports that corn planting was making fair progress as much north as the Arkansas-Nebraska line.

Oats held within narrow limits, the distant deliveries acting a little firmer. Seeding was reported as nearing completion.

CURB MARKET.

New York, April 23. — Active short covering in the oil group imparted a strong tone to today's curb market. Standard Oil issues led the recovery, gains of 1 to 3 1-2 points being recorded by Humble, Imperial of Canada, Prairie Oil and Gas, Prairie Pipe, Sola Refining and Standard Oils of Indiana and Nebraska, as well as by such independent issues as Mountain Producers, Gulf of Pennsylvania and Penn-Mexico Fuel. Trading in the industrial group was rather light with American Gas and Electric new stock, American Light and Traction, Centrifugal Cast Iron Pipe, and Lehigh Power securities rising 1 to 2 points. National Tea advanced 8 points to 360 on a few odd lot sales.

Speculative interest in the mining group centered principally in the penny issues, gains and losses in which were about evenly divided.

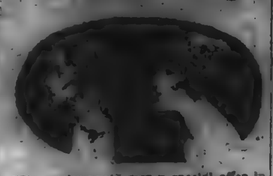
Reader Takes Newer Form of Iron—Feels Years Younger



"Six weeks ago I saw a special offer in the paper telling how thousands of people grow old in looks and energy long before they are really old in years, because, as examinations by physicians have shown, an enormous number of people do not have enough iron in their blood. I have been taking Nuxated Iron for two weeks; the results are simply astounding. The roses have come back in my lips and cheeks and I can conscientiously say that I feel ten years younger."

The above is a typical hypothetical case showing the results that have been achieved by a great many people since we started this "satisfactory or money back" offer on Nuxated Iron. We will make you the same guarantee. If, after taking the two weeks' treatment of Nuxated Iron, you do not feel and look years younger, we will promptly refund your money. At all druggists.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BREED THEATRE

The Rex Ingram production for Metro of Scaramouche has been acclaimed as the greatest achievement in the history of motion pictures. Founded on Rafael Sabatini's novel of the French Revolution, it tells the story of a young nobleman, Andre-Louis, who devotes his life to the cause of the rebels when his dearest friend is murdered by a powerful marquis and the courts refuse to take action. Andre-Louis joins a group of strolling players, taking the clown role, Scaramouche, and, under that disguise, helps stir the whirlwind of rebellion that culminates in the attack on the Tuileries. Alice Terry, Ramon Novarro and Lewis Stone have the principal roles and there are 10,000 persons in the mob scenes. In making an epic of frenzied passions and tense adventure live again on the screen, Mr. Ingram has even surpassed his own production of The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.

Scaramouche will be shown twice daily at 2:30 and 7:30 at the Breed theatre for the remainder of this week.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Today will be observed as Fast Day in New Hampshire, now the only state which retains that holiday in its calendar.

Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to the United States, is to be the principal speaker today at the opening of the British Luncheon Club, in New York.

The twenty-third Carnegie Institute Exhibition of Contemporary Paintings will be opened in Pittsburgh today and continued through June 15.

A campaign against the "silly and ridiculous" modes of dress among the school girls will be launched today with a girls' State clothing contest at Galveston, Texas.

Measures for the reform of the public service will be dealt with at a special session of the Newfoundland legislature which has been summoned to meet today.

Establishment of possible "air universities," or classes taught by radio, will be discussed at the meeting of the National University Extension association, opening today at the University of Wisconsin.

The fifth annual convention of the National League of Women Voters, meeting today at Buffalo, will signal the opening of an intensive nation-wide campaign "to get out the woman vote" for the 1924 election.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Northfield Alumnae to Meet.

The third meeting of the New London Northfield club will be held in the parlors of the First Baptist church, that city, on Saturday afternoon, April 26th, from 2 to 5 o'clock. Miss Fannie C. Hatch, alumnae secretary, will bring greetings from the Seminary, and the club will be more completely organized. The club, though of recent origin, is one of about 30 scattered from Maine to California, composed of alumnae of Northfield Seminary, East Northfield, Mass. Miss Maude E. Allen, of this city, is president of the local organization, the fourth to be formed in the state of Connecticut.

Broadway Theatre.

A great aggregation of vaudeville acts have been assembled for the last half of this week, starting today, at the Broadway theatre.

Jean La Costa & Boys heads the list of star acts. The company consists of five people who present a de luxe minstrel offering.

Walter Laddie and Rose Gardens appear in a comedy skit entitled The Chauffeur and the Maid.

Margret and Morrell in The Tourists offer a story with comedy, song and dance in five scenes, first, Cook's Tourist Agency; second, in Ireland; third, in France; fourth, Chinese saloon, finale, back to the U. S. A.

The Waco Comedy Four with Dave Gardiner offer excellent harmony singing and comedy. A bit of mimicry, some clogging and a little instrumental music is thrown in for good measure.

Well, see Gloria Swanson in A Society Scandal at the Broadway. For you who love her for her gowns, see it. You'll fairly gurgle with delight over these new masterpieces. For you who whooped with joy because Gloria proved in Zaza and The Humming Bird that she is really a mistress of emotions, come and whoop some more.

Ethel Barrymore appeared in the story on the stage, but we like our Gloria better.

PALACE THEATRE

Billy Allen and his company succeeded in amusing quite a number of Norwich theatregoers at the Palace last night when they presented the snappy musical revue, Around the Map, which proved even better than their two former presentations in this city where they will remain the rest of the week. Again Billy Allen delighted the appreciative audience with his clean and wholesome comedy of the third degree staged by Bert Leighton. Miss Gladys Briggs scored again in her delightful dancing. Billy Allen was seen in several new roles when he appeared in the midst of an Arabian Desert and in a Mexican town. Miss Jean Lowery, the young and pretty ingenue again delighted the audience with several good numbers. A comedy entitled Scandal Seekers will be presented today. Too Many Sweethearts tomorrow and My Vampire Girl Saturday evening with a special performance Saturday afternoon for the children entitled Jack and Jill in Fairyland.

Strand Theatre.

A big picture with a strong story, superbly acted by one of the finest casts yet seen—this description fits Quicksands, at the Strand theatre. It is a picture that should be taken advantage of by every movie enthusiast in town. It has more tense moments, more genuine thrills than can be crowded into a review. The film is of the sort that must be seen to be appreciated. No recital of its plot can do justice to the way it is directed and acted.

To satisfy those who must know in advance what it's all about, the story deals with a plot to smuggle narcotics across the Mexican border into this country, the daring business being in the hands of a vicious "ring" or gang with headquarters in a sinister resort camouflaged as a cantina—in other words, a cafe.

Near at hand is a United States military post commanded by Col. Patterson, whose son's whereabouts are unknown, but who is really a hanger-on at the cantina and a drug addict. A Mexican belle is an attractive feature of the resort and she is kind and helpful to the youth. At the military post all are interested in the love affair existing between the first lieutenant and Miss Farrell, whose father is understood to be connected with the branch of the government service.

Helene Chadwick has never done anything more admirable and Richard Dix is ideal. The same may be said of all the others, of whom Alan Hale, Noah Beery, J. Farrell McDonald, George Cooper, Walter Long, Edwin Stevens, Frank Campeau and Dick Sutherland are only a few. Direction by Jack Conway places that young man among our best.

A new comedy and kinograms are the short subjects.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

At a special meeting of the Vestry of Trinity Episcopal Church, held on Tuesday, April 22, 1924, the following was passed:

MINUTE

In the removal from this life of our beloved friend and brother, Charles M. Phelps, Trinity Parish has met with a great and irreparable loss.

Always a regular and devout attendant at public worship, keenly interested in the work and activities of parochial organizations, and ever ready to respond to the various appeals, alike of the parish and of the general church, Mr. Phelps has left behind him in these respects an example well worthy of our emulation.

For over thirty years a faithful member of the Vestry, for ten years an efficient Parish Treasurer, and for many years a valued member of the committees on finance and music, he has, in all these and in many other important capacities served this parish long and well, and with uncommon fidelity. A cheerful and friendly disposition, possessed of a keen sense of humor, much beloved by all who knew him, he has left throughout our parish a name which will long be associated with sweet and tender memories.

Resolved that this Minute be spread on the Parish Records, and that a copy thereof be sent to the nearest relatives with the assurance of our sympathy.

Committee for the Vestry,
J. ELDRED BROWN, Rector.
S. ALPHEUS GILBERT, Warden.
HENRY F. PARKER, Warden

FUNERALS

1,000 CHILDREN ENROLLED IN WELL BABY CONFERENCES

About 1,000 children are enrolled in the Well Baby conferences now being held in the state. A year ago this was a new idea in health work—keeping the well babies well. But this slogan has caught the attention of mothers all over the state and they are now convinced that starting early in life and with health measures forms the foundation for 100 per cent health for the adult.

Conferences are now well established in 18 towns. In each community the conference is sponsored by a group of interested citizens. They make the local arrangements and keep up a lively interest in its progress. The local doctors give generously of their time, thus aiding in the improvement of community health.

Last month 346 children came to the conferences. The prevailing defects were diseased tonsils and adenoids, dental caries and poor posture. All of these defects can be corrected or prevented. So each conference becomes an educational center for the mothers who learn the value of proper diet in its relation to normal growth and health, and development of the teeth, as well as the need for rest and care. Physical defects are referred to their family physician, who gives advice about their correction. Three state nurses are located respectively at Winsted, Willimantic and Middletown. From these centers they visit the communities where well baby conferences are established. They are welcome visitors in the homes where mothers each month eagerly await them, and ply them with questions about the care of their children.

Were Visitors in Hartford

Mr. and Mrs. Fred K. Potter and children the Misses Lucille and Dorris, and Master Walter Potter spent the Easter holidays with Mrs. Potter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Robinson of Hartford. Mrs. Robinson has been ill and confined to her bed, but is now quite comfortable. Other Easter visitors were, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Glaeser of New Britain, Mrs. James Ashcroft, Miss Ruth Ashcroft, Mrs. P. Hansen of Hartford and daughter, Mrs. Thomas Sheehan of Norwich.

Automobile Stolen in Willimantic

The Norwich police were notified late Wednesday that a maroon Columbia roadster had been stolen in Willimantic. It has disc wheels and the registration number is 257.

WON $35,000 PRIZE IN WRITING CONTEST

Norwich acquaintances of Arthur Cormier of Cocagne, New Brunswick, have been pleased this week to learn that he has won the $35,000 prize for the finest and most beautiful handwriting, which has been awarded by a committee of judges in Paris. The prize has twice before been awarded, once in 1898 and again in 1908, the latter time to A. C. Tambiyn of Kansas City. Contestants are obliged to submit specimens of business writing, bird flourishing, artistic writing, card writing, text writing and engrossing.

Mr. Cormier, who is 32, is now studying medicine at Laval university, Quebec. He is a graduate of St. Joseph University, where Joseph O. Leblanc of 313 Central avenue was a student at the same time and in a competition in writing took the gold medal over Mr. Cormier.

DR. STURGIS SPEAKER FOR ARCHDEACONRY DINNER

It is expected to have 200 men from every parish and mission in the archdeaconry here for the annual dinner of the laymen of the New London archdeaconry, which will be held on the evening of Wednesday, May 14, in the ball room of the Wauregan house.

The principal address of the evening will be given by Dr. William C. Sturgis, educational secretary of the Department of Missions of the National Council of the Episcopal church. Dr. Sturgis is a speaker of great force and eloquence, and is in much demand throughout the country. The committee on speakers feels that it is fortunate in securing Dr. Sturgis for this occasion. A brief address will be made by Bishop Acheson. There will be music by an orchestra and popular and patriotic songs will be sung under a competent leader.

COURT FINES DRIVER FOR EVADING RESPONSIBILITY

On the charge of evading responsibility after an automobile accident, Speron Bekris of 16 Golden street was fined $50 and costs in the city court Wednesday morning by Judge A. F. Libby. He paid $60.62. Bekris ran into deputy fire chief's H. R. Taft's machine on North Main street Tuesday night and did not stop but drove off into a side street where deputy Taft followed him.

Frank Joubert of Jewett City who was in accident on North Main St., Tuesday night when it was found he was driving a public service car and was carrying no insurance was before the court but was discharged on order of Prosecuting Attorney Lee Roy Robbins.

Fred Lafreniere whose case has been postponed from time to time since Dec. 27 when he was presented on a charge of violation of the motor vehicle law had the charge against him nolled.

Mateo Guastamachio, proprietor of a bowling alley and pool room in the Thayer building, was fined $50 on the charge of allowing minors to loiter and $50 for keeping and maintaining a place where gambling was permitted. With the costs he paid a total of $109.46.

Henry Le Clair of Taftville who tore the coat off a man and ripped it to shreds when Le Claire was under the influence of moonshine liquor was fined $5 and costs, paying $17.06 and also is to pay $25 to the other man for a new suit.

FOREST STREET WOMAN PLACED UNDER ARREST

Mrs. Annie Zalinski, 40, who lives on Forest street on the corner of Aqueduct street, was arrested there Wednesday night about 1 o'clock on the charge of violation of the liquor law in making a sale of liquor earlier in the evening. According to the dumping a big jar of liquor into the police, Mrs. Zalinski could be seen sink before she opened the door to let them in when they went to the house to make the arrest. The woman was brought to the police headquarters by Sergt. Thomas Murphy and Officer P. Murphy in the motor patrol wagon.

Mr. Cunningham is a past commander of Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, and for some years was employed as a postal clerk at the local postoffice. Of late he has been engaged in the real estate and insurance brokerage business.

POSTPONE ARGUMENTS IN SUIT FOR $55,000

Under special assignment Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin was occupied in the superior court in New London Wednesday with the suit brought by Robert W. Perkins, receiver of the Shore Line Railway against Louis A. Levinson of Newburgh, N. Y., and the Maryland Casualty company of Baltimore, in which the former asks damages of $55,000 for alleged defalcation of Levinson to carry out the terms of a contract entered into by Levinson and the plaintiff.

The evidence was concluded Wednesday but the arguments were put off until the 9th of May.

According to the plaintiff's complaint Levinson doing business under the name United States Rail and Equipment company on July 26, 1920, agreed to purchase all of the track material of the Shore Line road from New Haven to Flanders Corners, East Lyme, for the sum of $340,000, five per cent of which was to be paid at the time of execution of the contract, and the remainder to be paid on or before Jan. 1, 1921.

The five per cent payment, amounting to $17,000 was paid, and also $26,858.65 for material withdrawn in accordance with terms of the contract. Payment of the balance of $267,141.35 has not been made, according to plaintiff's complaint.

The bonding company on Aug. 12, 1920, submitted to the plaintiff bond of the defendant for performance of the contract in the sum of $50,000.

The plaintiff avers that after Jan. 1, 1921, the market value of rail equipment declined, and through the failure of Levinson to pay the balance of $267,141.35, the trolley company suffered a loss in excess of $50,000.

Petitions Through Senator McLean

Washington, April 23.—Senator George P. McLean of Connecticut, introduced the following petitions in the United States Senate today:

Petition from Sundry Citizens of New Haven, Connecticut, favoring the enactment of legislation providing adjusted compensation for ex-service men.

Petition from Lodge No. 721, Loyal Order of Moose of Hartford and Liederkranz Singing Society of Hartford, Connecticut, urging the enactment of legislation amending the Volstead act by providing for 2.75 per cent. beverages.

Petitions from Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of East Danbury and Canterbury, both in the State of Connecticut, protesting against the enactment of legislation proposing to legalize 3.75 per cent. beer.

BRITISH PREMIER'S EARNEST TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN PRESS

Prime Minister Macdonald, Through Sir Esme Howard, Tells Newspaper Publishers That the American Press Has Proven an Important Instrument in the Development of Mutual Understanding Between the American and British People — Stresses the Importance to Europe of the Generosity of Sentiment Between the Two Nations.

New York, April 24—The American press is an important instrument in the development of mutual understanding between the American and British people and it has fulfilled this mission with fairness, friendliness and thoroughness, Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain, tonight told the American Newspaper Publishers' Association through Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, who addressed the annual dinner.

The head of the British state in a message to the association incorporated in Sir Esme's address, declared he liked to feel that, in saluting the American press, he was saluting a powerful colleague in the work of maintaining and strengthening a real understanding between the two peoples.

"The more I study the present plight of Europe," said the prime minister's message, "the more I feel that in the long run the moral and material future of humanity must depend to no small extent upon a cordial friendship and a generosity of sentiment between our two nations.

Asserting that official relations between the two nations never better than they were now, needed the sanction of popular understanding to be fruitful and enduring, Mr. MacDonald declared the development of this understanding was the province of the press.

"The individuals who constitute the democracies of the English-speaking countries must learn to understand each other, as in private life real friends undegstand each other—laughing sometimes at each other, sometimes holding different views, but always cordial and feeling the uniting influence of good fellowship—if they are ever to see their ideals adequately translated into practice in international affairs," the message continued.

Mr. Macdonald expressed appreciation of the pains which many leading American newspapers took to secure adequate reports of events here and in Europe and to interpret them to their readers he was sincerely grateful, he said, for the spirit in which American papers had treated him and his work.

A new era was dawning, Sir Esme asserted, of international policy less selfish, less violent, more considerate of the feelings and interests of others, more in accordance with Christian precept, than the old policy. A new patriotism, which while exalting the love of country, allowed one to see the good in others and appreciate the points of view of others, also was superseding the old patriotism which often fostered international dislikes, he said.

Characterizing himself as a diplomatist of the "old school," the ambassador set forth his credo as "to serve one's country to the best of one's ability; carrying out instructions but in such a way as not to give offence, keeping a cool head and an open mind, avoiding suspicion, irritation and disgrust, dealing fairly, honestly, and truthfully and, last but not least, politely and always giving a fair consideration to the point of view of others."

The British envoy prefaced his remark with a recommendation that Americans visit the British empire exhibition which, he said, was the most elaborate held. It had cost $50,000,000 and about 25,000,000 visitors were expected, he added.

SENATE COMMITTEE HEARS WITNESSES IN WHEELER PROBE

Washington, April 24.—Two detailed stories bearing on the Montana charges against Senator Wheeler were heard today by the special senate committee appointed to investigate his indictment.

One of the witnesses, William G. Feely, a Washington lawyer, testified that the senator had "absolutely nothing" to do with the Campbell land cases which Feely's firm handled before the interior department and in which Mr. Wheeler is charged with accepting a fee from Gordon Campbell, a Montana oil operator.

The other, William Spry, former governor of Utah and now commissioner of the general land office, told the committee that Wheeler had been brought to his office in 1923 by Solicitor Booth of the interior department; that the Campbell land permits had been mentioned in the conversation; but that the senator had only asked for a "square deal" for Campbell.

When Chairman Borah asked the land commissioner directly whether Senator Wheeler had "interested himself in the Campbell controversy or any other controversies before the interior department" the witness replied:

"I don't remember any controversy that Senator Wheeler has been interested in."

It was Solicitor Booth, Mr. Spry said, who mentioned to him that the senator was interested in Campbell's matters. Senator Wheeler himself added, he continued, that he was only interested to see that Campbell "got proper treatment and a square deal."

"I assured him that he would get that," said Commissioner Spry.

"Was that any more than you would have done for any other senator?" asked Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas.

"It was not."

Chairman Borah indicated during the hearing that he hoped for a very early conclusion of the investigation, but the committee adjourned subject to call as the chairman pointed out that several witnesses from Montana had not yet arrived.

$8,000,000 MILK MARKETING COOPERATIVE ORGANIZATION

Boston, April 24.—By-laws and plans of procedure for a cooperative milk marketing organization to cover all New England, to be incorporated for $8,000,000 under the New Hampshire laws, were drawn up today by a planning committee which met at the state house here.

The capitalization was authorized for the purchase of the country facilities for handling the milk now owned by the dealers and for the purchase of such cooperative plants as seems desirable. The option is provided for lease of plants where the local stockholders desire.

The organization is planned to include more than 50,000 New England dairy farmers and those in New York state distributing in New England. The plan provides that these farmers shall sign a contract to sell all their milk, except that needed for home consumption or sold direct to the consumer, to the proposed organization.

The system, in turn, is bound to take all the milk a farmer produces at all times. Provision is made that the contracts shall not become operative until 75 per cent. of the milk produced in northern New England and New York and 60 per cent. from the three southern states is controlled by the contracts.

PINCHOT SPENT LESS THAN $90 IN PRIMARY CAMPAIGN

Harrisburg, Pa., April 24.—Less than $50 was expended by Governor Pinchot in his primary campaign for republican delegate at large his report of election expenses filed today with the state election bureau revealed. When less than $50 is expended by a candidate an itemized statement of expenses it not required. The governor was defeated by Ralph B. Strassburger, Norristown publisher.

COUNT VON BERNSTORFF IS FIGHTING FOR RE-ELECTION

Berlin, April 24.—(By the A. P.)—Count von Bernstorff, former ambassador to the United States, is making a sturdy uphill fight for reelection as a democrat to the reichstag in the Schleswig-Holstein electoral district, where he is pitted against Count von Reventlow, who is running on the ultra-nationalist ticket headed by General Ludendorff.

Bernstorff is also competing with German national, peoples party, clerical and socialist candidates, and as he needs 60,000 votes to ensure him the mandate, his friends are not unduly sanguine over the prospects of his election.

Although the balloting for the new reichstag is only 10 days off, the situation continues to be one of utter confusion, due to the fact that 32 parties are listed on the official ballot of which only 10 are to be taken seriously.

The nationalists are demanding rejection of the Dawes report, the return of prisoners taken by the French in the Ruhr and the scrapping of the Versailles treaty, while the socialists, clericals and democrats are waging a fight on the question of salvaging Germany's internal and foreign situation with the aid of the experts' recommendations. In this they are being given the negative support of Foreign Minister Stresemann's people's party, which is inclined to support them in an effort to elect a reichstag which will yield a working coalition in favor of putting the experts' proposals into prompt and active execution

FOUR OF SEVEN BALLOONS STILL REMAIN IN THE RACE

Kansas City, Mo., April 24.—(By the A. P.)—Four of the seven balloons which took the air late Wednesday at Kelly field, San Antonio, Texas, in the national balloon elimination race were still up early tonight tracing their way through uncharged wind, in some cases, stormy paths toward the uncertain goal of the contest.

As darkness came on the second day of the race, the five remaining contestants, approximately 1,000 miles from the starting point, were drifting rapidly northeastward with prospects of a bad night ahead.

Should the pilots ride out rain storms, predicted for tonight in their path in the Central West, they should show up tomorrow morning in the Great Lakes region. If they are still in the air when day breaks they are almost certain to smash the American distance record.

Another hazard, according to weather officials, is that the gas bags may be becalmed during the night and forced down by drifting into an area of low pressure which is moving eastward from over Nebraska.

AN ELECTRICAL STORM FORCES BALLOON TO LAND

Independence, Kans., April 24.—Army baloon No. 2, piloted by Captain E. W. Hill and Lieutenant J. P. Powell, landed at Holine, Kansas, 30 miles west of here, at 6.30 o'clock this evening, as the result of an electrical storm.

NEWFOUNDLAND LEGISLATURE VOTES LACK OF CONFIDENCE

St. Johns, N. F., April 24.—A want of confidence vote was carried against the Warren government in the Newfoundland legislature late today by a vote of 16 to 15.

Following the arrest of Sir Richard Squires, former premier, Tuesday, on a charge of the larceny of $20,000 of public funds, additional opposition to the Warren government developed. Two government supporters announced last night that they had withdrawn from the party to sit in a bloc headed by the former premier. The defeat of today coming as the culmination of the growing opposition engendered by the larceny charges and the former premier's arrest.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Anglo-Russian Conference.

London, April 24 (By the A. P.)—The Anglo-Russian conference, looking to the settlement of diplomatic and financial questions affecting England and Russia, resumed proceedings today in the foreign office after the Easter recess.

Reparation Replies.

Paris, April 24.—Replies of the British, Belgian and French governments to the reparation commission's note of April 17 transmitting the experts' reports, are expected to reach the commission at the Hotel Astoria tomorrow. The French official reply was being drafted today and was expected to be sent to the commission this evening.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

The senate began consideration of the tax bill.

The house agriculture committee reported the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill.

General John J. Pershing announced he would decline nomination for vice president if it were offered.

The annual appropriation bill for the department of agriculture, carrying $67,00,000, was passed by the house.

Gaston B. Means informed the senate Daugherty committee that his diaries and other documents used as evidence had disappeared.

Secretary Wallace dispatched orders for federal forces to take over the fight in California against the foot and mouth disease.

Joint hearings by the senate and house irrigation committees were ordered to expedite relief legislation for settlers on irrigated lands.

The senate committee investigating the indictment of Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, heard further testimony bearing upon charges against him.

The charges of a $100,000 fund to "prevent thorough investigation" were heard by the senate committee inquiring into charges of land frauds in the lower Rio Grande valley of Texas.

EXPECT CAPTURE OF RUM SMUGGLER IN L. I. SOUND

Norwalk, April 24.—With Long Island sound blockaded at either end, and with United States revenue cutters patrolling the waters between the Connecticut and Long Island shores since early today, word is momentarily expected here of the capture of the rum smuggler that Wednesday afternoon landed two carloads of liquors, roughly valued at $150,000, at Wilson Point freight yards, where it was seized shortly before 1 o'clock this morning by federal prohibition agents and Norwalk police.

Culminating several weeks' investigation by Group Head Edward E. Doolan and Federal Agent Edward J. Flaherty, of the western division prohibition enforcement squad with headquarters at Bridgeport, the trail of the contraband seizure, the largest recorded in Connecticut since prohibition became effective, leads directly to Pittsburgh, Pa., and New York city, where, it is stated, arrests of operatives of an extensively operating and powerfully backed rum syndicate are imminent.

SEEKING EXTRADITION OF ALLEGED PIRATE

Boston, April 24.—Final arguments were made today in the fight before United States Commissioner Wheeler in the federal court to extradite Ray Cass, Somerville boxing promoter, to Canada to face charges of piracy and attempted murder, the penalty for which, in the Dominion, is hanging. Decision was reserved to May 6.

The Canadian government, which seeks the removal of Cass to Nova Scotia, charges in a complaint that he boarded the rum runner J. Scott Hankenson, off Gloucester, Mass., last August 10 and shot Captain Arthur Moore and Cook Harry Harms. Cass has attempted to establish an alibi by witnesses.

COUNTRY CHILD BETTER OFF THAN ONE IN CITY

New York, April 24.—In spite of physicians and organized city health measures the country child still has an advantage over one who is brought up in a city, Secretary of Commerce Hoover said today.

"As a people we have not yet accustomed ourselves to living in cities," Mr. Hoover asserted. "Our heritage is that of an agricultural people and we have yet to adapt ourselves completely to city life."

Mr. Hoover was in New York as president of the American Child Health association to urge that every citizen cooperate in making a great demonstration for child health and welfare on May 1.

COMEDIAN AL JOLSON SUED FOR $560,000 BY D. W.GRITTITH

New York, April 24.—Al Jolson, comedian, was sued for $560,000 for alleged breach of contract today, by D. W. Griffith, motion picture producer.

The complaint, filed in federal district court, alleged that Jolson, after having agreed to appear in several pictures for Griffith's concern, had abandoned the job in the middle of what was to have been his first film play. He was said to have quit because he had decided he was "no moving picture actor."

MAY DAY DEMONSTRATIONS PROHIBITED IN SPAIN

Madrid, April 24.—The military directorate has forbidden the holding of May day demonstrations by Spanish workers. The prohibition was issued in order to prevent untoward incidents, such as those which have marred past celebrations of May day. The directorate says that it has no desire to infringe upon the freedom and rights of the workers of Spain, but that it cannot sanction demonstrations which May bring about disorder.

FOUND DYING BESIDE THE RAILROAD TRACK

Batavia, N. Y., April 24.—George Foit, of Derby, Conn., was found dying beside the railroad tracks at South Byron today by state troopers. He died before he reached a hospital. He was in an advanced stage of tuberculosis. He was identified by a letter in his pocket.

Fight on Revenue Bill Opens in Senate

The Republican Organization Leaders Are Determined to Stand by the Treasury Schedule.

Washington, April 24—opening shots were fired today in the senate in the tax reduction fight with the Mellon income tax rates being given the most attention.

The intention of republican organization leaders to stand by the treasury schedule was indicated in the opening speech by Chairman Smoot of the finance committee who vigorously defended the rates. Senator Jones of New Mexico, a democratic member of the committee, retaliated with a denunciation of the proposed fifty per cent. cut in the maximum surtax and a plea for greater tax reduction even than proposed by the theasury.

The revenue bill—over which the most extended and controversial legislative fight of the session is anticipated, was brought up under inauspicious circumstances. Despite the enthusiastic declarations of the two speakers, less than a score of senators were on the floor throughout their addresses. Twice a point of no quorum was made to draw an audience but shortly after the roll calls, most of the senators, tired by the long debate of yesterday on the bonus bill, had retired.

Chairman Smoot called for a meeting of the senate one hour earlier than usual tomorrow and announced reading of the bill for amendments would be started immediately. This could be deferred, however, for speeches. Consideration of controversial amendments will in any event be sidetracked for later disposition, Mr. Smoot said, and this is expected to delay for more than a week a showdown on the income tax schedule.

In reply to Mr. Smoot's defense of the Mellon rates which would cut the maximum surtax from 50 per cent. to 25 per cent., Senator Jones called attention that house republicans had "repudiated" the schedule and adopted a surtax plan calling for a less reduction.

"But over here where only one-third of the members must go to the people for re-election this fall," Mr. Jones continued, "You propose just exactly what the republican leaders want. I hope before the election the people of this country will learn just how inequitable this bill is and what the president and his party stand for."

Mr. Smoot pointed out that the committee bill had gone the limit in tax reduction and so far even that a deficit of $50,000,000 would occur on the basis of present estimates. This, he predicted, however, would be taken care of by increased returns which would result from the stimulus of tax reduction on the basis of the Mellon rates.

Senator Jones insisted tax reduction should have been ordered much sooner and declared it should go twice as far as contemplated under the committee bill. He proposed that additional reduction be taken care of by use of funds now applied to the national debt.

The nation's debt was reduced more than $1,000,00,000 last year, he pointed out and argued that it could well be taken care of on easier terms and over a longer period. Initiation of such a programme, he said, would make available more than $600,000,000 for tax reduction next year instead of $300 000,000 proposed in the committee bill.

Senator Jones also attacked the tariff law and the treasury estimates, declaring that the latter in the last three years had shown "they were framed to conform to the purpose for which they were to be needed in promoting an administration move."

Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking democrat on the finance committee and author of the substitute income tax schedule advanced by the democrats, supported the contentions of Senator Jones. The democratic substitute income schedule calls for a maximum of 40 per cent. applicable to incomes of $500,000 and over.

CONN. COLORED WOMEN'S REP. LEAGUE ENDORSES COOLIDGE

New Haven, April 24.—The Connecticut Colored Women's Republican league, which today became a part of the northeast republican women's alliance, passed a resolution endorsing President Calvin Coolidge for reelection and sent a telegram to the White House embodying the resolutions. An answer was received tonight from C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to the president, reading:

"The president has asked me to express to the Colored Women's Republican League of Connecticut, his sincere appreciation of their message of confidence and support He asks that you extend his thanks to the convention when the opportunity offers."

The message was addressed to Mrs. M. M. Griffin, of New Haven, president of the alliance, which is composed of leagues from Maine to the District of Columbia.

OFFICERS OF GRAND ARMY, DEPT OF CONNECTICUT

Waterbury, April 24.—Veterans of the Grand Army attending the Department of Connecticut encampment here today elected Ira R. Wildman, of Danbury, department commander for the ensuing year. The other officers elected are: James R. Young, of Waterbury, senior vice commander; Adrian Sloan, of Hartford, junior vice commander, Benjamin H. Cheney, of New Haven, medical director and Rev. James W. Davis, of Bridgeport, chaplain.

Retiring Commander John L. Saxe, of Waterbury, was given a vote of thanks for the manner in which he has discharged the duties of his office. His staff also came in for credit in the vote.

Encampment voted down a proposition to change the date election and installation of national officers.

The names given out were those of Frank Weston, Nathan Smith, James Richitalli, Alphonse Mingnone, Thomas A. Miller and Edward Burns.

The complaints were made by members of the federal narcotic squad.

Further Woman becomes Murderous

All Because Man With Whom She Was Infatuated Would Not Divorce His Wife and Marry Her.

Chicago, April 24.—A 24-year old woman lawyer, angered at the refusal of a man with whom she was infatuated to divorce his wife and marry her, today visited the man's home in Palos park, a suburb, shot and killed a caretaker, fired several shots at the man's wife and then raced to Chicago in an automobile, accompanied by a man believed to be her husband, to continue her man hunt.

Wanda Elaine Stopa, the girl, who came to this country a poor emigrant and in a few years graduated from a law school, and who served for a time as an assistant United States district attorney, and Ted Glascow, who posed as her husband and whom she left a year ago, were being sought throughout the city tonight.

Y. Kenley Smith, wealthy advertising man, with whom she was in love, was under guard while being questioned at the state's attorney's office, to prevent an attempt by the woman on his life and his wife, at whom the Stopa girl fired as Mrs. Smith lay ill in bed, was near a nervous collapse. Henry Manning, 55, caretaker at the Smith home, was the girl's victim.

Miss Stopa, as she preferred to be known, a blonde scarcely five feet tall, appeared at the Smith home in Palos park in a dilapidated automobile driven by a man believed to be Glascow, was admitted by Manning, and, walking rapidly to Mrs. Smith's room, screamed, "I've come to kill you and your husband." She fired three shots at Mrs. Smith, then turned her pistol on Manning, who had rushed into the room. She shot him through the head, killing him instantly, and leaped through a window and to her waiting automobile, declaring, "Now I'm going to get him."

Detectives and policemen, notified of the slaying, rushed to Smith's office in a downtown building and hurried him to the state's attorney's office under guard, detectives being left at the office to await the girl's coming. She did not appear.

Smith under questioning at the state's attorney's office declared the girl had misinterpreted his desire to help her realize her ambitions.

He said he had sub-leased an apartment formerly occupied by himself and his wife, to her and that he had taken her to the theatre and to restaurants on various occasions, sometimes accompanied by Mrs. Smith. A few months ago, he declared, she came to him office and gave him the alternative of obtaining a divorce and marrying her or of paying her $1,000. She threatened to kill him them, he said. Smith said he agreed to pay her $150 a month for four months. He notified her a short time ago that payments would be stopped he said.

BALL IN STAMFORD BY SONS AND DAUGHTEERS OF VETERANS

Stamford, Conn., April 24.—Over 400 people attended the annual banquet and ball in the armory tonight given by the combined organizations of Sons and Daughters of Veterans, "in honor of Division Commander Norman S. Buckingham and his staff of Milford, and Mrs. Jennie C. Goddard, of New Britain, department president of the Daughters of Veterans. In the absence of Mayor Alfred H. Phillips, Acting Mayor Raymond E. Hackett delivered a short speech.

The two day session of the 40th annual encampment of the Son of Veterans and the ninth annual encampment of the Daughters of Veterans, was opened here today. Commander Buckingham pointed out that two new camps had been added to the list during the year and that the total membership at present was 2,415 The Douglas Fowler camps in South Norwalk and the Elijah Kellogg camp in Thomaston were the two new ones added.

The important business on for the two conventions tomorrow will be the election of officers for the organizations. It is expected that John F. Gallagher of Waterbury, who is now junior vice commander, will be elected to fill the expired term of Commander Buckingham.

HARTFORD MAYOR DECLINES TO PROCLAIM DAYLIGHT TIME

Hartford, April 24.—The common council tonight unanimously supported Mayor Kinsella's veto of the resolution asking him to proclaim daylight time in Hartford. In a memorandum attached to the veto the mayor said that he personally found pleasure in daylight times but that it worked hardship to many people. His chief reason for the veto he said, was that the daylight resolution was contrary to the spirit of the standard time statute. A resolution was passed requesting the mayor to ask the public buildings commission to advance one hour opening and closing hours of city departments. Before the vote was taken the mayor said that he had no objections to the resolution. It was adopted 13 to 3.

SEVERAL U. S. MARINES HAVE BEEN KILLED IN HONDURAS

Advices to That Effect Have Been Received at San Salvador —No Details Are Given — Attache of American Legation is Proceeding to Cable Station in Order to Communicate With the Government in Washington—Rebel Airplanes Have Been Dropping Bombs on the Capital.

San Salvador, April 24.—(By The A. P.)—Several American marines have been killed in Honduras, according to advices received here.

An attache of the American legation in Tegucigalpa is said to have proceeded to La Libertad, Salvador, a cable station, in order to communicate with the government in Washington.

A despatch from Amapala says additional reinforcements for the provisional government forces, who are besieged in Tegucigalpa, have managed to slip through the revolutionary lines and enter the capital.

Other despatches are to the effect that none of the political parties in Honduras cares to shoulder the responsibility of intervening with Sumner Welles, representing the American government, in an endeavor to bring about peace between the discordant factions.

American marines were landed some time ago and sent to Tegucigalpa to protect the American consulate and American citizens. Recently the rebels in Honduras have been besieging Tegucigalpa, and on Wednesday despatches from San Salvador reported that rebel airplanes had dropped bombs on the capital.

There are no American marines stationed in the republic but a force of 167 sailors and nine officers from the cruiser Milwaukee, at Amapala, has been at Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, for several weeks to protect the legation and American life and property generally as a result of revolutionary troubles.

NO OFFICIAL REPORT HAS REACHED WASHINGTON

Washington, April 24—No official reports had been received tonight on the killing of American bluejackets in Honduras, as reported in unofficial advices from San Salvador.

Lacking direct advices administration officials declined to discuss the situation, but there were indications that the government would deal with a firm hand with the situation in Honduras if necessity should arise. For some time it is known that both at the state and navy departments the trend of affairs in the Central American republic has been observed with concern since the government collapsed from civil war.

The landing force from the Milwaukee was dispatched to the Honduran capital under command of L. D. Causey at the request of Secretary Hughes after the Honduran ministry had proved itself incapable of maintaining order and protecting American and other foreign citizens and interests in Tegucigalpa.

Drunken soldiers of the de facto government forces, according to official advices received here, have shot down many persons, including women and children, in the streets of the capital and looted mercantile houses of property estimated at more than $4,000,000 in value.

The American legation and consulate in Tegucigalpa also have been fired upon by armed mobs composed chiefly of drunken soldiers mobilized to defend that city from the attack of united revolutionary forces.

Recent reports from Commander Causey said that members of his command had narrowly escaped injury from bombs dropped by revolutionary aircraft flying over the city.

The explanation was made, however, that the air pilot probably had mistaken the bluejackets on the field at that time at exercises for enemy troops.

The incident was satisfactorily adjusted by American Minister Morales and assurances were given him by the revolutionary leaders that the practice of bombing the city from the air would be discontinued and that aircraft pilots would thereafter confine the bombing to fortified sections of the city or military areas.

BONUS BILL ORDERED TO CONFERENCE BY HOUSE

Washington, April 24.—The soldier bonus bill was formally ordered to conference by the house late today for adjustment of senate amendments with prediction by leaders of both houses of an early agreement and report of the measure to the president.

Senator Curtis, republican, Kansas, sponsor of the bill in the senate, and Chairman Green of the house ways and means committee, indicated they hoped the measure would be sent to the White House by early next week if not on Saturday. The senate amendments were generally of a minor nature.

Some discussion was heard today as to the effect of the amendment adopted by the senate. On motion of Senator Jones, democrat, New Mexico, making dependents of all veterans who have died eligible to receipt of the adjusted service pay of such veterans. The amendment struck out a provision which specified that if the dependents had received war risk insurance as a result of the veterans' death, the adjusted service compensation could not be paid. Proponents of the bill believed, however, that this change would cause no difficulty in conference.

Reassertions of claims that a two-thirds majority could be obtained for the bill to override a presidential veto, if such action were taken by President Coolidge, were made privately today by leaders in both houses of congress.

13 PASSENGERS INJURED IN REAR-END COLLISION

Chicago, April 24—Thirteen passengers were injured, three of them possibly fatally, and a number of others bruised tonight when a westbound Chicago, Aurora and Elgin electric train crashed into the rear of another train at Maywood, a suburb.

The first train, composed of a motor coach and two passenger cars, was stalled when a fuse blew out and the second train crashed into it, partly wrecking two coaches. Passengers on both trains were thrown into a panic.

Several of those injured were trampled in the rush for exits. Passengers on the first train said that while the motorman was placing a new fuse, the conductor walked back along the track with a torpedo to signal the coming train but the torpedo failed to explode.

FAKE PROHIBITION AGENTS STAGE ROBBERY IN NEWARK

Newark, N. J., April 24.—Five men posing as prohibition agents today robbed the cellar of Henry Walpupp, a retired East Orange brewer of liquor valued at $10,000 and succeeded in getting $1500 in cash from Mr. Walpupp, "for protection," according to a report made to the police tonight.

The men, according to Mr. Walpupp, arrived at his home about 2 o'clock, said they were prohibition agents and demanded that they be given $1500 for protection. While Mr. Walpupp and one of the men went to a bank for the money, it is said the other four ransacked the cellar and escaped with the liquor.

CITIZENS HELP FIREMEN FIGHT A FOREST FIRE

Cheshire, Conn., April 24.—A forest fire, believed to have started from a small bonfire left unextinguished by fishermen at Roaring Brook spread tonight over an area of about 100 acres into Prospect and gave firemen and citizens a nine-hour fight before it was finally brought under control. The fire destroyed many second growth and stock trees and Fire Warden Rhett Fletcher, of this district said that the damage could not be estimated at this time.

The blaze swept through Brookvale and up the side of mountain and down again totally destroying large tracts of timberland. No buildings were in the fire area. A patrol was kept at the scene throughout the night.

CONSIDERING OFFICERS FOR REP. NAT'L CONVENTION

Washington, April 24.—Selection of th eTemporary Chairman of the republican convention who by virtue of his office will sound the keynote of the republican campaign, was discussed without decision today by representatives of the republican national committee and managers of the Coolidge campaign.

The type of man desired was pretty well determined but no actual selection was made. The choice will be decided by the qualifications of loyalty to party principles, ability as a speaker, standing with the various elements, of the party and by geographical considerations.

Nearly a dozen names were considered and all of the previously have been mentioned in connection with the place of presiding officer. Among them were Secretary Hughes, former Governor Lowden of Illinois; former Senator Beveridge, of Indiana; Governor Hyde of Missouri; Governor Groesbeck of Michigan; Representative Burton of Ohio; Representative Longworth of Ohio; Senator William of Ohio; Senator Borah of Idaho and former Governor Shoup of Colorado.

The conference discussion, described as general throughout also turned toward possible nominees for vice president but, as one of those present described it, there developed a feeling that selection of th nominee should be "a free-for-all with the west to be given special consideration."

TO TEST SANITY OF HUSBAND OF THE BOBBED-HAIR BANDIT

New York, April 24.—County Judge Martin of Brooklyn announced today he would appoint a lunacy commission to test the sanity of Edward S. Cooney, husband of Celia Coones, the bob-haired bandit, on information that Cooney's father died 15 years ago in an insane asylum.

The examination will delay pronouncing of sentence of the pair, who pleaded guilty to first degree robbery and are held in Raymond street jail, Brooklyn. Psychologists have unofficially reported her to be a "moron, bordering on feeblemindedness."

Stanley Plante and Alfred Plante, residents of Lover's Lane, off the back road to Windham Center near Bingham Bridge, were brought before the local tribunal Thursday morning, charged with the sale of a half pint of liquor, the sale by Stanley Plante taking place April 16 and the one by Alfred Plante on April 21. Arthur Bouffard of 406 Valley street was also charged with selling liquor on a certain date of this month. The Plante brothers pleaded guilty to the charge against them and were fined $100 and sentenced to thirty days in Brooklyn jail. Bouffard pleaded not guilty and wanted his case continued until Monday of next week as the witnesses for the prosecution were not present and the accused was desirous of securing counsel. Deputy Judge Curtis Dean decided that he would prefer to have it tried next Saturday morning along with a batch of liquor cases continued from previous trials. Bouffard was released under bonds of $500.

The case of Herbert Arseneault of 48 Center street was not taken up as the accused is ill at his home. He will also be charged with selling.

Quantities of liquor were found at the homes of the above men in raids by county, Federal and local police officers Wednesday afternoon.

Funeral services for Irving W. Hammond were held at two o'clock Thursday afternoon at his home in Hampton. Rev. A. Avery Gates conducted the services. Burial was in the North cemetery, Hampton. Arrangements were in charge of Avery and VanZandt.

The annual choir day of St. Mary's Boy Choir was observed with a full program of activities Thursday, in charge of Director Joseph F. Gaudreau. The boys began by attending mass at 8 o'clock in the church.

In the forenoon some three hundred grammar school children gathered at Recreation Park to witness a fast baseball game between the Choir Nine and St. Joseph's school. The former outfit carried a safe lead right through to the first of the eighth inning when a fumble put the ice in the tea and St. Joseph's took the victory, 7 to 2. Philip Tremblay was umpire.

Games were then staged and hotly contested. In the potato race, Leonel Chasse took the honors. First prizes went to Homer Desrosiers, older boys, and Thomas Sumner, younger boys, for the apple chase; to Leon Caissa for running broad jump; to Richard St. Lawrence, older boys, and Roland Bonin, younger boys for the 200 yard dash and to Albert Lariviere for the bicycle race. The last mentioned contest was a thriller. There were about thirty entrants in the race. Lariviere and a competitor were making distance in the lead and the close race had brought every fan to his feet when one cyclist attempted to cut in and did a nose dive down an embankment.

A dinner was served at noon after which the party of twenty-five choir boys boarded a truck and went to Norwich, where they were guests of Archille Gaudreau at the Palace Theatre. The party then enjoyed an inspection tour of various rooms of the Norwich Bulletin plant on Franklin Street. The trip home was by way of Taftville, where a visit was made at the rectory of Rev. U. O. Bellerose of that place. The lads returned here late in the afternoon delighted with the day and its events.

John Haria, a farmer residing in the Flanders District was before the Coventry town court Thursday morning on the charge of owning a male dog and harboring a female dog, neither of which had been licensed. He pleaded guilty to the first charge but did not admit guilt on the second count. It developed that the male dog had not been registered in 1923 also. Justice of the Peace William B. Havrkins imposed a fine of $7 and costs amounting to $19.89. In addition Haria paid the licenses for his made dog for this and last year. Orders were issued for killing the female dog.

Arthur Nobles, of South Coventry, was before the Coventry town court Wednesday charged with being the owner of an unregistered female dog, to which charge he pleaded not guilty. Nobles said at first that the animal was a tramp that hung around his place, but later claimed that the dog was owned by A. Rogers of North Coventry.

The case was continued until Thursday morning in order to summons Rogers into court. Nobles conferred with Rogers before the latter's appearance in court and Rogers went to Justice of the Peace Hawkins Wednesday night and after admitting that he owned the dog agreed to pay a penalty of $5 and costs amounting to $14.50 as fixed by Justice Hawkins Rogers also paid $10.26 for a license for the dog, his total assessment being $25.05.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The annual Windham County High school and Y. M. C. A. track meet is to be held at the Brooklyn fairgrounds Saturday, May 10, beginning at 9 o'clock and continuing throughout the day. The Putnam Rotary club is co-operating by making it the Boys' day in athletics in the Rotary Boys' week program.

The events for the day have been prepared as follows:

Intermediate class—100 yard dash, running broad jump, running high jump, eight pound shot put, 440 yard relay race, 4 contestants.

Each town may enter three boys in each event in each class, an entry fee of 25 cents being charged. Ribbon prizes will be given for the first places in each event and all the winners except in second and third in the relay races will be eligible to represent Windham county in the state track meet at Wesleyan University, Saturday, May 24.

Preliminary town meets will be held Saturday, May 3, at 1.30 o'clock. The towns of Putnam, Woodstock, Pomfret, Eastford, Killingly, Brooklyn, Sterling and Plainfield, except that the latter, Plainfield, will be held on Friday, May 2.

All boys attending schools or who are members of the Y. M. C. A. are eligible to the local meets.

The town meets are preliminaries to the county meet and are for the purpose of picking the best athletes in each town to enter the county meet. The events are the same for both meets.

The winners of first, second and third places in all events in the town meet constitute the team which is to represent the own in the county meet.

Announcement has been made that Fred S. Sibley, a vice president of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust company, Providence, has expressed his willingness to contribute $100 toward the cost of painting the Old People's home. In view of this fact the executive committee of the home has expressed a hope to receive other contributions to make a sum sufficient to make the improvement suggested. The Fortnightly club is willing to meet the cost of painting the hall and a few of the rooms at the home.

Following are the recently elected officers of Warren chapter, R. A. M.: King, Augustus E. Graves; scribe, Dr. Henry Dixon; captain of the host, Charles A. Burdick; principal sojourner, John Marland; royal arch captain, Ira A. Warren; treasurer, Frank T. Preston; secretary, D. Fred Kenworthy; tyler, Edward S. Carpenter; master of the first veil, John T. Ashworth; master of the second veil, Herbert H. Pepler; master of the third veil, Horace Burdick.

Upon recommendation of Chief John A. McFarland of the borough police department, the following have been named as members of the borough police force: Christopher Andrews, Paul N. Dubuc, Harry Young, Thomas Bradford, Alphonse Frasier, Walter I. Chase, Charles N. Burdick, John Gebert and H. Vernor Wetherell.

Do not forget that you promised yourself to deposit in the savings department of the Windham County National bank, as money deposited on or before May 5 will receive its dividend on June 1.—adv.

A very fine success was the minstrel entertainment given Tuesday evening at the Orpheum theater under the auspices of Leo J. L'Homme post, American legion. The minstrels were finely staged under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Russell, professional entertainers whose homes are here, members of the cast were attractively costumed. Lieutenant Ira A. Warren was interlocutor. The end men were Oliver Metthe, Albert Grenon, Joseph Burton, Arthur De Forrest, Tyler Andrews, Walter Barrows, Earl F. Winslow, Edgar Meunier, James Harney and Louis Mongeau.

In the chorus comprised: Messrs Purvis, Kimball, Harney, Casey, Bowan, Redman, Burdick, A. Wilde, F. Mongeau, Beckett, Hopkins, Phaneuf, Winslow, Gebert, Meunier, Parent, Bibeault, L. Mongeau, Caron, Baribeault, W. Wilde. Music was furnished by the Royal Serenaders: A. Aubin, H. Young, Edward Aubin, N. Cook, E. Hammond, E. Aubin, W. Braley and O. Blanchette.

The program was as follows: Opening, Smiles, entire company; Why Did I Kiss That Girl?, Tyler Andrews; Oh Gee, Georgie, Bert Grenon; Who's Dancing with You Tonight?, Edgar Meunier; Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo, Arthur DeForest; Who's Izzy is He?, Louis Mongeau; specialty, Hank Harney; Twelve O'Clock at Night, Earl Winslow; Hula Lou, Oliver Metthe; Hi Lee Hi Lo, Walter Barrows; finale, California, entire company.

After intermission, Arthur Aubin pleased with a cornet solo. A Dance of the Orient, was interpreted by Miss Dorothy Hamilton, a graduate of Mrs. Wyman's school of dancing at Boston. Miss Hamilton, who recently appeared in The O'Brien Girl, gracefully executed her number, although handicapped by the lack of a spotlight. She is soon to fill other professional engagements in New Bedford.

When the Cat's Away, an amusing sketch which closed the program was given by Thomas Beckett, Walter Purvis, Arthur Wilde and Albert Redman.

Dance, state armory, Danielson, this (Friday) evening.—adv.

Some of the bulls being acquired as the result of the Windham County, Farmers' association pure bred bull campaign will be brought into the town of Killingly.

The "Kill the Crow" campaign is on in Windham county. That is, there has been some publicity relative to ridding the country of this familiar figure in feathered life, but little shooting of them as yet in the territory hereabouts.

Danielson clerks, campaigning for a weekly half-holiday, a few months since, seem to have abandoned, temporarily at least, this project, about which nothing has been heard of late.

Only a few of the dogs in Killingly have been registered as yet, though May 1—Thursday of next week is the time limit for attending to this matter.

Taking heed of the fact that other communities in this section have designated next week as Clean-up week, numbers of people in this town will give attention during the period to an improvement of property campaign.

PUTNAM

The town school committee is in receipt of a communication from Jesse E. Davis, supervisor of secondary education of the State Board of education, in which it is stated that the Putnam High school is approved for the present school year.

Mr. Davis suggests some changes, the most important being an added number of teachers to bring down the number of pupils to each teacher; complying with the state law regarding athletics; an improved cooperative course with the state trade school and a longer school day. The matter is of great importance to Putnam and the report is hereby given in full:

"After visiting the Putnam high school I wish to present the following report:

"This will make the fourth year during which I have had an opportunity to make an annual visit at the Putnam high school. I believe that this school is maintaining a record which has given the school a splendid reputation. You have always maintained a faculty of earnest teachers who are giving faithfully of their time and energy to the building up of the school.

"In studying over the daily schedule I should like to call your attention to a few outstanding difficulties which ought to be remedied as soon as possible. In the freshman year there are classes too large for efficient teaching as follows: General science, 40; English, 1A, 37; 1B, 44; 2A, 38; 2B, 38; French, 1, 31; Algebra, 1, 34. These are not all of the larger sections, but they are sections either in subjects or with beginning pupils for whom every consideration ought to be made.

It is not possible to teach English or beginning algebra satisfactorily with such numbers in sections. Taking the total number of pupils enrolled, divided by the number of teachers, not including the principal, you have a ratio of one teacher to thirty-three pupils. This is far greater than the standard adopted for the state, which calls for a ratio not to exceed one to twenty-five. You should at least have one more teacher for the number of pupils now enrolled in the high school.

"No attempt is now being made to carry out the state law with respect to physical education and health instruction. You have a gymnasium and a splendid athletic field. This work should be organized and instructors provided to carry it out, in accordance with the spirit of the law. There are many schools in the state without the opportunity which you have that are carrying out a very satisfactory plan of health instruction.

"While in Putnam I spent a little time with Mr. Ellis in looking over the trade school possibilities for a more satisfactory plan of cooperation between the high school and the trade school. It is quite evident that the cooperative curriculum now offered does not appeal to boys as it should. In general, it seems to me that the high school is demanding more by way of academic requirement than should be exacted from this group of boys. A revision of the cooperative curriculum between high schools and trade schools is now being worked out for the state. As soon as this is completed, a copy will be sent to the principals of both the high school and the trade school for their consideration.

"In connection with this problem I suggest a thorough study of the advantages of a longer high school day. It is pretty generally accepted that home study, and particularly afternoon study at home, does not exist in any sufficient quantity to warrant a short session plan of administering a high school. Better scholarship would be obtained throughout the high school if a sixty minutes period and a longer school day were enforced. If boys and girls in the high school had to come back for a part of the afternoon it would not be so difficult to bring boys and girls back to the trade school for a cooperative curriculum. I am certain that an investigation of what this has done for other communities will prove that Putnam ought to consider it seriously.

"I shall recommend that the Putnam High school be approved for the present school year."

Dance, state armory, Danielson, this (Friday) evening.—adv.

The weather man is getting his knocks. Putnam people are accusing him of getting his weather cards mixed and handing out March days where he should deliver April quality. Cold and windy and raw. No one enjoys it and the trout fishermen are especially sore at the controller of the seasons. Householders are scraping the bottoms of coal bins in an attempt to keep their home fires burning when the keenest wish they have is to allow them to go out.

The Brown College Glee Club was greeted by an audience that filled Music hall, Wednesday night. The large gathering was generous in its applause at each number on the program. Dancing until midnight followed.

Up to the time darkness had fallen, Thursday, the body of William Henry Cody, Jr., age 5, had not been recovered from the waters of the Quinebaug river into which the lad fell just before noon, Wednesday, while engaged with a playmate, Pauline Cody, throwing stones into the water. The search was kept up until midnight and was resumed again on Thursday morning. The banks of the river were patrolled as far south as the Putnam Country club, over a mile below where the lad fell in, under supervision of the Putnam police department, members of the fire department and volunteers, among them several ministers, made up the patrolling party. Meanwhile the mother of the boy, an only son, is distracted with grief and the father is aiding the searchers.

There was some talk Thursday of having the mills that control water power up the river, let an additional amount of water through their gates with the hope that the extra force of the stream might bring the body to the top, but at a late hour this plan had not been put into effect. On account of the stream being swollen by recent rains it has been impossible to drag the river, it being impossible to use a boat. While some are of the opinion that the body may have been carried miles down stream those who remember drowning accidents of the past under similar circumstances point out that in those instances bodies were lodged among stones or tree roots, in covers not far from where fatalities occurred and believe that this will prove to be the case in this instance.

Mrs. Charles Taber, of Groton, has returned home after a week's visit with friends in Putnam.

James O'Brien, a special policeman of the city, has entered St. Vincent's hospital, Worcester, for observation.

Mrs. T. H. DeCoudres and daughters Rhea and Ruth, have returned to their Woodstock avenue home, after spending the winter in Florida. On the way north they stopped at Washington to attend the national D. A. R. Congress.

Catherine Geary of Portland, is the guest of her aunts, Misses Ellen and Margaret Dolan, Center street.

Dr. and Mrs. Karl T. Phillips are entertaining Mrs. Frank Adams of Newburyport, Mass.

Economy was the watch word of a special town meeting that brought out about 400 people Thursday evening. The meeting tabled each and every item dealing with appropriation matters. The people in attendance did not appear to be in a money spending mood.

WILSONVILLE

Schools closed Thursday night for over Easter.

Mrs. Rose Wood of Springfield spent Easter with her parents.

Mrs. Murdock returned to her home in Boston Sunday after visiting local relatives.

Mrs. Petersen was in West Glocester one day last week.

BROUGHT TO SALEM FOR BURIAL THERE

The body of Alfred H. Mitchell, who died in Jamaica, West Indies, April 2, 1911, was brought to Salem last week by his nephew, Donald G. Mitchell of New London, for burial with his ancestors in the ancient burying ground at Woodbridge. Mr. Mitchell was the father of Mrs. Hiram Bingham, wife of Lieutenant Governor Bingham.

LaFollette May Head Third Party

Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, who has announced he will accept a 3d party nomination for the Presidency, if the Republican Convention in Cleveland this June nominates President Coolidge and adopts a "conservative" platform. Rumors have it that the Middle West delegates may stand behind LaFollette and give him a strong push towards the Presidency.

PLAINFIELD

An individual swimming meet was held at the Community house Wednesday evening, the participants being members of the Plainfield Community association. There were events for men, boys and girls, prizes being awarded for first and second places in each event, some of the prizes being cups and others being different useful articles. The management of the Community house has been planning for this event for some time, and has aroused much enthusiasm among the members of the club, as was testified by the large number of entrants in the different events. The results were as follows:

Fancy diving, boys, first, Conrad Smith; second, William Forrest. Breast stroke, girls, first, Eleo Boucher; second, Elizabeth Heap. 40-yard swim, men, first, Clinton Peterson; second, Joseph Lee: 20-yard dash, boys, first, Lionel Cushion; second Ernest Royle. Fancy diving, girls, first, Evelyn Warhurst; second Irene Generous. 20-yard underwater swim, men, first eLo Vincent; second, Josuiette Bergeron; second, Evelyn eph Lee. 60-yard swim, girls, first, Warhurst. 100-yard swim, men, first, Leo Vincent; second, Cluta Ely. 30-yard underwater swim, boys, first, Robert Connelly; second, Edmund Davignon. Fancy diving, men, first, Henry Vincent; second, Malcolm HutcHinson. 20-yard back stroke, boys, first, Henry Burby; second Arthur Davignon. 40-yard handicap, men, first, Malcolm Hutchinson; second, Alphonse Jodoin.

Dance, state armory, Danielson, this (Friday) evening.—adv.

The Jolly Eight Whist club met Wednesday evening with Mrs. Arthur Moffit, of Gallup street.

MYSTIC

The semi-monthly meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance union was held Wednesday afternoon in G. A. R. hall and was opened with singing "The King's Command." The devotional exercises, conducted by the president, Mrs. W. H. Lamb, were followed by the singing of "Work for Enforcement Where You Are." The roll call was responded to with current events. The program for the meeting held in Norwich Thursday, at which Mrs. Ida Wise Smith was the speaker, was read. The address of Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cooke, president general of the national society, Daughters of the American Revolucongress in Washington last week, tion, read at the National D. A. R. congress in Washington last week, was read by Mrs. Wallace Phillips by request, and it was voted to send Mrs. Cooke a letter commending her for her stand on the eighteenth amendment and law enforcement and immigration; this letter has gone forward to Mrs. Cooke. An article entitled, "Charge of the Light Beer Brigade," was read by Mrs. W. H. Lamb; Mrs. Gurdon Allyn, Mrs. Chas. E. Newbury and Mrs. W. L. Rollinson read in relays an account of impressions of the United States under prohibition, written by Mrs. Harrison Lee Cowie, a prominent W. C. T. U. woman, also telling of conditions in New Zealand, where Mrs. Cowie has recently been a visitor. The last number was a poem, "An Excuse for Zeal in the Temperance Cause," read by Mrs. Edwin Thompson. Next Wednesday a parlor meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Madge Nickerson.

Phoebe Packer Rathbun tent, Daughters of Veterans, held a successful whist Wednesday evening in G. A. R. hall, there being seven tables in play. Miss Ruth Dodd won the first prize for high score for the women and Moses H. Wilcox for the men; the consolation awards went to Miss Anna Wilcox and George Fritts. Refreshments were served after the game.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Snell, who are driving home from St. Petersburg, Florida, where they spent the winter, have arrived in New York and are expected home this week.

Dr. A. H. Meyers has had his house on East Main street renovated and painted.

The April supper of the Union Baptist church was held Thursday evening, with Mrs. Edith B. Lamb in charge.

George H. Griswold, who is convalescing from his recent illness, rode to Wakefield, R. I., Wednesday in a closed car, it being his first trip out of town since his illness.

Mrs. W. H. Lamb, president of the local W. C. T. U., went to Norwich Thursday to attend the meeting in the Central Baptist church at which Mrs. Ida Wise Smith, of Iowa, national director of christian citizenship, of the W. C. T. U., was the principal speaker.

Delegates from Phoebe Packer Rathbun tent, Daughters of Veterans, to the state convention to be held April 29 and 30 in Bridgeport, are: Mrs. Chas. H. Eccleston, Mrs. Arline Bradley and Miss Vivian Williams.

Albert Neff and family are to move from the corner of Bank and High streets to the house on Pearl street recently vacated by Mrs. Thomas Melvin, who has moved to Stonington.

Mrs. Fred Denison and daughter, Miss Abbie Denison, have returned to their home in Westerly after a visit with Miss Jane Wilcox.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Batty motored to Providence Wednesday.

Christopher Morgan is seriously ill at his home on Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Noyes were visitors in Providence over night Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman White, of Orleans, Cape Cod, are guests of Mrs. White's mother, Mrs. Walter T. Fish.

A still alarm was sent in Thursday afternoon for a fire in an arbor back of the residence of Rev. George L. Farnham on Denison avenue. The blaze was soon extinguished by the B. F. Hoxie Engine Co., which responded to the alarm.

LEFFINGWELL

A cantata, The Easter King, was given Sunday evening by the children of the neighborhood, assisted by the choir. Mrs. N. E. Whiting directed the cantata and was assisted by Miss Alice A. Bishop. Mrs. Charles E. Ellis read the story. The children singing were: Zelda Mowrey, Mildred Swanson, Bertha Pierce, Ethel Clifford, Fannie Robinson, Beulah Mowrey, Carolyn L. Beebe, Mary Hyrack, Silva Miskosaky, Mildred F. Leffingwell, Franklin Robinson, Jules Goldberg, John Rogers, Milton Caroline, Russell Murray, Raymond Murray, Michael Hyrock and Gilbert Caroline. Members of the choir were: Mrs. A. H. Beebe, Linda Mowrey, Mrs. Trafford Mowrey, A. H. Beebe, Jesse E. Rogers and Albert Murray.

A. H. Beebe and Jesse E. Rogers sang a duet, Because He First Loved Us. Mildred F. Leffingwell sang a solo, The Stone Was Rolled Away, Carolyn L. Beebe and John E. Rogers sang the duet, The Song of Spring, and a quartette, Mary Hyrack, Zelda Mowrey, Franklin Robinson and Milton Caroline, sang The Friend of the Children.

A large collection was taken which Rev. William B. Oakley explained was to go toward the continuation of the five-year program.

The church was well filled and the cantata was made especially attractive by being almost wholly given by the children.

Guests, Sunday, of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Taylor, were Mr. and Mrs. Mason Coggeshall of Trading Cove and Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Palmer and children, Eleanor, Natalie and Harry of Moosup.

Sherman L. Rogers of R. P. I., Troy, N. Y., spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Clinton Rogers of Wauwecus Hill.

Miss Mildred F. Leffingwell spent last week end with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Whiting, of Norwich.

Miss Hattie Mowrey and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Patridge and daughter, of Norwich, were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Traford Mowrey.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Beebe and Miss Carolyn L. Beebe attended an Easter cantata Friday evening at a New London Baptist church.

An Easter supper was given Friday evening by the Ladies' Aid society. The menu consisted of salmon loaf, beef loaf, potato salad, salmon salad, pickles, rolls, coffee, cake and home made ice cream. Although a stormy night, a good sized crowd was present and a fair sum was realized.

Mrs. Charles B. Willard of Groton was a recent visitor with Mr., and Mrs. A. H. Beebe.

CLARK'S FALLS

Mr. Manning of Norwich was in town on business recently.

Mrs. Richard Maine is in Westerly with Mrs. Bralay and infant.

Mrs. Nellie L. Palmer was one of the guests at the birthday party given by the First Baptist church on Pendleton Hill. She was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. George W. Burdick and daughters, Miss Flora and Evelyn Burdick, of Ashaway.

NORWICH TOWN

Rev. Allen Shaw Bush of Gales Ferry, is to have charge of the Sunday afternoon service at the Sheltering Arms. Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham, soprano, of Gales Ferry, and Miss Hazel Banfield, alto, of Greeneville, both members of the choir of the First Congregational church of Willimantic, will be the soloists for the musical part of the service.

Mrs. Lena Gardner Taylor, of New London, was a guest Wednesday, at the home of her mother Mrs. Thurston B. Barber, of Peck's corner, having come to Norwich Town for the purpose of observing Mrs. Barber's birthday. A very fine dinner was served at 1.30 o'clock. In the evening other callers included Mrs. Taylor's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie B. Gardner and the latter's little sister, Mildred Maynard, who motored up from Waterford.

Besides receiving a number of post cards from relatives and friends who were mindful of the date, Mrs. Barber was remembered with beautiful flowers and flowering plants, including a potted geranium from Mrs. Taylor; large bouquet of pink sweet peas, also a potted hyacinth (purple) from Mr. and Mrs. Gardner; a dozen pink roses from Mr. and Mrs. Maynard of Waterford, parents of Mrs. Gardner. A large birthday cake which was cut and served was the gift of Richard Smith, of New London. When returning home Mrs. Taylor accompanied her son and daughters-in-law as far as New London. Mrs. Barber, who has necessitated the attention of a physician for a number of days, was reported Thursday to be on the gain, although the hand is yet in a serious condition.

When the Easter flowers from the First Congregational church were distributed to the shut-ins, Sunday afternon, Mrs. Barber received a purple hyacinth.

Dr. Charles H. Lamb, of Town street, received word this week of the death a week ago Thursday, in Montreal, of Mr. Hicks, following a serious illness of several weeks with heart trouble. Mr. Hicks' daughter Dorothy, is the wife of Clarence N. Brainerd, of Montreal, formerly of Mystic. Mr. Brainerd is nephew of Dr. Lamb.

JEWETT CITY

Mrs. F. E. Robinson attended the national-state crusade W. C. T. U. jubilee held in the Central Baptist church, Norwich, Thursday. Mrs. Robinson is the last treasurer, there being only a few members at present. She reported that the Jewett City W. C. T. U. was the oldest in the state organized in 1874, and had then 172 members. Only a few are living now of the original number. In town they are, Mrs. Jane Haskell, Mrs. Mary Burdick Mrs. Della Morgan, Mrs. Sarah Ray, Mrs. Lucy Franklin, Mrs. Mary Phillips, Mrs. Lucy Jeffers. Mrs. Ann Prior and Miss Ruby Thornton. Out of town are Mrs. Myra Bennett, Mrs. Mary Brown, Mrs. Annie Hamilton, Mrs. Hannah Partridge, Miss Sarah Palmer, Mrs. Louise Carpenter and Mrs. John Larkin. Mrs. Myra Bennett was the first vice president. The other officers were: Mrs. H. J. Johnson, president; Mrs. E. M. Ayer, second vice president; Mary E. Soule, secretary and Mrs. Phebe Willcox, treasurer, all dead.

As none of the churches have voted upon the matter of the hours of service during the daylight saving period the matter will probably be settled Sunday, and no change be made until the following Sunday. The public schools will begin Monday at 7.45 a. m., standard time.

Dance, state armory, Danielson, this (Friday) evening.—adv.

At the meeting of the Women's League of Voters, Miss May Driscoll read a paper on the history of the town, written by Daniel L. Phillips, which gave much valuable information. The meetings are to be held on the fourth Monday evening of the month.

Mrs. Peter Olson is in New Haven on account of the serious illness of her daughter, Mrs. Earl Montgomery.

Mrs. Adelaide Figenbaum La Fontaine broadcasted several solos and accompanied other singers recently from Boston. She was a former musical instructor in the town schools.

Rev. J. J. McCabe attended the funeral of a relatives in New Britain Wednesday.

Transferring State Policemen.

Eight state policemen, stationed at the Groton barracks, were being transferred Thursday to other stations and new duties in compliance with orders received from Supt. Robert T. Hurley of the headquarters in Hartford.

The men who are affected by the order are: John K. Palmer, F. M. Church, Edward R. Burns, Charles W. Myatt, Henry Malpursson, Frank P. Schwikert, Joseph Kamenski and K. H. Ringrose. Fourteen new men who have been transferred from other stations to the Groton barracks will arrive there at once.

A search of records in the marriage license bureau in New York showed that G. S. Kresge, of Detroit, wealthy five and ten cent store owner, and Miss Doris Mercer of New York whose marriage has been rumored, obtained a license April 16.

$5 Powders

The kind I use—at very modest prices

By Edna Wallace Hopper

The powders we use in Movieland cost us $5 per box. Beauty is our stock in trade, and we care not what it costs.

I have offered to other women my helps to youth and beauty. The very creations which France supplied me, which made me a famous beauty, and which have kept my youthful beauty to a grand old age.

But I did not think of powders. I never dreamed that the powders I use could be sold at modest prices.

Women by the thousands asked about my powders. So I showed the makers that millions of boxes could be sold to users of my beauty helps. And they offered me those identical powders, made under my name, to be sold at 50c and $1.

Few ever used them

Up to now, few women have ever used a powder so exquisite. Few could afford the price. Now I bring them to you—the finest powders experts can create. They are as fine as vapor, as harmless as dew. And all are fragrant with my favorite perfume. Now the powders used by stage and movie beauties can be used by all who wish.

There are two kinds, light and heavy. I use a cold cream powder, with a base like my Youth Cream. It clings and stays. But some like a powder light and fluffy, without the cold cream base. So I had both kinds prepared.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream Powder — the heavy, clinging powder—sells for $1. Edna Wallace Hopper's Face Powder—the light and fluffy powder—sells for 50 cents. Both come in three shades—white, flesh and brunette.

All druggists and toilet counters now supply my helps to youth and beauty, and my powders, too. These are the French creations which made me what I am. My Youth Cream — based on fruits. My Facial Youth — my famous liquid cleanser. My Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. My White Youth Clay—the last word in facial clay. My Beauty Book comes with each.

I offer them in the hope to bring millions the benefits I got. Powders are incidental. But now you can get them also, and I am very glad for your sake. Edna Wallace Hopper, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

ICE AT HALF PRICE

CUT DOWN THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

THE NEW SAV-UR-ICE BLANKET WILL DO IT

The Reason WHY Every Home Should Use THIS WONDERFUL ICE SAVER

WHAT IS IT? — HOW DOES IT SAVE ICE?

The Ice Saving Blanket is manufactured from a special fine woven fabric which will last years on account of its strength and the peculiar manner in which it is woven. In addition to the special weave of the fabric it is treated scientifically with a special preparation which makes it practically air-tight and heat proof. The Ice Saving Blanket is placed loosely over the cake of ice—this keeps the warm air and heat from the ice every time the refrigerator doors opened. Even if the ice is in a separate part of the refrigerator where it is not exposed by opening of the door, there is always a certain amount of warm air which creeps in the cracks and causes the ice to melt rapidly. The Ice Saving Blanket is far superior to paper, simply because it will not separate and clog up the waste pipes—furthermore it is more sanitary—simply because it can be washed whenever necessary. The use of the Ice Saving Blanket should make the ice last twice as long and cut down the ice bill one-half. It is moisture proof, heat proof and keeps the air away from the ice.

"SAV-UR-ICE" Blanket is Odorless, Tasteless, Hygienic and Economical. Mailed Postpaid Upon Receipt of 50 Cents, Either Stamps or Coin

THE BONUS BILL.

The upper house of congress has acted as it was predicted it would in regard to a soldiers' bonus. It has adopted an insurance bill whereby it says that there should be a sum of from two to four billions taken out of the federal treasury for the purpose of a gratuity for able bodied men. This is in addition to the large amount of money which has been justly spent for the disabled and the still greater sum that will be used for their relief and help, and in addition to the gratuities which have been voted by the states whether the veterans went to a training camp or abroad.

There are some differences between the bills passed by the house and the senate but there ought to be little difficulty in reconciling these. Each house has in fact come to the decision that the country should have an additional tax imposed upon it for the purpose of providing for this gift. And that doesn't end it. There was a close vote on whether the senate would approve a cash or an insurance plan for the bonus in order to satisfy political promises or to pave the way for political preferment at coming elections. The insurance plan won but with it went announcement to the effect that this bonus measure would not be the final one. It was simply serving notice to the effect that it was but the opening wedge and that the federal treasury would be subjected to future raids until the demands were satisfied.

Following the conference on the differing measures the bill must go to the president. What he will do with it no one knows. There are existing good and sufficient reasons for him to apply his veto thereto. If we can judge by his expressions concerning a bonus that action can be expected. As a matter of principle there is no more justification for this bonus bill than there was for the bill which President Harding vetoed. There may be sufficient votes in both houses to override a veto but the president may well feel the duty of placing the responsibility right where it belongs.

THE SPRING CLEANUP.

The signs of spring do not have to be manifested for a very long time before there's a stir and an upheaval within the household. The housecleaning period is a vigorous one But while there's a cleaning and a renovating on the inside there is need and a call for similar efforts outside.

Already this is underway in many instances. Trees and shrubs have been or are being trimmed. Grounds are being cleared of the winter's accumulations. Old flower beds are being remade or new ones prepared. Rubbish is being gathered up and carted away and the preliminary efforts to obtain attractive grounds are to be noted here and there.

There are communities which are directing attention ot the disgraceful appearance of certain places within its limits, which are not only eyesores but menaces to health and serious fire hazards. Publicity should do much in stirring those responsible to not only make a cleanup but to stop the practice of making the backyards serve as the dumping grounds for the households.

Movements for a cleanup are not new. Great benefits have been obtained by communities in their endeavor to slick up and stay clean. Some have started well but have slipped backward. Interest has not been kept up. The case with which they go backward is distressing but it only brings to mind the old saying that to succeed one must keep everlastingly at it.

The clean-up movement always profits from a general participation. Much inspiration is given by the activit yof others, but it is where everyone put shis shoulder to the task that the big results are obtained. The cleanup when undertaken should be thorough. It isn't enough to make your plot look spic and span if you accomplish it by dumping your refuse over the fence onto the other fellow, or where it will be an eyesore to others Such acts are never necessary but they too often feature the spring outdoor cleanup.

PRIMARY STRAWS.

In the primary campaigns which have been concluded this week in Pennsylvania and New Jersey efforts have been made to strike at the administration and to put forth the candidacies of those who are opposed thereto or have taken action which was intended to reflect thereon.

The result is quite the same as has been displayed in all but one other primary state. In both states it is assured that Coolidge delegations will go to Cleveland, and already the number required to insure the nomination of the president at the national convention is pushed far over the necessary majority.

How strong the demand is for this indicated convention action is displayed by the sweeping majorities received by the successful delegations. It also displays the futility of the efforts that were made by the opposition. In the state of New Jersey, where there was a close contest between Senator Johnson and General Wood four years ago, and where the latter won by about 1900 votes, President Coolidge gets the delegation this year by a majority of 90,000 over Senator Johnson. This is a telling demonstration of how New Jersey feels in regard to the chief executive his policies and the manner in which he has administered the duties of office.

Certainly it is impossible for the opposition within the republican party to get any comfort out of the New Jersey result. It only makes the more ludicrous the effort which Hiram Johnson is engaged in. And as for Pennsylvania the situation is much the same for that not only meant the repudiation of the governor of the state but it showed what little effect such opposition had upon the administration supporters.

There were other points involved than the nominee at Cleveland in each state. But, however, such movements were directed and warped they failed to turn the voters who participated in the primaries from their course In spite of the effort at dust kicking the two states did only what was expected of them.

NEW YORK BANDITS.

Credit must be given to the New York police for their capture of the bobbed hair bandit, who with her partner caused so much excitement and fear in the metropolis. There may have been luck in connection with it, but it is to be remembered that whether it is called luck or expert knowledge there is almost always something which a guilty person does that leads to their disclosure.

New York should be able to get back more nearly to normal now that this couple has been put behind bars It has been known all along that a woman was involved, and yet now that she has been caught there are already signs of weak sentiment being displayed in her behalf for the purpose of having her acts excused or the penalty minimised. Because they have confessed their crimes doesn't relieve the terror they caused or the deaths which they were ready to cause.

While the plea of guilty is always regarded as a means of lightening punishment it doesn't justify the letting of the accused off with a slap on the wrist and an admonition to refrain from any such conduct in the future. What the court will do and what some of the sob sisters would have it do may be far apart but there's no question but what it is a case which needs to be disposed of in such a way as to have the best influence upon those who have been thinking of adopting similar careers It is a time for the discouragement of such banditry and court action will no doubt take that feature of it into consideration when applying sentence. New York is not anxious that such crime should be encouraged.

THE RECEPTION ABROAD.

Devoted as it was to a large extent to matters which concern other countries, the recent address of President Coolidge before the Associated Press members has come in for much attention across the water.

In connection with the idea of calling a conference of nations for the further limitation of armaments there seems to be a disposition to approve of the purpose in general, and it has even brought forth the endorsement of Premier MacDonald of Great Britain, whose voice has been heard in behalf of curtailed expenditures for the British in the maintenance of army and navy.

That it should call for a less hearty endorsement from France is not at all surprising, for it is to be remembered that France was taking the same view at the Washington conference that it is disposed to do now. It is unwilling to do anything that would seem to weaken itself while the present difficulties are hanging over its head.

President Coolidge has based his proposal upon the acceptance of the Dawes report and the putting of its provisions into operation. He understands that action of that kind is necessary before the European countries can be brought to make any decided change in their views.

What the president has said is preliminary to developments. He thoroughly understands the futility of endeavoring to start anything of the kind now, but in endorsement of the Dawes plan he indicates his attitude when and if Europe adjusts its present difficulties. European views must be regarded as favorable but they will fair to be even more so under the more favorable conditions which seem possible.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Are the Mexican rebels still insisting on a complete surrender by Obregon?

Harry Thaw seems to have been treated quite the same as if he had been a poor man.

King Tut is once more getting that rest from which there was such a determination to drag him.

The man on the corner says: Early spring always has a hard time trying to satisfy the baseball fans.

With thunder showers so easily provoked by April what can we expect by next July and August?

Something to worry about: In the New York state reformatory for women over 40 per cent have had their hair bobbed.

When Tokio builds its ten miles of underground railway lines what a trap it will have for humanity when more earthquakes come?

With the cutting down of the immigration quota it is to be remembered that the digging of trenches is done by machinery these days.

Speaker Gillett considers it an outrage, that lies should be told about him at a congressional investigation. He is right of course but it hurts the investigations far more than it does him.

Inasmuch as it has been determined already that enough delegates have been shown favorable to President Coolidge to nominate him, it is time for the other candidates to make it unanimous.

IMPORTANT LETTER

I've just received the wedding cards of a young fellow in our home office," said the out-of-town customer. "And then remind me of a big day I had with this same youngster some time ago. He sure had me scared that afternoon."

"Sounds exciting," said Wilkinson lazily. "Was it burglars or anything like that?"

"From the way he acted I thought the future of the firm depended on us that day, at least," laughed the out-of-town customer. It was one Sunday morning and the folks had gone to church, I remember. I had a headache or something and didn't go. I was lounging around trying to read when there came a violent ringing at the bell.

"It was young Dick Trumbull. And I was sure right off that something had happened at the office, he looked so troubled.

The day previous he had been standing talking to somebody in the office, when the office boy brought the mail and he had slipped a letter into his pocket. At that instant the head of the firm called him into the private office. An important commission was given him and he had to rush for a taxi. Now this chap had always worn a funny old black coat in the office and changed to his good one when he was leaving, hanging the office coat in the locker. And the letter was in the was in the coat pocket.

"Now come the complications It transpired that the day before these events young Trumbull had told the office janitor that he could have that ancient coat, as he had bought a new one. And it was after closing, so, of course, when he went back to the office to get the letter the coat was gone.

"When young Trumbull couldn't find the janitor," continued the out-of-town customer, "he came flying over to ask me whether I knew where he lived. I did, but it was away out on the country road and almost impossible to find. I had gone there once with a member of the firm when the janitor fell off a ladder and broke his leg, but I wasn't driving the car at that time and didn't have a very clear idea about the neighborhood." However, I rose to the occasion and offered to drive Dick out there to save the reputation of the firm.

"I thought I had a good idea of the road but it wasn't long before I was all balled up and had to stop at a wayside cottage to get direction. Of course, nobody knew Bill the janitor, and we had to feel our way along some more. It was about 5 o'clock when we found the house and the man's wife, who cheerfully informed us that Bill had gone to his cousin's to take him a coat that somebody gave him.

"When we first started out I had been rather keen in trying to find out what he thought the letter held and who it was from, but Dick got incoherent when he tried to explain, and gave it up. All I could gather was that if he didn't get that letter his goose was cooked for good and all and his life was a failure in every way.

"Of course the janitor wasn't at his cousin's. He and Bill had gone over to the town, so we had to follow them. There we chased from store to store tracking them along their way, until finally we found them at the other side of the village having a talk with a man on his front porch. We had given up the search by that time and just happened to see him there as we were turning around."

"You were lucky, after all," said Wilkinson. "I hope he had the important letter with him."

"Well, he didn't," said the out-of-town customer. "He said he had found it and left it at his house as he took the coat with him. He said he thought there would be plenty of time to take back the letter the next day, but Dick told him it was of such importance he couldn't postpone it so long. He would hardly wait until I could get the car going again, he was so eager to get on."

"Such zeal for your business was praiseworthy," said Wilkinson. "You ought to appreciate such a man."

"I do," said the out-of-town customer dryly. "I did especially when he got back at Bill's house and laid his hands on that letter. I had to wait while he read it, and then he let out a whoop of joy that would have waked the seven sleepers."

"The business wasn't ruined, then?"

"Business nothing!" snorted the out-of-town customer. "It seems he had written to a girl out of town, proposing to her, and this was the answer, that's all. And now it's up to me to send them a wedding gift!"—Exchange.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Robert E. Speer, who is mentioned for the next moderator of the Northern Presbyterians, is now secretary of the Foreign Board of that denomination. Dr. Speer is a Pennsylvanian, educated for the ministry at Princeton and Princeton Theological Seminary, who, nevertheless, never has been pastor of a church, although he has had the degree of D. D. conferred upon him by the University of Edinburgh. His fame rests on his ability as an administrator, first of the foreign missionary interests of the church, and second on his aid, as an author and as a speaker of great eloquence and power, in the enlistment and education of young people of all denominations in the propaganda work of Protestant Christianity in non-Christian lands. This work he has done largely in connection with the student volunteer movement, and by his tours of the world as a missionary administrator. During the war he served as chairman of the war commission established by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

PASTEUR'S LONG WAIT FOR RECOGNITION

Not until he was 46 years old and after he had suffered a paralytic stroke that made him practically a cripple for life, was Louis Pasteur recognized as more than an average teacher of chemistry.

Born in a humble home, son of a tanner, at Dole, France, he grew up a quiet, inconsequential boy who liked to draw pictures.

Sent to school in the Latin Quarter of Paris, when he was 17 years old, he became so homesick that he had to go back home. He was so nervous and excitable that his father placed him in Besancon College, near at home.

Taking the examination for admission to Ecole Normal, of Paris, he was fifteenth of 22 applicants, and the examiner said he was only "mediocre" in chemistry, but he earned his way through the institution by teaching.

While professor at the college of Lille, he discovered that fermentations in wine and beer were due to living microbes. This upset all previous theories. Friends advised him to abandon the idea, but he clung to it until he had developed the new science of pasteurization and other benefits for humanity.

While making a six-year effort to stop a scourge that was killing the silkworms and ruining France's silk industry, he was stricken, but despite his suffering, went to the fields, finished his experiments and announced success. Later he found the vaccine to cure anthrox in livestock.

Discovering a vaccine that would cure rabies, he feared to use it on human beings. Hydrophobia always had been fatal, and the frenzied bleating of a mother caused him to inject the serum into her nine-year-old boy, then to spend days and nights of care and apprehension, until the lad's recovery proved his theory correct.

Three years later the famous Pasteur Institute was opened. Today there is one in every large community. Before his death, Pasteur was honored by the world as a scientist and a benefactor. This year, the world is celebrating his centenary, France having a six-months' program.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Some Questions

Mr. Editor: If you will allow me space in your paper; I would like to ask a few questions, and have some one who can give better answers than I have given here from a scriptural standpoint. Do so, and I hope that many of us be able to see, one at least of the errors that has crept in to bring, or help bring, about this division in nominal Christiandom.

Now where can any one find in the scriptures where God says that man is or was made "immortal"? I have not found it yet. Will some one tell me if they have? Instead I read that, St. Paul, in discussing man and the resurrection from the dead, advises those who are Christians to "seek immortality." Does a man have to seek that which he has or possesses? If he had a thing why should he seek for it? Again St. Paul, speaking to those who were Christians, said concerning the resurrection that the dead shall be raised incorruptible, for this mortal must put on immortality, 1 Cor. 15:53. It must be plain to every reasonable mind that if man possessed inherent immortality this statement of St. Paul's could not be true. If a man has on a coat he does not say, I must put on my coat. Immortality is offered as a great reward to those who are faithful followers of the Lord. Jesus said to his church: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2:10. This crown is one far above what an earthly king wears, it is life, "the state of immortality. Who then is immortal inherently? The Apostle answers in Timothy, 6:16, that "God only hath immortality," Jehovah is the self-existing one, from everlasting to everlasting. He, therefore, has always been and always will be immortal. Both Jesus and the apostles show that immortality was granted to the Lord Jesus at His resurrection. Jesus said when on earth, "As the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself." John 5:26. After he had risen from the dead he said: "I am He that liveth, and was dead; (death is the opposite of life) and beheld, I am alive forevermore." Yes, He received the crown "immortality" at His resurrection. Satan is of the angel order. He is a spirit being. He is not immortal. The scriptures state that in due time the Lord will destroy the devil. Heb. 2:14. The angels are not immortal. They are spirit beings. The contention then that man is inherently "immortal," if true, would mean that he possessed something far above the angels. David the prophet of God, Jehovah wrote: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? And the Son of Man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor," etc. Psa. 8:4-5. Here the statement is plainly made that man is made lower than the angels, therefore not immortal. There are many reasons why we should have perfect faith in the Bible as the word of the living God.

Both Plato and Socrates taught the immortality of the soul, the fundamental error of modern creeds. Also I am glad to know that there are some men still left like Mr. Troland who stand up for God's word as the truth. Even though they have no pulpit to preach from. The Easter sermons of many in and around the city prove my words about this error being taught and it is these very errors that have driven many to seek for even worse ones, if that could be possible.

M. R. M.

North Windham, April 22, 1924.

A Reply by Mr. Montgomery

If John Troland imagines I "threw out a bait" to him he can guess again. I certainly want no religious argument with anybody especially one who gets away from actual facts.

Tolstoy's book that was banned in Russia was "Fruits of Enlightenment," and the czar's council decided on a general ban on all of his works. That was Russia of the dark ages not Russia, the republic.

In regard to the Bible I studied so long ago, would say I got it at a Baptist church that I attended continuously from my earliest childhood until I was past 21 years of age.

It was printed in 1859 by Jesper Harding & Son, Philadelphia, translated out of the original tongues.

In regard to the Catholic Bible containing the apocrapha, isn't it a credit to that great church that the old Bible as first translated in full is good enough for them? While I never was in a Catholic church in my life I know that that religious sect has not lost any thing in connection with Christianity.

In regard to infidels and unitarians both have among them some of the world's greatest men. At least one of our noble presidents was a Unitarian. Thomas Jefferson the founder of democracy was a "Diest" and the present chief justice of the supreme court of United States than whom there is no greater man on earth is also a Unitarian of world prominence.

Jesus taught "love one another." Does John Troland understand what that means? In the column after column of alleged biblical information he has written the Bulletin, there are very few letters without a well covered slur to some one or some one's belief.

Better quit airing bible knowledge and get the love of God in your heart. Better quit trying to cast slurs on the memory of one of the world's greatest men who didn't happen to believe as you do and remember that Jesus the prince of peace, no matter under what conditions he was born said such things as these: Blessed are the peacemakers, Blessed are the merciful, Go teach, preach and heal, and best of all love one another.

My Bible is only one year older than I am and doesn't need a revision and my question of why the Apocrapha was left out has not been answered and cannot be truthfully answered by John Troland without greatly jarring much of his alleged biblical knowledge.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

ST ANDREWS

Will St. Andrews, bleak old Scotch sea town, first in learning and golf, also take place in the hearts of lovers of English literature and the staunch Anglo-Saxon code?

This speculation arises from the custom of St. Andrews, oldest college in Scotland, of electing an honorary rector for a year," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Last year, in his rectorial capacity, Barrie made his now-famous address on 'Courage'; this year Rudyard Kipling talked to the students on 'Independence.' The custom is much as it Abraham Lincoln had been elected to an honorary professorship at Harvard and on that occasion gave the Gettysburg Address and had been succeeded the following year by Ralph Waldo Emerson speaking on 'Composition.'

"All unconsciously, every fair sized city in the United States has copied a part of St. Andrews on American soil—the golf links. All the jibes and all the praise of golf must at last fall on the heads of this village's early residents, because St. Andrews is the capital of golf. And since these St. Andrews' golfers happened to play over a bumpy pasture, bumpy pastures have been built for golf enthusiasts in the arid wastes of Montana, amid cocoanut groves of the south seas, on Florida's keys and the Himalaya mountains. Because a creek of the Eden happened to flow across this Scotch grazing ground no golf course is complete without a water hazard.

"The town of St. Andrews is peculiar. It is one of the few cities in the world lacking a geographical reason for existence. It has no important railroad junction, no coal field, no river. Situated on the bleak headland between the Firth of Forth where Edinburgh looks down and the Firth which shelters Dundee, St. Andrews possesses a poor harbor, noted chiefly as a trap for ships. Yet the history of 'Golftoon,' as the town is called by golfers, goes back as far it is lost in antiquity.

"Legend has it that Regulus, an Irish monk, brought the bones of St. Andrew to this missionary outpost some time between 500 and 700. The Saint's bones must have rested uneasily because St. Andrews has been the religious whirlpool of Scotland ever since. Its bishops hanged and were hanged. John Knox used the city as a base of operations for the reformists. Patrick Hamilton, a martyr, was burned before the cathedral. While Mary Queen of Scots sought refuge there, nobles planned her assassination. In the Cromwell revolution another bitter storm centered on the town and even today it has not entirely recovered.

"But throughout the story of strife runs the thread of golf. Golf and the university appear in the same century, the fifteenth. Wars may rage and men kill each other for the glory of God but the links on the shore of the 'German ocean' were held sacred to the game. Three months before the Pilgrim fathers left Delftshaven, James VI approved the contract for the first municipal golf links at St. Andrews. Later these links were acquired by the Ancient and Royal Golf club of St. Andrews which, to this day, acts as the Justinian of golf law for the world.

"Golf may have started in Holland where a game called 'kolf,' apparently a cross between golf, hockey and bowling, was played but is now extinct. It was played on the ice, within covered courts and even in churchyards. Even if the Scotch did import the sport they changed it greatly. The location and peculiarity of terrain at St. Andrews is found in golf terminology just as the topography is produced on every continent. 'Links' for example, is the Scotch term referring to rolling close-cropped shore fields which have become the model for all golf courses. 'Bunkers' are really cut banks such as are found along a grades country road. Such banks with sand pits are natural to this shore. St Andrews' cut banks are now artificially created on golf links wherever golf is played. For a good many years the Royal and Ancient course consisted of eleven holes, a match being two rounds or twenty-two holes, but in 1764 the club decided to eliminate two so today the standard course is in multiples of nine.

"The first reference to golf in Scotland is an ordinance of the Scottish parliament, That the fute-ball and golf be utterly cryit down and nocht usit; and that bowe-merkis be maid at ilk parochе kirk, a pair of buttis, and shuttis be usit ilk Sunday.' It is evidence that the Scots, young as well as old, were neglecting national guard drill for the links and the scrimmage line. The stormy issue of Sunday golf was settled in Scotland back in 1593. The year previous the Edinburgh council had issued a proclamation that 'seeing the Sabboth day being the Lordis day na inhabitants be seen at ony pastymes within or without the toon, etc as golfe, etc.' But this was too much for the devout Scots and in 1593 the ordinance was modified with the prohibition only 'in tyme of sermons.'

"JamesIV issued a stern decree forbidding 'golfe and futeball' in 1491 and then went out and played himself. Mary Stuart is believed to be the first woman golfer on record, having shocked all Scotland by playing the game within a few days after her husband's murder. When women were first admitted to the ancient and royal they were limited to a putting course.

"In 1868 St. Andrews hired Tom Morris, a young Scotch boy, to keep up the course. Little did they think that this boy would spread a larger ripple on history than any member of their organization. Morris developed a strong pride in the links and groomed them diligently. Then as golf grew more popular Tom Morris was engaged to lay out new courses in England and Scotland. So well did he do his work that many a club is proud to say their course was laid out by Tom Morris. Naturally he imitated conditions found on the burns of his native heath and golf courses everywhere have been made on the generic Morris plan."

Stories That Recall Others

Time and Tide—Also Radio, Etc.

An elderly woman has gone to live with her son and obtains much joy from his radio receiving set.

Early every morning she tunes in, and listens to programs of music, weather forecasts and other such matter. Recently she tuned into a station that was broadcasting recipes. One started as if it might be good.

"Just wait a minute, will you, till I get pencil and paper?" she asked. When she came back a moment later the station was signing off.

Beat at Her Own Game.

Robert, aged 8, is a boy with a vivid imagination. His mother often takes advantage of that fact when she wishes him to obey.

One morning he was too slow in getting ready for school, so his mother said: "Robert you are getting ready to meet the morning train and it is almost due! Hurry, or you will miss it!"

As was expected he immediately began to make that train and his mother was congratulating herself for having solved a difficult problem when Robert suddenly lapsed into his old habit.

"Robert, you'll miss that train, sure!" she exclaimed with much concern.

"No, mother," was the young hopeful's reply, "I have just heard that my train is an hour late!"

In a Pickle.

He was about to be married. Two pals were talking a little for his benefit. Said one:

"Well, I've been married for 15 years and I'm in a pretty good state of preservation."

"But you must remember," said the other, "you were in alcohol for a considerable part of that time."

Piles

Can't Be Cured From the Outside.

External treatments seldom cure Piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through the stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., set at work some years ago to find a real internal Pile remedy. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It's easy to take, and can always be found at Lee & Osgood's, who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

WEDDINGS

Wilson-Fitzgerald

A very pretty wedding took place on April 23rd at the Second Congregational parish house, New London, when Miss Gladys Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald of 28 Montauk avenue, former residents of Norwich, became the bride of Lieutenant Arthur Edmond Wilson, U. S. A., Rev. Dr. J. Beveridge Lee officiating.

The bride and groom were attended by Miss Jessie Watters and Walter O. Wilson of Hartford, the groom's brother.

The bride was charmingly gowned in fawn colored, crepe and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley and Miss Watters wore nile green crepe and carried sweet peas.

Miss Fitzgerald has been secretary to Horace Learned of the J. C. Learned Insurance Co. and graduated from Williams Memorial Institute of the class of 1921 and attended Boston University College of Secretarial Science.

Carr—O'Hearn.

Miss Mary R. O'Hearn, R. N., of Bridgeport, daughter of Mrs. Stephen O'Hearn of Franklin, and William Carr of Bridgeport were united in marriage Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock at the Immaculate Conception church at Baltic by Rev. William T. O'Brien. The bride was charmingly gowned in tan Spanish lace and chiffon with rose bud trimmings, with hat to match and carried bridal roses. Her bridesmaid, Miss Ellen O'Hearn, wore blue georgette with beaded trimmings and hat to match and carried pink roses.

The best man was Stephen O'Hearn, a brother of the bride. A wedding breakfast and reception was held at the home of the bride's mother with relatives and friends in attendance from Hartford, Manchester, New Haven and Bridgeport.

Mr. and Mrs. Carr left on the 6.30 express for an extended trip through Canada and on their return will reside in Bridgeport, where Mr. Carr is engaged in the real estate and insurance brokerage business.

Mrs. Carr is a graduate of the Baltic Academy and the Bridgeport General hospital and is very popular among the younger social set.

O'Neil-McKnight

Miss Katherine Veronica McKnight daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. McKnight of 103 Colton St., Springfield, Mass., and Patrick J. O'Neil, son of Patrick O'Neil of this city, were married Wednesday morning in Holy Family church, Springfield. Rev. C. A. Sullivan performed the ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass. Miss Stella Wise played the wedding marches and the soloists were Mrs. Joseph Sullivan and Charles McNamara. Many guests attended, relatives coming from Boston, New York, New Haven and Norwich for the event.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. J. H. Cournoyer and Mr. Cournoyer served as best man. The bride wore a dress of gray beaded crepe and an imported hat of French crepe in orchid shade. She carried an arm bouquet of bride roses. Mrs. Cournoyer wore orchid crepe trimmed with silver lace and hat to match and she carried butterfly roses.

After a wedding trip to New York and Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. O'Neil will live at 59 High street, Springfield. Traveling the bride wore a frock of cocoa brown crepe with wrap to match and a hat of gray straw trimmed with orchid. The bride was graduated from the Springfield schools and has been employed in office work. Mr. O'Neil is a government employe.

TROLLEYMEN FROM DAYVILLE ENTERTAIN IN MINSTREL ROLES

Another evening of real pleasure was chalked up by the trolleymen of the New London, Norwich and Dayville branches of the Connecticut company, Thursday evening, when over 100 employes gathered at Odd Fellows Hall on Main street and enjoyed a fine supper and entertainment.

The supper was served by the committee of Hope Rebekah Lodge No. 21, I. O. O. F., the menu being as follows:

Hot Meat Pie
Mashed Potatoes Creamed Onions
Rolls Cake
Coffee
Cigars Cigarettes

Following the supper various members of the association favored with solos and the Connecticut company orchestra, directed by Harold Humphrey rendered a number of orchestral selections. The orchestra also played during the supper and every number was heartily applauded.

The meeting was the regular monthly meeting of the employes of the company and was in charge of J. J. Fitzgerald of New London, John Maher of Dayville and Harold Humphrey and W. O. Buddington of Norwich.

A special feature of the program was the Dayville Minstrels presented by members of the Dayville staff. Filled with pleasing solos, jokes and cracks on members of the association the minstrel proved one of the best entertainments yet staged by the trolleymen.

SUPREME COURT SESSION WILL BE HOUR EARLIER

Chief Justice George W. Wheeler of the Connecticut supreme court of errors has sent notice to Clerk George A. Conant that the supreme court will open in Hartford on Tuesday, May 6 at 9 a. m., standard time. Judge Arthur F. Ells of Waterbury will sit with the supreme court in place of Associate Justice Lucien F. Burpee who is convalescing from a last winter's illness.

The supreme court usually opens its sessions at 10 o'clock. The action of the supreme court in opening its sessions an hour earlier is keenly interesting to many in the state in view of the fact that the supreme court only a few weeks ago upheld the constitutionality of the last standard time law which prohibited public display of daylight time. Opponents of daylight saving time have said that any concerted move to start the business day an hour earlier or to put city departments on an earlier schedule was contrary to the spirit of the standard time law.

In speaking of the advancing of the time for meeting, Chief Justice Wheeler said Thursday that the changing of railroad schedules and the question of convenience of members of the bar made it rather imperative for the supreme court to meet an hour earlier. Regarding the spirit of the state's standard time law Judge Wheeler said that the court certainly did not wish to break any law or to violate the spirit of any law feeling that it rather should be an example in the observance of law. The court, if it observes standard time, he said, is of course, at liberty to meet any time it chooses.

This is the same attitude that was taken by superior court judges in this county last year when the time for opening the court sessions each day was made 9 a. m. instead of 10 a. m.

ARCHITECT, POMFRET NATIVE DIED IN NEW YORK

Bertram G. Goodhue, New York architect, who designed the Nebraska Capitol building, and who was one of the most prominent exponents of the skyscraper building in New York, died suddenly of heart attack at his home in New York city, Wednesday night.

Mr. Goodhue, who was 54 years old, was born in Pomfret, Conn., April 28, 1869. He was made a fellow of the American Institute of Architects in 1917 and a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

The Nebraska state capitol, for which Mr. Goodhue drew plans five years ago, is considered one of ten finest examples of Gothic design in the country. He was in competition with 10 foremost architects and his design was accepted because of its creative power and originality. He was one of the chief exponents of Gothic design in the United States.

Mr. Goodhue attracted considerable attention as the designer of the dollar sign over the bride's door at St. Thomas' church, New York. The design, part of an emblem to portray the types of life of Fifth avenue and hidden in a maze of Gothic engraving on the door, aroused some indignation among many of the church goers, who, when they discovered the design, protested that it was false in spirit.

Mr. Goodhue was also a writer and in addition to many magazine articles was the author of Mexican Memories.

MAKES AWARD IN WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

In the workman's compensation claim of Mrs. Annie Straub, of 211 Yantic street, who had her right arm injured at the elbow joint, Oct. 5, 1921, while in the employ of the Falls Co., a finding and award has been made by Commissioner J. J. Donohue. The insurer is to pay the expenses of Mrs. Straub and an interpreter to go to Hartford to see a specialist and is to pay her $7.25 per week from April 26, 1926 for such disability period as may result from such curative measures as may be adopted by the specialist, to continue until such time as claimant shall be found able to return to work, if such disability is found to be attributal to the original injury.

The claimant has already been paid for total incapacity from Nov. 5, 1921 to Feb. 23, 1923 when she resumed work. Subsequently she was allowed compensation for 41 2-8 weeks for the loss of 20 per cent. of the use of the right arm at the elbow, and she claims that she has not been able to work since about Thanksgiving 1923.

FAIR DRAWS CROWDS TO STATE ARMORY

Another large crowd attended the Eastern Connecticut fair under the auspices of the Norwich Commercial Travelers, at the state armory Thursday night and found all the exhibits full of interest and attraction. The music, the decorations, the brilliant lighting and the animated throng that moved around the armory all contributed to the success of the second night of the fair and there is promise that the afternoon and evening hours of Friday and Saturday will send the attendance figures to a high mark. The line of exhibits is so varied that no visitor can fail to find many things of much interest, while a novelty that attracts all is the expert glass blower, H. F. Kingman, whose booth is popular at all times. The Norwich commercial men are being congratulated upon the success that has attended their efforts in carrying out the fair.

COMPENSATION AWARD FOR MILL FOREMAN'S DEATH

An award of $15 per week for 312 weeks has been made by Commissioner J. J. Donohue in favor of Mrs. Erma M. Wetherbee, 176 Broadway, in the workman's compensation claim on the case of her husband, the late Jay B. Wetherbee, who was instantly killed April 11 while at his work as night foreman at the mill of the E. I. Dupont de Nemours Co., in Greeneville. The company will also pay $100 towards the funeral expenses.

KING'S DAUGHTERS HELD CITY UNION ANNUAL

At the annual meeting of the City Union, King's Daughters, held Wednesday night at the First Baptist church, Mrs. Luther K. Packer of Taftville was re-elected leader for another year. The meeting was called to order at 7.45 o'clock by Mrs. Packer and there was a good sized attendance. Silent prayer was followed by the Lord's Prayer and a hymn. Rev. E. C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church, led the devotional period.

The reports of the secretary, Mrs. Arthur H. Blackledge, and of the treasurer, Miss Hattie Carter, were read and approved. The leader announced the plans for the conference to be held at Colchester May 31st. Mrs. Griego entertained with two excellently rendered vocal selections and the roll call was responded to by each member giving her circle text. After the collection had been taken up, the annual reports of the nine circles were read by the circle secretaries.

Mrs. John Kukla, Miss Hattie Carter and Miss Catherine Lane, the resolutions committee, submitted their report which was accepted. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Leader, Mrs. Luther K. Packer; vice leader, Mrs. John Kukla; secretary, Mrs. Arthur H. Blackledge; treasurer, Miss Hattie Carter; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hezekiah Perkins.

Mrs. William Bailey of Taftville was appointed chairman of the hospital Sunday service committee and Mrs. Luther K. Packer was elected delegate to the Colchester conference. Everready circle was appointed to arrange for Sunday meetings at the almshouse and the committee is to be appointed to arrange for Sunday services at the New London County home.

During the past year the various circles made their usual gifts of linen, towels, etc., to the hospital. The nine circles purchased a piano for the almshouse and flowers were sent as usual to the sick and shut-ins. The regular Sunday services were held during the year.

After the business meeting refreshments of coffee and cake were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Hezekiah Perkins, Mrs. Frank I. Royce and Mrs. Arthur H. Blackledge.

HENRY TYLER, VETERAN, FOUND DEAD IN BED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 24.—Henry Tyler, about 85, was found dead in bed at his home, 160 Spring street this evening, the man being found by the police who battered down the door of his home to enable them to gain admission. Medical Examiner Harold H. Heyer, after an investigation, pronounced death due to heart disease.

Tyler has no near relatives so far as is known. He has several nieces and nephews, among the latter being Daniel Morgan of Jewett City and Seth M. Lucas of Stonington. Mr. Tyler lived alone, but was seen about his home yesterday. When not seen today the police were notified and Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman David Nagle were assigned the task of gaining admission to the place. Forcing the door the officers found Mr. Tyler lying on a bed practically clothed, but with the covers over him. He had been dead, in the opinion of Medical Examiner Heyer, at least twelve hours. It was believed that Mr. Tyler became nauseated prior to the heart attack, went to rest on the bed and expired.

Mr. Tyler was well known, being a member of W. W. Perkins post, G. A. R., and had resided in New London many years.

Mr. Tyler was well known to the Grand Army men of this city as he annually attended the reunions of the 26th Connecticut Volunteers, having been a member of Co. F during the Civil war.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR MYSTIC ORAL SCHOOL

Mystic, April 24.—The general contract has been awarded to the T. J. Pardy Construction Co. of Bridgeport for $98,810 for the erection of a dormitory at the Mystic Oral school for the deaf at Mystic, the contract being signed Thursday at Hartford. Work will commence on the building the first part of next week, which will be 70x150 feet, three stories high and basement, of brick construction. If weather conditions are favorable they expect to finish the work within 12 months so that the building may be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1925. The dormitory will accommodate about 75.

The sub-contracts were awarded as follows: Heating to Hopson and Chopin Manufacturing company, New London, $5,400; plumbing to William Van Keuren, Jr., New London, $4,847.29; electrical work to Modern Electric company, New London, $1,275.

Returned to Massachusetts

Mrs. Emma Duhamal has returned to her home in Ware, Mass., after a seven weeks stay at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Del LaPre of No. 65 Asylum St. On her return she was accompanied by Master Robert and Mrs. LaPre; also by her daughter, Irene, of Ware, Mass., who spent Easter in this city.

A. W. R. C. Department Convention

The governor-general of the Philippines has appointed a board of scientists to study conditions so as to prepare against any such earthquake catastrophe as recently overtook Japan.

WOMAN TO JAIL TO SERVE SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Annie Balbatti, 40, arrested Wednesday night at her home on Forest street at the corner of Aqueduct street, was before the city court Thursday morning on the charge of selling liquor, and was bound over to the superior court by Judge A. F. Libby. He also ordered that a 60 days suspended jail sentence that had been given her last August be put into effect at once and Mrs. Balbatti went to jail after the court session. Bonds of $1,000 for her were furnished by Nathan Reppa so that she will be able to get out of jail after serving the 30 days and while awaiting the term of the criminal court. Her attorney before the court was Roderick M. Douglass.

The evidence against her was furnished by Mrs. Irma Doris, who testified that he bought a bottle of liquor at her house Wednesday night, using an empty bottle that had been given him at police headquarters before he started for Mrs. Balbatti's home.

Sergeant Thomas Murphy was the first witness put on the stand by City Attorney Lee Roy Robbins. The officer testified to leaving police headquarters Wednesday evening with Doris and Officer Patrick Murphy. Doris, he said, had been searched before leaving the station and had been given an empty bottle. Doris went alone into the front door of the Balbatti house and when he came out again was searched by the officers. The bottle of alleged "white mule" was found on him and taken from him and he was then brought to police headquarters. Sergeant Murphy further said that when one of the girls of the family let him into the house after Doris had come out a two quart preserving jar containing a white liquid was emptied into the sink.

Captain D. J. Twomey gave corroborative evidence regarding the bottle that was given to Doris when he left the police station and Officer P. Murphy told of Doris going into the Balbatti house and coming out with the bottle.

WILLINGTON

Mrs. Blanche McDonald and Miss Reba Korner of Plainville, and Geo. Korner of the New Britain Trade school, were visitors at the Korner and Lyon home over Easter.

There was a large attendance at church Sunday to listen to Rev. Mr. Chappell of New Haven. Many beautiful Easter lilies and hyacinths were displayed and special music was provided.

Mrs. Julia Suarks King, 79, who died Sunday in Preston, was buried in the family lot in the old cemetery, Tuesday morning. Mrs. King was born in Willington, the daughter of Origen and Calista Sparks, and was the last of a family of seven children.

Among other improvements, the parsonage is being shingled.

Mrs. Lucy Reed is ill with a hard cold.

After an inspection of the town hall by the three selectmen, William Brackett, Wilbert Ruby and Merritt Usher, it was decided to renovate it immediately.

Arnold Houchens of Hartford was in town Saturday, bringing flowers for the graves of relatives.

Louis Bliven, who has been employed at North Ashford, called on friends Sunday.

W. C. Ruby has shut down his sawmill and will repair the town roads. Tractors will be used this year in place of teams in scraping the roads.

Misses Doris and Elsie Bentley have the mumps. The latter is employed by the American Thread company at Willimantic.

George Bennett spent Sunday with his family in Woodstock.

Mr. and Mrs. William Snyder of New York were week end guests of Miss Mersereau.

At the meeting of the Ladies' Aid society it was decided to have a rummage sale next month.

Plans are being made to establish a Community club having as active members about ten young girls living at West Willington. Each member will contribute about ten pounds of sugar and under the guidance of Mrs. Julius Meyer, they will endeavor to make a good grade of candy. Following are the club officers: Mrs. Julius Meyer, president; Louise Joslin, vice president; Agnes Bosoricka, secretary; Hester Hansen, treasurer, Mrs. Meyer, auditor.

Getting Skinnier Every Day

Something Must be Done and Done Darn Quick, Too.

Tens of thousands of thin, run-down men—yes, and women too—are getting discouraged—are giving up all hope of ever being able to take on flesh and look healthy and strong.

All such people can stop worrying and start to smile right now for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, which any druggist will tell you all about, is putting flesh on hosts of skinny folks every day.

One woman, tired, weak and discouraged, put on 15 pounds in five weeks and feels fine.

We all know that Cod Liver Oil is full of flesh producing vitamines, but many people can't take it because of its horrible smell and fishy taste, and because it often upsets the stomach.

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are as easy to take as candy, and if any thin person don't gain at least 5 pounds in 60 days your druggist will give you your money back—and only 60 cents a box. Ask Lee & Osgood Co., or any live pharmacist anywhere.

COLUMBIA

Misses Nellie and Grace Sawyer, who have been passing the winter in Brooklyn, N. Y., have arrived at their cottage "In the Pasture," by the lake and are preparing to open them for the summer. Their brother George Sawyer is expected to arrive shortly.

Mrs. Charles Natsch and son Halsey of Brooklyn, N. Y., spent the first week at their cottage by the lake.

Mrs. Julia Little and son Horace of Hartford, spent the week end and end Easter Sunday at their home on Woodward Hill, having as guest, Mrs. F. O. Bardwell, also of Hartford.

Mrs. G. H. Miner of Wethersfield, was the guest over the past Sunday of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Squier.

A few of the summer residents occupying cottage in the vicinity of the lake are spending week ends in town, putting their cottage in order for the season.

Waite E. Crittenden of New Haven is having an artesian well driven on his property at the lake. Several of the cottagers have had wells sunk upon their grounds during the past winter.

Mrs. R. G. Proctor is entertaining Miss Esther Kemp, Miss Georgette Kemp, Miss Tea Lyck, Miss Perkins and Miss Wrigglesworth, all of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Miss Eleanor Collins has maintained a high standard in scholarships at Smith college, Northampton, Mass., and has recently been elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa. She will be graduated from the college at the coming commencement.

G. Solomon of Chestnut Hill received a shipment of 500 baby chicks by mail Wednesday.

The Columbia Teachers' association held a meeting Tuesday evening and familiarized themselves with the subjects upon which the teachers are obliged to pass the state test in May.

The Ladies' Aid society held a social meeting Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Miss Eliza Hutchins. Among the subjects discussed were plans for a reception to be tendered Rev. Dr. Shelton of Atlanta, a former pastor in town who expects soon to visit Columbia friends.

Successful High School Cooperative Course

That students may leave high school fully equipped to enter machine-shop wood-working, and electrical trades the York (Pa.) High School cooperates with manufacturers of the community in offering a four-year industrial course which includes 5,400 hours of employment in some local industry. The course was the direct outgrowth of a manufacturer's expressed desire to obtain men who had been trained mentally as well as mechanically. The boys devote their freshman year entirely to work in school and are eligible to be assigned to work as apprentices after the first year. Thereafter they attend school and do apprentice work in two week shifts, spending the vacation periods in the shops. Graduation from the industrial department involves no break between school industry.

Higher Standards for Oregon Institutions

New standards prescribed by the United States Bureau of Education for the higher institutions of Oregon will go into effect in 1926. The date was postponed at the request of the state superintendent of public instruction and universities of the state. The new standards are substantially those adopted by the American Council of Education about two years ago. Oregon is the only state in the Union in which the Bureau of Education is authorized by law to accredit colleges and universities. The following institutions at present constitute the list of standard institutions in that state: University of Oregon, Oregon Agricultural College, Reed College, Willamette University, Pacific University, and Linfield College.

MUCH INTEREST IN JUNIOR Y. M. C. A. ROAD RACE AT NEW LONDON MONDAY

New London, April 24.—A road race that is expected to draw entries from various towns and hamlets in the eastern section of the state, will be run off in New London Monday evening at 6 o'clock (daylight time). As the event is being promoted by the Y. M. C. A. the only restriction that will be placed upon those who desire to enter this race, is that he must be a member of the Y. M. C. A. or affiliated with an organization. The run which has been mapped out by the committee in charge, is a distance of two and a quarter miles, more or less. The event will be divided into two sections, but will be run simultaneously. Those entering in the race can not be over 19 years of age and the two sections, or classes, that the runners will be divided into, are the lightweight class at 135 pounds or under and the heavyweight class for those that weigh 135 pounds or over. Before the race will take place, all those entering will have to be physically fit and an examination will be made of each entry before the race.

The course which has been mapped out by the committee is as follows: The race will start at the Y. M. C. A. on Church street from the door of the boys' department and will continue to Federal street, west on Federal to Huntington, north on Huntington place to Granite street, to Channon to Bulkeley place, west on Bulkning street to Broad, west on Broad to Connecticut avenue, south on Connecticut avenue to Garfield avenue, east on Garfield avenue to Williams street, north on Williams street to Broad, east on Broad street to Federal, to Meridian, south on Meridean to the finish at the Church street entrance to the Y. M. C. A.

The road race on Monday evening will be the first of its kind for several years. The Y. M. C. A. promoted road races several years ago for the senior members of the physical department, but this is the first attempt of the Y to promote a junior road race. In looking over the course, it is almost the same that was used in previous years by the seniors. The committee in charge did a good job in planning the race. Several difficult hills were averted in the course, among these being the Broad street hill. This hill was included in the courses of previous races primarily because the previous road runs were six or more miles each. There is little or no traffic on the streets that appear on the course at the time the race is scheduled to take place. However, when the youthful runners reach Broad street they may find traffic more heavy and consequently it will take more time to traverse this one street.

Ten prizes will be awarded by the merchants of New London to the winners. The prizes consist chiefly of athletic equipment. For the lightweight race the five prizes are as follows: first prize, catcher's mitt, donated by Buster Billonsky. Second prize, a fielder's glove, donated by H. V. Moxley. Third prize, scout signal flags, donated by the Army and Navy Surplus store, C. B. Livingstone, manager. Fourth prize, a watch donated by Buddy and Costello. Fifth prize, a pair of Keds sneakers, donated by the Walk-Over Shop. The prizes for the heavyweight winners are as follows: First prize, baseball shoes, donated by Aling Rubber Co. Second prize, first baseman's mitt, donated by the Lyon and Edwald store. Third prize, steel fishing rod, donated by the Aben Hardware Co. Fourth prize, a baseball bat, donated by the G. M. Williams Co. Fifth prize, sport necktie, donated by Davis and Savard.

"DUSTY" LEAGUE TO WIND UP WITH BIG BANQUET

New London, April 24.—A meeting of the Industrial basketball league [illegible] was held at the Y. M. C. A. this evening for the purpose of discussing and ratifying the report rendered by the banquet committee of the league. The committee recommends that a turkey dinner and all the fixin's be put on with one to be held at the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening, May 12th, at 6:30 p. m. All the basketball players, league managers, officials and the specially invited guests, including members of the press are to be invited.

The league managers are considering the proposal of the banquet committee and will take definite action on the proposal early next week. The basketball season has been a very successful one, the receipts being adequate enough to cover all expenses of printing, sending the championship New London Ship and Engine team to New Haven to participate in the Connecticut industrial elimination tournament, bringing the Swedish Lutheran team of Hartford to New London, and a balance is large enough to cover the closing banquet.

CHAPMAN TECH IN FIRST LEAGUE GAME SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London will face its first Eastern Connecticut interscholastic contest on Saturday afternoon, when the Red and Black warriors face Stonington High at Morgan park. After losing three games in as many starts, the Tech team is anxious to begin winning games. If there is a game that Coach E. Stanley Taylor would like to see on the winning side of the ledger, it is the game with Stonington Saturday. A good beginning with teams entered in the Eastern Connecticut Interscholastic league would mean that the Tech outfit would have a good chance for the championship.

To show that Coach E. Stanley Taylor is anxious to have the Tech team win this contest, he has expressed his intentions of starting Edward Cruise on the mound. Cruise was originally slated to state the game against Pratt High yesterday, but the Chapman Tech mentor regards the Stonington contest of more importance than the Pratt High game, and Linkletter was started on the mound. Linkletter showed an amelioration over his first start against Old Saybrook High and he will hereafter draw a regular assignment.

The team as a whole showed a flash of speed at times in the game against Pratt High yesterday and it will be a matter of time when the team gets into its winning form. Practice will be held on both Friday and Saturday mornings and the batting order will be slightly altered for the Stonington contest. The players enjoyed a day of rest this afternoon.

Very little information could be learned as to the strength of the Stonington nine. The Brown and White this year will have a place to fill in the pitcher's box that will not be easy. Mooney, the regular hurler, graduated last year and who will fill his shoes has been undecided as yet. There is very little chance of finding a good hurler that will meet up to the requirements and the showing Stonington makes against Chapman Tech Saturday will determine just what chance this team will have in the struggle for the top position in the standing of the teams entered in the Eastern Connecticut Interscholastic league.

YANKS BUNCH HITS AND BEAT BOSTON AGAIN

New York, April 24.—The New York Americans defeated Boston again today by the score of 6 to, 2. Shawkey yielded only one hit for six innings but was hit hard at the finish. The Yankees bunched their hits to good advantage in the second and eighth innings. Joe Dugan's all-around playing featured. He drove a home run into the left field bleachers with Bengough and Witt on base in the second inning and in the same inning made a brilliant one-handed catch of a low drive by O'Neill, resulting in an unassisted double play. The play was made with the bases full. Score:

BRUGGY'S ERROR IN NINTH GIVES SENATORS VICTORY

Philadelphia, April 24.—A passed ball by catcher Bruggy in the ninth inning allowed Rice to score from third and gave Washington a 4 to 3 victory over Philadelphia today.

The home team tied the score in the sixth when Hauser hit a home run over the right field wall with Dykes on first. It was his second homer in two days.

GOLF ASSOCIATION LIFTS BAN ON STEEL SHAFTS

New York, April 24.—Formal notification of rulings permitting the use of the steel shaft club but barring grooved and slotted clubs within certain limitations was sent out to its members today by the U. S. Golf association. Both are now in effect.

The latter regulation provides that "club faces shall not bear any lines, dots, or other markings, made for the obvious purpose of putting a cut on the ball, nor shall they be stamped or cut with lines exceeding 1-18 of an inch in width, nor less than 1-32 of an inch apart, measured on their inside edges. Both lines and dot markings may be used, either alone or in combination within the above limitations, provided all rough or raised edges are removed."

SIKI, OUT OF FUNDS, IS READY TO BE GOOD

Havana, Cuba, April 24.—"Battling" Siki, who grew to like Havana so well that he refused to leave when his manager, Bob Levy, returned to New York, now says he is ready to sail Saturday if Levy will cable funds for a ticket, pay his hotel and reimburse friends for various police court fines, it was stated today by Luis F. Ferrer, a local promoter, whom Levy asked to look after Siki.

Ponies Beat Lawmakers

Albany, N. Y., April 24.—Springfield beat Albany, 10 to 7, in a loosely played and long drawn out game today. Albany established what is believed to be a league record by having eighteen men left on the bases. A great stop by Fortune with three on and two out in the ninth inning shut off Albany runs. Score.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Captain New York Giants

The bases are full. Score 3-1 in favor of team in field. One out. Runner on third is fast. Batter hits ball to third baseman close to base line.

How should the third baseman play the ball?

In a case of this kind with a fast man on third the hit must be hard in order to catch this runner at the plate. The best way to make the play is for the third baseman to touch his bag the moment he gets the ball and then peg it to first for the double. This is faster than throwing to second and having the second baseman relay to first for the double. The latter way means that three men handle the ball, instead of two, and there are two long throws, instead of one. Some players throw home and then have the catcher relay the ball to first for the double. This is a mistake for like reasons. Such a play takes longer to make than the better one. Consequently, the double does not always follow.

HUBBELL'S PITCHING, FIELDING AND HITTING BEATS BRAVES

Boston, April 24.—Hubbell's pitching, fielding and hating for Philadelphia, were big factors in giving the Phillies a 7 to 5, over the Boston Braves here today. Hubbell banged one putout and scored twice in addinonal putout and score twice in additional to holding the Braves to seven hits. Ford fielded brilliantly and Williams hit two doubles against the right field barrier.

BROOKLYN OPENS HOME SEASON WITH DEFEAT

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 24.—Brooklyn opened its home season today by losing to New York, 2 to 4, before 22,000 fans. Four hits off Ruether, a fumble by Johnny Jones, a sacrifice and a sacrifice fly gave New York four runs in the second inning.

Nehf was relieved by Ryan in the third after walking two batters and hitting one. Jackson homered a home run into the left field bleachers in the sixth inning when Wheat misjudged his long fly. Score:

REDS DEFEAT PIRATES IN VERY CLOSE GAME

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 24.—Cincinnati defeated Pittsburgh 5 to 4 today in a close game which opened the home season for the Pirates. Donohue and Meadows pitched the complete game for both teams although the latter was hit hard. The Pirates staged a rally in the last inning but it fell one score short of extending the game to extra innings. Twenty eight thousand fans turned out for the opener and got their first glimpse of Glenn Wright, the Pirates' new shortstop. Score.

ROARING LIONS PAW UP GROUND IN FIRST PRACTICE

At the call of Dr. Clarence Thompson, manager and captain, of the Lions club baseball team, about 15 candidates reported at the Academy campus for the first practice. They were all set to make the fur fly; everybody felt like a Babe Ruth, but some could only imitate the Mighty Casey of Mudville. There was no lack of spirit, however, and all were willing workers, although in some cases the flesh was weak. The pitching staff, Doc Thompson, Fred Watson, Doc Sussler, Frank Rinella and George Madden uncorked bewildering speed and curves until the old soup bone began to hurt. The catching was done by Georgie Finn, who not only wore a mask, protector and big mitt but was also attired in an overcoat as an added means of protection. Charlie Frink also took a turn back of the bat.

The first base candidate was Ed Rich; at second was Billy O'Neil and at third was Dave Disco and at short Doc Sussler and Ty Stanton took turns. In the outfield was Rudy Henschel, Bert Caron, Herb Corey and numerous other aspirants for positions on the team. The hitting stars were George Madden, Fred Watson, Bert Caron and Ty Stanton. If practice makes perfect the Lions will have a whale of a baseball team before the season is over. The first game will be with the Rotary club probably some time next month.

Bridgeport Slaughters Hartford.

Bridgeport, April 24.—Bridgeport defeated Hartford 13 to 7 in a weird game here this afternoon. Poor pitching, loose fielding and heavy hitting by the Bears marked the game. Joe Rodrigues again starred at bat with four hits to his credit.

Smith's triple with two down in the eighth started Bridgeport's rally which netted seven runs. Score:

CHIP DUGAS WINS BOWLING TITLE IN EASTERN CONNECTICUT TOURNAMENT

Fred "Chip" Dugas of Taftville, won the Eastern Connecticut individual championship bowling tournament Thursday evening when he beat Roy Fillmore of Norwich, nine out of eleven strings at the Aetna alleys. Dugas and Fillmore were the contenders for the title, as the other three men in the tournament were practically out of the running, Fillmore leading the league by a small margin. Fillmore has eleven strings to roll with Morin, but should he win them all he would be one game behind Dugas. Barber and Dodge each have twenty-two strings to roll but the best that Barber can do is tie the Fillmore for second place providing he should win all his matches. Dodge is out of the race, as is Morin.

Dugas was in rare form in his match last evening with Fillmore and never has a prettier exhibition of bowling been given on the local alleys. He hung up high total for the 11 strings with 1304 and his

MEANS REPORTS THEFT OF "SAY" RECORDS

Washington, April 24.—The treasured records of five years of spy work, the hoard of Gaston B. Means, international sleuth and star witness for the senate Daugherty investigating committee, have vanished dream-like between two days.

At least Means so reported today to the committee. A hasty investigation established only the fact that if two men bearing a letter signed with the name of Chairman Brookhart took the records from Means' Washington home, as he reported, they were not authorized to do so, and their letter of credentials was a forgery.

Senatprs on the committee were in plainly puzzled waiting tonight. They may have a session tomorrow to study the problem.

For weeks now, the Means' records, which consist of scores of black bound note-books, his day-by-day diaries, of his extraordinary activities, have been held back from full disclosure. TantaHsing glimpses into them have been offered at frequent intervals in the kaleidoscopic shifting of the Daugherty investigation, but no complete tale of their contents has been rounded out.

It was to these records Means turned when asked to fix the times and totals of payments he took as "money carrier," for Jess Smith. Again, they were said to contain detailed data of how Means was assigned to ferret out the secrets of the central botlegging machinery in New York and "get" Secretary Mellon. From topic to topic, as the skipping examinations of the committee proceeded, he verbally has sketched interest outlines, and has said always "the records" would confirm and extend his testimony.

One or two days the records themselves, spilling out from two bulky containers, lay in the committee rooms while its inquiry was on. Among the diary leaves were thrust the photostatic copies of letters and documents which—Means said—he had stolen, bought, or manoeuvred from their original depositaries.

There was hardly a baleful secret in all the country, he intimated darkly, but had its key hidden in "the records of Means."—Once German intelligence agent, later Burns' detective, and special agent of the department of justice, and finally some sort of attache of the intelligence section of prohibition enforcement.

Means' story to the astonished committee members today was as simple as it was doleful. To him more than three weeks ago came two men, purporting to be assistant sergeants-at-arms of the senate, armed with a letter which appeared to come from Chairman Brookhart, ordering the papers into the committee's possession. Trustfully to their automobile truck did Means consign his records. He knew no more about it.

Senator Brookhart said he had written no such letter. Senator Wheeler, the committee prosecutor, after examining the missive pronounced the signature a "palpable forgery," easily detected. They both indicated, however, that the records were not absolutely necessary to the investigation: that the committee could proceed without them, and would do so for the moment, chief attention has been centered upon the preparation of a resolution citing M. S. Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general, for contempt, which is likely to be put into the senate tomorrow.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Dushee knoya?" "Little." "Loveya?" "Gess." "Likeya?" "Don't think so."—Illinois Siren.

Tourist—I wonder at your allowing people to mount that ruin.

Miss Gotrox—He says that I am always in his thoughts.

Her friend—The fibber! Papa knows of two other financial deals that he's in up to his neck.—Exchange.

Jones—I wonder where the stepladder is.

Mrs. Jones—Willie had it last.

Jones—Then it's probably in the pantry.—Boston Transcript.

Jane was very fond of meringue on pie and awakening one morning she saw the ground covered with the first snow and exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, lots of pie."—Chicago News.

Lady—Why, have you no faith in self?

Tramp—No, mum, I ain't. If you have faith in yourself, other folks won't. Don't expect other folks ter have in you what you ain't got yourself.—Stray Stories.

A poor, half fed, shrinking peddler rapped timidly. Mrs. Casey, whose temper that day was bad, flung open the kitchen door and glowered down at him.

"Did you wish to see me?" she demanded, in threatening tones.

The man backed off a few steps. "Well, if I did," he assured her, with an apologetic grin, "I got my wish. Thank you!"—Farm Life.

The word "jazz" has already found its way to the scholarly dictionary, where it is defined as "a form of syncopated music played in discordant tones on various instruments, as the banjo, saxaphone, trombone, flageolet, drum and piano." But this definition is incomplete. In the jazz band there are kettle-drums, cowbells, kitchen pans, tin whistles, baby's rattles, etc. The "music" is full of shrieks, screams, moans and explosions. The leader usually adopts a suitable hilotic attitude. With cap set on one side of his head he prances around, rolls his eyes and twists his face into all kinds of simian contortions. The inspiration for all this was found among excited savages.

THE SUCKER LISTS AND STOCK SWINDLERS

Two billions of dollars is a lot of money, especially when it is practically thrown away, for just that amount was "given" to crooked stock salesmen and fake promoters in the past year. The fact that this sum came largely from the hard-working, honest people of the country makes it all the more deplorable, writes Robert D. Sage as a class thesis at the school of commerce, Temple university, Philadelphia. These victims, often entirely ignorant of even the simplest rules of finance, and sometime proud of their ability to pick a good buy, are termed suckers by investment brokers, finance writers and salesmen. This so-called class of people, though not having any characteristics distinguishing them from others, aside from their susceptibility to clever argument on the part of salesmen includes men and women from all walks of life.

Professional stock salesmen usually proceed on the theory that "once a sucker—always a sucker." It is too true that perhaps nine out of every ten that have been hooked once will be easily duped again, hoping to regain all that they have previously lost.

When a group of shady salesmen get notice of the failure of some company, preferably a new and untried one that has paid perhaps one dividend, they will pay a certain figure for a list of the stockholders. The prices they pay range from $6 to $30 per thousand names, according to the classification and nature of the names on the list. A representative list will have names of teachers, lawyers, doctors, dentists and other professional men, arranged according to communities and cities. Great care is taken to be sure that no two names are chosen from the same locality, unless they represent individuals in widely differing occupations.

Here is one of the commonest methods by which the victim is separated from his money, as well as his self-complacency. The appeals, in this case, are made to the prospect's vanity and desire for social and pecuniary distinction. He will receive, out of a clear sky, a letter written on beautiful paper with an engraved letterhead and all the like that make for a distinctive stationary presumably from a reliable firm. This will make an unfailing impression on the ordinary individual. The letter opens with the startling statement that he, the reader, has been unanimously chosen to the directorate of the Golden Eagle Mining Company, Red Butte, Nebraska. (Always remotely removed from the reader's home). The reader is at first surprised and then a little doubtful. He thinks that somebody is trying to put something over on him, but his vanity soon steps in and he immediately justifies his election by his own high opinion of himself. In other words, he begins to pat himself on the back. He is told that his name had been secured as one representing a person of unusual executive ability and high integrity. He is told that the first meeting of the board will be held at Palm Beach during the following summer. The company realizes, of course, that he is a busy man but they are willing to pay all his expenses in return for his intellect and sound judgment.

Perhaps at this point the reader lays aside the letter and possibly forgets it. About a week later he receives another letter urging him to accept the responsibility offered him because of the opportunity given him to serve the investment public. He signs the agreement, signifying his willingness to contribute his ability and support to the enterprise. No mention has been made as yet of an investment on his part of anything but his brain. He is showered with letters and literature telling him of the glorious rewards that will be his, all of which falls like music on his ear. Then, one day, he is jarred by another letter which does not at first sound so sweet to him. The Golden Eagle Mining Company has overlooked a small matter which is very unimportant as far as he is concerned, but which must be attended to in order to comply with the laws of Nebraska. The law states that every director in a domestic corporation must hold at least ten (10) shares of the stock of the company. Of course, there is nothing which will prevent him from taking more, but ten is the minimum. More, he will receive an assured 15 per cent on the investment besides his salary as director. Though the prospect may be at first doubtful he is gradually won over to the purchase of a hundred dollars worth of stock by all the wily and enticing promises of the salesman. He forwards his check for the required amount and then waits for his reward. The result is this: He loses his money and, incidentally, his trip to Palm Beach.

It is not to be thought for a moment that every man approached on the above proposition falls. If the swindlers secure the check from 50 out of a 1000 they have made a good catch. Postage and literature expenses are their only contribution to the scheme. The money from the "sucker" is practically a gift.

Human nature is much the same the world over in respect to love of praise and leaning toward vanity. Until the general buying public, by proper education or experience, can be taught the necessity for clear thinking and caution, such "gullidge" stocks will be exchanged for hard-earned life savings. Many of the states have enacted the so-called "Blue Sky Laws" which prohibit the offering of securities without sound backing by the issuing company and without previous investigation by state officials. The reader will see, however, that the illustration cited makes no mention of stocks being listed on the exchange or even advertised in any circulation medium. The buyer went entirely on the assumption that the seller was honest and would fulfill his promises to the latter.

To Develop Respect for Manual Professions

In France, as in many other countries, the existence of a certain prejudice against labor has led young men to seek clerical situations which, owing to the large number of candidates, are underpaid. Under these circumstances it is evident that any action tending to a more economical distribution of labor is beneficial not only to the individual but also to the community.

With this object in view the municipal authorities of Troyes and commercial and trade organizations established a Chamber of Trades. The activity of the chamber was first directed toward a reform in apprenticeship. Under a special form of contract the employer must deposit with the chamber a sum equal to one-fifth of the wages of the apprentice. This sum together with interest thereon is paid to the apprentice when he has completed his contract.

It has been arranged that teachers in the public schools keep records showing aptitudes of pupils, and several hundred pupils have been assisted in the choice of a manual profession.—School Life.

To train young women as household assistants the home economics department of the Denver (Colo.) public schools, cooperating with the Young Women's Christian Association, will offer a six or eight weeks course of intensive training for practical work in the home. Housekeepers of Denver promise the students positions immediately upon completion of the course.

"Use of the Air" For 20 Minutes Daily.

Daily broadcasting of short educational talks and features from New York city public schools through an arrangement with one of the great radio corporations is considered by Superintendent Ettinger "a wonderful opportunity to bring the actual work of the school into closer relation with the home." At 2 o'clock every day the schools have "exclusive use of the air" for 20 minutes. Entertainment offered by the schools includes talks on special aspects of education, music lessons, glees and other songs, music appreciation, orchestral music, recitations in reading, spelling, English, history, civics, geography, arithmetic, nature study, science, and exercises for special holidays. Each principal will submit a tentative program representative of his school.

SHORT STORIES ## OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

What a Dream Did

By Claire Wesson

THERE was a little breathless silence while, with fingers that shook a trifle, Anthony Pyrton slipped a gleaming diamond on the third finger of a small white hand that lay coldly passive in his. The girl's face was deadly pale, her eyes wide and very blue, her lips compressed ever so slightly. You see, this was rather an ordeal for the gay Marion. She didn't love Anthony the least little bit! It was one of these unfortunate affairs where love is sacrificed on the altar of family protection, and yet there was a strange twist to it that seldom enters into the rich-man, poor-girl stories.

Anthony wasn't a sleek, smooth gentleman. He was just a plain, homely man, with long, lanky legs that moved a trifle awkwardly, and eyes that reminded the exasperated Marion of a faithful dog she once had. What matter if he did have millions? He wasn't the type of man she could love. He had no social aspirations—he cared nothing for clothes, theaters, dancing. He was slow—and stupid! He never had anything to say! Yet his brown eyes followed her every movement with humble adoration.

Now, Marion at heart was a most generous girl, and she realized the dire poverty that faced them, knew well that dad would never work again, could never walk again; that mother's health had long since broken down under the repeated blows of misfortune, and that she alone, working in the office, could not provide even the necessities, much less the luxuries she longed to give the dear old pair that had met such trouble so cheerfully. Then—along came Anthony, with his long legs and stubborn hair, and pleading eyes. How could she permit her parents to accept the gifts that showered upon them, each bought with care and extreme thoughtfulness of their comfort? Yet—how could she bear to be so selfish when at her word they might spend the rest of their days in the lap of luxury? And they were both so fond of plain Anty!

These were the thoughts that finally prevailed upon the girl to give up her dream of love and to place her hand in Anthony's when he proffered the ring.

"Marion," his voice was husky with eagerness, "I know you don't love me, but, honey, I'm going to try my best to make you very happy."

A moment later and he was gone, striding down the street with a vigor new to him. "He's awfully good," murmured the girl to herself, "but I just can't love him!"

And so—she was married. With mother and dad installed in the big house on the hill where there was no cold, nor hunger, nor housework, nor worry, where every whim was satisfied, every want anticipated, Marion seemed to relax, and let the responsibility she had been carrying for five years slip to Anthony's capable shoulders. He seemed to love to care for the old folks, and he was very dear to his wife. Mother rapidly grew stronger and to see her fussing among her beloved flowers was very sweet. Although dad could never walk again, still he had a host of little conveniences that went to make life comfortable and happy.

Marion overhauled the big house. She transformed its grim, staid dignity to a cheery, livable brightness that delighted Anty. She was a wizard, and with unlimited money, she worked wonders on house and grounds. But she had little time for Anty. She was constantly busy with clubs and society affairs, and nobody dreamed of the lonely ache in Anty's big heart.

One night, a year after they had been married, a sudden illness prevented the dinner guest from coming, and an evening at home resulted. Suddenly very tired, Marion curled up on the wide couch before the open fireplace and fell to dreaming. Anty, finding her thus, her cheeks flushed by the flames, thought her lovely indeed.

"Honey," he pleaded, "we haven't had our honeymoon yet. Don't you think a trip to California would be nice?"

But the prospects of a trip alone with Anty did not seem to appeal to Marion, and she shook her head. "No, Anty, please. It is so cosy here, and I couldn't leave Mother and Dad!"

There was nothing more said, and turning presently, she found he had gone. She settled more comfortably in her cushions. It was nice to stay home once in a while.

So it went on until Judy came. The sudden death of a relative brought her from her Western ranch, and as she and Marion had not seen each other for many years, she planned to stay a week at the big house. An hour after her arrival, she discovered Anty sitting alone before his fire.

"Is this the famous Anthony?" Startled, he rose to his feet, stammering, but she gave him no chance to speak. "I'm Judy Wentworth, and I'm just as happy as I can be to meet you!" Her black eyes laughed up into his. "You were nice to carry off Marion, and give her such a wonderful home, and I think it was a horrid Fate that put me at the other end of the world where I couldn't have a chance, too!"

Marion coming in search of her friend, felt a queer sinking in her heart when she saw Anty respond to Judy's cheerful flattery. They didn't seem to see her. Judy tucked her little hand through Anty's arm and it was quite a stretch for tiny Judy, and the two were soon chatting like magpies. Anty's eyes were unusually bright, and she had never heard him talk so! Judy had certainly changed him!

The week lengthened into a month, and threatened to last longer! Marion saw very little of her friend. She walked with Anty, long hikes that brought them back rosy and tired out—riding with Anty in the park, and Judy was using Marion's own particular horse, Vigor—motoring with Anty on the wide highways that invited speeding, and, lastly, the long evenings with Anty before the fire, or playing cards. Marion was fairly sick with jealousy. They didn't want her, they fairly ignored her. Judy was hateful!

The climax came one terrible night when the wind howled and the snow was drifting fast. Inside the big house all was cheery. Dad was dozing in his chair—mother was putting the finishing touches to a big sweater for Anty. She didn't know where Judy and Anthony were! In a bewitching evening gown of blue and silver, she trailed her fingers aimlessly over the piano keys, longing for peace—with Anty. She rose, nervously, and wandered out into the spacious hall. The front door opened noisily and admitted a gust of cold air and snow and Judy and Anthony! The Western girl's black eyes were dancing, her cheeks rosy. They didn't see her—they never saw her!

"Oh, isn't it just too wonderful! I hated to come in!" Anty was helping her off with her wet coat—unbuckling her overshoes. He was very attentive. Marion turned away, crying weakly, and then, drawn by an irresistible impulse she looked again, and found them close together, Judy's face buried in the man's shoulder.

A log fell, sending a shower of sparks into the air. Marion stirred, sat up. There were tears on her cheeks—she had been asleep, and it was all a horrible dream! There was no Judy here! She ran out into the hall and peered out the front door. The stars were out, and there was no snow. A great relief surged over her, and she ran about looking for Anty. The house was dark. It must have been very late. A glance at her watch as she switched on the hall light told her it was half past two! Anty would be in bed. She hurried up the stairs, opened his door. The lamp by the table was burning, revealing Anty asleep in his arm chair, his book fallen from nerveless fingers.

She crept to his side and knelt on the floor. The man stirred and lifted his head.

"Marion! What on earth!" He was thoroughly awake now.

"Oh, Anty, I've had the awfulest dream!" She shivered and nestled closer to him. "Couldn't you possibly hold me for a while? I'm so cold—and afraid."

The wondering Anty picked her up and settled her on his knee. Her sleepy head fell on his shoulder, and for a moment they were very still, he trying to fathom this new Marion, she content to be near him. Then . . .

"Anty!"

"What, dear?" He had not changed at all, and was still as slow as a poke.

"Do—you love me? . . . Let's go to California, tomorrow!"

Read This One

By Margaret Taylor

WERE you one of the boys in the late war?

Did you return home only to get the after-kick of the world's gigantic financial kick?—Most of you did.

Lee went and came back to his young wife to experience the kick which in a very large sense she soothed as only a good woman can soothe. It does not make the average man more ambitious, when he is down and out, to have some woman harassing his soul because he can't make good, simply because conditions are not good themselves.

This is the story, and just because it is true and has several angles to it but nothing to solve any man's financial condition, I asked you in the beginning to read it. Sit there and smoke your cigar.

In the first place Lee was not brave. Big, husky fellow that he was, he told over and over again that he did not care if they shot him to pieces if he went, that he did not care for himself; but the horrible thought was what made a coward of him. Some believed him. Others remarked that he was scared to death. Probably he was. At least he was not original in his fear.

His life was spared and he came back to his young wife. If anything he was better prepared to battle with life than ever before. The boyishness had merged into purposeful manhood. There was something strong, fine and purposeful in him and just when it wanted to give tremendous expression, Lee lost his job.

Try as he would, he was unable to get work. There were the different expenses and his wife met each bravely until the small savings account dwindled away; then she announced that, since women could get work easier than men, she proposed going to work. Lee accepted the situation, simply because there was no other way to get out of it. He felt that in a few days he could relieve the situation.

Well, he did not. She is still working and so is Lee, now, at his same job, that of chauffeur for a wealthy Cleveland man. They are coming through all right, and, after all, their work is not the story.

Well, you'll have to read the remainder of this if you want to know. It is why I asked you to sit down and listen.

One day Lee was hunting a job, one day out of hundreds at the same thing when he felt an iron will to do something desperate. It made him mad to think himself incapable of getting along. All he owned was his wife and a first-class motor cycle. He wanted to pawn or sell the machine, but found it too useful in making his rounds.

This was blue-Monday morning. He went down to the public square, regretting every drop of gasoline used in the going, then he saw a fellow sitting alone. Something in the look, a whole lot in the droop of the boyish shoulders, and everything in the miserable attitude bespoke Lee's own feelings. Another chap out of work! He passed the young man the second time. The third time he found him still sitting there, with his cap drawn almost over his face.

He approached the young man and to get it over with as quickly as possible. Lee had been right. Shame-faced, sorry, angry, resentful, then laughing, the boy—for he was not much more than a boy,—told his story. He had been in the war, came back and left a good home with his old grandmother and came to Cleveland to work. He could find no work and did not have the money to get back home. He was ashamed to write to his grandmother. She was his only relative.

You can't tell how they do it, but often it is done. Lee virtually adopted the lonely boy, without knowing just why. Night after night the two would ride down to the public square, where Lee took him into the restaurant where Leila was waiting table. He would take the boy home or give him car fare and for a month, while the stranger tried to get work, the young people kept him.

One night Lee went alone to see his wife. He came out and found that his motor cycle was stolen. Quickly he notified the police, tried to reach his young friend at his home, without success.

In a few days he knew the truth,—the man he had befriended had stolen his car!

In a crime-riddled city where notorious characters get away alive and happy, there is little or no concern for the fellow who loses all his assets in life, a fairly good motor cycle.

The rest of this sounds like a great untruth. But it is nothing of the sort. Perhaps you have befriended some person in your life who, if he did not steal something from you, did a mortal injury as soon as possible. You often get it.

A little later Lee had an opportunity to visit his old home. Just why he took the route he did not know, but he went by the way of Columbus, a roundabout way to get to his home, and stopped to visit friends.

One day while sitting on the front porch reading a paper, two women solicitors came to the house asking for money to defray the expenses of a young boy who had been in a motorcycle accident. He wanted to go to his grandmother and his time was up at the hospital. Lee knew in a minute just who the rascal was. He hastened to the hospital. He found his man. He expected to find him!

Lee saw men killed in battle. He saw them fall at his feet by the dozens and hundreds; but never did he see anything like the face of the young man he had befriended.

"Cheer up, Bon," he exclaimed happily, patting the white hand on the arm of the chair. "I am going your way and I can take you home on the motor cycle. I understand it is in good condition." The laugh was so wholesome and good, conveying without words that feeling that the heart understands.

And the man who knew the other chap was crazy with anxiety, homesick, desperate, did one of the many things which Christ did when He was on earth; for was He not an example? He was homesick himself. Oh, how well he understood the boy's feelings!

"You remember that handsome watch I lost five years ago?"

"Yes, I remember."

"You remember how I looked everywhere, and could not find it?"

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, yesterday, I put on an old waistcoat that I had not worn for years, and what do you think I found in one of the pockets?"

"Your watch! Let me congrat—"

"No. I found the hole I must have lost it through!"

"There With the Goods"

By Joella Johnson

IT was Saturday, the day of days to to the members of the Crane family. For was not that the day when the local high school team played football and wasn't their Jim one of the stars on said team? As usual, Jim hurried off directly after dinner to the athletic field, with many admonitions from his mother not to get his neck broken, and gay encouragement from his father to "give 'em a couple of touch-downs today." Sister Betty hustled through her dessert to join a crowd of gay high school rooters, resplendent in fluttering school colors. And then Jim's father laid aside his newspaper and went in quest of his overcoat.

Mrs. Crane, still in morning house dress, glanced up from the silverware she was polishing. "Going to the game, Pa?"

"Wouldn't miss it." He hesitated a moment, and then asked in a casual way: "Why don't you come along, too, Ma?" He knew it was a useless question, and yet there was an eager, wistful light in his eyes. To see Jim make a touchdown, with mother in the grandstand beside him, was a joy too far-fetched to ever become a reality.

"Come on, Ma, be a sport," he coaxed again, but Mrs. Crane shook her head carelessly. "I've got dozens of things to do this afternoon, Jim."

"Let 'em go, or do them tonight," he persisted.

"No," decisively, "I don't understand the game, anyway. I wouldn't know a touchdown from a forward pass."

"I'd explain things as they happened, Mary."

"No, it would only be a waste of time and money. You can tell me all about it when you return."

Disconsolately Jim's dad left the house and joined the crowds that surged toward the field. It bothered him to think that Mary just wouldn't shake off the accumulation of household tasks to join him in anything except, perhaps, an occasional movie.

And then the game was on, and for the time being Crane, Sr., forgot his domestic troubles. The teams were well matched, and fought gamely through three scoreless quarters. The final quarter started with a flourish, and the visiting team plowed through the local team for a touchdown. They failed to kick the goal. The score was 6 to 0, and only seven minutes left to play.

One, two, three downs and then, suddenly, out of an apparently solid mass, slid the slim figure of Jim Crane. The crowd arose to its feet as though by a signal. The visitors seemed dazed at the turn of affairs. One made a frenzied grab at the boy, but it only served to wrench his shoulder. The ball remained coddled against his side. Amid a wild burst of applause, Jimsey carried the ball back to the line. One moment remained in which the ball was kicked over successfully, and the score stood 7 to 6 in favor of the home team. The whistle pealed shrilly.

They bore Jim home on stalwart shoulders. Jim, Sr., heard them talking about his son all the way home, but he alone, with a heart bursting with pride, had no one to confide in.

The supper table was merely an adoration party composed of Betty's friends. One gay young miss turned suddenly to Mrs. Crane and inquired how she had liked the game. Mrs. Crane had laughed carelessly: "Oh, I never go, dear; too many things to do at home."

The young lady in question stared as only the modern young person can. "You don't go? Why, mother never misses a game. Bert is only a sub, and is seldom used, but ma says she wants to be there when he does play. She knows all about the game, and can tell me a few things, believe me."

Later on, when the family had dispersed for the evening, Mrs. Crane sat down and began, not to work on the ever present embroidery, but to think. She recalled an editorial she had recently read. One sentence stood out clearly: "To attend a ball game with hubby may mean more to his happiness than the frenzied dusting of an immaculate house."

Another week passed as usual, to the red letter day. They did not notice that Ma was dressed for the street, an unusual thing at noon, on a Saturday. She hovered about them, restless, unbusy fingers fairly aching to tackle the dinner dishes. Jim, Sr., put on his coat, fussed a bit with the clothes brush, mumbled a careless good-by and was off. He had not even asked her to go along, and she sat staring at the closed door, hot tears of disappointment trickling down her cheeks. She had dreamed of what he would say when she replied to his usual question. "Sure I'll go; wait till I get my hat." He hadn't even given her a chance.

She wanted to sulk, and then she thought of the boyish lonesomeness of her big, bashful husband, and she hurriedly slipped on her things, gave a whimsical glance at the dinner dishes piled high, and set out.

Following the crowd, she landed at the field and bought her ticket. She had no idea which were considered the best seats, but again she followed the crowd to the bleachers. She tripped along as though always accustomed to this sort of thing, when, in reality, her heart was pounding wildly and she wanted only to sink into a corner somewhere. She glanced up into the sea of faces. A man arose suddenly, eyes wide, unbelieving recognition, turning presently into incredulous delight. "Mary," he called softly.

She settled herself as though born to a football game, and smiled quizzical up into his astonished eyes. Dozens of pretty things, years unsaid, surged to his lips, but he only remarked eagerly as the players ran confidently across the field: "There is Jimsey, Mary. He's in fine trim today. Watch him practice, and he's right there with the goods."

Mary smiled happily. "He's always there with the goods," she repeated softly. She knew nothing of touchdowns, end runs, shifts and the what not of a football game, but she did know that she was not to be "penalized" in the future, because she had decided to "play the game in the present." The game was on.

Wrongly Catalogued.

"What do you mean by insulting me as you did in last night's Clamor?"

"Just a minute," replied the editor. "Didn't the story appear as you gave it to us—namely, that you had resigned as city treasurer?"

"It did," admitted the politician. "But you put it under the head, 'Public Improvements.'"—Harper's Magazine.

A Change of Residence

By Monte Darrell

EVA RICHARDS glanced at her wrist watch, then expectantly down the street. With a disappointed look in her blue eye she bent her pretty head over the typewriter and began making out bills for her employer, Mr. Tasker.

Somehow Eva had grown to look forward to the semi-weekly visits of the bashful youth who at exactly 5 o'clock on Wednesdays and Saturdays would ease his broad shoulders carefully into the tiny shop. He always bought bonbons. The young lady did not care for chocolates, he said, and so Eva always thought of him as the bonbon man. Though the candy must be for his sweetheart, of course, Eva felt a personal interest in making the box as attractive as possible. "Just as if it were for me," she confessed to herself with a blush.

Having recently come from a small town where everybody knew everybody else, she made few friends in the city. The bonbon man had always stopped for a little chat and she was going to miss his smiling face. But evidently he had found another place to trade. She could scarcely blame him. Mr. Tasker's shop was small and the variety limited. Probably the young man's sweetheart had grown tired of the same kind of sweets week after week.

Eva had been engrossed in her work for some minutes when she heard a familiar voice, and there stood the bonbon man. She gave an involuntary glance at the big clock near the door and smiled to herself. He was on time after all! Her watch was fast and it was just five by the larger time-piece. She made the usual careful selection of his favorites and after a few minutes' chat and a pleasant "good-by," he was gone. There were many other customers, all with a word of greeting, but Eva did not feel any particular interest in the packages she wrapped so deftly, nor did she try to picture herself as the recipient.

On other evenings Eva had been in haste to reach her dreary little room after a hasty dinner in some cheap restaurant, but tonight was different. She had moved just the day before to a large boarding house filled with young people and she looked forward to seeing them again. One girl, especially, Alma Gray, had been very friendly and finding that Eva was a stranger in the city had asked her if she would like to go out some evening with her, accompanied by Alma's fiance, George Hamilton, and his friend and roommate, Arthur Bailey. Alma was sure she would like Mr. Bailey, but of course no one could be as nice as George. Perhaps they might decide to go tonight. She retraced her steps to a little millinery shop and with a certain jaunty toque in her possession, walked quickly to the boarding house.

And there Alma met her with the news that George and his friend were to take them to the movies and to supper afterward. Eva couldn't help wishing that the bonbon man was to be her escort instead of the mysterious Mr. Bailey, but she felt that she was being ungrateful to Alma and tried to keep her thoughts on the party before her. Alma invited her to step in her room a moment before dinner, and there on the dresser Eva spied a box of candy like the one she had arranged so tastefully for the bonbon man an hour before.

"Do have some candy, Eva. I've had this since Wednesday, but it's still fresh. George brings me a box twice a week. There, are no chocolates, though. I never eat chocolates."

Eva felt that a piece of that candy would choke her.

"No, thanks—I have a chance to eat it all day if I like. You see I work at Mr. Tasker's candy store," she said with an effort. So the bonbon man was engaged to Ama. She couldn't understand that young lady's expression as she looked at her sharply and then began to laugh.

"Oh, you do. This is too good." She murmured about fate and Cupid's best friend, but Eva was too miserable to listen.

Then they hurried down to dinner, but Eva no longer looked forward to the evening. She had felt all along that the bonbon man was engaged, but she could not bear to see him attentive to another girl, even Alma, who had been so good to her. She couldn't remember how she managed to finish her dinner, but with all her misery she was conscious that Alma was very much excited about something. They had to dress quickly and Eva was just slipping on the new hat at a becoming angle when Alma knocked at the door. "You look spiffy. Come on down. The boys have come."

Alma led the way into the big parlor, and yes, there was the bonbon man and another man waiting for them.

"Miss Richards, allow me to introduce Mr. Hamilton." Eva half turned toward the bonbon man. But here was the other man holding out his hand. "And this is Mr. Bailey," said Alma, turning toward the bonbon man. She laughed as they shyly shook hands.

"Arthur, don't you think I'm a pretty good friend to Cupid. You have been wanting to meet the charming girl who works in Mr. Tasker's shop, and here she is. Eva, I thought I'd see if you couldn't distract Arthur's attention from his unknown 'lady fair,' and you turn out to be the very one herself."

"But I don't understand," said Eva, as they paired off and started down the steps. "You always bought the candy?" The bonbon man laughed.

"Well, that was because George works out of town and has to catch a certain car uptown which doesn't give him time for any shopping. I was certainly a faithful friend, but Alma was getting tired of the same kind of candy all the time and I didn't dare ask you out without meeting you in the proper way and couldn't find anyone who knew you, but it's all right now," and he took her arm possessively as they walked down the street.

"I always thought you were engaged," murmured Eva.

"Not yet, but I hope to be soon," the bonbon man replied meaningly as he helped her carefully down the curb.

"Papa," she said, "when you see a cow ain't you afraid?"

"No; certainly not, Evelyn."

"When you see a mad horse, ain't you afraid?"

"No; of course not."

"When you see a dog, ain't you afraid?"

"No!"—with emphasis.

"When you see a bumble-bee, ain't you afraid?"

"No!" with scorn.

"Ain't you afraid when it thunders?"

"No!"—with loud laughter. "Oh, you silly child."

"Papa," said Evelyn solemnly, "ain't you afraid of nothing in the world but mamma?"

SUIT ON TRIAL FOR DAMAGES FOR ASSAULT

Before Judge L. F. Waldo Marvin and a jury the damage suit brought by Louise Atkinson of Stonington against Gertrude M. Oilweiler for damages of $5,000, went on trial in the superior court at New London Thursday afternoon. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant on March 29 attacked her with her fists, and inflicted painful injuries to her face and body, and greatly upset her nervous system.

NORWICH PARTY SHOWS ROUTE TO MOONSHINE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, April 24—Six Norwich young people, three young men and as many girls, seated comfortably in a powerful seven-passenger limousine unsuspectingly blazed the trail to a moonshine vender in Scotland about two o'clock this morning. Shortly after midnight, County Detective William E. Jackson was aroused from his sleep by a telephone message from a party who desired to remain unknown, giving the officer a tip that a transfer of liquor was about to be made at a certain crossroad in the town of Scotland.

Federal Prohibition Enforcement Officer William S. Congdon was in turn awakened from his slumbers and the two anti-scofflawians made a fast trip to the designated section in Mr. Jackson's automobile.

After turning from the main highway in the village of Scotland into the Scotland-Baltic road, the officers came upon a big machine traveling along at a slow rate of speed. The pursuers shut off all lights on their machine and with the assistance of the moonlight kept the limousine within view.

The big machine came to a stop at a crossroad and the officers prepared to witness a transfer of liquor but apparently the party had halted for "spooning" purposes as the machine resumed its course within an hour. The trail then led up another country road and the Norwich car stopped at what later proved to be the home of Taniste Gadue, a farmer of that section. Events developed quickly in the next fifteen minutes. The three young men were admitted to the house while the officers abandoned their machine and cut through the lots to gain a position where a view could be secured of the inside of the Gadue home. The front door had been left partly open and when Gadue appeared in the room with a five gallon can and then reached out to take possession of a handful of bills offered to him by one of the men, the officers rushed in, one grasping the money which was then in Gadue's hand, the other the can.

That their their sudden appearance lef tthe violators dumbfounded goes without saying. The bootlegger and the Rose of New England men took the situation quite easily but Mrs. Gadue, who, it was learned was ill became excited and her condition grew worse.

No further attempts were made by the officers to secure additional evidence as they were not equipped with a search warrant.

The can was found to contain four gallons of home made liquor. Having done their bit toward the upholding of the liquor law, the Norwich couples were dismissed by the officers. Mrs. Gadue appeared to be suffering from an internal hemorrhage and Dr. F. E. Guild of Windham Center was summoned. He found that the woman was quite ill and it was decided not to insist on a bond for Gadue. The farm, which he owns, was considered security and he was notified to appear in the Scotland town court on Thursday afternoon.

Gadue was presented at 12.30 o'clock before Justice of the Peace A. H. Gallup. He pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law. A fine of $200 and costs was imposed and paid. Grand Juror Henry W. Clark prosecuted the case.

VERDICT FOR $400 FOR NEW LONDON GIRL

The jury in the superior court at New London Thursday gave a verdict for $400 damages for Ruth Skaling in her suit against James H., Bridget and Agnes M. Sheedy, all of New London. The jury was out more than an hour.

The plaintiff is the 8-year-old daughter of Alfred S. Skaling of 95 Montauk avenue and sued for $2,500 damages for injuries received when, in coasting on Darrow street on Feb. 18, 1922, she ran her sled into a barbed wire barrier on property owned by the plaintiffs.

WHEN THINGS GO WRONG

The man who makes the best of it when anything goes wrong
Deserves to have his praises sung in language plain and strong.
He doesn't get despondent when things fail to come his way,
But hopes for better fortune when there comes another day.
He simply takes what comes to him, and makes the best of it.
Resisting the temptation to throw up his hands and quit.

He gets a lot of credit, but no more than he deserves,
For failure in endeavor is most trying to the nerves;
But being gloomy when you're beaten doesn't help a bit.
And so we like to see the man who makes the best of it—
But the person we admire, and behold with keen delight,
Is the one who when things have gone wrong sets out to set them right!

WESTERLY

The Lorraine Community house celebrated the termination of the bowling season Thursday evening, it being the second anniversary of the Lorraine Bowling league and the first annual of the community house. The celebration was characteristic of the thorough way in which the Lorraine management and the Community House organization have co-operated for the furtherance of the community idea.

At 6 o'clock dinner was served in the assembly hall on Mechanic street with the following menu:

Fruit Cocktail
Butter Thins
Bisque of Celery—Bread Sticks
Chilled Celery Queen Olives
Roast Turkey, Giblet Gravy
Mashed Potato Mashed Turnips
Creamed Onions
Rolls
Variety Ice Cream
Assorted Cake Coffee

The dinner was served to 125 members of the club and guests by an East Providence caterer. Three long tables were set the length of the hall, with the head table at the further end of the assembly hall. The room was elaborately decorated in red and white bunting and the table decorations were red and white carnations. The seating arrangement was by bowling teams, there being twenty teams in all, as indicated by the banners placed on the tables. The favors were purses for the women guests and pocketcomb cases for the men.

During the dinner various colored paper caps were distributed. At the head table were seated: W. B. MacColl, treasurer of the Lorraine company; J. Gaudet, superintendent of wool combing and carding; J. C. Parkinson, superintendent of worsted spinning; Harry Broughton, superintendent of worsted weaving; George Wright, superintendent of cotton weaving and James M. Munro, designer, all of Pawtucket, R. I., and the community committee, H. C. Crandall, H. Anderson, C. Herdegen, superintendent of the Westerly plant, R. E. Steere A. M. Blake and Alphonse Dubuc, overseer of the Lorraine plant. Mr. Dubuc was toastmaster.

Following the dinner W. B. MacColl awarded the following prizes for the bowling tournament: Girls, high single, 103, Lovena Fortin, compact; high triple, 262, Mildred Fallon, compact. Men, the team prize, silver loving cup marked "New Weave Room 1923-24," the individual members receiving leather belts with buckles. The team comprised Raymond Fallon, captain, William Mills, James "Sonny" Howard, Paul Martell, Milton Littlefair and Alexander Martell. High single, 146, William Barker, silver cuff links. High average, first, 100 66-75, James Howard, gold stick pin. High average second, 94 43-63, Edward Martell. Honarable mention, A. Dubuc. Afternoon teams, whose husbands are employed by the Lorraine company, high single, Mrs. John Jones, silk bag. High triple 218, Mrs. James Anderson, black silk bag. Myles Brennan received the consolation award, a boy's scout knife. John Jones, the collector and scorer for the season, received a leather bill fold.

Present at the dinner was C. Frederic Wellington, of the American Wool and Cotton Reporter and Frederick Babcock, of Fibre and Fabric.

At the close of the dinner an entertainment was given, preceding which Treasurer W. B. MacColl made a short address in which he spoke of the good to be accomplished by a community house, and in closing said, "Act together, work together, hang together, and you will be successful."

The entertainment was furnished by four artists from a Boston bureau, the Floyds, Mrs. Floyd a musician and story teller and Mr. Floyd, a magician. Ruth Zimm, dancer and musician, and Charles B. Pettes, impersonator and dancer.

Following the entertainment dancing was enjoyed, to music by the Mohegan orchestra of New London.

Saddened were many friends in Westerly and Pawcatuck, to hear of the sudden death of William Snyder, 65, at his home, 13 Lincoln avenue, at 3.30 o'clock, Thursday morning from heart trouble. Thursday of last week Mr. Snyder went to Elizabeth, N. J., called there by the illness of his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Horre. Sunday when returning to Westerly he became ill at the Newark, N. J., station, but was able to take the train home.

Since that time he has been ill at his home on the West Side but early Thursday morning his condition took a turn for the worse with the result that his son Walter was sent for Death followed in a short time.

William Snyder, a little over a year ago, sustained injuries at the press works of the C. B. Cottgell and Sons Co., on Mechanic street where he had been employed for more than 40 years. The chain broke on a casting and in falling Mr. Snyder's leg was doubled under him and it is thought that he never entirely recovered from the injuries sustained at that time.

Mr. Snyder's interests in Pawcatuck were varied. He was a charter member of P. S. Barber Hose Company and always maintained an active interest in its affairs as well as in all other things pertaining to the firemen's activities. He was a most interested follower of local sports, base ball, polo and bowling.

He was born in Elizabeth, N. J., on March 19, 1858 the son of Henry and Elizabeth Snyder. He married Ella Gulle, born in Preston, at Stonington on May 10, 1884. They had three children, a son, Walter H. Snyder, of Washington street, for many years a clerk in Nash's News Stand, and a daughter, Mrs. Everett Clark of Lincoln avenue who survives him. A son Ira died during the war, soon after he had entered the service. He is also survived by three grand-children and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Horre, of Elizabeth, N. J.

An active interest was always taken by Mr. Snyder in the volunteer fire departments of Westerly and Pawcatuck. He was an honorary member of the Rhode Island Ones and the Westerly Veteran Firemen's association. He was foreman of one time of the Ones, also of the Veterans. A member of the Pawcatuck Fire police, he was the captain of that organization.

He was lately interested in and attended the various musters held in Rhode Island and throughout the New England states and was pleased to participate in the competitive squirts of the various fire tubs. He always was present to handle the pump and his presence at the various musters made him well known throughout New England.

Pagan; junior warden, Fred P. Babcock; vestrymen, Thomas McKenzie, Job Thorp, John Albert Pawson, Charles Richmond, George W. Woodard, Arthur L. Perry, Andrew W. Fisher, Harry B. Milner and Wilfred Ward; vestry clerk, George W. Woodward; treasurer, Andrew W. Fisher; assistant treasurer, John Albert Pawson; superintendent of church school, Rev. G. Edgar Tobin; superintendent of primary department, Mrs. Job Thorp; organist and choir director, Mrs. Charles S. Larkin. Delegates to the diocesan convention, Fred P. Babcock, John A. Pawson, Thomas McKenzie, William Weeden, David A. Lawry; alternates, Miss Elizabeth Haswell, Mrs. David Lowry, Mrs. C. Grant Savage, Mrs. G. Edgar Tobin and Mrs. Mark Pearson. Delegates to the Narragansett convension: George W. Woodward, John S. Holland, Frank Taylor, John H. Champlin, Walter Havens; alternates, C. H. Richmond, Mrs. Frank Taylor, Mrs. Walter Krebs, Mrs. Carrie Frazier, Mrs. John Holland.

Christ church guild elected the following officers: President, Mrs. David C. Lowry; vice presidents, Mrs. Martin Carpenter, and Mrs. Henry Stahle; secretary, Miss Elizabeth Haswell and treasurer, Mrs. C. Grant Savage.

This (Friday) morning will be a more than usually active session of the Third District court in Westerly. Added to the fact that cases of a week ago were all continued one week is the condition of the superior court docket for Washington County, in which there will be no cases ready for trial until next Tuesday, consequently, local attorneys will be able to attend the district court.

PRESIDENT'S GREETING TO AMERICAN CHEMISTS

Washington, April 24.—The American chemist has "proved himself second to none in scientific knowledge under practical application," President Coolidge declared today in an address of greeting to the American Chemical Society, meeting here in annual convention.

The president, speaking to members of the society from the south portico of the White House, declared the government should "acknowledge the debt that is due to the scientists and chemists who are devoting their lives to the search of truth." He stressed the "ideal of service" which he said underlies the endeavor of scientific men.

HEARST PUBLICATIONS TO CONSOLIDATE CAPITAL STOCKS

New York, April 24.—The William Randolph Hearst publishing interests have decided upon a consolidation of the capital stocks of the Hearst publications to be owned by one holding company to be known as the Hearst Publications, Inc., it was learned today. The new holding company has been incorporated under the laws of California. Halsey, Stuart and Company, Inc., of New York, have been engaged as the bankers to handle the underwriting of a new bond issue in connection with the consolidation.

The new company will own all the outstanding capital stocks of its subsidiary companies which publish the following newspapers and magazines: San Francisco Examiner, San Francisco Call and Post, Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles Evening Herald, Oakland Post Enquirer, Good Housekeeping, Cosmopolitan, Harper's Bazaar, Motor and Motor Boating.

STRASSBURGER MAJORITY OVER PINCHOT INCREASES

Philadelphia, April 24.—Ralph Beaver Strassburger, who defeated Governor Pinchot for republican delegate-at-large in Tuesday's primary, continued to maintain his lead as further returns were received tonight from rural sections of the state. With 651 districts out of 8119 still unheard from Mr. Strassburger had a lead of 220,363. The vote for 7,268 districts gave Strassburger 430,276 and the governor 259,913.

Most of Strassburger's lead was obtained in the large cities, returns so far received showing that he carried only nineteen counties, including Philadelphia and Allegheny. Governor Pinchot carried 47 counties. The vote in some of the counties was so close that official figures may swing them either way.

CONDITION OF NEW YORK FEDERAL RESERVE BANK

Ratio of total reserves to deposit and F. R. note liabilities combined 90.9 per cent.

LONDON BOBBIES GUARD PICKFORD AND FAIRBANKS

London, April 24.—A cordon of London bobbies joined hands and danced clumsily, behind, in front and at the side of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks at the American Legion's annual ball tonight in order to protect the American movie stars from the admiring crowds. Outside the ballroom thousands had waited for hours to catch a glimpse of the poupular Americans, and the police are authority for saying that no party of American tourists struggling for a sight of European royalties ever compared with the eagerness of the Londoners trying to get a peep at Douglas and Mary.

The American Ambassador and Mrs. Kellogg were patrons of the ball, and Consul General Skinner attended.

SEBASTIAN S. KRESGE WEDS MISS MABEL DORIS MERCER

New York, April 24.—Sebastian S. Kresge of Detroit, millionaire five-and-ten-cent store owner, and Miss Mabel Doris Mercer of Pittsburgh, daughter of Captain George A. Mercer, former partner of Andrew Carnegie, were married here today at Miss Mercer's apartment.

Mr. Kresge is 56 years old. His bride is 31. She was an actress and was divorced in 1919 from Percival Hardin, a publisher. Mr. Kresge was divorced early this year.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

Lame people walk without aid; sleep comes to those who have been unable to lie in bed; hands that were helpless because of terrible rheumatism are now able to do their share for the support of the family.

It is a wonder worker; it never falters, never gives up until every vestige of poison is expelled from the body.

Rheuma acts on stomach, liver, kidneys and bladder all at once and quickly brings long prayed for comfort to distressed sufferers. Lee & Osgood Co. and all good druggists sell it with guarantee of money back if it isn't satisfactory.

DESIRE FEWER BOSSES AND INCREASE IN PAY

Brookfield, Mass., April 24.—Demanding a reduction in the number of bosses and an increase in pay, the fire department of this town "walked out" in a body tonight, with the declaration that they would decide no more fires unless conditions were remedied. The 18 men in the department assert that they must have an increase of from $15 to $25 a year if they are to come back with the further assurance that there will be a reduction in the number of fire engineers, in charge of the department, eight in all.

The fire engineers are all privileged to carry trumpets to fires and give orders. Chief John Tunstall comprises the fire department tonight and he can call upon his seven fellow board of engineers, members in case of emergency.

EXPLANATION MADE BY PROF. BERTRAND RUSSELL

Cambridge, Mass., April 24.—Bertrand Russell, who recently drew the fire of President Lowell of Harvard by his comparisons of freedom of thought and speech in American English universities, published in an interview with the Harvard Crimson, in a letter to President Lowell made public tonight explains that his charges of extreme conservatism were intended for the Harvard union and not the university authorities.

After making this explanation, Prof. Russell went on to say, "otherwise I have nothing to retract. The criticisms which I ventured to make on the American system of university government were not directed against Harvard, of which I have the most agreeable memories. But the greater freedom of English universities is a fact which I think you will find no neutral person willing to deny."

ROCK ISLAND LOCOMOTIVE BURNED MILK AS FUEL

Chicago, April 24.—Burning milk as its sole fuel, a locomotive of the Rock Island railroad made a two-hour trip today drawing five cars with two-hundred passengers. The milk-fed train went from Englewood to Beverly Hills, and back, while 150 children passengers from the Chicago home for the friendless children and the Chicago orphan asylum pressed their faces against the car windows and cheered.

Health Commissioner Herman M. Bundeson gave the party, the purpose of which was to dramatize that fact that milk, which can be used as fuel for an engine, is also fuel for the human body, containing energy which the body gets from it much as the locomotive does.

GOSHEN

One of the best meetings of the season Goshen Community club was held Tuesday evening, April 22, being the last month of the season with an "R" in it an oyster supper was enjoyed.

A social hour gave pleasure while supper was being prepared. E. H. McCall Jr., was chef. There was music over the club radio from Springfield, Mass., The shellfish were received fresh from a sound port Tuesday and were prepared in the most appetizing manner.

Our the bill of fare was four kinds of pie, also cakes, coffee and relish.

A feature greatly enjoyed were the after dinner toasts responded to by Clara Gillett, E. W. Jones, E. H. McCall., Jr., Mrs. J. A. Thomas, J. A. Randall, J. A. Thomas, C. H. McCall, Mrs. C. H. McCall. After supper a business meeting was held for the annual election off officers which resulted as follow:

President, J. A. Randall; vice president, E. W. Jones; 2nd vice president, C. L. Hinckley; secretary and treasurer, Clara Gillett; organist, Mrs. E. W. Jones; janitor, Bradford Jones.

Some have peas in the ground, one farmer was planting his potatoes Wednesday. The ground was frozen on Thursday morning.

The very interesting postponed farm bureau institute meeting, including the Lebanon soil survey taken last fall, will be given in nAcademy Hall Tuesday evening, April 29th. The meeting is for all interesting. There will be refreshments.

A truck load of 10,000 shingles from a Norwich dealer climbed over the steep grade of Maple Hill, on a recent day.

$102 CASH FOUND IN BIBLE BOUGHT FOR 25 CENTS

Utica, N. Y., April 24.—A family Bible, purchased for 25 cents by Mason J. Aldrich, of Norwich, proved a fortunate purchase at public auction at Hamilton today. Upon returning home Mr. Aldrich inspected his purchase and between the leaves found two bills, one of a $100 denomination and the other a $2 note.

The fire loss in Berlin averages about $175,000 a year.

KEEPING THE BOYS ON THE FARMS.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Talking about the deplorable drift from the farms to the cities President Thomas of Pennsylvania State college is reported as having said, recently:

"The buck-saw has driven more boys from the farm than any other instrument of torture ever invented."

H'm'm, well, perhaps.

There is no doubt that many a small boy, standing beside the rough "saw-buck" at the end of a tan or fifteen woodpile which he must saw up, stick by stick, has looked upon the buck-saw in his hand as "an instrument of torture."

It would be a cold winter's morning. The ground would be covered with snow; he had to stand in it half knee-deep; the wood, also, was white and wet with it. His fingers were cold; his toes were cold; his ears were cold. When he ventured to snivel about these discomforts, the only sympathy shown was a rough admonition to get busy and the promise that he'd grow warmer if he'd only work faster.

The ice on the pond, just down the road, was thick enough for skating. The snow-covered hills were simply begging him to come coast down them. He could, perhaps, hear the distant shouts of luckier boys at their games; anyway, he could imagine them. But there he had to stay, monotonously pushing a dull buck-saw up and down through stick after stick of always cold, usually wet, and sometimes pinching wood.

The minutes had leaden feet. The hours cooled like eternities. His finger-tips stung with the cold; his toes smarted with chilblains; his arms, between elbow and shoulder, knotted with occasional cramps; his back ached from the incessant bending and straightening involved in his work; the huge pile of unsawed wood, usually in "sled-lengths," didn't decrease in size percentably. It seemed as if he had toiled for ages and ages, yet, when in a momentary respite, he was allowed to run in and warm himself at the kitchen stove, the clock showed it was only nine o'clock, and he had three intolerable hours more of it before he could hope for a hot meal and a half-hour's rest.

Come, now, old Grizzle-Gray of sixty or seventy years: hark back a minute to that era in your own life. You've dreamed since then, that there are harder tasks and worse impositions in life than "bucking up" stove-wood. In fact, you've rather inclined to sneer at the youngsters who object to it, and criticize their softness and slothfulness. But the small boy with the big buck-saw hasn't yet had your toughening experiences. He's really not long out of the sheltered and tucked-in-cradle. He hasn't learned that The Wood-pile of Life is a good deal bigger and made of knottier and nastier and pitchier sticks than the one in the back-yard.

If you can bring yourself to reconstruct, in your own mind, his sensations and comprehend his very real sufferings, you'll be more sympathetic with him, I'm sure. You'll make allowances. You'll cease to wonder because, deep down in his young heart, there is swelling a bitter-hatred of the wood-pile and the buck saw, and there is germinating a stubborn determination to go somewhere,—anywhere—to get away from them, the first time opportunity offers.

Nevertheless, as I look back to that date in my own life, it seems to me that the woodpile and buck-saw of winter were nowhere near such refinements of torture as the onion-bed of late spring and early summer. We always raised two or three hundred bushels of the things, and it was "Bub's" business to keep them hoed and weeded. (I was "Bub.")

As every farmer knows, onions are slow to germinate. They take so long coming up that the weeds usually are much ahead of them in development. The first weeding is a mighty slow and pernickety job. One has to get down on hands and knees and crawl along, row after row, hunting carefully for the slender little green shoots, and pulling up the already root-attached weeds which hide and threaten to smother them. After a few hundred feet of this crawling and weed-pulling, one's finger-nails were packed solid with grime and often broken; one's knees were blistered and sore; one's back ached violently with the exertion of holding the head in an unnatural position, one's finger-tips were cracked and bleeding.

It was always a hot day when this first attack on the onion-bed was ordered.—And the heat of a late May or early June day is always more purifying and enervating than that of August noons.—The crawling, close-to-the-ground posture necessitated by the work lowered one out of the reach of any passing breeze. The sweat coursing in little rivulets down one's back; it dripped off one's eyebrows and the end of one's nose; it occasionally prickled into one's eyes and blinded them with poignant smart.

Then came the midges and gnats in swarms and clouds. Fresh hatched in the steaming heat, they were hungry as wolves and almost as carnivorous. They settled on hands and face and bare feet; they filled one's hair; they flew into one's ears and eyes and nose. It would have taken a Khamsin wind to blow them away. If one had had a palm-leaf fan in each hand and been permitted to keep them both in incessant action it would have been impossible to repel all the assailants. They would have won under any barrage humanly possible to impose. Anyway, one was there, not to fight midges, but to weed onions. Many a time the particular small boy who is writing this, sixty years later, has rolled into the partially protecting grass at the end of a long row and actually sobbed with frame-shaking convulsions, compounded in about equal parts of physical suffering, nervous irritation, and sheer spiritual hopelessness.

No, I'm not going to agree with President Thomas that the buck-saw is the very worst instrument of boy-torture ever invented. I offer the onion-bed as a competitor for first prize.

I'm not sure that a third contestant might be found in the barn-yard full of half-froser manure, said manure being bonded and knotted together with the daily treadings-in of uncut cornstalks. But I'll not press that point. My old friend, Van Alstyne, used to tell the story of a neighbor farmer who was "converted" in a church revival. All his sons except one followed him. That one, however, stayed out. The revivalist hunted him up and made a personal plea to join his father and brothers. "No," was the response, "I can't do it. You see, we don't cut our corn stalks and somebody's got to get out the manure!

Perhaps, fellow-ancient, when you let your mind run back to your own barefoot days on the old farm, you'll recall some other task which, to you at that time, seemed an outrage and a torture. You and I both know, now, that what we regarded, then, as the ne plus ultra of hardship was really not so bad. You and I, now, can worry a load of frozen manure out of the yard without recourse to ear-splitting profanity. We can use the old buck-saw if need arises, or weed an onion bed without trying to follow out Mrs. Job's advice. In fact, during my teaching years, I used to wake on a non-peddling morning with a sense of relief that I could weed onions, that day, rather than huckster them out to haggling customers.

But where we both, you and I, are apt to make mistakes is in forgetting that the eyes of boyhood and those of manhood see things from different angles. "If youth only knew; if age only was able," sighted the French philosopher.

What we think and feel, now, is very unlike what the youngster in the onion patch or with the buck-saw thinks and feels. We are contented enough on the old farm because we have learned, among other things, that every man is really a toad under the harrow, and that he can't dodge the scarifying teeth by leaving the farm for the shop or the factory or the store or the office. But the boy doesn't know this. What he knows he finds horrible: what he doesn't know he assumes to be wonderful. That is characteristic of youth and inexperience. It can be changed only by age and experience. It is as impervious to precept or advice as a duck's back to water. It's only cure is in a patience extending over long years.

Now, then, are we to keep the boys on the farm? Frankly, I don't believe there is any one general rule which will work in all cases. Every rule must stand on its own bottom, and every boy must be handled according to his personal individuality. But there's one characteristic which is almost as universal among small boys as their fondness for candy or their "growing appetites." That is their passionate desire for something of their very own. Something which belongs to them. Something they can do what they please with. Something they can hold, not only against other boys, but against father and mother, as well. Something which can't be taken from them.

We grown-ups needn't put on any airs of superiority in this matter, either. We call what we've earned or produced our own, and are moved to rebellion if we are not allowed to use it in our own way. The small boy that John Farmer once was hated the onion bed. The later John Farmer used to find a like onion-bed almost a recreation. Why? Well, one reason was that John Farmer, Jr., got nothing from that onion-bed, except his board and lodging,—which he'd always had, anyway, before he was dumped on the patch,—while John Farmer, Sr., got something off it to buy shoes and gasoline and coffee, and cigars and books and some other things he liked to have or use.

I suspect there are some boys,—perhaps a good may,—who might be found amenable to treatment along this line. Little Boy Thomas, for instance, found the buck-saw an instrument of torture. But suppose he had been permitted to feel that its satisfactory use would bring him the skates, or the baseball set, or the wonderful puppy-dog that his small heart was hungry for? Suppose, to carry it a bit further, he knew that there was a "bonus" of real money coming to him, if he conquered the job ahead of time? Money which was to be entirely his own, which he was to spend exactly as he pleased, without any wise cracks from the old folks about advisability of saving it or the foolishness of wasting it on "silly" purchases?

In some cases, I'm inclined to think that these or similar considerations would greatly modify the view Little Boy Thomases are inclined to take of the wood-pile and the buck-saw.

Theoretically, such treatment may be indefensible. But, as a famous American statesman once remarked: "It is a condition which confronts us, —not a theory."

And there are conditions which are quicker and better met by the use of a little horse-sense than by the most logically perfect theory which the wisest philosopher can engender.

THE FARMER.

GALES FERRY

Funeral services for Amelia Coryell Bisbing, wife of H. Singlewood Bisbing, were held at her residence at Red Top, Wednesday morning at 9.30 o'clock, with many local friends attending. Rev. Allen S. Bush read selections from the burial ritual and the 23rd Psalm. Rev. George R. Athe of Groton, sang Abide With Me. Rev. W. D. Woodward of the Methodist Episcopal church offered prayer. Burial was in Philadelphia, Mrs Bisbing's former home, where other services were held.

The pupils of the Gales Ferry school, with their teacher, Mrs. Winifred Crepeau, and Miss Alice Satterlee, a member of the school board of the town of Ledyard, were taken to Ledyard Center, Tuesday afternoon, to a spelling and speaking contest, with athletics, for the schools of the town. Mrs. Avery Main, Mrs. Wallace Norcross and J. Edmund Norman gave the use of their cars, for transportation. S. Hussey Reed of Norwich, school supervisor, was in charge of the contest. The Long Cove school was winning school in the spelling contest, Miss Marjorie Gates being the winner. Gales Ferry school was winning school in all boys' athletic contest. The winning team numbered Herbert Coman, President, Robert Allyn, Ernest Nylen, Karl Nylen, and Oliver Nylen, are to go to Poquetanuck to compete with the Preston schools this (Friday) evening, the 25th. The girls' athletic team of the Gales Ferry school was a tie, with other schools in the town. The Gales Ferry school furnished the music with the following selections: Old Glory, The Christian Flag, Bird song and Good Night.

Judge and Mrs. Alfred E. Steers of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrived at their summer cottage on the Bluff, Easter Monday, to spend a few days. After opening the cottage they realized the place had been burglarized, during the time it had been unoccupied and all the bed linen, table linen, set of blue dishes and other things had been taken. Judge Steers, who has been magistrate of the court of Brooklyn for thirty years, makes this suggestion, if the burglar was not a woman the work was done at the suggestion of one, as not a thing was taken a man would use. Entrance was gained by removing a window light.

A party that motored to Norwich Easter Monday evening, to see D. W. Griffith's presentation of America at the Broadway theatre included Nathan A. Gibbs and daughter, Miss Gibbs, Miss Laura A. Perkins and Mrs. Fanny A. Molthrop.

In the Country Club house Monday evening, an exhibit of scientific poultry feeding and management was given under the direction of Albert Angell, Jr., of Chicago, poultry expert. The industry was featured with 5,000 feet of poultry film.

Tuesday morning about 10.30, heavy smoke was seen issuing from the oil chimney of the home of Mrs. Lulu B. Hempstead and her brother, Norman L. Brown, and it was seen that the chimney was on fire. Postmaster D. R. Povey, with a chemical fire extinguisher, acting for the fire department of the village, assisted Mr. Brown in quickly subduing it, and no great damage resulted.

J. M. Stocking, assistant state forest fire warden, gave a lecture in the Country clubhouse, Tuesday evening on How The State Fights Forest Fires, illustrated by actual fire-fighting apparatus. Walter M. Buckingham operated the slides. Questions asked by people in the audience were answered by Mr. Stocking.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph De Rusha and children, Helen and Joseph, were entertained at a radio concert at the home of Julian Williams, Julian terrace, Norwich Town, Wednesday evening.

Early gardeners in this place are Minor Moxley and Harmon L. Perkins; the former reports peas and onions up several inches and the latter had potatoes up two weeks ago.

May Smith of New London is spending the week with her sister Eleanor Smith, at the home of their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Latham E. Smith, where Eleanor Smith has been staying for some time.

Mrs. Mary C. Chalnels returned on Sunday morning to her home at Twin Oak cottage from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Leonor Abbott in New York.

Nathan A. Gibbs and daughter, Miss Natalie K. Gibbs, attended the dinner given by the Rotary club of Norwich, at the Wauregan hotel, Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Harold J. Peckham and daughter Nancy of Waterford were in attendance at the funeral of Mrs. H. Singlewood Bisbing Wednesday.

Charles H. Avery of Boston was the guest of his uncle and aunt, Mr and Mrs. Charles H. Comstock, Saturday night, en route to his home in Boston. Mr. Avery came here from Myrtle where he had been engaged settling the estate of his mother, Mrs. Harriet Avery.

Mrs. Charles B. Jennings of New London was a caller this week at the home of her relatives, Miss Sarah T. Latimer and Mrs. Edward H. Latimer.

THOMPSON

Everett E. Rhodes gave a talk on Sunday evening on conditions as he found them in the churches of the south during the past winter. He attended church first at Chesaw, near Southern Pines, on Armistice Day, next at Winter Haven. At Tampa, where he and Mrs. Rhodes spent the winter, they first attended the Baptist church, which they enjoyed very much and where they were made very welcome as were all tourists. There was a special tourists' class in the Sunday school and a reception for them which Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes attended. There were representatives there from Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Arkansas, Texas, Ohio, Canada, England and other places. There was excellent preaching and music, Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. The audiences were so large they had to put chairs in all the aisles, rear, sides, open the Sabbath school room; people stand in all four vestibules and rear, sit on floor of platform, etc. They are building a new church opposite the $5,000,000 Tampa Bay hotel that will cost $200,000. There is an invitation every Sunday to join the church and some did at each service which they attended. Because they felt that they were crowding others out, Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes went for a while to the Hyde Park Presbyterian church, which had grown from a charter membership of 32 in 1914 to its present one of several hundred and a yearly budget of $30,000. Their motto is We Can Do It and We Will. While being shown around Palm Beach and West Palm Beach they were told that they had 42 churches and one church was pointed out where $70,000 was raised for a four-year budget in about ten minutes. W. J. Bryan holds a remarkable Sunday school at Miami, in Royal Palm Park. The churches in the country places were unkept but full houses were gathered on Sunday by flivver and mule from the surrounding country. Mr. Rhodes said he did not attend the colored churches but was told that six or seven collections were taken at them each Sunday. In summing it up Mr. Rhodes attributed the success of the churches he attended to faith, prayer and perseverance, also to a remarkably good Sunday school training school in one Sunday school. He suggested that the Neighborly Hill church here might profit much by a midweek meeting of food, faith and fun, combining a supper, prayer and testimony service and a social hour.

PRESTON

The union C. E. sunrise service, held Sunday morning at 6 o'clock, on Dumplin hill, was well attended, there being thirty present. Miss Marcia W. Zabriskie was the leader and gave a very helpful Easter message. During the service Harold Robbins played a violin solo and Miss Edith Morse sang. Following the message several gave helpful testimonies.

The usual Easter concert was given Sunday evening by the Baptist Sunday school. This year the children did especially well. The exercise, the Magdalene's Story, was given by several young ladies who showed much ability. Mrs. Clifford Main took the leading part, which was exceptionally well rendered. Her reading was clear and impressive. The song, In the Garden, pantomimed by Miss Dorothy Bennett, was sung with much expression and clearness. An offering was received at the close of the concert.

Tuesday evening the trustees of the Preston Public Library held their annual meeting. The trustees voted to hold a public entertainment and supper in recognition of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the gift of the library to Preston by Charles H. and Lucius Brown, of Norwich. The committee of arrangements is Rev. W. L. Muttart representing the Congregational church, C. C. Zabriskie representing the Baptist church and N. H. Hall representing the Baptist church and N. H. Hall representing the Preston City grange. The officers elected for the year are: Rev. W. L. Muttart, president; N. H. Hall, vice president; Charles C. Zabriskie, secretary; Rev. F. S. Robbins, treasurer.

Not the Same Girl He Married

THE first sign a husband gets that his wife is not the same girl he married, is when she neglects her personal appearance.

Why are some housewives careless about such an important asset to good appearance as their hands? Is it indifference or lack of knowledge? Sometimes it is both.

These careless housewives use a common household soap which irritates the skin and reddens and coarsens the hands when they should be as careful about buying their household soap as they are about choosing good toilet soap.

• • • •

INTELLIGENT, careful housewives, who realize this, always insist upon Kirkman's Soap. They know that Kirkman's is as harmless to the hands as is the most exquisite toilet soap.

It is free from lye to irritate the skin or injure the most delicate fabrics, and it is made of the purest and finest materials, and is a most thorough cleanser.

For the sake of your hands insist upon Kirkman's Soap.

| What'll I Do—Waltz | Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra | | 19299 | .75 |
| Lazy—Fox Trot | | | | |

The first number will be especially welcomed, as Paul Whiteman has not recorded many waltzes. With "Lazy," a fox trot of the big-hit sort, it makes a record that will become one of your dance favorites.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Calling on Billy Goat

I didn't have time in the last story to tell you that the two little rabbits woke up the next morning, bright and early when the dew was on the grass, and Mr. Merry Sun was shining through the window glass.

As soon as breakfast was over, the old gentleman rabbit and his little nephew went out to the garden to see if the vegetables had come up out of the ground. There was the Old Red Rooster with a hoe, cutting out the weeds. And would you believe it if I didn't say so? The sunflowers were as high as the old board fence and the lettuce was green and big as cabbages, and the carrots, well, everybody knows how carrots look, so I won't tell you.

"Now you keep on working."

"Uncle Lucky certainly has wonderful seeds," said Uncle Lucky. "I hope he'll send me more next year," and, picking a sunflower, he put it in his buttonhole.

"Now you keep on working," said the old gentleman rabbit. "Little Jack Rabbit and I are going out in the Luckymobile," and leaving the Old Red Rooster leaning on his hoe, they hopped into the Luckymobile and drove out of the front gate.

"Goodbye," twittered Mrs. Sparrow.

"Cock-a-doodle-do," shouted the Old Red Rooster, and, as soon as the Luckymobile was out of sight, that lazy old fowl sat down under the big elm tree to smoke his corncob pipe for an hour and thirteen seconds.

"Where shall we go?" asked the old gentleman rabbit after maybe a mile and more, for they went so fast I've forgotten the score.

"Let's call on Billy Goat who runs the Ferryboat," answered the little rabbit.

Turning down a shady road to the river, by and by, they came to the little house near the bank where the old Billy Goat lived when he wasn't on his ferryboat.

But, as nobody answered the knock, the two little rabbits hopped down to the water's edge and looked over the water to find the old ferryboat. Sure enough, there it was coming right toward them. Pretty soon it bumped into the old wharf and the Billy Goat climbed down from his little pilot house on the roof and shook hands with them.

"Haven't seen you for a month of Saturdays," he said with a grin, stroking his goatee and scratching his left ear with the end of his tail, a mighty hard thing for a goat to do, you know, for his tail is dreadfully short and stubby.

"Yes, I'm very glad to see you,"
Said the Pilot Billy Goat,
"I never feel real lonesome
As long as I'm afloat.

But when on terra firma—
(Dear children, this means "land")
I like to spin a yarn or two
And shake a kindly hand."

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

With... own about a mile... of Pomfret in land ... Killdeer, Pike county, Pa., was in town for the week end.

Raymond school having lost a number of days this year is having no spring vacation.

Mrs. S. E. Pendleton, mother of Mrs. Wm. E. Davis, recently visited her daughter and family in Raymond district.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rollinson of Attawaugan were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barstow.

The bi-weekly evangelical meetings conducted at the Plain M. P. church by Rev. Mr. Gallup and members of his church in Danielson are growing in spiritual power. The service Easter was well attended from Westminster, as well as from other sections of the town, although the afternoon was rainy and cold. The various instruments which accompany the singing add much to the joy of the service.

The friends of the Greenes were very sorry to learn that they were unable to re-visit Westminster Sunday, as they had purposed, on account of the illness of their son George, and the indisposition of Mrs. A. C. Greene, as well by the condition of road and weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Dobson of Pawtucket, R. I., were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rollinson, with whom Mrs. Dobson had spent the week previous.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Harrison were visitors, last week with Mrs. Harrison's sister, Mrs. Wm. Davis in Raymond district.

Westminster Hill school began Monday its last term for this school year.

Mrs. Anna Dawson returned about a fortnight ago, from her Brooklyn, N. Y., home to her summer place here.

Several people connected with Westminster had birthdays lately: Mrs. A. C. Greene, Mrs. A. T. MacLeod, Armon Hagopian, the oldest child of Mrs. Harold George (Ruth Shorter) and Arnold Moses, infant son of Mrs. Lewis Greenman, having the same date, April 16th.

Westminster, motorcyclists are strongly in evidence since deep mud began to change into dry land, sans mire.

The first conference of the Six Church Fellowship for this locality was held Tuesday, April 22nd, at Central Village. Considering the rain and the roads the attendance was remarkable and the program exceptionally good. Westminster had three representatives present all day.

Early in the month, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rollinson received a small surprise party of relatives, friends and neighbors on the 34th anniversary of ... sitting down to ... good things in honor of the native day.

Mr. Welch, the lumberman from Chaplin, was in town one day, this week.

A large number was in attendance at the auction of Francis Tetreault, on the former Lyon place, last Wednesday. Mr. Tetreault has sold out of it to move to Baltic mine. Mrs. Tetreault is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lachapelle, and they and their family will be greatly missed.

A small house owned and occupied for some time after their barn fire several years ago, by Harry Graff and family, was destroyed by fire last Sunday in the night.

NOANK

The boat Gordon V. built for Eben Tuttle at Frank Post's boat shop was given a trial trip Wednesday morning on the river. The owner will use it for fishing.

Mrs. L. Sheffield and children of Saybrook is visiting Mrs. Lewis Main.

The water at Groton Long Point will be turned on the first of May. About 6 new cottages have been built there and will be all ready for occupancy.

Captain and Mrs. Allen after spending the winter at St. Petersburg, Fla., are at their cottage for the summer.

Mrs. Susan Morgan, who has been sick in bed for five weeks is able to sit up a little daily.

The Sunset club held a meeting at the home of Leo Harris, on Riverside avenue when a large number of members was present. Walter Willis sang several songs which were enjoyed. The project of having a baseball team was discussed but will not be decided until the next meeting in two weeks. A collection taken up for the good of the club amounted to $3.98. A light lunch and coffee was served.

The Biblical stories of the creation and the deluge were of Babylonian and not Semitic origin, Professor George A. Barton, of the University of Pennsylvania, maintained in a paper read at the annual meeting of the American Oriental society.

NINE NEW LONDON BEACH STORES RECEIVE FREE WATER FOUR YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, April 24.—A thief gained entrance to the unoccupied residence of Congressman Richard P. Freeman, 288 William street, late yesterday afternoon or last night for during the late evening the break was discovered by a pedestrian, who had knowledge of the family being out of the city. So far as is known no plunder was obtained. Lewis Crandall, clerk of the court of common pleas, was passing the Freeman residence and observed that a side window was open. Realizing that the house was not tenanted, Mr. Crandall notified the police of his discovery. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Motorcycle Officer George Labous going to the Freeman residence, found unmistakable evidence of the place having been entered. Beneath the window that was forced open were footprints in the soft earth. Entering the house the officer found other evidence of the intruders for a piece of statuary was found broken on the floor of one of the living rooms and other evidence was revealed of the visit of some sneak. It is believed the thief had knowledge of the absence of the family from the city.

William H. Farrell, 195 Huntington street, and employed by the internal revenue department with headquarters at Hartford, is a patient at Lawrence hospital, being in a critical condition as a result of an emergency operation performed last night for appendicitis. Peritonitis has developed. Mr. Farrell is well and favorably known. He is a charter member of New London lodge of Elks and is a past exalted ruler of the organization. He was for several years a member of the democratic state central committee.

Mr. Farrell had been under treatment about a week for abdominal trouble which, it was believed, was acute indigestion. Instead of the pains subsiding they became worse yesterday morning while Mr. Farrell was in Hartford. He consulted a physician, who advised him to seek hospital treatment, either in Hartford or in New London. Mr. Farrell decided to come to New London and arrived here late in the afternoon. He consulted the family physician without delay and his case was pronounced appendicitis. Mr. Farrell was removed to the hospital during the night and there it was discovered that the appendix had burst and that peritonitis had set in.

Mrs. Arthur Martin of Lewis street, a patient at Lawrence hospital, was able to return to her home today.

Morris Feldman has sold a house and lot on Bayonet street to Anna Feldman.

Joseph DiMaggio has sold his one-half interest in a dwelling house on Truman street to Mary DiMarco.

The New London police were requested this afternoon to maintain a lookout for Raymond Quirist, 17, a state patient, for Quirist is without home, who escaped from the Norwich state hospital for the insane at Preston earlier in the day. Quirist was described as being about five feet, five inches in height, weighing about 130 pounds. When he escaped Quirist wore a brown overcoat, blue trousers, khaki suit and black shoes.

An automobile owned and operated by Frank A. Meyers, 18, of 35 Georgiana street, struck and painfully injured Samuel Solomon, 212 Main street, this morning, when Solomon, who is of advanced years, was run down on Main street.

Solomon was walking along the east side of the street and when near the corner of Federal street, decided to cross to the opposite walk. As he left the sidewalk Solomon stepped directly in the course of the automobile, which was headed in a southerly direction and not traveling at a high rate of speed. Before Meyers could bring the machine to a stop, Solomon was struck by the fender and hurled to the pavements. He was taken to a nearby store where emergency treatment was given. Because of his apparently being seriously injured Traffic Officer Frank Linehan caused Solomon to be removed to Home Memorial hospital, where an examination showed a laceration of the scalp and bruises on the leg. The wounds were treated, after which Solomon was taken home.

Joseph Stanford, who has been arrested several times, was again taken into custody this morning when Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Patrolman Edward Daniels found Stanford helplessly drunk on State street. Stanford was too drunk to be presented in the police court, but he will be before the court tomorrow. When sober enough to give his name, Stanford stated that he was Charles Wine, but this was proved to be an alias later in the day.

William Dooley has been appearing in the police court the past ten years, at intervals, to answer to complaints alleging intoxication. He generally admitted that he was rightly accused, but there were times when he sought to avoid the consequences by setting up a defense. Once he alleged that he was "the chambermaid at a saloon. He was released from jail a few days ago, but last night was found helplessly intoxicated and was taken into custody. He pleaded guilty when presented this morning, but he said to Judge Prince, "Give me one more chance and I will make good!" Dooley appeared to be so sincere in his determination to turn to the right that Judge Prince accepted his promise and after sentencing him to jail for ten days suspended the judgment for a year. He would prefer to see Dooley working for himself rather than for the county and gave him the chance he pleaded for, but he cautioned him by saying "Now, remember, Dooley, if you come back here up you go for a jail term."

Fortunato Fella has been avoiding his marital duties and has failed long and persistently in the support of his wife and five children. So the city has been compelled to furnish the subsistence that Fella should have supplied. That has cost the city $35 to $40 a month. The Fella children range in ages from 3 to 12. All are dependent upon the mother for support and she has furnished it as the best she can by working daily. When she is at work the neighbors look after the little ones. At other times the oldest of the children is the "little mother" for her sisters and brothers. The father is now at work and he receives $4.50 for eight hours labor. But he says he needs that money to support himself and he does not part with any of it for his family. Indeed Fortunata represented that he now owes $100 for his board because he has not always had work of late and he is behind five months in what he owes. That will not do, he was told by the court, and then he was committed for three months.

Frank Spencer, of Providence, was sent out of town, his fare being paid to Providence to get rid of him when he was presented for intoxication today. He has been helped at the Learned mission but the assistance given him was wasted.

Privates Joseph P. Jerome and James Avison, stationed at Fort Wright, Fishers Island, and military prisoners, made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from guards Monday and as a result Jerome received a bullet wound and is now in the military hospital. Avison was captured in a swamp later in the day. Both prisoners were engaged in labor on the reservation when they made the dash for liberty. Avison managed to get around the corner of a building and out of range of the aim of the guards, but Jerome was halted when he received a bullet wound in the shoulder. Searching parties were ordered out in an endeavor to locate Avison, but were unsuccessful until nearly nightfall when two of the searchers in making their way through a swamp to go to the barracks, found Avison lying face downward in a clearance. He was placed in confinement pending a court marshal.

The fire department was called out late this afternoon in response to an alarm from Box 46, corner of Bank and Truman streets and for a blaze in the two-family house, 24 Truman street, owned by Mrs. Edith Reed and occupied by her and the family of Tony Ragonese. The fire was located in the part of the house occupied by the Ragonese family and was between the cellar and the first floor. The damage was small as the department subdued the blaze with chemicals. How the fire originated is not definitely known, but it is believed it started from a gas heating device.

By a mere accident it has been discovered that the property interests of Philip J. Handel and Louis Markow, comprising nine stores at Ocean Beach, have been receiving water supply four years free of charge, but the owners of the property will be compelled to pay for the water used, which amount of money due the city will be determined on a basis of what water is consumed during the coming summer by the several stores.

The discovery that the stores have not been paying for water was revealed when a cover of a water main trap was broken several days ago. Patrolman Walter Rehn on duty at the beach, made the discovery and reported it at the police station. The water and sewer department was notified and it then was showed that the connection which it had been supposed had been shut-off, had been connected and that free water had been supplied. As a result of the discovery Messrs. Handel and Markow have agreed to the basis of settlement determined upon and Louis Margolis, a Bank street plumber has suffered the revocation of his license. The matter has been put in the hands of Director of Law Frank L. McGuire and there is a possibility that a prosecution may result.

Properties owned by Messrs. Handel and Markow at the beach have received their supply of water through a main supplying the Wardell restaurant and the main that was connected up was abandoned four years ago and was supposed to be idle.

Lieut. Arthur Edmund Wilson, U. S. A., stationed at Fort H. G. Wright and Miss Gladys Evelyn Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzgerald of 93 Montauk avenue, were married late yesterday afternoon at the parish house of the Second Congregational church. Walter O. Wilson of Hartford, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Jess Watters, of New London, attended the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are on a trip to Bangor, Me.

Mrs. Isaacs S. Machol, superior court stenographer, has returned to her home on Main street, having spent several days in Washington and Baltimore.

Miss Katherine Danforth, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. Romeyn Danforth, of Federal street, who recently underwent an operation at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, is reported to be improving rapidly.

Rev. J. William Greene, pastor of All Souls' church, has moved from Prospect street, to 297 Williams St.

Miss Vera Foley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Foley, of the Crocker House apartments, has returned to New London, concluding a visit in Philadelphia.

Miss Lucy Pace of Montauk avenue has gone to Jamaica, L. I., where she has obtained employment. She was formerly employed as telephone operator at a local hotel.

Mrs. John Conti of Westerly, and Jennie Terchasky, 136 North Bank St., patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

As a result of orders received at the Groton barracks of the state police today eight officers, who have been on duty there a long time, were transferred to other barracks. The officers transferred are J. M. Palmer, Joseph Kamenski, Charles W. Myatt, K. H. Ringrose, Frank F. Schwikert, Henry Malburason, Robert H. Church and Edward R. Burns. Fourteen other officers, heretofore stationed at other barracks, will arrive at the Groton barracks tomorrow.

New London members of the Con; necticut Association of Insurance Agents, held a dinner at the Hotel Mohican at 6:30 o'clock this evening. Besides the local members in attendance there were several present from nearby towns and cities. Donald North president of the state association, presided. New State and National insurance laws were discussed informally.

Mrs. Imogene M. Draper, 78, widow of Charles Draper, died this morning from pneumania, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. William J. Coulson, 17 Mather court. Mrs. Draper had been ailing several weeks. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Coulson and Mrs. John W. Trude.

There is no change today in the condition of Simon L. Ewald, of the firm of Lyon & Ewald, who is seriously ill at his home.

The funeral of Tony Stubelik, whose death occurred from pneumonia Sunday, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, a mass of requiem being conducted by Rev. Joseph Raniszewski, the pastor. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Michael Cahill, a Waterford farm hand, was before Justice of the Peace James J. Fleyd in the Waterford town court late yesterday on charge of intoxication and breach of the peace. He was fined $5 and costs, the fine being remitted and allowed to go toward the payment of the costs. Cahill was arrested several days ago by Constable Fred Dimmock upon complaint of Andrew Saccarelli. Cahill went to the Saccarelli farm and created a disturbance when ordered off the place.

The body of Alfred Mitchell, whose death occurred at Jamaica, West Indies, April 27, 1911, has been brought to Salem, this state for burial in the family plot. Mr. Mitchell was an uncle of Donald G. Mitchell of Granite street.

An automobile owned by Abraham Shapiro of 109 Montauk avenue, was slightly damaged on Main street, near Masonic street, by being struck by a motor truck owned by the Hartford Transportation company of Hartford, and operated by George McCaughey of that city. The accident occurred when the truck became wedged in traffic and Shapiro's car was motionless beside the curb.

Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy reported another defective sidewalk this evening when he discovered a section of the sidewalk on the north side of Federal street, near Main street, in a dangerous condition.

A bicycle which was found abandoned in front of the Union Bank & Trust company several nights ago by Patrolman John Foley, was identified tonight by Charles Laverone as his property.

An automobile, owned and operated by Mrs. Lora Chapman of 26 Howard street, struck and slightly damaged an automobile, owned by Francis Marcille of 38 Garfield avenue, late this afternoon when the latter was parked beside the curb on Main street.

A woman, who refused to give her name or address, reported to the police this evening that two automobiles were parked on Franklin street and neither had lights displayed. Motorcycle Officer George Labous found the two cars as alleged. The owners were located and moved the machine to a point within 200 feet of an electric light, in compliance with the automobile law.

Superintendent Havard of the State Farm for Women at Niantic tonight requested the police to be on the lookout for Florence Lord, 20, who violated her parole last Sunday. The girl is described as being good looking, 5 feet 7 inches in height, weight 140 pounds. When she left the farm she wore a black velvet coat with gray collar and cuffs.

The cottage at 189 Pequot avenue, owned by Ex-Mayor James P. Johnston and occupied as a clubhouse was discovered tonight as having been broken in to. Entrance was gained by smashing a door and permitted removal of much of the furniture and presumably by boat, as the cottage is located on the Thames river shore.

TO TEST BROADCASTING OF COPYRIGHTED SONGS

New York, April 24.—Charging an infringement of copyright, Jerome H. Remick & Co., music publishers, filed suit in federal court today seeking to restrain station WGY at Schenectady, N. Y., owned by the General Electric company, from broadcasting by radio the song "Somebody's Wrong."

The suit is understood to be a test case to prevent the broadcasting of copyrighted songs without first obtaining a permit.

FRENCH AVIATOR MAKING LONG DISTANCE FLIGHT

Paris, April 24.—Lieutenant Pelletier Doisy, noted French aviator, left Villacoublay at 6.15 o'clock this morning, piloting an airplane equipped for a long distance flight. He proceeded in the direction of central Europe and hoped to reach one of the capitals of eastern Europe without stopping. The machine flew over Budapest at 1.15 p. m., without landing. The flight may be continued toward the Far East, according to the under secretary of aeronautics.

TRIBUTE TO MADAME DUSE BY SECRETARY HUGHES

Washington, April 24.—Secretary Hughes paid tribute today to Mme. Eleonora Duse, Italian tragedienne, who died Tuesday in Pittsburgh.

"The American people," he said, "have the keenest appreciation of Mme. Duse's service to art and have had a most sympathetic interest in her career. She has bestowed great honor upon her people, and I am sure American feeling and appreciation will have appropriate expression."

5 Operations—15 years suffering with constipation—Kellogg's Bran restores health

Mr. Lancing's case is typical of thousands of others. He found permanent relief from constipation in Kellogg's Bran because it is ALL bran. Nothing but ALL bran can be 100 per cent effective. Read what he says:

Dear Sirs:

I have been afflicted with constipation for the past 15 years, and during that time I have been in four different hospitals and submitted to five different operations that were the result of constipation. I was getting so bad that every meal I ate soured on my stomach. Two months ago I was advised to eat your Kellogg's Krumbled Bran. I tried it, as I was trying everything I could hear of. From that day on I have never taken a physic. My stomach does not sour any more and my bowels move regularly morning and evening. Yours sincerely,
Frank Lancing,
1206 Jefries Ave., Marion, Ind.

For permanent relief, eat Kellogg's Bran, regularly. Two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. It is guaranteed to bring results, or your grocer will return your money.

You will like the delicious nut-like flavor of Kellogg's Bran—so different from ordinary brans, which are unpalatable. Eat Kellogg's Bran with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over other cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. Try it in the recipes given on the package.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is served by leading hotels and clubs in individual packages. Made in Battle Creek. Sold by all grocers.

MARKET CLOSED IRREGULAR.

New York, April 24.—Resumption of bear selling, based on the publication of the March report of the Southern Pacific railroad showing a loss of over one million dollars in net earnings, checked the upward movement of prices in today's stock market. Closing prices presented an irregular appearance, most of the industrials closing higher while losses predominated in the railroad group.

Short covering, which provided the main impetus for the early advance, was inspired, in part by the widespread publicity given to the record breaking short interest and the passage of the soldier bonus bill without the cash payment feature.

Southern Pacific dropped from 90 5-8 to 89 1-2, closing slightly above that figure for a net los of 1 5-8. Analysis of the March statement revealed that gross revenues of $22,500,582 were the second highest in the country's history and only $416,556 under a year ago, the sharp decrease in net income being due to heavier maintenance and equipment charges. Shares of other northwestern roads yielded in sympathy, losses of a point or more being registered by Union Pacific, Northern Pacific and Great Northern preferred.

Early strength of the oil shares was based on the report of the American Petroleum Institute showing an average daily decline of 21,000 barrels in the production of crude oil for the week ended April 19. Nearly a dozen issues in this group advanced a point or more during the forenoon but the gains were wiped out or reduced to fractions in the later trading.

Sugar stocks also showed pronounced strength in the early trading but eased off later in sympathy with the decline in commodity prices. Some of the strong spots in the specialty list were U. S. Cast Iron Pipe U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Beechnut Packing, National Supply, Savage Arms and United Fruit, all up 1 to 3 1-2 points.

Steel shares held relatively firm on reports of active buying of railroad and building construction material. The quarterly report of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, which was made public after the market closed, showed net income of $4,519,[illegible] compared with $3,812,442 in the fourth quarter of last year. Maxwell Motors "a" and Pierce Arrow preferred led the recovery in motor shares.

In the railroad group, the heaviness of the Pacifics was offset by the strength of Pere Marquette, which touched a new high for the year at 46 1-2.

Call money opened at 4 per cent, dropped to 3 3-4 and then to 3 1-2, the lowest rate since March 17, time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with no change in rates.

Foreign exchange rates were reactionary. Demand sterling dropped about a cent to around $4.38 and French francs broke one third of a cent to around 6 1-3 cents. Belgian francs yielded in sympathy. Trading in the principal European exchanges was rather quiet, most of the necessary requirements of the short interest before May 1, apparently having been met.

BOND MARKET.

New York, April 24.—Diversion of surplus funds into investment channels, on the reduction in the call money rate to 3 1-2 per cent, stimulated buying of all classes of bonds today and brought about substantiau improvement in prices.

United States government obligations, always the first to profit by an ease in money rates, were aided further today by the passage of the bonus bill without the cash option optional feature. Belief that the form of the measure removed the danger of unlimited governmental bond issues gave impetus to the buying movement. Four descriptions established new high levels for the year, with gains in the list ranging from 1 to 15-32nds of a point.

Speculative sentiment was encouraged by the early stiffening of stock prices. While there were no sensational advances, widening inquiry for democratic items of all kinds was reflected in firmer quotations throughout the entire list. High grade and low priced railroad mortgages shared about equally in the improvement, and brisk recoveries were scored by industrial liens. Serbian 8s touching a new high price for 1924 led foreign issues into higher ground.

Early offering of the "Big Four" $20,000,000 refunding issue is expected to follow authorization by the interstate commerce commission of a change in the interest rate from 5 1-2 to 5 per cent. Public offering of about $10,000,000 in securities by the Hearst Publications, Inc., recently incorporated in California, is scheduled to take place within the next few days.

Bankers will offer tomorrow $5,000,000 Massachusetts Gas Companies 3 year 5 per cent notes at 99.31 and interest to yield 5.25 per cent.

CURB MARKET.

New York, April 24.—Stock prices moved upward in today's curb market under the leadership of the oil shares, active buying of which was inspired by reports of a decrease in crude production. Net gains of approximately 1 to 3 points were scored by a number of the active issues, including Standard Oils of Indiana, Kansas and Nebraska, Prairie and Humble Oil and Gas and a few others.

Revival of activity in Glen Alden Coal which crossed 91 for a net gain of more than 2 points featured the rather listless trading in the industrial group. Lehigh Power, Armour preferred, American Gas and Electric, new stock, Commonwealth Power and Gillette Safety Razor, advanced 1 to 4 points on odd lot sales. American Cynamid sold 30 points about its previous sale.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, April 24.—Although wheat buying today was stimulated as a result of the McNary-Haugen bill being reported favorably from the house agricultural committee, the price gains that ensued were more than offset later when the Caraway bill to prohibit trading in futures was placed before the senate. The wheat market closed unsettled at 3-8@1-3c net lower to a shade advance, May 1.02 1-2 to 1.02 1-2@5-8 and July 1.04 1-2 to 1.04 1-2@5-8. Corn finished 3-8 to 1-2c down, oats at a shade to 1-2c up and provisions varying from 7c decline to a rise of 2c.

Especially in the last half of the day, the wheat markets was nervous. Many traders with open accounts appeared at a loss which way to turn in view of the uncertainties growing out of proposed legislative measures. Springlike weather and suspicious reports on crop conditions tended to bring about lower prices during the early dealings, but a sudden upturn in the market immediately followed news about fresh progress of the McNary-Haugen bill.

The temporary rise in wheat values amounted to more than one cent a bushel from the day's lowest figures, a majority of traders having assumed that the McNary-Haugen bill was sidetracked. Hardly had the market become more or less readjusted, however, than word fro mWashington as to action on the Caraway bill proved to be another surprise to the wheat pit. Accordingly, sellers were again soon in a majority with prices declining rather rapidly except for a few minutes at the last.

Changes in the corn market seemed to be governed by the action of wheat. Oats received good support, offerings being scarce.

Commission house buying gave firmness to lard, but packers' selling eased down the market for meats.

NAT'L LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS IN CONVENTION

Buffalo, N. Y., April 24.—"Corruption in high places is only a boil on the body politic. It will recover," Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant United States attorney general, told delegates to the fifth annual convention of the National League of Women Voters today.

"Too many citizens accept protection of the American flag without knowledge or thought of their obligations toward it," she said. Mrs. Willebrandt expressed optimism that women would succeed in their adopted role of house cleaners of politics. "Women always are the wielders of the soap," she said.

On the eve of the convention's formal opening, standing committees tonight had cleared away a mass of reports and were in closed session contemplating details of policy to govern the formal deliberations of the main body of the delegates on the floor on the convention, scheduled to start tomorrow.

Tonight, in connection with the closed session of delegates, dinners for league presidents and their staffs were held. Mrs. Henry Thomas Mullins of Indianapolis presided at a dinner for state presidents, Mrs. Livingston Farrand of Ithaca, N. Y., and Mrs. James G. McPherson of Saginaw, Mich., presided at a dinner for presidents of local leagues, and Miss Anna G. Shepard of Buffalo was the hostess at a dinner for state and national staffs. Following the dinners, today's reports and addresses were to be considered in executive session.

TO ASK FOR DEFINITE INDICTMENT OF HOFFMAN

New York, April 24.—Characterizing the case against Harry Hoffman, motion picture operator charged with the murder of Mrs. Maude Bauer on a lonely Staten Island road a month ago, as "a chain of circumstantial evidence—plus," District Attorney Fach said tonight he would ask the grand jury tomorrow to return a definite indictment charging the prisoner with homicide.

Hoffman has been held for the past several days on a series of short affidavits. When the last of these was issued yesterday, Mr. Fach told the court he would ask no further delays before proceeding against the prisoner. This affidavit will expire tomorrow.

Mrs. Lillian Levine, Hoffman's first wife who divorced him seven years ago, was a witness before the grand jury today. Officials said she had testified to a long list of cruelties to which she was subjected as Hoffman's wife. The officials further said further investigation might lay the foundation for a bigamy charge against the prisoner, declaring they believed he had married his present wife before a final divorce decree had been granted in his first marriage.

FEAR SPREAD OF STRIKE TO RAILROADS IN CUBA

Washington, April 24.—In a report of the state department today, Ambassador Crowder declared it was not impossible that the strike in Cuba, in view of recent difficulties on several railroad lines, might spread to the railroads and the situation assume alarming proportions.

RUSSIAN CATHEDRAL QUARTETTE

One of the greatest musical events ever given in Connecticut will be the concert of the famous Russian Cathedral Quartet which will sing in Norwich on May 4th in the afternoon and evening in Community hall. This quartet is recognised as one of the finest in the country, and their singers sung for President Wilson in the White House as well as at the inaugural exercises for Governor Smith of New York, Senator Francis and other prominent Americans. The quartet comes with the recommendation of the country's foremost critics and the Norwich concert is the first of a series of four or five in this section. Program will consist largely of Russian church and folk music. Singers are Nicholas Wasilevsky (first tenor); L. P. Pavloff (second tenor); A. N. Grigeroff, (baritone); and M. P. Bataeff (basso-profundo).

All of the members of the quartet have voices of marvelous range. Don't miss it!

Tickets $1.15, including tax, at Cranston Co., and Talking Machine Shop.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Boasting an exceptional fine program of Keith vaudeville and pictures, the offering at the Broadway theatre more than fulfilled its expectations.

Georgia Howard the dancing violinist made a snappy opener. She is an attractive girl, a splendid violinist, a capable dancer and she has a good voice, what more could anyone ask for?

Following came Walter Laddie and Rose Garden in the comedy skit "The Chauffeur and the Maid." They are very proficient.

Margaret and Morrell in The Tourists offer a story with comedy song and dance in five scenes. There is humor, costumes, song and dances of each country visited as well as color and mounting.

The Waco Comedy Four is a male quartette. As a vocal organization the four are excellent.

Jean La Costa and Boys is a comedy minstrel quintette that make a great closing number. Comedy, song and dance predominate. A worth while act.

Evening gowns, afternoon gowns and —er—robes du nuit—and each one has a Paris origin and is more eye-filling than the one that went before. It is in direct contrast to "The Humming Bird," in which she gamboled and grimaced about as a ragged boy.

Strand Theatre

The absorbing story of "Quicksands," which is at the Strand theatre today and Saturday, is based in large part on the efforts of a band of criminals to smuggle narcotics into this country from Mexico. The cast is a powerful one and includes such notables as Helene Chadwick, Richard Dix, Alan Hale, Noah Beery, George Cooper, J. Farrell McDonald, Dick Sutherland and many others besides the 10th United States cavalry. The story was written and produced by Howard Hawks and directed by Jack Conway, the latter responsible for "Lombardi Ltd.," "The Dwelling Place of Light," "The U. P. Trail," and many other pictures depending on big effects and swift action.

The rendezvous of the "ring" is a Mexican cantina or cafe, frequented by a group of the most sinister evildoers seen on the screen in many a day. These parts are played by the best "bad men" in pictures—Edwin Stevens, Jean Hersholt, Frank Campeau, Lionel Belmore, William Dyer, Jack Curtis, James A. Marcus and Dick Sutherland. Life in the cantina is colorful and complicated, yet it is strictly real. No merrymaking masks the serious purpose of those gathered there.

RUSSIAN SINGERS AT BURLINGTON, IOWA

Appearing in vestment gowns and the picturesque peasant costumes of their native land, the Russian Cathedral Choir quartet presented a vocal concert at the high school last night that gave an attentive audience of 500 people an evening of true enjoyment. In the afternoon the quartet sang three numbers for the high school students and was heartily applauded.

The singers are all possessed of good voices and sing well together, as if they enjoyed it as an essential part of their lives. Their program was made particularly appealing by their native songs and chants, although they included some of the operatic classics and lighter numbers familiar to an American audience.

This quartet will appear in the Community House May 4.

KIRKMAN'S SOAP

Would women vote if they had to tell their age? When woman's suffrage came, politicians were puzzled. They wanted the votes that women had to cast, but they were afraid that if they required a woman to tell her exact age she would rather not vote at all.

So it was decided that all a woman had to tell was that she was over twenty-one.

But now women are being reminded through a most unusual series of advertisements that they do tell their age every day of their lives without realizing it. And, strange to say, when they tell their age in this way, they often make themselves older than they really are.

Women are being reminded that it is their hands that give their age away. These ads, educational in value, "human interest" in tone, are being published by one of the oldest soap manufacturing companies in America, Kirkman and Son. So sound is the reasoning in these ads that women are wondering why they have been so careless heretofore in selecting their household and laundry soap. For, it is pointed out, a woman may pride herself on her choice of toilet soap for the sake of her hands, and then go ahead and buy some common laundry soap that absolutely mars the beauty of her hands.

As women learn of the conditions under which Kirkman's Soap is made, they understand how it can be so pure and harmless. A woman instinctly feels that such a fine soap must be made of the purest materials, just as the advertising points out. Furthermore, when she learns that at the Kirkman factories, the buildings, machinery and workmen are all spotlessly clean, she realizes that Kirkman's is the safe soap for her own home.

PALACE THEATRE

Almost any report of the doings of George Arliss, noted screen and stage star, is interesting, but the announcement that his latest photoplay, The Man Who Played God, in which he has the star role, and in which he again proves his astounding versatility as an actor, constitutes real news for the motion picture theatre-goers of this city.

This announcement comes from the management of the Palace theatre who tells of having booked The Man Who Played God, a United Artists Corporation release, for next Sunday night and with it comes also the statement that George Arliss will be seen in an entirely new type of characterization.

"Admirers of Mr. Arliss and his splendid artistry," explains Mr. Ellano of the Palace theatre, have seen him previously in the role of the designing, scheming and crafty cynic: as the statesman and the diplomatist, and as the high class comedian. In The Man Who Played God they will see him in still another role—that of the romantic lover in a highly emotional picturization."

"The Man Who Played God" is adapted from a play by Jules Eckert Goodman, founded on Gouverneur Morris's story of the same title as the picture. It was arranged for the screen by Forrest Halsey. The work of direction is by Harmon Weight.

"Admirers of Mr. Arliss are going to like him better than ever in this picture," says the manager of the palace theatre. "It is his best; with a wonderful story, a splendid cast, remarkable direction, beautiful sets and the best of photography."

BREED THEATRE

Rafael Sabatini, the author of Scaramouche, which in its screen form, as produced by Rex Ingram for Metro, now showing at the Breed theatre, is one of the outstanding literary lights of the year. "The modern Dumas," as critics have called him, is a man who, succeeded by doing the wrong thing. Sabatini persisted in writing novels with historical backgrounds when the public, disturbed by the war, wanted nothing, according to most publishers, but studies of modern society.

But three years after the war the pendulum swung back to a demand for romance of older days, and there were Sabatini's books, written in the shadow of failure where popular success was concerned, waiting to be read. The public read them, and Scaramouche, the moving tale of the French Revolution, fan into editions that brought its sale into the hundred thousands.

Mr. Sabatini's love for adventure is liberty became enormously successful. Many editions were printed, and Sabatini, after years of only meagre recognition, tasted the fruits of popularity.

Then Rex Ingram saw the possibilities of Scaramouche for a great motion picture. He bought the film rights and started work with the same principal actors who had appeared in Metro's, The Prisoner of Zenda—Alice Terry, Lewis Stone and Ramon Novarro.

The outcome of this move is now known. The film version of Scaramouche is perhaps the biggest success of the season, and Sabatini has the added joy of seeing his novel in its celluloid form reach thousands beyond even the wildest of his fluent dreams.

FORMER TAFTVILLE NUNS ARE GOING TO CHINA

The Rt. Rev. George Albert Guertin, bishop of Manchester, N. H., gave the official words of farewell and encouragement to the five sisters of the Precious Blood convent, who leave soon for China. In his sermon, given after the celebration of a solemn high mass, the bishop, deeply moved, paid glowing tribute to the order, every member of which volunteered for the new work in a land never before entered by Sisters of the Precious Blood.

Among the five are Sister St. Agnes and Sister Mary of Calvary, formerly of Taftville.

They sail from Seattle May 7. This group will continue work in Sienhsien, in northern China, until death relieves them.

Modesty generally shows up to a good advantage in the dark.

SAYS WE NEED DRY OFFICERS TO ENFORCE PROHIBITION LAWS

We will never have enforcement of prohibition until we put into office men who are favorable to prohibition, said Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, of Iowa, director of Christian Citizenship of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the principal speaker at the W. C. T. U. jubilee meeting held Thursday afternoon at Bushnell chapel, Central Baptist church. There were about 50 W. C. T. U. members present, representing the eleven unions in New London county. With Mrs. Mary B. Wilson of Southington, president of the Connecticut W. C. T. U. presiding, assisted by Miss Harriet G. Cross, president of the Norwich W. C. T. U., the meeting opened at 2 o'clock with the singing of the crusade hymn, Give to the Winds Thy Fears, Mrs. Arthur F. Wyman at the piano. Then followed the reading of the Crusade Psalm, the 146th.

Rev. E. C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church, offered prayer after which words of welcome were given as follows: For the Norwich union, Miss Harriet G. Cross, the president; pastor of the church, Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D.; for the city of Norwich, Mayor John R. Waters; for the city pastors, Rev. E. C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church and Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church. Greetings were expressed as follows: New London County W. C. T. U., Mrs. Annie Fenner, of New London; the State W. C. T. U., Mrs. Mary B. Wilson, the state president, of Southington; the National W. C. T. U., Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, the director of Christian Citizenship of the National W. C. T. U.

Following the singing of the hymn, Blest Be the Tie That Binds, the crusade history of eight towns in the county was given after which Mrs. William Crowe sang, The White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner. The Greater Task Ahead was the topic of the address given by Mrs. Smith, who was introduced by the state president, Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. Smith said the W. C. T. U. hasn't in the past used slogans to any extent. It has a definite purpose which needs no further explaining. But this year several slogans have been adopted. It is not only the violation of the prohibition law which is prominent today. The enemies of prohibition would have us feel that it is the only law that is being violated, she said. I don't think there is a law that is not violated.

If under the one-half of one per cent law they make such poisonous liquor and violate the law by selling it, what would they do if they were granted a two and a half per cent law? If the women of the W. C. T. U. would all read the Union Signal and if the people of the United States would speak up for the cause we would have a very different situation.

Speaking of the adoption of the 18th amendment, Mrs. Wise said it was adopted by 94 per cent of the people speaking on it, which is somewhat greater than was the case with the 18th amendment, the sale law, which was adopted by 91 per cent. The suffrage amendment, she said, was adopted by almost the smallest margin than any of the other amendments that have been written into the Constitution.

It is not the old drunkards of 1920 who are making trouble today in the enforcement of the prohibition law. Most of them have reformed and become useful citizens. Many of them were glad the temptation was removed. It is the liquor interests that are making trouble today in the enforcement of prohibition.

There is another class of people that is making trouble. They are those persons of high social standing who are patronizing the bootleggers She said she believed the worst enemy of society is the person who buys illicit liquor from the bootlegger rather than the bootlegger himself. Without customers the bootlegger couldn't sell his illicit liquor.

Those who are opposing prohibition are speaking with such a loud voice that the world thinks they are in the majority when they are not. They are in the minority. We will never have enforcement of prohibition until we put into office men who are favorable to prohibition. We are not a political organization. We have no business to meddle in partisan politics.

It was a great task to write prohibition into the Constitution. It is a greater task to enforce it. In closing Mrs. Wise urged those present to carry the message back to their local unions and spur the members to greater activity. She was heartily applauded at the conclusion of her address.

Song, America, the Beautiful; the Guard slogan, We'll Help to Safeguard America's Future; the rally cry, America, America, Free! Free! Free! Dear Old Glory is the flag for me! America, America! Dry! Dry! Dry! We can help her keep it so, if we try. L. T. L.! L. T. L.! L. T. L.! the L. T. L. national salute; the American's creed; flag salute; lesson of the flag; rally cry, Prohibition; song, Some Glad Day; World Prohibition in 1930. Miss Viola Hill presided at the piano for the exercise.

After the song, March of Allegiance, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. D. Hetherington of Preston City. The meeting came to a close a few minutes before 5 o'clock.

MADE DONATIONS TO LIONS' BASEBALL CLUB

President George A. Finn opened the meeting of the Norwich Lions club held Thursday noon at the Wauregan house, after which Harlow Bogue as song leader took the club members through several lively numbers. Manager Robert Eliano of the Palace theatre was a guest of the club and through his courtesy the quartette and pianist from the Billy Allen company favored the meeting with a group of cleverly executed numbers.

Several announcements were made concerning the Y. M. C. A. Father and Son banquet and the meeting to be held at the United church when Attorney Arthur M. Brown will speak. Announcement of the Lions district convention to be held at Providence and a report of the civic committee were made in relation to road signs.

The Lion baseball team received several donations from friends and engaged in practice during the afternoon at the Academy campus. Lions Frank Sisk and Tyler Stanton won the prizes given by Herbert Corey, a feature that is enlivening each meeting during the International Lions attendance contest.

After giving a rising vote of thanks to the Palace theatre entertainers, the meeting closed with the salute to the flag and the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

DRAKE FINISHES FIRST IN COLONIAL PINOCHLE

Tuesday evening's play completed the Colonial club pinochle tournament with Drake taking first prize. Lillibridge second prize and Pierson third prize. Higgins was high man for the evening with a score of 3,065. Scores for the evening: Higgins 3,065; Pierson 7975; Amburn 7895; Drake 7805; Huntington 7685; Allen 7390; Church 7495; Harwood 7230; Lillibridge 7190; Tracy 7175, Lamb 7130, Thompson 6990, R. B. S. Washburn 6230; McNaught 6685, T. G. Washburn 6630; Sherman 6370.

Final scores: Drake 61,990, Lillibridge 60,865; Pierson 60,300; Huntington 59,665; Amburn 58,785; Allen 58,445; Higgins 58,280; Thompson 57,575; R. B. S. Washburn 57,300; Sherman 56,940; Lamb 56,690; Tracy 56,616; T. G. Washburn 56,035; Harwood 55,520; McNaught 55,375; Church 55,255.

MISS HELEN HAZARD FOR STATE FARM SUPERINTENDENT

Announcement has been made by the board of directors of the state farm for women at East Lyme of the appointment of Miss Helen H. Hazard as superintendent. Miss Hazard was formerly deputy superintendent and since Miss Anna M. Peterson resigned as superintendent about a year ago, has been acting in that capacity.

The new superintendent is a graduate of Teachers' college at Columbia university and has had extensive experience in case work with the American Red Cross at New York, at the Bedford Hills Reformatory for Women and at the Sleighton Farms Reformatory for Women.

NORWICH STORE MANAGER WINS A. & P. PRIZE

Over 30 Norwich people attended the annual get-together of the Providence unit of the A. & P. Tea company, held Wednesday afternoon and evening at the Elks auditorium in Providence. Over 800 employes and their wives and friends attended, representing the 300 stores in the district. The program consisted of a fine entertainment, a banquet and an evening of dancing.

The Norwich district, in charge of Assistant Superintendent F. L. Robinson, came in for considerable credit during the meeting for David Bendett, manager of the West Side store, won first prize, $10 in gold, for best showing during the last quarter; second prize, $5 in gold, being won by George Rocheleau of Jewett City, whose total was but $12 behind that of Mr. Bendett.

The local party made the trip by automobile or train, arriving home at a late hour. The get-together was voted one of the best ever held by the Providence unit and everyone is looking forward to another in the near future.

FR. M'CANN TRAINS CHORUS OF 250 CHILDREN'S VOICES

It is evident that Rev. Christopher T. McCann, formerly pastor of Sacred Heart church, Norwich Town, is continuing his activities in his present parish, St. Bridget's, Manchester. The Manchester Evening Herald says regarding the Easter services at his church:

At St. Bridget's church the services were unusually well attended. Rev. C. T. McCann stated that in his 11 years' pastorate he has never seen as many in attendance at the first mass as appeared Easter morning. Additional chairs had to be placed in the aisles, the choir loft and in the vestibule. A feature of the early service was the singing by a chorus of 250 children who have been trained by Rev. Father McCann. There was special music by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Margaret Smith Shea, the organist.

GAVE INSTRUCTIVE TALK WITH PICTURES ON ROME

The Parish House association of Park Congregational church, Miss Louise Howe, chairman, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening with Mrs. Frederick W. Cary, chairman of the federation, presiding. Following the lecture of the evening refreshments were served with Mrs. W. W. Leonard in charge, assisted by Mrs. Richard Lewis, Mrs. John S. Blackmar, Mrs. Beatrice Peterson, and the Misses Margaret Sayles, Helen Tirrell, Harriet Geer, and Beatrice Leonard. Mrs. Harrison Gray, and Mrs. W. W. Burgy poured.

The special feature of the evening was a talk on Rome given by Miss Edith Bliss. This was of especial interest because of her several months' residence in Rome last year. At the conclusion of her talk Miss Bliss said that it had been said that in ten years one may acquire a superficial knowledge of Rome, but to know Rome requires a lifetime. However this may be, those privileged to hear Miss Bliss felt that by her powers of keen observation, her illustrative pictures, and by her wealth of historical allusion, the fascination, charm of the eternal city was renewed.

Miss Bliss said in part: Arriving in Rome at the Satzione Termini and emerging from the great station, throbbing with modern life, far across the spacious piazza loom the huge arches of all that remains of the Baths of Diocletian. Thus in an instant, we are transported back over the centuries to the days of Imperial Rome. These were the largest of all the public baths, covering a space of 440,000 square yards and accommodating at one time over 3,000 bathers. These statistics would not be interesting in themselves, save that they bring to our minds a singular weakness that has always existed in the Latin race and has come down through the ages to the present day, namely that giantism; that effort to express greatness by size, which is so conspicuously absent from all that the Greeks have left us. Hadrian rears the Pantheon and Constantine builds his basilica. Michael Angelo says, I will set the Pantheon on the basilica and the result is St. Peter's which covers more ground than that other piece of gigantism, the Colosseum, and now this last generation has exhibited the same inherited tendency, for Italy has built a treasury with a facade 900 feet long and which, incredible as it may seem, fills a greater area than either the Colosseum or St. Peter's.

The Royal Palace which crowns the Quirinal Hill, was built in its present form in 1585 by Sixtus V who, having been a shepherd in his youth longed for the fresh air of the hill and from then on until 1870 the Popes continued to olive there during some part of the year, twenty-two popes having died within its walls. It is now the official residence of the king though the royal family never sleep here, preferring their beautiful and no doubt more homelike villa outside of Rome. They frequently come here however and preside at what functions may require their presence. Above the entrance is the balcony where royalty presents itself to the people on occasion. When we were in Rome a bazaar was held in the State Apartments for the benefit of the queen's favorite charities. The apartments, gorgeous in themselves, were beautifully decorated for the event, the crystal chandeliers making a wonderful illumination. The booths were presided over by women of the nobility, the Princess Iolande being at one. Both queens circulated about the rooms attended always by two of the King's Guard, splendid creatures who have to be at least six feet tall to get into the service and who are resplendent in their brilliant uniforms and helmets with long horse-hair plumes.

The Palace of the Respiglioci is but a step from the Quirinal. It contains Guido Reni's ceiling fresco the Aurora. The Hours, that hand in hand encircle the car of Phoebus advance with rapid pace while Aurora sails on the golden clouds before them, shedding showers of roses on the rejoicing earth.

Descending from the hill with Miss Bliss, we visited in turn the Piazza di Spagna, so named from the Palazza of the Spanish ambassador to the Pope. In the wall of the building near by, a tablet has been placed to the memory of Keats. Then we come to the Pincian Gardens, the Mecca of fashionable Rome shared now with the usurping foreigners. These gardens adjoin the villa Borghese, containing in its art gallery Titian's Sacred and Profane Love, and many pieces of excellent modern sculpture.

Catching a glimpse of St. Peter's we approach the brow of the hill. Trying to forget all the ugly modern buildings which intervene between us and St. Peter's we picture a little farm, a humble cottage, a freshly ploughed field and a man leaning on his plough, for just there the messengers found Cincinnatus when they hailed him Dictator of Rome.

From one piazza to another we passed gleaning the stories of famous buildings, growing more familiar with the customs of ancient and of modern Rome, reveling in the view of famous masterpieces, and absorbing newly acquired knowledge of the artistic, secular and religious history of the Eternal City.

ROUND TABLE MEETING AT PRESIDENT'S HOME

The April meeting of the Norwich Round Table was held Tuesday evening at the charming home of the President and Mrs. Edwin A. Tracy, on Scotland road, where the members an unusually large number, were delightfully entertained. The roll call—Suggest a Change in Fashion, offered much amusement. A humorous paper on Fads and Fashions was read by Miss Amanda Fisher. Delicious refreshments were served.

HUMANE SOCIETY DOES ACTIVE WORK IN STATE

A report of the work of the Connecticut Humane society shows the extent to which the society directs its activities in this state. The main offices of the society are at Hartford and branch offices are maintained at New Haven, Bridgeport, Stamford, and Norwich. It is maintained in a small way by a fund appropriated each year by the state but greater part of the work is kept up by donation and contributions from persons interested in humane work.

Agens employed by the society are given a six months course of training and if found qualified for this type of work are appointed by the governor of the state to be special officers and have the same authority as sheriffs, constables or policemen in all cases pertaining to the enforcement of laws in regard to children, aged persons and all animals.

The 20 paid agents of the society last year travelled 76,000 miles or more than three times around the world to make this a more humane state in which to live and their efforts should be encouraged by all right living people. Eleven thousand horses have been examined during the past five years.

Thirty-three thousand twenty complaints in 1923 received from outside sources concerning cruel treatment of animals, 21,106 horses, mules or live stock on the farm examined by its agents, 29,784 crates of live poultry inspected, 356 sick or disabled large animals humanely destroyed, 4,325 animals provided with food, water or shelter, 75 prosecutions charging abuse of animals.

Recent Connecticut statutes make Humane Education in our schools compulsory and a statute forbidding the soliciting of funds with the aid of a bird, beast or reptile of course drives the hand organ man with a monkey on a string or a fortune telling bird from the streets, also games of chance where rings were thrown over the heads of water animals.

TROLLEY CAR CREW SAVED BEST VIEW HOUSE

Motorman Conrad and Conductor Weir, the crew of a trolley car on the Montville line, turned fire fighters for a few minutes on a recent night trip from New London, saved the house of a Best View resident and came on their way with a delay of only fifteen minutes.

The householder, who is an officer at the submarine base, has written a nice letter of thanks to the local office of the trolley company in appreciation of the help that was given by the trolley crew, without which the Best View resident would probably have been burned out.

The car was passing Best View on the way to this city when the motorman caught sight of a blaze that he could see was on the roof of one of the houses. He stopped the car and hurried with the conductor to the house where the man was found eating his supper while his wife was upstairs putting the baby to bed, each unaware of the fire. Water was secured in pails and doused in the fire which was soon extinguished.

Fifteen minutes late because of their rescue work, the crew came along on their trip, which was again interrupted when they came across an automobile that was blocking the track after a crash between two machines that had taken a wheel off one.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN TO HAVE STATE CONVENTION

Norwich delegates will attend the first state convention of the Connecticut Federation of Democratic Women's clubs which is to be at New Haven on May 1, with Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch presiding. The convention programme will be as follows:

Address of welcome, Mrs. Josepha Whitney, New Haven; response, Miss Mary Bulkley, Hartford; report of credential committee, Mrs. Mabie T. Fletcher, Hartford; report of program committee, Mrs. A. H. Wightman, Hartford; report of officers; report of county chairmen: Hartford county, Mrs. H. P. Maxim; New Haven county, Mrs. Josepha Whitney; Fairfield county, Mrs. T. P. Hearn, New London county, Mrs. Frank L. Farrell; Windham county, Mrs. A. R. Scranton, Jr.; Tolland county, Mrs. E. M. Yeomans; Middlesex county, Mrs. R. U. Tyler; report of standing committees: a. candidates for office, Mrs. Henry A. Hayden, Waterbury; b. party principles, Miss Mary Bulkley, Hartford; c. party platform, Mrs. Ward E. Duffy, West Hartford; report of special committees: a. literature, Mrs. W. F. Alcorn, New Haven; b. publicity, George Troup, New Haven; revision of constitution, Mrs. John J. Kennedy, West Hartford; adjournment for luncheon.

Afternoon session — Discussion of planks for proposed platform, Mrs. Ward E. Duffy, chairman, West Hartford; report of nominating committee, Mrs. James A. Curry, chairman, Hartford; election of officers; adjournment; dinner six o'clock.

DID CLEVER SHOOTING ON ARMORY RANGE

On Wednesday night at the State Armory range, the expert riflemen of Jewett City and Norwich held a prize shoot, which proved to be the most interesting one of the season at the local club. There were refreshments. That accounts for the crowd.

In spite of the Industrial Exposition which was in full swing on the floor above, and other drawbacks, some very good offhand scores were made. It is difficult to do accurate shooting to the accompaniment of a band playing modern jazz.

Prizes were awarded in the different classes to the following men;

Palmer, Gilbert, Wyatt, Hilderbrand, Faulkner and E. Gudknecht, in two cases tie scores being settled by lot.

The total scores were as follows:

Workmen's Compensation

Workmen's compensation agreements as follows have been approved by Commissioner J. J. Donohue:

Ponemah Mills, Taftville, employer, and Anthony Gagnon, employe, bruised thumb, at rate of $12.27.

The Soltz Co., New London, employer, and James H. Adams, employe displaced cartilage in leg, at rate of $15.19.

Kadish Bros. & Levy, Norwich, employer and Philip Gottsfeld, 42 Peck St., employe, thumb pierced by needle, at rate of $18.00.

Arthur Jackson & Co., New London, employer and Joseph Perry, employe, frozen fingers developing infection, at rate of $10.80.

Big Carnival at Baltic

Under the auspices of Union of St. Jean Baptiste Society, for the benefit of St. Mary's church, Baltic, a grand carnival was held on Monday and Tuesday evenings at Baltic with a large attendance each evening.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DUES TAX EXEMPT

The Connecticut Chamber of Commerce has obtained an important ruling from the internal revenue department at Washington on deduction of Chamber of Commerce dues from income tax which is national in effect. The state chamber several weeks ago obtained a ruling from the internal revenue at Washington that members of Chambers of Commerce not engaged in business could not deduct their dues from income tax because it was not a necessary expense.

The decision did not agree with Secretary George B. Chandler's views and he requested that the case be reopened and considered from a standpoint that Chamber of Commerce dues was an investment in civic development and that every resident received a direct benefit, not in dollars and cents, but in a way that affected the general welfare of every citizen. This was done and the State Chamber of Commerce received a decision in its favor exempting from taxation Chamber of Commerce dues of individuals who, because of civic pride, join a chamber of commerce and take part in the development and general welfare of a community.

This decision will affect all chamber of commerce members in the United States.

EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION IS TO HOLD SPRING MEETING

The spring meeting of the Connecticut Editorial association will be held at the new Burritt hotel in New Britain, Saturday, April 26. The afternoon session will be held at 2.30, which will include the business meeting and round-table discussion, and at 6.30 dinner will be served, which will be followed by a brief, speaking program.

It is the plan in the afternoon to have a discussion of any suggestions or questions concerning the welfare of the association members. Gardner E. Campbell of Wakefield, president of the Massachusetts Press association, and Robert S. Osterhout, its treasurer, will be guests of the association and will participate in the discussion, and will be the principal speakers at the evening session.

Wives of the association members will be welcome at the dinner, and for those who might be concerned in arranging to return home because of living at some distance, the hotel management has extended an invitation to remain over night without charge for rooms, the association members who desire to be thus accommodated being guests of the hotel management.

SCHOONERS REACH NORWICH WITH LIGHTENED CARGOES

The three masted schooner Nova Queen and the four-master Esther K., which have been lying in New London harbor during the past few days, were brought to this city Thursday morning.

The Queen, with a cargo of wood pulp for the Uncas Paperboard Co., and the Esther K., with lumber for the Dawley Lumber Co., have been lightering a portion of the consignments, because of their deep draught which did not permit them to come up the Thames river to the wharves of the two Norwich concerns, until part of the cargoes had been taken out.

CHARLES F. MURPHY WAS UNAWARE DEATH WAS NEAR

Tammany Chieftain Insisted Upon Breakfasting at an Early Hour, After Having Been Awakened by Pangs of Indigestion Following a Hearty Dinner the Preceding Evening—Was a Product of the "Gas House District" of New York—His Death is Mourned by Tammany Politicians as a Party Misfortune.

New York, April 25.—Charles F. Murphy, grand chieftain of Tammany hall and for many years a powerful factor in democratic councils of the state and nation, died today of heart failure induced by acute indigestion.

A product of the East Side's picturesque "gas house district" he had, first with fists and then with brains, fought his way from the stokehold of ward politics to the quarter-deck of party fame and financial fortune. In a span of 66 years he had been poor man's son, ward heeler, bartender, saloonkeeper, officeholder, financier, and finally local director and national adviser of his party.

He had graduated from the sobriquet of "Fists Murphy," through that of "Hurly-Burly," "Sport," "Silent Charles" and, at the last "C. F. M." the initials by which all knew him, although few of those who obeyed his commands ever had seen him, and always, from merest youth, his name and that of Tammany were linked together.

He retired last night, after a busy day and a hearty dinner, to be awakened this morning by feverish chills and the pangs of indigestion. Characteristically, he insisted upon breakfasting at the usual early hour. Immediately he became alarmingly ill and died a few minutes later in the presence of his physician, a priest, his daughter, Mabel, and her husband, Surrogate James A. Foley.

The taciturn genius, who had ruled the destinies of Tammany Hall for 22 years as successor to the late Richard Croker, remained conscious to the end, unaware that death was near. He submitted docilely to the hypodermic injected when his physician recognized that collapse was imminent, and his only comment was of surprise that indigestion should have awakened him, and that his heart caused him pain.

Mrs. Murphy, who was in Atlantic City was summoned home. Although her husband died before she could entrain, she was not aware of it until she was met by friends at this end of the journed.

Tammany hall was the first to learn that death had invaded the home of its leader near Grammercy Park. The party's big wigwam on Fourteenth street half-staffed its flag and went into mourning. Party chiefs and Tammany workers assembled from all outlying wigwams to pay tribute to the memory of their leader and speculate as to his successor. Police and traffic reserves controlled the throngs that gathered about the old-fashioned mansion where he died.

Coming at a time when Tammany was girding itself for a strenuous presidential campaign, and so soon after his protege, Governor Alfred E. Smith, had formally entered the lists for the democratic presidential nomination, Mr. Murphy's death was mourned by high political leaders as a party misfortune, if not an actual calamity.

Fears in some quarters that Governor Smith's aspirations would be seriously handicapped were offset, however, by assertions of Murphy's teammates that the leader had schooled his organization so perfectly and laid his plans so carefully that his death would have no detrimental effect.

Tammany's greatest concern tonight was the choice of a man big enough to carry on where Murphy left off. A meeting of the executive committee hastily was called to discuss the situation, although it was understood that a new chieftain would not be named until after the funeral.

It was considered probable that the committee would follow the precedent set at the retirement of Richard Croker in 1903, when a triumvirate of district chiefs was appointed temporarily to administer the organization. Murphy was a member of this trio, and it was only after he arose head and shoulders above the co-rulers that he was named all-powerful head of the society. Some of the names mentioned as a possible successor were Governor Smith and "Tom" Foley, Murphy's right hand man for years.

Murphy was particularly fond of children and those familiar with the political machinery of the Metropolis attributed much of the executive's political success to the silent man in the wigwam.

The funeral will in all probability be held from St. Patrick's cathedral, in Fifth Avenue.

Bishop John J. Dunn in charge of the archdiocese of New York in the absence of Cardinal Hayes, on leaving the Murphy home, tonight said that while no arrangements for the funeral had been completed, it would undoubtedly be held from the cathedral.

"There's no other church large enough to hold the many friends of Murphy who will want to be present," he said.

Bishop Dunn said the death of Murphy was a great personal loss to him. "He was my friend for 40 years. He was just plain Charley to me," said the bishop.

BANKERS TO DEVISE PLAN OF LOAN TO GERMANY

Paris, April 25.—The reparations commission purposes to mobilize the opinions of all the leading financiers of allied countries on the question how Germany can borrow 800,000,000 gold marks to help her make her first year's reparation payment and balance her budget.

The commission will begin its work tomorrow with a conference with J. P. Morgan, the New York banker. After learning the views of Mr. Morgan, Louis Dethou, president of the commission, and Sir John Bradbury, great Britain's representative, will interview M. Robineau, governor of the Bank of France, and Montagu Colet Norman, governor of the Bank of England. Swiss, Dutch and Scandinavian financiers also will be consulted.

Mr. Morgan is to be consulted only as a representative American financier, and not as a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan and Company. The commissioners will ask the opinion as to the prospects of subscriptions to a loan in the United States and on what conditions a loan can be floated. They also may invite him to suggest the name for a "reparation dictator."

The first task of the commission will be to find out what conditions are likely to be imposed in the different countries with regard to subscriptions to an 800,000,000 mark loan to Germany. The idea of the commission is that the subscriptions should be spread over as wide a territory as possible so as to make it to the interests of the greatest number of countries that Germany succeed in carrying out the plans of the experts.

RACING BALLOONS FELL 73 MILES SHORT OF RECORD

San Antonio, Texas, April 25.—(By The A. P.)—The last of the seven balloons that took the air at city FKield here late Wednesday in the national balloon elimination race came to earth today far up in southeastern Minnesota. W. T. Van Orman, piloting the "Goodyear II," entry of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, with his mate, C. K. Wollam, brought the race to a close when they landed early this afternoon near Rochester, Minn., approximately 1,110 miles from the starting point, the farthest distance traversed by any of the contestants.

The winner fell approximately 73 miles short of the American distance record of 1,173.9 miles established in 1919 by W. R. Hawley, in the race from St. Louis.

Van Orman and Wollam were in the air 43 hours and 34 minutes.

ARREST OF AN ALLEGED BANDIT IN BRIDGEPORT

Bridgeport, Conn., April 25—Adam Parrilo, 27, who claims Saratoga Springs, N. Y., as his residence, was arrested here today by private agency detectives and local police in connection with the robbery of $140,000 from a bank messengers car and the murder of the driver in Montreal on April 1 last.

NOMINATIONS BY NAT'L LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Buffalo, N. Y., April 25—Miss Belle Sherwin, of Cleveland was nominated for president of the National League of Women Voters in the report of the nominating committee submitted to the convention delegates. Miss Sherwin would succeed Mrs. Maude Wood Park, of Washington, who declined to accept the nomination for reelection.

Two others named as prospective candidates by the committee withdrew and Miss Sherwin's election was expected to be a matter of form. Miss Sherwin is now first vice president.

Nominations for other officers were: First vice president, Miss Julia Lathrop, Chicago; second vice president, Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, New Waverly, Texas; third vice president, Miss Ruth Morgan, New York, for re-election; secretary, Miss Elizabeth J. Hauser, Girard, O., for reelection.

These regional chairmen were nominated: First region, Mrs. James A. Cheseman, Providence, R. I., and Mrs. Herbert Knox Smith, Connecticut, second, Miss Gertrude Ely, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; third, Miss Adele Clark, Richmond, Va.; fourth, Mrs. William G. Hibbard, Kinnetka, Ills., fifth, Miss Marguerite Wells, Minneapolis; sixth to be designated; seventh, Mrs. Walter A. Shockley, Reno, Nev.

PROCEEDINGS OF DAUGHERTY INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE

Washington, April 25.—Perplexed, but not perturbed, the senate Daugherty investigating committee divided its attention today among witnesses who described defunked anti-trust prosecutions in Chicago, papers that are needed to cite M. S. Daugherty, of Washington Courthouse, Ohio, before the senate for contempt, and the phenomenal spiriting away of the secret records of Gaston B. Means. One open hearing and several conferences marked the various proceedings.

Means, upon leaving a long executive discussion with Chairman Brookhart and Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, the committee prosecutor, was grave but not hopeless. The senators themselves profese puzzlement but unconcern, and let it be known that the loss was his worry, not theirs, and that no senate weapons would be brought to the task of seeking the recovery of the papers.

The detective himself, whose long story of investigation work for the department of justice and attendant knowledge of alleged bribery culminated yesterday in the report that his day by day diaries, once introduced in committee evidence, had been taken away by two men who said they were senate officers but were not, was frank in declaring that he suspected where the records had gone, but what he would do to bring about their recovery he would not say.

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON SUFFERS VOICE FAILURE

Cleveland, April 25.—Senator Hiram Johnson, of California announced here today that because of failure of his voice he would close his speaking campaign for the republican nomination for president with a speech at Toledo, Ohio, tonight "unless something unexpected develops," but that the Johnson campaign will continue in several states yet to select convention delegates, including Ohio, Indiana and California.

He cancelled a speaking campaign in Indiana next week.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Cardinal Mundelein Leaves Rome.

Rome, April 25.—(By The A. P.)—Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago left this evening for Milan where he expects to spend two days, then proceeding to Paris for a brief visit before sailing for the United States on the Berengaria.

BROKER PAPPAS TO CEASE OPERATIONS IN RHODE ISLAND

Providence, R. I., April 25.—William S. Pappas and company, stock brokers with headquarters in Boston and branch offices in several New England cities, will liquidate their business in Rhode Island. This announcement was made by William S. Pappas, head of the concern following a hearing before Bank Commissioner George R. Newhall and Attorney General Herbert L. Carpenter today.

Bank Commissioner Newhall through Attorney General Carpenter subpoenaed the books of the Pappas concern April 23 and ordered that they be produced before him at 2 p. m. today. Bank Commissioner Newhall said after the hearing that the books were not produced as required by law and that after discussing the business done by William S. Pappas and company an agreement was reached whereby the Pappas brokerage business in Rhode Island is to be liquidated as soon as possible.

The brokerage firm of William S. Pappas and company is composed of William S. Pappas of Boston and Dr. C. C. Furdum of Pawtucket. Its main office is in Boston but it maintains branches in Norwich, Haverhill, Providence and other New England cities. Its business, it is stated, has consisted of both margin and partial payment transactions.

The firm was first organized in June 1920 by Paul, Alexander and William S. Pappas and was known as Alexander, Pappas and company. Alexander later withdrew from the firm, leaving Pappas as the proprietor. Dr. C. C. Furdum of Pawtucket, manager of the Providence branch of the firm was later admitted as a partner.

It is understood that William S. Pappas was employed by W. N. Withington and company before he started his own business. Withington was recently closed up in connection with the action against alleged bankrupt G. F. Redmond and company, Inc., brokerage house.

Mr. Pappas announced after the hearing that he had decided to liquidate the accounts in the Providence office and cease operations in Rhode Island because the business here was not great enough to permit profitable operations.

$100,000 BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT AGAINST J. B. MORRIS

New York, April 25.—A motion before the appellate division of the supreme court today disclosed that a $100,000 breach of promise suit has been filed against James B. Morris, formerly of Bridgeport, Conn., and recently of Ridgewood, N. J., by Mrs. Elizabeth White Morris, who alleged that after living with Morris for many years, she discovered that he was already married.

Miss White, as she is named in the petition, said she was married to Morris by a Bridgeport minister in 1918 and left him when she learned he had another wife living.

The action came before the appellate division on a motion by Morris' attorneys to compel Miss White to separate her causes for action, several of which were included in the complaint. Supreme Court Justice O'Malley, who had denied the motion, was upheld by the higher court.

INCREASE OF $226,709,192 IN INTERNAL TAX COLLECTIONS

Washington, April 25—The federal government collected $2,146,803,265 in internal taxes in the first three quarters of the present fiscal years, an increase of $226,109,193 over the nine months ending March 15 last year. Of the total collections, $1,403,039,748 were in income and profits taxes, the receipts from this source running slightly ahead of industry calculations and substantially larger than for the corresponding period a year ago.

Tobacco taxes again made up almost one-third of the whole miscellaneous collections, with receipts of $241,702,668, or about three million dollars more than was collected from this source in the corresponding period a year ago. Collections under the prohibition laws were $434,793, a reduction of more than $12,000 from the nine month sending March 15, 1923. Additions taxes increased to $57,767,270 from $51,171,213.

HELEN GOLDEN FOUND GUILTY OF ROBBERY

Atlantic City, N. J., April 25—Helen Golden, of New York, charged with robbing guests of the Hotel Ambassador here of $85,000 worth of jewelry was found guilty in the criminal court at Mays Landing this afternoon and sentenced by Judge William Smathers to a term of from four to seven years in state's prison. The girl was employed as a maid at the hotel this summer of 1923, and following the robberies staged a fake drowning on the beach and disappeared.

Completed Tragedy By Drinking Poison

Wanda Elaine Stopa, Slayer of Henry Manning in Chicago, Suicided in Hotel in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., April 25.—A woman believed by the police to be Wanda Elaine Stopa, wanted in Chicago in connection with the slaying yesterday of Henry Manning, sixty year old caretaker at the home of Yezenya Kenley Smith, wealthy advertising man, was found dead in a room at a hotel here tonight.

According to the police the woman drank poison just as local officers were about to force their way into the room. The woman was registered at the hotel as Mrs. Theodore Glascow. Police went to the hotel to arrest her on information given them by Chicago police.

Detroit police late this afternoon were asked to look for Wanda Stopa, who might be going under the name of Glasgow. Two detectives immediately started on a search of the hotels and found a woman registered under the name of Mrs. Theodora Glasgow.

They asked the telephone operator to ring the room. The telephone operator told them that the woman occupying the room had committed suicide by drinking poison three hours previous. Hotel attaches said the coroner had been notified and that the body had been removed to an undertaking establishment.

The detectives then went to the undertaking parlors and identified the body as that of Miss Stopa. In the room were found a number of letters including a bit dated April 22 from a New York hotel, made out to Miss Stopa, Glasgow, and a letter indicating that her mother lived in Chicago.

NOTEBOOK TOLD OF HER PLAN OF EXISTENCE

Chicago, April 25.—First word of Miss Wanda Elaine Stopa's whereabouts following a nation-wide hunt for her yesterday, came today when word was received by the police that a clerk at a Detroit hotel had recognized her in the writing room from newspaper photographs and had observed her address a letter to her mother here. A telegram from New York authorities said she and Glasgow had checked out of a hotel there on April 22.

Logic was applied to her love for Smith by the young woman, who left a stenographic record of a system she had composed for them to follow. It was found in a notebook in her studio here. Her plan of existence, sub-divided as a lawyer writes a brief, carried the sub-headings of "Work," "Recreation," "Friendship," and "Companionship."

"An artist needs a manager. You are the artist, I am the manager," she prefaced.

Under "work," she bound herself to take "dictation" from Smith.

Of "companionship" she wrote:

"I will hold myself in readiness to come to you whenever you may wish me outside of working hours."

A later personal note, indicating a crisis in her relations with Smith, read:

"I feel that my attachment for you is becoming a sort of millstone about your neck, that you never intended it to reach the hectic stage it has."

But she did not surrender him, saying:

"This is my fault. I am intensely romantic and you are romance to me. I have endeavored to make this romance the real thing in my life, and wish to be real with you, but yet I have known a lot of things you told me on last Sunday."

DRANK 36 CUPS OF COFFEE WITHIN THREE HOURS

Hornell, N. Y., April 25—Harold Whitford and Ephraim Fitch, of this city, engaged in a coffee drinking marathon contest here today in an effort to learn whether that beverage is intoxicating. Fitch quit after quaffing 24 eight ounce cups but Whitford managed to imbibe 36 within the stipulated three hours. The latter had to be carried home by his friends, but said he felt no bad effects beyond stomach cramps. Both remained quite sober.

PLANE STARTS ON ANOTHER LEG OF ROUND WORLD FLIGHT

Corrova, Alaska, April 25.—(By The A. P.)—Major Frederick L. Martin, commanding a United States army air expedition around the world, hopped off at 10.35 a. m. today from Kanatak for Chignik, according to word received here.

Declaring that Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is not a true democrat, the Women's State Democratic club at a meeting in Boston voted to send a letter to the national democratic committee in protest against considering Mrs. Catt for temporary chairman of the coming national democratic convention.

Plan For Funding The Hungarian Debt

Agreement Provides For Repayment of $1,939,753 Over a Period of Sixty-Two Years.

Washington, April 25.—The American debt commission today completed a settlement for funding the Hungarian debt to the United States and the president immediately sent it to congress for ratification.

The agreement, which covers the first of the relief loans made by the United States, provides for repayment of the $1,939,753, principal and interest, over a 62-year period. A cash payment of $783 is arranged and the remainder will be retired in annual installments with interest at 3 per cent over the first 10 years and 3 1-2 per cent thereafter.

Introduced into this funding settlement, the third to be consummated by the commission, is a provision designed to clear the way for flotation by Hungary of a national loan for reconstruction purposes. The agreement accords the secretary of the treasury the authority to release Hungarian national assets from the priority of a first lien by the United States, provided other nations holding Hungarian obligations agree to cooperate likewise.

Release of the Hungarian assets from the "first charge" of the American debt is regarded therefore as likely to lead other governments to take similar steps and probably make the flotation of the proposed loan a success.

Treasury officials explained the provision was identical with terms of the Lodge resolution, enacted three years ago and giving to Austria the right to disregard the American debt's lien on that nation's assets and revenues. They believe, therefore, that there will be little opposition in congress to the proposal, particularly since the amount is small.

Specifically, the agreement carries language placing the bonds to be given by the Hungarians as the first charge on all governmental income and assets, including costs of reparation under the treaty of Trianon or any other treaty but adds:

"Provided that all or any part of such security may be released by the secretary of the treasury of the United States on such terms and conditions as he may deem necessary or appropriate in order that the United States may cooperate in any program whereby Hungary may be able to finance its immediate needs by the flotation of a loan for reconstruction purposes, if and when substantially all other creditor nations holding obligations of Hungary similar to that held by the United States and described in the agreement, to wit, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Holland, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland, shall release to a similar extent the security enjoyed by such obligations. The secretary of the treasury shall be authorized to decide when such action has been substantially taken."

After the first payment in cash of $753, Hungary will begin with a payment of $9,600, increasing its annual payments by two hundred dollars each time until 1938 when an increase of $400 is provided. Thereafter the annual increases are $500 until 1949, after which the amount of the payment each year increases by $1,000 until in 1955 a payment of $75,000 liquidates the obligation.

Hungary, like the other nations which have negotiated funding agreements may retire its obligations by turning in American government bonds.

ARREST MAY CLEAR UP ROBBERIES IN DANBURY

Danbury, Conn., April 25—Through the arrest today of Carl Baker, 19, of this city, police believe the numerous robberies committed here during the past three years will be cleared up. In Baker's home a quantity of materials including a radio set, cameras, clothing and batteries, were found, the polic easy. A large motor truck was used in taking the stuff to headquarters. The arres toame about when police noticed a new radio aerial on Baker' shouse.

When the police entered the cellar of the place it is said that a quantity of whiskey and mash was found. No arrests have been made as the result of this find.

U. S. BANKING SYNDICATE TO AID NEW GERMAN BANK

New York, April 25—Establishment by an American banking syndicate of unrestricted credit facilities for the new German gold rediscount bank organized by Dr. Hjalmer Schacht, reopening the channels of trade between this country and Germany, was announced today by the International Acceptace bank. An initial advance of $5,000,000 has been made.

TIME'S CASH VALUE

Modern methods and appliances have set a new standard for a day's work. Time is the one big factor. This is true in the factory, on the farm, in the home or what not.

Time is money today. And anything that multiplies the value of an hour is increasingly valuable.

Advertising is an annihilator of time. It provides a short cut between a manufacturer or merchant and you. It makes it possible to tell you in a few minutes all you want to know about the services or articles you need.

A quick glance through The Bulletin enables you to sift out the things that interest you and in a moment you can know just where and when to go for what you want.

Figure how much valuable time advertising saves you if you want it properly. Think how much needless walking and talking it saves you and your neighbors.

Les, advertising has a big value to you. Don't fail to read The Bulletin's advertising columns.

COOLIDGE IN THE ROLES OF ECONOMIST AND MEDIATOR

Chief Executive Endorses Views Expressed by Senator Borah Opposing Large Governmental Expenditures—Unalterably Opposed to "Determined Assaults by Organized Minorities on the Public Treasury" — Is Considering an Arrangement That Will Exclude Japanese Immigration and at the Same Time Avoid Any Affront to Japan.

Washington, April 25.—Endorsement by President Coolidge today of the views expressed in the senate Tuesday by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, opposing large governmental expenditures and bonus legislation strengthened many in Washington in their belief that Mr. Coolidge will veto the soldier bonus.

The president, discussing with visitors today his declaration in his Associated Press address against "determined assaults by organized minorities on the public treasury," reiterated his frequently-made plea for economy and in that connection called attention to Senator Borah's address.

The Idaho senator in his address criticized additions to the tax burdens of the American people and, opposing the bonus bill, declared it was the duty of congress to start to curtail expenses even if congress had to refrain from doing certain things which might be pleasant and politically expedient to do.

Mr. Coolidge told his callers that he regarded the views of Senator Borah as outlined in his address as fundamentally sound and the result of logical conclusions. He made it plain that his endorsement of Senator Borah's declarations was general and not applicable to the senator's discussion of any particular bill, but his remarks were interpreted by many of his callers as meaning that he stood with Mr. Borah in opposition to the bonus bill.

The statement of the president's views today was the nearest approach to a definition of his position on bonus legislation since his Lincoln Day address in New York in which he declared his opposition to a bonus as a matter of principle, regardless of the form it might take.

Indications developed during the day that the paid-up insurance bill passed by the senate Wednesday after having previously passed the house probably would reach the White House within a week. The senate conference committee, consisting of Senators Curtis, Kansas, McLean, Connecticut, and Watson, Indiana, republicans, and Simmons, North Carolina, and Walsh, Massachusetts, democrats, was apointed, and arrangements were made for a meeting Monday with the house conferees. Neither senate or house conferees expect to take more than a day to adjust differences in the bill as it was passed by the two houses.

Regardless of whether the president signs the bill or vetoes it only to have it passed over his veto, as many members of congress predict will be done in event of a veto, government machine will be found prepared to undertake administration of the act. The job to be done under the act will require the closest scrutiny of individual war records of 6,000,000 soldiers, sailors and marines, and while no official is willing to estimate how much time will be required to complete the job every effort is being made in all government departments to plan for the rapid execution of what is undoubtedly one of the greatest clerica undertakings upon which the government ever has embarked.

Director Hines, of the veterans' bureau, which will be the office of actual issue of the proposed adjusted compensation payments whether in the form of cash or insurance certificates said today his plans had been perfected and the bureau machine was ready to function whenever the necessary data became available from the military departments.

The key to the whole administrative problem, however, lies in the personal military records of the men who fought in the World war. Each of those records, nearly 6,000,000 of them, must be searched and checked before any payment can be made to the veteran and of the 6,000,000 more than 5,000,000 are in the files of the adjutant general's office of the war department.

The success of the task depends upon the work at those files and the war department, through the adjutant general, Major General Robert C. Davis, has been preparing for more than two years in order to be ready whenever veteran compensation legislation might be enacted to expedite its work in order that the veterans might receive as promptly as possible the benefits of the act.

Both at the navy and the marine corps' headquarters similar work has been done in cooperation with the war department and officials at both departments expressed confidence today that there would be no undue delay in furnishing the veterans' bureau with the data it must have before any payment can be made. War department officials were equally confident that they had taken every possible precaution to be ready.

Should the bill become a law, the department will make every effort, it is stated, to see that veterans are fully informed as to how and when and where they are to proceed in making applications under the bill.

General Hines estimated that the work of this bureau in the actual issue of insurance certificates at an initial rate of 10,000 a day would not cost more than $1,000,000 or require more than three or four hundred additional clerks. A new division of the bureau to be known as a "bonus section," would be set up and from 300 to 400 additional clerks would be employed, General Hines added.

The navy department, with 200 additional clerks, hopes to complete work on approximately 600,000 records substantially during the first year while the marine corps, with more than 80,000 personnel records, is also prepared for rapid action through the employment of additional clerical help.

COOLIDGE ENDEAVORING TO AVOID AFFRONT TO JAPAN

Washington, April 25—An arrangement with respect to Japanese immigration which will satisfy those advocating exclusion and which at the same time will avoid any affront to Japan is being attempted by President Coolidge.

The president is hopeful that the arrangement can be effected and with that end in view will continue his conferences on immigration legislation with congressional leaders and Secretary Hughes. Just what sort of arrangement the executive has in mind was not disclosed at the white house where the announcement was made today that a compromise move was in progress. None of those who have conferred recently with the president would discuss the matter.

White House officials would not go so far as to say that the president would veto the immigration bill, now in conference between the senate and house, should the proposed arrangement fail of acceptance, but visitors to the white house have found the executive greatly disturbed over the situation resulting from adoption by congress of the provision for Japanese exclusion.

Chairman Colt of the senate immigration committee, who was one of six senators who voted against the immigration bill, conferred with the president today and said before the executive his reasons for viewing the exclusions provision as unnecessary illogical and generally harmful to American interests.

Senator Colt later attended the first meeting of the senate and house conferees on the measure but it was not disclosed whether he carried to the conferees any suggestion from the president. Some supporters of the bill as it passed the house believe that by adoption of the non-quota provisions of the house measure, they might be found to satisfy those advocating exclusion and yet make the legislation less objectionable to Japan.

The conferees at today's meeting discussed the bill in a general way and proposed to take up the various differences tomorrow. Chairman Johnson of the house immigration committee announced after the meeting that the conferees plan to complete their work tomorrow so that the house may act finally on the bill Monday and the senate within a few days thereafter.

Chairman Johnson in a statement issued tonight declared that to place the Japanese under the quotas basis applied to other nationalities, "would mean formal abandonment of this nation's established policy to exclude aliens ineligible to citizenship and open the doors for a demand for naturalization on their part."

"I would give the Japanese," he said, "a privilege denied to all other yellow and brown races, an act of discrimination of which the others, including Chinese and Hindoos could justly complain; and if wives were admitted outside the quota, now or in the future, it would open the gates to floor of picture brides for the 40,000 unmarried adult Japanese in continental United States.

SENATE AT WORK ON TAX REDUCTION BILL

Washington, April 25—The senate got down to business on the tax reduction bill with a rush today, agreeing to more than a score of finance committee amendments to the measure as passed by the house.

Upon request, Chairman Smoot of the committee put off until Monday further consideration of some of the more important amendments he was joined, however, by Senator Jones, of New Mexico, a democratic member of the committee, in warning senators that they must be ready at that time to take up in order such amendments.

Senator Jones, speaking after a roll call to get a quorum on the floor to discuss the proposed increase in the corporation tax, said he wished "to disabuse the minds of senators who entertain the impression that this bill is going to be before the senate for a number of days."

"There is not going to be any attempt," Senator Jones continued "of which I have any knowledge to delay passage of this revenue bill. It is my judgment that this bill is going to pass much sooner than any statements in the press would indicate."

TWO WOMEN INJURED WHEN AUTOS SIDESWIPED

North Haven, April 25—Miss Grace Hyer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mrs. Trimonte, of Springfield, Mass., were seriously injured when their automobiles side-swiped here late today. Three other occupants of the Trimontte car, Mary Darmontte of the Bronx, N. Y., and Mrs. Trimontte's twin children, received severe lacerations. All were taken to the New Haven hospital.

Miss Hyer has a fracture of the spine and Mrs. Trimontte, a possible fracture of the skull and lacerations of the scalp, according to hospital authorities. They will recover.

The place where the accident occurred is on the road to Wallingford affording a long open stretch of road. There were two other collisions at the same place almost instantaneous with the one in which the two women were hurt, but resulted in nothing more than slight damages to machines.

ONLY TWO MARINES WERE KILLED IN HONDURAS

San Salvador, 25.—Only two American marines were killed in the clash in Honduras, reported for the first time in despatches received yesterday according to advices reaching here today.

The American government tonight had received no advices concerning the reported killing of American marines or bluejackets in Honduras and as a consequence were inclined to believe that the reports received in San Salvador were exaggerated.

It was pointed out also that there have been no marines in Honduran ports for some time, although American bluejackets were landed at Ceiba and some other ports recently to protect American interests.

WILLIMANTIC

Carnival at state armory, April 24, 25, 26 and 28. Mammoth midway, dancing each night, 8 to 12.—adv.

The Boys' week committee in charge of the program to be carried out Sunday, Thursday and Saturday of next week has the full backing of every man and organization in Willimantic, it became evident Friday. Offers of assistance morally and materially, came in from every side and the arrangements began to take on a definite form. The program will center about five main topics, Church, School, Citizenship, Industry and Loyalty.

Monday will be church day, and will fittingly observed.

Especial exercises will be held at the schools Thursday during the day.

Thursday evening a father and son banquet for the boys in industry will be held.

Men and boys will join in a loyalty parade Saturday and the week will end with competitive sports at Recreation park between the various schools.

Every man who has faith in the boys of Willimantic has been invited to take part in the activities of Boys' week and help his boy or some other boy to understand and appreciate the spirit with underlies this annual testimony to the significance of youth. Boys are seen daily, but the future men in them remains invisible. According to the arrangements, it is planned to allow the boys to bear the bulk of the work for the week. As near as possible it will be a week for boys by boys.

To co-operate with the committee from the Rotary club, which is sponsoring the movement and other assistants, Gilbert P. Flynn, grand knight of San Jose council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus has appointed the following committee committee: P. A. Connors, chairman; James Butler, Arthur P. Bergeron, John O'Rourke and William J. Grady. Willimantic lodge, No. 1811, B. P. O. E., has a similar committee appointed by Exalted Ruler Valentine L. Murphy and comprising P. D. Donahue, chairman; Frank M. Lincoln, Alfred Noel, John O'Rourke and William H. Nichols.

A long street parade to music by Willimantic's three bands and which was witnessed by hundreds, marked the opening of the American Thread Athletic association carnival Thursday night. That this city is interested in securing a fitting baseball team to represent the community in the Eastern Connecticut league this year was attested by the generous sale of tickets and the fine business done at the various booths at the carnival.

Following was the formation of the parade:

First division—Platoon of police, B. P. O. E. band, Co. C, 169th Infantry, Connecticut National Guard. Guard Sacred Heart. Members of Willimantic lodge, No. 1311, B. P. O. E.

Second Division—White Eagle Polish-American band, members of San Jose Council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus. Boy Scouts band, Boy Scouts troops, members of the American Thread Athletic association, city and town officials and officers of the newly formed Connecticut State Baseball league.

Upon arrival at the armory Mayor Hermisdas Dion started the ball a-rolling with an inspiring address, in which he sponsored good baseball.

Willimantic plumbers were guests of the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company, Thursday at a supper. A meeting was then held in the sales office of the company where talks were given by A. E. Kebbe, sales manager of the Connecticut Power Company fo New London and J. W. Geddes, manager of a water heater company of Boston. The following were present: A. E. Kebbe of New London, J. W. Geddes of Boston, E. K. Peterson of Hartford, John F. Ahern, David Loree, Hollis H. Lyman, Daniel McCarthy, Joseph O. Bergeron, Clinton C. Wood, Willard Ladd, Michael E. Kelley, Tyler Winchester, Lewis Keigwin, Charles Montigny and Miss Rae Hevrin, Miss Evelina Beaulieu and F. H. Milnel, M. Allgair, S. Doyle and F. Hepton, the last four of Rockville.

Eli Weeks of Eastford, died Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. I. Morse, No. 47 Central avenue, East Hartford. Mr. Weeks who was a Civil war veteran, leaves his wife, three sons, Robert, Russell and Lucien; and two daughters, Mrs. F. J. Morse and Mrs. Charles Chapman of Willimantic. The funeral was held at the Eastford Congregational church at 1 p. m. Friday. Burial was in Putnam.

Funeral services for Ashbel W. Armstrong were held at two o'clock Friday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank Date of Franklin. Burial was in Pautipaug cemetery, Franklin. Avery nad Van Zandt of this city had charge of the arrangements.

At two o'clock Friday funeral services for Thomas W. Southward were held at his home 266 Pleasant street. Rev. Frederick F. Foshay of the Baptist church, officiated, in connection with the Masonic services. Miss Ines Paten sang, Beautiful Isle of Somewhere, and Some Time We'll Understand. Burial was in Willimantic cemetery. The bearers were William A. Dawson, Harry W. Standish, Carl R. Alford, Edgar E. Bass, Dr. B. K. Dow and Clarence Palmer. The J. C. Lincoln Company was in charge of the arrangements.

Willimantic police with county and federal prohibition enforcement officers staged a raid Thursday on the premises of W. Andrychowski, of Brick Top, for intoxicating liquor. The raid was not successful in the opinion of the officers as nothing of an incriminating nature was found.

Professor William F. Kirkpatrick, director of the international egg laying contest at the Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, left Friday morning for New York and will sail today Saturday, with a number of others interested in poultry for Cherbourg, France. An overland trip will then be made to Barcelona, Spain, to attend the third World's Fowl Congress. Professor Kirkpatrick is a delegate from the Connecticut Poultry association. Poultry from practically every civilized country in the world will be on exhibition. Of the exhibits from the United States, 25 per cent. will come from Connecticut.

Chief of Police Allan MacArthur received a postcard Friday morning from Judge Frank H. Foss, postmarked San Antonio, Texas, to the effect that he with his family would leave for Willimantic, April 29. No mention was made of the fact that Judge Foss was suffering from illness. The writer said that he wanted to be "remembered to all the boys."

Several thousands of dollars in taxes due on the grand list for 1923 are payable this month. Town Tax Collector Albert J. Piche is reminding people of the fact that there are only four days more remaining for settlement. Beginning May 1st a nine per cent. additional extra will be collected from delinquents.

The operator's license held by Timothy Shannahan, 46 Lewiston avenue, has been suspended from April 24, according to a notification received Friday by Chief of Police MacArthur from Robbins B. Stoeckel, state motor vehicle commissioner.

At the church house on Valley street the Brotherhood of the Congregational church entertained for Ladies' night Thursday evening. The program was furnished by George Channing Darling of Providence. Mr. Darling displayed great ability as a cartoonist, a reader, clay modeler and humorist, in his depiction of a theme "Humor and Art."

James Haggerty of this city has been elected judge advocate general by the state encampment of the G. A. R. Mr. Haggerty was also honored by being made an a delegate to the national convention to be held at Boston, the first week in August. The local delegation of the G. A. R. was royally entertained at Waterbury at a banquet which was attended by Governor Chas. Templeton and the common council of Watrebury.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith of Des Moines, Iowa, director of Christian citizenship of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union was the principal speaker at the W. C. T. U. jubilee meeting held Friday at the Methodist church.

The talk as given by Mrs. Smith centered on the prohibition situation as it now exists. One point which she brought out was that to have real enforcement of prohibition throughout the land voters must put into office men who are favorable to prohibition.

The meeting was the third and last of state meetings of the nation-state crusade jubilee gatherings of temperance workers in Connecticut. The others were in Stamford Wednesday and Norwich Thursday.

The Willimantic Union has spared no effort in making the meeting here a success and the work was rewarded with the presence of over one hundred and fifty delegates.

The church auditorium in which the sessions were held was beautifully decorated. The arch of the choir loft was bordered by a string of fifty golden bells representing the work of 50 years by loyal American women in the cause of temperance. The center bell was marked "1930" denoting the year when prohibition was adopted. Mrs. Mary B. Wilson of Hartford, state president of the Connecticut W. C. T. U. was in charge of the meeting. Guests of honor at the morning session included Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, Mrs. Alice C. Ropes of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. and Mrs. Caroline Buell of East Hampton, past state president, who occupied seats on the platform.

Following a brief address by Mrs. Wilson, the crusade hymn, "Give to the Winds Thy Fears," was sung by the assemblage and Miss Ines M. Brown read the crusade psalm.

Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead, pastor of the Methodist church, offered prayer which was followed by the singing of her own composition entitled The Connecticut Invocation, by Mrs. Dorothy Due, of Denton, Maryland, daughter of Mrs. Wilson.

Words of welcome were spoken by Mrs. Nellie A. Gager, of Willimantic W. C. T. U., Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead of the church, Mayor Hermisdas Dion of the city of Willimantic and Rev. F. F. Foshay of the Baptist church for the Willimantic Ministers' union.

Following this were greetings from the Windham County W. C. T. U., by Mrs. Maud L. Potter of Scotland, the state W. C. T. U., by Mrs. M. B. Wilson, the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., by Mrs. Alice G. Ropes of Boston, and the National W. C. T. U., by Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith.

The audience sang, Blest Be the Tie That Binds, and the guests, crumbers of the early days and recent times were presented.

Mrs. Jennie S. Scripture read the history of the Willimantic union in a most interesting manner. Windham county activities in 1874-75 were related by several delegates. The morning session adjourned for luncheon, with the singing of The Year of Jubilee Has Come.

At 2 o'clock the afternoon session opened with a group song, Christ for the World, followed by scripture reading and prayer by Rev. A. W. Clifford, pastor of Windham Center Congregational church. Fight the Good Fight was sung and the salute of the flag and the American Creed followed.

An address was then delivered by Mrs. Alice Ropes of Boston. Mrs. Esther S. Brown pleased with a well rendered harp solo.

The address by Mrs. Smith followed. She was heartily applauded at the conclusion of her talk. The afternoon meeting came to a close with a discussion on a phase of child welfare and a reading by Mrs. C. H. Beebe.

At 6 o'clock in the evening a banquet was served in the vestry of the church to the honored guests of the jubilee meeting and delegates. Short addresses were delivered in the nature of toasts and another excellent address was given by Mrs. Smith.

The program of the evening opened at 7:30 o'clock with hte singing of America the Beautiful, and a prayer by Rev. F. C. William, rector of St. Paul's church. A demonstration, Jubilee Bells, was given with the stirring address of the day, The Greater Task Ahead, by Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith. Forward, was the subject of another address by Albert E. Smith, general secretary of the Willimantic Y. M. C. A. The session closed with a hymn.

JEWETT CITY

Several trunks containing costumes and scenery for the K. of C. minstrels arrived at the local express office on Thursday and are without doubt the best ever used in a local production.

The rehearsals for the production come to a close this week with the dress rehearsal and the entire cast promises that the show will be one of the "peppiest" minstrel revues ever staged here, with something doing every minute.

Work upon the outdoor rifle range is to begin at once. It is expected that it will be completed within a few days and the members of the rifle club will then have an outdoor range within a few minutes' walk of the village, with a possible shooting range of from 50 up to and including 100 yards. All expense for the outdoor range, including ammunition and rifles is furnished by the War Department so that this should prove a popular attraction for local riflemen and hunters not interested in indoor shooting. The shooters are divided into three classes, Marksmen, Sharpshooter and Expert Rifleman. By doing this the beginner does not have to compete against the veteran rifleman. Suitable medals and emblems are given to anyone qualifying in the different classes.

That the time is not far distant when Jewett City Rifle club will have scene of its members representing the United States in international competition is an assured possibility, as four members of the local rifle club captured second, fifth, tenth and fifteenth places in the recent individual championship matches, the results, which have just been made public by the National Rifle Association headquarters at Washington, D. C. This is a remarkable showing when it is borne in mind that several thousand riflemen from all over the United States competed in this event. An effort is to be made to send five or more men from the local club to the national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, this fall.

Tickets for K. of C. minstrel exchanged Monday at Finn store at 8 a. m. (d. st. t.). No phone orders accepted.—adv.

One of the nicest strings of trout caught in many a day was exhibited in Carey's, Thursday evening. They were caught by "Bib" Leclair and Andrew McNicol with Byron Sheldon as guide, from the famous Yawbux Valley stream in the town of North Stonington. There were eighteen trout. The largest weighed a pound and was hooked by Mr. LeClaire. He is just breaking into the fishing sport and had to call on Mr. McNicol to help him land the fish.

Helen, the year old daughter of Fabian and Victoria Bush Klimaszewska died Wednesday and was buried Friday morning in St. Mary's cemetery. Hourigan Bros. had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Rev. Elmer Page will preach at the Jewett City Methodist church Sunday morning and Rev. A. H. Clement in the evening. Mr. Page will preach at Voluntown and Bethel in the afternoon.

The new standard time railroad and trolley schedule goes into effect Sunday at 3 a. m. and for Jewett City is as follows: Trains a. m., north, 5.03 and 8.03; p. m., north 2.35 and Sunday 4.33. Trains south, a. m., 10. 1, and p. m., 2.51, 7.31 and Sundays 8.03. Trolleys, a. m., north, 5.22, 7.19, 9.18 and 11.19; p. m., north 1.19, 3.19, 5.19, and 7.31 and Saturday and Sunday 9.18. Trolleys south, a. m., 6.03, 8.03, 10.12, p. m., 12.03, 2.03, 4.03, 6.03, 8.03. Saturdays and Sundays, 9.18. If clocks are set ahead one hour, this schedule should be set ahead one hour.

Pachaug Community club met on Thursday evening, 150 being present. The programme committee was Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reynolds, Ethel Morgan, Ethel Rood and Herbert Miller. The programme included readings by Frank Mell and Miss Bessie Burton, an accordian solo by Mr. Wallen, two solos by William Dealtrey, and selections by the Pachaug Male Quartette. The accompanists were Mrs. J. P. Richardson and Mrs. Harold Gear. Cake and coffee were served. The committee for the next meeting is Mr. and Mrs. Willis Morgan, Byron Kinney, Leon Young and Edith Tift.

About a dozen pupils accompanied Supt. F. H. P. Clement to Central Village Friday to observe the work in the high school. This was in progress from eleven until two thirty o'clock. It was Sub-Freshman Day at Plainfield High school.

Henry Tyler, who was found dead in New London Thursdy night, left Jewett City Monday, where he had been visiting his nephew, Daniel Morgan. He told the family that he had been in a hospital ten days sometime ago and spoke of suffering from indigestion. He came here to attend the funeral of George A. Haskell, being in the same regiment with the latter in the Civil war. This leaves only two living who were in this regiment. Mr. Tyler was born in Griswold in the Hopeville section of the town and a few years ago he was instrumental in having the tomb of General John Tyler, in Pachaug cemetery, put in good condition, and a service of a reminiscent nature was held there after the work was completed, Mr. Tyler reading a fine historical address. He attended the Six Church conferences in Jewett City and Pachaug, always if possible, and was much interested in all the town affairs. He leaves an aged sister, Miss Mary Tyler in Goffstown, N. H., and several nieces and nephews. His wife, who died about ten years ago, is buried in Mystic.

The Idle Word.

An idle word may be seemingly harmless in its utterance, but let it be fanned by passion, let it be fed with the fuel of misconception, of evil intention, or prejudice, and it will soon grow into a sweeping fire that will melt the chains of human friendship, that will burn to ashes many cherished hopes, and blacken more fair names than one.

Some Mexican Laws.

Certain Mexican states have an interesting law affecting burglars. The culprit in cases of petty larceny is made to repay the plaintiff by working for him so many days, the period varying according to the nature of the theft.

SUFFERED FOR NINE YEARS SAYS EMORY HINCKLEY

"I Had Stomach Trouble So Bad I Was Weak As a Kitten"—Gives Tanlac Credit For Recovery.

"For nine years," recently declared Emory J. Hinckley, well-known merchant, 128 S. Grant St., Scranton, Pa., "I had stomach trouble so bad nearly everything disagreed with me and if I hadn't liked milk no doubt I would have starved to death.

"Nervousness kept me awake most of every night and headaches and dizzy spells made my condition worse. Time after time I couldn't work for I was as weak as a kitten. I spent money right and left without results and did not know which way to turn.

"Finally my stepson insisted on TANLAC and to this day I have never been without a bottle and never expect to be. It built up my appetite to splendid proportions, absolutely ended my troubles and put me in vigorous health. TANLAC has prolonged my life—of that, I am convinced."

REPORT ON 20-MILE PARK DISTRICT

The Interior Department has recently issued a report by the Geological Survey on the Twentymile Park district of the Yampa coal field, in Routt and Moffat counties, northwestern Colorado. The Twentymile Park district includes only the southeastern part of this great field, but that is now its most important part, as it contains all the commercial mines that have been developed in the field. It is also generally regarded as containing the more valuable coals of the field, except the anthracite, which is found along the eastern margin of the field farther north, where, on account of the ruggedness of the surface, access to transportation lines is difficult.

Excellent Coal but Far From Transportation

The coal mines in the Twentymile district have been developed since the Denver & Salt Lake (Moffat) Railroad was extended into this district, in 1906. The coal has become widely and favorably known as an excellent fuel for both manufacturing and domestic use, but the development of mines has been greatly hampered by inadequacy of transportation facilities and by the fact that all the coal reaching the market had to be hauled up steep grades over one of the highest passes in the Rocky Mountains.

Scope of the Report

The report recently published, which was prepared by Marius R. Campbell, shows the outcrops of all of the more valuable coal beds or groups of beds and the location of mines and prospects, by which the outcrops are generally marked. Particular attention was given to coal beds of the middle and lower groups, for these are the only ones that are now being named on a commercial scale. The object of the work was first to determine the number, thickness, continuity, and geographical distribution of the beds and the quality of the coal in each bed. When this was done it was fairly easy to correlate beds in distant parts of the district, to predict where workable coal would be found in each bed, and to make an estimate of the available tonnage of coal in each section of land in the district.

Some Details Concerning the Coal Beds

The Wadge and the Wolf Creek coal beds of the middle group are remarkably regular in thickness and distribution, ranging in thickness from 5 to 30 feet, and the beds in the lower group are remarkably irregular in both thickness and distribution. On Oak Creek the Pinnacle coal bed is probably the most valuable bed of the group, and persistent efforts have been made to show that this bed is the one worked on Yampa River near the mouth of Indian Creek. However, the thick coal beds on Oak Creek break up and diminish in thickness toward the west, and coal bed No. 3, which overlies the Pinnacle, is the only valuable one in Dunkley Canyon. Hence, the Pinnacle bed is probably not present at the mouth of Indian Creek, the beds mined there being members of bed No. 3, on Oak Creek, which here has expanded into a group.

Report Shows Chemical Composition of the Coals

The report gives full information regarding the chemical composition of the coal and its heating value as determined by the Bureau of Mines. This value is compared with the heating values of competing or possibly competing coals, so that the consumer, if he cares to do so, may balance one coal against another and thus be able to select that which will give the greatest return for his money.

BREED THEATRE

The Net, a William Fox offering of mystery and thrills directed by J. Gordon Edwards comes to the Breed theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Edwards, whose previous Fox specials include The Queen of Sheba and Nero, has made the most of the vast romantic and adventurous material at his disposal. Suspense increases with the unfolding of each situation.

Barbara Castleton, portraying the leading feminine role of young Mrs. Norman, is convincing at all times, dividing honors with Raymond Bloomer in the part of her wayward young husband and Albert Roscoe, as the Man, the unknown.

The exteriors in this picture are particularly beautiful and the interiors at all times are distinguished by the taste that characterizes the homes of people who have always had wealth and know how to use it to the best advantage. Such artistic interiors are so seldom seen in pictures that we make it a point to comment upon.

The Net gets its title from the circumstances that close in tighter and tighter around the people in this picture. The story has to do with young Mrs. Norman unhappily married to a man who appreciates her only for the money she gives him to spend in a profligate way. She, however, wearying of his temper, his harshness, his irascibility leaves to go to her cousin, an artist in the city. Norman follows and in the cousin's handsome studio a display of temper and violence takes place that results in direct tragedy, when in comes the Man, a limp, sagging specimen of manhood who has lost his memory—how no one knows.

It is here that Director Edwards gives the story the twist that differentiates it from the general run. Inasmuch as the mystery, which is revealed near the end, shrouds the story from here on, we won't spoil your enjoyment by telling you, who, it's all about. Suffice it to say that the romantic element strives with the adventurous for supremacy, the suspense not slackening.

Today is the last showing of Scaramouche. Don't fail to see the greatest of all pictures, continous show today 1:30 to 10:15.

PALACE THEATRE

Less than ten minutes a cop, and two honest to goodness jewelry bandits to his credit, is the enviable record established by Herbert Rawlinson, the popular movie star, while actually engaged in making his latest Universal attraction, Jack O' Clubs.

During the filming of this picture, Rawlinson plays the part of a patrolman. A police precinct was filmed and Rawlinson bedecked himself in his uniform at that location. Before the last brass button had been properly placed an alarm was sounded. Herb lead a procession of ten cops on a dead run from the station house.

A jewelry store, two blocks away, had been robbed, and the cops didn't even stop to wait for the Black Maria.

Man-haters

A secret society of man-hating women is developing in the artistic centers of London, according to a psychic exponent. During a lecture on "The Great Menance of Ultra Feminism" he said that such a society had been formed and was operating in London, preaching doctrines of sex hatred and was planning to organize a campaign to make all men the slaves of women. He said the inveterate man haters aim at the complete subjugation of man by womankind. He further said that the converts to the movement were recruited in large stores, where they are combating men assistants, and also in hospitals where nurses are taught to undermine the doctors. A woman friend of his, he said, had been invited to a formal lecture given by a French woman on sex war, and found herself in a center of this man-hating society, where the lecturer declared that its aim was to keep men in subordinate positions, "just as men have kept women in slavery for centuries."

Evolution of Air Breathers.

In Silurian times an air-breathing life was forced on many creatures. When their native pools dried up everything could either breathe the air or suffocate. There was a high premium put on progressive evolution toward lungs, and a death penalty for those who held back. It was at this time that the ancesters of modern insects ceased to be bottom crawlers and became pre-eminently animals of the air. The air-breathing anthropods have now evolved so far that they have few water living relatives left. All insects respire free oxygen, even such aquatic forms as dragon fly larvae, whose gills are full of air instead of blood.

Wonderful Watch.

The nabob of Rampur has sent to London a watch for repair which, no doubt, is a unique specimen of its kind. The case is carved from a topaz, the crystal is a section of a diamond which is covered over with a section of an emerald. Small as the watch is it indicates seconds, minutes, hours, days, weeks and months. It is valued at $60,000.

Few Catholics in Iceland Now.

There were formerly in Iceland no fewer than 220 Catholic churches, many of them built of stone; but they were either destroyed or taken over by the Lutherans at the Reformation; and now there is only one small, dilapidated Catholic church in the whole country.

PALACE THEATRE

On Monday next, matinee and evening the famous Jimmie Evans Musical Revue will open a week engagement at the popular Palace in a musical melange of novelties combined with elaborate scenery and costumes presented by a company of 20 performers of unusual ability in the art of singing, dancing and trio harmony singing and headed by comedians of note, direct from 30 weeks at the best theatres in and around Boston.

The opening Revue is Hello Broadway and this production abounds in rich refined comedy, with a chorus of the best procurable on the revue stage this season. Miss Evelyn Parr the Prima Donna of the company possesses a voice of unusual range and power, Mr. Jimmie Evans the owner and principal comedian of this attraction is a comedian of the younger generation who is just briming over with rich refined humor. Mr. Tom Carroll is the other comedian with this attraction and who needs very little introduction to the theatre going public of Norwich. The cast of principals includes the very best dancers on the stage today. Miss Florence Pippin is a violinist of the first water. Mr. James Mack is the straight man who is also well known to the theatre going public of Norwich. Danny Cavanaugh is the Juvenile who has a beautiful tenor voice. Mr. Roy Ellis and Miss Virginia Bannon are the dancing team with this company. The Columbia Musical Trio, Miss Kitten Fraser is the soubrette. A complete change of program will be offered on Monday and Thursday. The same pre war prices will prevail for this company.

No. 13 is a lucky number insofar as Principal Pictures Corporation is concerned. In the cast of The Meanest Man in the World there's exactly thirteen prominent artists engaged to portray the stellar roles. The thirteen are Bert Lytell, Blanche Sweet, Bryant Washburn, Maryon Aye, Helen Lynch, Lincoln Stedman, Frank Campeau, William Conklin, Forrest Robinson, Victor Potel, Lionel Belmore, Wordo Crane and Frances Raymond. And there was not a mishap.

PALACE THEATRE

"One of the best acting companies I have ever had around me, is George Arliss' description of his supporting cast in The Man Who Played God, his latest photoplay feature which comes Sunday night to the Palace theatre under a United Artists Corporation release.

Ann Forrest, famous for her work in many big pictures, plays opposite the star as the wife of John Arlen, famous musician, the role enacted by Arliss.

Edward Earle steps from the heroic role of winner of a popularity contest in behalf of a great New York charity, to the part of "heavy" in this production. As Philip Stevens he makes love to Arden's wife, believing that she no longer cares for her musician husband.

Ivan Simpson has the part of servant to Arden, a difficult character, in that the player must show emotion while consistently suppressing it.

Effie Shannon as Arden's sister, has a sympathetic role that will endear her to motion picture audiences everywhere.

The child star, Miriam Battista, plays a waif of the streets with fine effect. The boy player, "Mickey" Bennett, assists as her brother. They are first found before a toy window gazing longingly at the treasures within.

Arden, won back to the sun light, also wonders in the fortunes of a young engaged couple, played by beautiful Mary Astor and Pierre Gendron. In this part of the story the performance of Margaret Seddon and J. D. Walsh as an old couple, befriended by Arden is strikingly appealing.

Also Comedies, Pathe reviews, Educational, Sing 'em Again, Aesop's Fables.

THE COVERED WAGON RECORD

The record achieved by The Covered Wagon at the Criterion theatre in Longacre Square, New York City, of a sodid year's run on March 10th, and which this week finishes 60 consecutive week's, a world's record, is unique in the one place of the theatrical world which makes the cinema art the great force it is in the life of the peoples of the earth. And it has not ceased its running in New York, it is like Tennyson's brook. The Human appeal and the delightful entertainment it affords is still drawing thousands each week to the Temple of Thespis in which it began rolling along in the greatest village square in the world—Longacre. Scarce a generation has passed since the first connected cinematographic came to the attention of the amusement world. It was scoffed at. It was derided. It was condemned. And by whom? Those who sat in the high places of the art of entertaining. But the people knew better. They knew what their hearts craved and what their minds visualized in the pleasures of the imagination. And behold today the outstanding theatrical record in historian's home is a cinema work. True it has an appeal beyond the shores of the Western Hemisphere. London and Paris, diversified in the national spirit of Saxon, Colt and Latin, love this picture The Covered Wagon.

The Covered Wagon will be seen at the Palace theatre, Norwich, 4 days beginning Sunday evening, May 4, twice daily thereafter, 2.30 and 8.15.

VELIE AUTO

F. E. Braddield, vice president of the Velie Motors Corporation, Moline, Illinois, is making a dealer survey through the southeastern section of the country. After visits to Louisville, Cincinnati and other points in that section, he reports that while the spring selling season is a little late, things are picking up quickly and dealers are in excellent condition to handle any sales situation. More than 40 new distributors and dealers have been added to the sales organization of the Velie Motors Corporation, Moline, Illinois, during the last 90 days. Points recently closed includes Columbus, Chicago, San Francisco and Charleston, W. Virginia. E. B. Chase, of Boston, has been named district representatives for the Velie Motors Corporation. Mr. Chase will have charge of the eastern territory which includes Boston and New York.

Reports of the Velie Motors Corporation show that during the first quarter of the present year eight distributors exceeded their factory sales quotas, while four exceeded 90 per cent of their quota.

STRAND THEATRE

Actual motion pictures taken on the western front at the cost of eleven members of the Signal Corps of the United States Army, will be shown at the Strand Theatre, next Thursday, Friday and Saturday under the auspices of the American legion of this city. The proceeds of the show will be used for the relief fund of the organization. The boys have undertaken a big responsibility in taking over the Strand theatre, but with the hearty cooperation of the membership the show will undoubtedly be one of the biggest successes ever put over by a veteran organization.

The name of this remarkable Signal Corps picture is "Powder River" and is the first and only authentic picture ever released by the U. S. government as official. The scenes were shot on the sectors surrounding Cantigny, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, and the Argonne Forest; and covers the activities of every division that saw action during these great drives. Every branch of our service is seen doing their share in making the world safe for Democracy.

When you see on the screen hair-raising action—action that meant death for so many of the participants—when line strong young men are seen to rush forward and suddenly crumple in a heap—you realize that you are watching one of the greatest dramas ever enacted—the first time in history that the happenings of a war were preserved in visual form just as they occurred. "Powder River" showing as it does the soldiers as they worked, played, and fought, is a powerful drama of real life that every one should see.

STRAND

What a thrill it would give John Greenleaf Whittier, dean of New England poets, if he could return to earth for one immortal hour to see the film version of his poetic gem, "The Barefoot Boy," which has been brought to the screen with such lavish and sincere realism by David Kirkland, master producer!

How delighted he would be to see "the barefoot boy with cheek of tan" of whom he wrote so fondly and lovingly in the poem which has endeared him to thousands of children! He would be charmed with Frankie Lee's charming interpretation of the role, and he would be sure to say that John Bowers is ideal as "the barefoot boy" grown up!

"The Barefoot Boy" coming to the Strand Theatre on Monday for a three days' run, is a thoroughly delightful and charming film version of the exquisite poem written over fifty years ago.

BROADWAY

Pola Negri in a sympathetic role in a picture with a happy ending. So we find the screen's foremost emotional actress in the Herbert Brenon Paramount production of "Shadows of Paris," which opens at the Broadway theatre tomorrow night. Adolphe Menjou, Charles de Roche and Huntly Gordon are featured in principal roles.

Miss Negri, as Claire, is an Apache in love with Fernand, who goes to war and is reported killed. Raoul, a statesman meets Claire and falls in love with her. She conceals her Apache traits, posing as a Polish war widow. She marries Raoul but frequently returns to her Apache haunts and helps her friends to secure further booty from her rich friends in the upper classes.

Each succeeding Negri picture goes its predecessor one better, but "Shadows of Paris" goes "The Spanish Dancer" two better—in other words it's far superior to anything the continental star has ever previously attempted.

Short subjects will round out the program.

First German Lutheran Church

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Next Thursday, May 1, is the date selected for the annual banquet of the members of the Danielson Rod and Gun club. The membership of this organization includes representatives of all the towns and villages in this section of Eastern Connecticut and it is expected that there will be a big gathering of them here, Thursday evening next. Up to Friday afternoon members of the committe were not prepared to make announcements of the special features that are being arranged for the affair, but it is promised that there will be something worth while. The committee in charge of the arrangements is made up of C. E. Storer, John B. Bassett, Sidney P. Marland, John F. Gardner, Jr., and Henry I. Lague.

Killingly voters, cut in force for this week's special town meeting, gave a demonstration of the fact that this is not a propitious time for asking the town to spend money. Appropriation matters, excepting for essentials, seem to be under the ban just now. It is significant of the times. The individual has tightened up his purse and he reflects this attitude in voting on the spending, or proposals of spending town money.

The votes were positive, too Thursday evening. A majority that was convincing said that no money shall be spent just now for the projects the meeting considered. The proposal to audit the books of the town over a period of five years past appeared to be doomed to defeat from the time of its prposal. This appeared to be due chiefly to the facts that a general opinion exists that the audit would not reveal anything of special importance, yet involved entering into an agreement to spend much money, possibly several times more than the amount specified in the resolution on which the meeting passed. If the work was to be done thoroughly and by competent auditors.

The meeting also brought public expression of East Killingly's attitude toward spending money for road improvements. East Killingly people who were in the meeting made it clear that they cannot see their way to vote for road improvements in Danielson while their community gets along without an improved highway leading to other central parts of the town, and the people of Danielson do not quarrel with them over this feeling, for it is granted as being justified, for will the residents of other centers of the town oppose their attitude.

On the other hand, it is generally conceded that Broad street is badly in need of attention. The project to improve it happened to come up at an inopportune time and ran into more opposition than ordinarily would be the case. Broad street is one of the principal residential streets of the borough and takes care of heavy traffic. The wear and tear of this has left the street in a bad way. It likely will receive attention during the spring or summer season, though it may not be sought in accordance with a plan that has been advocated.

As to getting an improved highway to South Killingly, that is a matter receiving the attention of the selectmen. No funds are available just now from the state aid fund, but it is possible that some arrangement may be effected under which the work can be done this year. It is generally held that East Killingly is entitled to the road and that the wait for it has been amply long.

Henry Breault and Arthur Fournier, both of Putnam, were injured Thursday evening when the motorcycle on which they were riding was in collision with a Blue Ribbon line bus operating in passenger service between Providence and Moosup, via the Fairbanks hill road and Oneco and Sterling.

The machines crashed just over the Rhode Island line near the James Corner place, a mile east of Oneco. Breault and Fournier were riding toward Providence on the motorcycle and the bus was heading toward Oneco. The motorcycle was coming down a direct route from Sterling and was in the crash with the bus just before the big machine was about to head into another state road that goes over to Oneco. Fournier and Breault were hurled off the motorcycle when it hit the bus, the cycle going under the big machine.

The men were taken to the Day Kimball hospital for treatment. Neither is seriously hurt. Fournier, who suffered a scalp wound, was discharged from the hospital Friday afternoon. Breault will remain as a patient for a few days.

Tax Collector James R. Walsh is now engaged in collecting the money for the town of Killingly on the list he levied. Mr. Walsh will be engaged with this work until May 21, which will be the last day for paying without being liable to the penalties for delinquency. That the taxpayers may be accommodated in accordance with a custom long established, Mr. Walsh has named days on which he will be at the different villages of the town to do collecting. Because of the lower tax rate in force this year, as compared with last year, taxpayers will find it somewhat less of a burden to settle their tax bills with the town. The rate this year is 15 mills, as compared with 20 1-2 mills in 1923.

Following are the newly elected officers of Minnetexit Hook and Ladder company of the fire department: Captain, Vincent Cartland; lieutenant, George O. Thomas; secretary, Howard M. Withey; treasurer, Harry W. Clarke; drivers, H. W. Withey, Tyler Andrews, Edward Cloutier. All members of the company are named on the sick visiting committee.

From among the papers of James T. Burlingame, recently deceased, W. S. Short has come into possession of a receipt signed by his uncle, Levi Short, from Fenner Burlingame, father of James W. Burlingame, for $56 for teaching school for four months in this town during the winter of 1856. Mr. Short recalled Friday that his uncle died later in Andersonville prison, as a Union soldier who fell into the hands of the Confederates during the Civil War.

In these later days, when, by the way, teachers are not overpaid, $56 for teaching school for four months seems like a ridiculously small sum, but that was what Mr. Short received in what was a school district of Killingly 66 years ago.

Dr. A. B. Coates of Hartford will preach at the morning and evening services at the Baptist church Sunday.

PUTNAM

Two new divorce petitions have been filed with the clerk of the Windham county superior court. Mrs. Isabelle S. Pawlac asks for a decree from her husband, Herkulan Pawlac, on the ground of intolerable cruelty. She is residing in Thompson while the husband is in Greenwich. The couple were married in 1909.

Mrs. Nelson Curtiss of Killingly is seeking a dissolution of her marriage from her husband, now a resident of Griswold, alleging that he has been cruel in his treatment of her. She was Miss Ines Burr and was married, November 10th, 1902.

It became known Friday that the receivers of the Manhasset Manufacturing Company have been authorized to make a payment of $642,747.11 to the company's creditors. The court specifies that this money shall be paid to B. C. Chase, Jr., R. B. Cox, H. B. Demming and E. M. Howe, who comprise a committee representing the nearly 200 creditors of the company. There are claims against the company amounting to approximately $5,000,000 so that the present authorized payment is approximately ten per cent. In all probability further payments will be made but the amount is only problematical at this time. When the receivers applied for the court order it was stated to the court that they had $800,000 on hand.

Henry Baker, of Abington, is at the Day Kimball with a badly fractured leg, caused by a tree falling on him. Baker was engaged in chopping the tree in woods in Eastford. He was an experienced woodsman but did not take into consideration the high wind blowing. The force of the wind caused the tree to fall unexpectedly pinning Baker to the ground.

After he had freed himself Baker was alone and the nearest house was over a mile away. He was forced to crawl a mile and a half before his shouts attracted attention. He did this by crawling a short way, dragging his fractured leg as best he could, stoping for a rest and to ease the pain, and then starting on. As soon as aid reached him he was rushed to the hospital where the fracture was reduced.

It may be possible that some practical joker is sprinkling a liquid of peculiar effect in the Danielson borough's water supply. It may also be possible that there really and truly are freak wild animals at large in the rural sections surrounding Danielson. Then there is the possibility that the ghost of the historic wolf killed by the renowned General Israel Putnam, after it had destroyed many sheep belonging to the neighboring farmers, has wandered forth from the historic wolf den just over the Brooklyn line in Pomfret, and is unable to find its way back to its rock-bound cavern.

All of which is a forerunner of that which is to say that according to the story Brought back to the borough on the Quinebaug a peculiar looking animal seen resembled a beaver, but wasn't, looked something like a wolf, but wasn't, might have been a bobcat, but wasn't. What it was or is those who saw it do not know; those to whom it has been described are unable to determine. A hunting party was made up and scoured the territory where the stranger was seen in the hopes of getting a close-up of the creature. The party returned registering failure. This is some evidence that the animal is not flesh and blood but has returned, a specter from some animal world beyond, and is capable of being seen and making its if invisible.

One evening this week, the second story goes, some trout fishermen returned to the borough. What their baskets contained after a day on the brook was not asked, being of secondary importance, to the story three of the five told of seeing a strange creature, just as day was breaking, between the towns of Brooklyn and Canterbury. It was described as a fungi freak not heretofore known to exist even in picture books. The stranger, according to the fishermen, crossed the road seventy-five feet ahead of them. The three men who saw it distinctly say it looked like a red fox but had the dome of a raccoon. Apparently it was cutting up capers or doing its morning's daily dozen, for it, according to the trio of fishermen, wa-ked across their pathway and the nighway on its hind feet, no shoes, stockings or goloshes; nor did it wear a macintosh or carry an umbrella although it was a misty, moisty morning. Arrived at the opposite side of the road it made a noise between that of a quacking duck and the click of rolling dominoes, and doing a slight shimmy, disappeared in the underbrush. And, added mystery, it left no track in the roadway where it had just crossed, more evidence that specires from the animal boneyard are at large.

The stories have been repeated with such persistence, and even set forth in the adjoining column, that they can not be let go unnoticed and unsung. Mayhap it all portends a real estate boom in the rural sections or the influx of absent-minded professors of the higher schools of learning on notoriety bent, devoting the years of their lives to the discovery of new species.

Really desiring to make discoveries yet unknown to science it would seeming be well for them to make Danielson their first objective and then, fortified and enlightened by the tales being unfolded, hie themselves to the forests where the unknown specie that looks like an animal and talks like a duck, is said to hibernate.

Meantime an announcement that the borough's water supply is being examined for foreign substances, or that an edict of search, if not seizure, of all thermos bottles carried by Danielson fishermen, is not wholly unexpected.

Miss Helen Cronin has returned to her studies at Mt. St. Vincent college on the Hudson, after spending the Easter recess at her home in Danielson.

A Royal Love Affair

Prince Nicholas, of Roumania, very much in love with Princess Nafalda, of Italy, whom he is unable to marry because King Victor Emmanuel, her father, desires her to marry the Crown Prince of Belgium. It is causing considerable attention as the pair of lovers are known to be very much attached to each other.

well received in their offering of a three act drama, "Children of Fear," at the Bradley theatre, Friday night. The piece was written, staged and acted by members of the student body. The audience showed its appreciation of the situations and climaxes by generous applause.

Although grappling irons have been used and a constant patrol has been kept along the banks of the Quinebaug river since Wednesday afternoon, the waters of the river have failed to give up the body of William H. Boisoneau, Jr., who was drowned Wednesday in the swollen stream, into which he slipped while throwing stones.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jarvis have with them their son, Fred, a pupil in a Hartford school.

Funeral services for Mrs. Frank Provost were held at St. Mary's church Friday morning, requiem high mass being sung by Rev. Charles F. Bedard. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. Mrs. Provost was taken ill while in Florida and came home by automobile. She was taken to the Day Kimball hospital, but a few days before her death was taken to her home. She had been in poor health for some time. She leaves her husband and three children.

Henry Breault and Arthur Fournier, of this city were on their way to Arcadia, R. I. Thursday night when their car was in collision with a Danielson Providence bus. Both men were somewhat hurt and were taken to the Day Kimball hospital where their cuts and bruises were dressed. The front of the was badly damaged. Breault was unconscious when he arrived at the hospital but revived quickly. His injuries consisted of a badly cup lip and lacerated face, besides abrasions on the legs. Fournier's injuries were chiefly lacerations of the scalp.

MYSTIC

The fifth anniversary of the organization of Rev. Father F. J. Council, No. 1943, Knights of Columbus, was observed Thursday evening in Columbus hall with a banquet, followed by dancing. The hall was beautifully decorated with flowers, flags, ferns and palms, and the following menu was served by a caterer from Stonington: Chicken salad, lobster salad, potato salad, cold sliced ham, olives, pickles, rolls, ice cream, cake and coffee. About 150 were present. James D. Galvin was toastmaster and the speakers were Judge Cornelius C. Costello, who made a fine address, and Rev. Father W. J. Fitzgerald, who spoke most interestingly. A vocal solo by Treffly Morin was much enjoyed, as was a violin solo by G. Victor Grinnell, and selections by the Squadrito brothers were pleasingly rendered. Following the banquet, dancing was enjoyed. Grinnell's orchestra furnished music. The committee having the affair in charge was: Chairman, Thomas Squadrito, George McKenna, E. E. Donahue, Treffly Morin, John Mahoney and G. C. Bliven. The present membership of the council is about 150 and it is expected that twenty new members will be taken in at the next meeting of the council, the first Thursday in May. Many compliments were paid those who made the arrangements for the very successful anniversary celebration.

In accordance with changes in railroad time and the arrival and departure of the mails and the adoption of daylight saving time by other communities in this section, Mystic residents will again fall in line and conduct their affairs on the new time. The churches, with the exception of the Baptist church, will lead off Sunday by holding their services one hour earlier than heretofore, and on Monday the bank, the industries, stores and schools of the village will operate on the new time. While timepieces in public places are required by law to be run on standard time, most local individuals change their clocks and watches to conform to the daylight saving time. Some interesting ways of managing have come to light since daylight saving time first went into effect, one man having equipped his clock with two hour hands, one to indicate standard time and the other daylight saving; and one enterprising woman wore two watches, one on each wrist, one showing standard time and the other daylight saving.

so. Following the business session there was a social and refreshments were served.

Katcha Koo, oriental musical play, was presented Thursday afternoon and evening at the Broadway school by the Stonington High school students who gave the performance in Stonington Wednesday afternoon and evening. The play was well presented before an appreciative audience and was also a financial success.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Burdick and Mrs. Magnus Folck of North Stonington were callers here Thursday.

Mrs. Horace Frink is recovering satisfactorily from a recent surgical operation.

Miss Esther Horton has returned from a visit with relatives in Providence.

Miss Lucy A. Kellogg of New London is the guest of her nieces, Misses Lucy B. and Mary S. Kellogg.

Mrs. Annie D. Gates and Miss Kariska S. Gates have been in New York this week.

Mrs. Frederic Denison has returned from New York. Friends of Mr. Denison are pleased to know that the operation on his eye was successful, that he is recovering steadily and hopes to be home soon.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Congregational church is to have repairs made on the parish house over which they have an oversight. Some redecorating is to be done among other improvements. On account of this work being done, the annual May breakfast given by the Congregational people will be omitted this year. This May breakfast has been given for many years.

The last in the series of lectures in the world service week program at the Methodist church was given Friday evening, the subject being The Christian Stewardship, and was given by the pastor, Rev. J. G. Sallis, illustrated with the stereopticon.

Mrs. Annie E. M. Brown, who has been spending the winter at the home of Mrs. George D. Stanton, is to open her home, corner of Denison avenue and Washington streets, the first of the month.

Dr. G. S. B. Leonard is a business visitor in Waterbury.

Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Osborne and Mrs. Osborne's mother, Mrs. Huggins, have been guests of relatives on Long Island this week, the trip being made by automobile.

The Union Baptist church is to adopt the change in time Sunday, May 4th, the services tomorrow being on standard time.

PLAINFIELD

Friday, sub-freshman day was observed at the Plainfield High school, when eighth grade pupils from Plainfield, Sterling, Jewett City, Moosup, Voluntown, Blackhill, Wauregan, Pond Hill, Central Village and the Green Hollow Grammar school visited the high school. The arrangements were made by a committee from the High School faculty, Chester Neilson, chairman, Miss Mary Mahoney and Miss Natalie Hallock. During the forenoon, and part of the afternoon, the visiting pupils were shown through the high school building, by pupils from the school, selected by the committee. They were allowed to visit the classes which were in progress at the time, also to hear some of the recitations. A half hour recess was held at noon, during which time the visitors were shown some of the methods of physical training used in the school, after which the regular luncheon period was called, and lunches were served to pupils and visitors at the lunch counter which is being run in the Domestic Science Laboratory by the members of the Home Economics classes, under the supervision of Miss Natalie Hallock, the instructor in the subject. During the last recitation period, an assembly was held in the auditorium of the school, with Chester Neilson, chairman of the committee in charge. The program for the assembly was as follows:

Selection High School Orchestra
Hymn School
Scripture reading
Star Spangled Banner, followed by the Flag Salute.
Violin Solo, airs and variations Miss Florence Leach
Piano Selections Miss Agnes Allard
Vocal Solo, Pal O' My Dreams Miss Mae Healey
Address, Education and the Life Career Motive, Prin. John L. Chapman

The event was considered wholly successful, and it is hoped by the authorities that it will become a regular event of the school since it gives the sub-freshmen a glimpse of High school life, also acquaints them with the High School building. Nearly 100 pupils visited the school and Superintendent Chapman in his address, stated several reasons why all of them should try to carry their education further, also stated that he hoped to see a large number of those present at that time in the high school next year.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lamothe were in Norwich Friday.

Lee Raney was salt water fishing recently, near Narragansett Pier and had very good luck, bringing home 135 flatfish, with which he regaled many of friends.

The meeting of the Woman's Guild of the Congregational church, which was to have been held Thursday has been postponed to Wednesday, April 30. A fine program has been arranged for this meeting, in charge of Mrs. William Harvey.

Beginning Monday, April 28, the time schedule of the high school, will change. The high school session is to begin at 8 a. m., and to close at 1.30 p. m. This change was made necessary by the change of time on the railroad, since so many of the high school pupils go to school by trolley. The change was made mostly for the benefit of those coming from Plainfield and Jewett City since the continuation of the old time schedule would necessitate the pupils from those towns, and others in their vicinity losing two hours each day, one in the morning, between the time that the trolley arrived in Central Village, and the time that school opened, and the other between the time that the school closed, and the trolley could be taken. The new plan was referred to the pupils, and the general sentiment was in favor of the change.

At the Carpet Grounds, Moosup, there will be an interesting baseball game this (Saturday) afternoon, when the Plainfield High school team plays a team of former baseball stars of this village, who will play under the name of "Old Timers." The battery for the Old Timers has been kept a secret, but the High School battery will probably be Allard and Bibeault. Bibeault has recovered to some extent from the injuries received in the LaSalle game a few weeks ago, pitching three innings in the game with Bartlett High last Wednesday, and pitching a very good game, in consideration of his condition in which his arm was.

IF THE BILL IS VETOED.

When both houses of congress agree upon the bonus bill, which they will have no difficulty in doing, and it has been submitted to the president, no one has been told what he will do with it. He hasn't committed himself in so many words. He hasn't said I will veto such a bill or I will not veto such a bill. All there is to go by is what he has had to say concerning the bonus, and that gives ground for the belief that he will apply his veto. He certainly has the best of reasons for any such action.

A veto will mean that the bonus would go back to congress again, there to be acted upon by each house to determine whether to sustain or to override the veto. There must be a two-thirds vote in order to nullify a veto.

From the size of the vote it has been maintained that there would be no question of such action in the lower house. In the senate it has been claimed that there was sufficient support for a bonus to accomplish it.

It is to be remembered that the bonus has been up for action before and that it was previously passed by congress. President Harding refused to approve it and his disapproval was sustained. There were those who were in favor of a bonus but who were not in favor of it to the extent of overriding a presidential veto.

Whether that situation prevails today there may be a chance to find out. In the senate the vote showed 67 for the bonus to 17 against. That means that if four of those who supported the bill should change their vote, because they are unwilling to vote to override a veto, the measure would fail.

Members of the senate must realize what an opposition exists to the burdening the country with any such expenses, which must be regarded as only the beginning of more similar efforts. It is to be hoped that the president will declare himself as being against the legislation and thus give congress a chance to reconsider what it is forcing upon the country when the demand is for relief instead of additional burdens.

PROTECTING ARBUTUS.

Professor Rogers of Lawrence college in Wisconsin has issued an appeal for the protection of the trailing arbutus. He points to the fact that every year thousands of people make great inroads upon that dainty spring flower to such an extent that it is already disappearing from large sections of the country, and voices the belief that it can now be saved only by the enactment of laws for its protection quite the same as game is protected. Characterizing it as being "wild as a hawk and cannot be tamed" the preservation of this attractive little flower seems dependent upon its protection in its native haunts.

It was many years ago that it became evident in Connecticut to lovers of trailing arbutus, and wild plant life in general, that something must be done for its protection if it was going to be saved from extermination. Connecticut knew that it was being dug up, pulled up and destroyed and the result was the adoption of legislation which provides that "Every person who shall willfully destroy, pull up, tear up, or dig up any trailing arbutus from the land of another, or who shall sell, expose for sale or purchase, or have in his possession any trailing arbutus with the roots or the underground stems attached, taken from land not owned or occupied by him, shall be fined not more than $10."

Raising an arbutus patch never brought any consideration for the preservation of the plants. It was a case of temporarily satisfying the craze for a clump of the flowers regardless as to whether there would be any another year or not. Connecticut was forced into doing just what the college professor of botany in Wisconsin says that state now needs to do.

Wild life, whether plant or animal, is not able to maintain itself in many instances against the overpowering influences and activities of admirers, who permit temporary pleasure to eclipse the problem as to the future. Protective laws may not prevent the destruction of much trailing arbutus each year but they help to prevent the wanton waste.

DR. HELFFERICH'S REMOVAL.

When Dr. Karl T. Helfferich was killed in a railroad wreck in Switzerland there was removed one of Germany's prominent figures. Dr. Helfferich has been responsible in a large degree for putting and keeping Germany where it is, so that it is not surprised that the German press is deeply divided in regard to him. There is no denying his ability but it is not hard to show that he employed it in a manner detrimental to its best interests.

This is understood when it is recalled that Dr. Helfferich was close to the former kaiser, was of much influence during the war, was responsible for the transportation of people out of territory occupied by the German, had a hand in the submarine warfare and stood for policies which brought about Germany's defeat, even though he had maintained during the hardships of the war that Germany would be handsomely repaid by the reparations it would collect.

So confirmed a monarchist was he that he never abandoned his determination see such a government restored. He was an opponent of the peace treaty, fought the republic, did his best to block the various governments and was one of the most determined that Germany should never pay the reparations which it promised.

It is quite evident that his great loss as a politician is going to be felt by the nationalists and not by the present government. He was a leader in finances, and some of his genius in this direction had been diverted to the relief of his country, but here again he was so bound up in his determination that Germany should do only one thing that for the most part he handicapped rather than helped.

That he should be removed by death at a time when Germany is about to participate in an important election, and is about to deal with the Dawes commission report, can in no way be interpreted as being an embarrassement to the republic. It means the ending of a relentless opponent.

BORAH'S SPEECH.

There was no backing or filling in what Senator Borah had to say to the senate this week in regard to taxation. However much opinions may differ with him on some questions, it is evident that he has hit the nail on the head in regard to the great amount of extravagance and the need of placing a check on the bad habit of rash expenditures.

It is not simply what the indebtedness may be at the present time but what it promises to be in the short time between now and when congress winds up its session. When the Idaho senator points out that the national and state debt amounts up to the total of $32,000,000,000 at the present time and says that it may go to $36,000,000,000 or $40,000,000,000 before adjournment is taken it means a too rapid rise in indebtedness under peace time conditions.

The time for the consideration of such a situation is before it is too late to remedy it rather than after the harm has been done. It is some time since it was evident that the time had been reached when debt reduction instead of debt increase was due. Senator Borah doesn't hesitate to say that changed policies should be made effective and what he had to say about the reduction of debt and the cutting of taxes was wholeheartedly in support of the policies of the administration.

When he directs his efforts against the wasteful extravagance of government he has good ground for his statements. Congress will do well if it takes home to itself the full meaning of his speech and governs itself accordingly. Senator Borah voiced a sentiment that has been expressed in many ways throughout the country.

JOHNSON'S DELAYED ACTION.

The decision reached by Senator Johnson of California to close his campaign for the republican presidential nomination must be regarded as a good one, though too long delayed.

Senator Johnson gives as the reason for his action the failure of his voice and his run down physical condition. Those are as good as anything, but the real reason of course is that he has no chance and has and none for a long time, as the primary results from week to week have revealed.

It is surprising that such a keen observer of political conditions and one so deeply involved in the study of results in one state after another, should have been unable or unwilling to admit the corn long before this. When North Dakota turned against him it was a warning he could not have missed. When he barely squeezed through in South Dakota and then proceeded to lose Illinois, Michigan and Nebraska by overwhelming pluralities he should not have required the primary contest in New Jersey, or the forthcoming ones in Ohio and Indiana, to have clearly shown him that he had no chance.

But for this late decision he could have been trying for the impossible, since the majority of delegates in the Cleveland convention are already against him. To keep plunging his head against that wall of opposition, which has been steadily accumulating strength, would have been the height of folly. In withdrawing Senator Johnson has done the wise thing. The only trouble is that it ought to have been done a long time ago.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

The individual is a necessary factor in the creation of institutions. In fact there would be no institutions if there had been no men. And yet every day is showing that while men are passing, that is, the very men who seem to be the life of some institutions, yet the institution continues as though nothing had happened. It pursues the even tenor of its way without a single ripple as though there had been no anxiety for its welfare. Three of our noble presidents have been slain by cowardly assassins. At the time being we felt that the Union would be shattered, but it wasn't; it didn't even tremble. When God has something for institutions to do, he finds a way to do it, and with whatever changes we have to meet on the part of men, God lives and stabilizes our losses. A recollection of this fact ought to help us.

There is a law on the statute books of many states—and it surely is a most beneficent law—that woman cannot work more than eight hours a day in any form of business where they labor for wages. No really sane person can dispute the wisdom of such a law. As a rule women do not possess the same degree of physical strength as men, and if the law is more and more becoming universal that an eight-hour day is long enough for men it is most decidedly long enough, if not too long, for women. But how about the poor women in the kitchen who are up and at it not long after daybreak, and who do not get any wages, and who keep at it for nearly twice eight hours in the twenty-four? Connect human ingenuity devise something that will lift this woman out of her abject drudgery? She cannot enjoy this world as God intended if her energies are worn out to a frazzle. Elevate the workshop all you please, but don't overlook the kitchen.

The quandary that presented itself to Hamlet (who was insane) was "to be or not to be." The problem that looms up before our young men today (who presumably are quite sane) is shall it be music or ladies for entertainment on Sunday evenings. Or, to state the question in the up-to-date language of the hour; shall it be radio or rouge? Remember that it does not indicate a Hamlet condition of mind if our young men are more carried away with radio than rouge. Probably there is no glaring sin in rouge, it is simply a very expensive luxury judging from the vast quantities consumed. No doubt that both are fascinating. That radio is extremely so is well-known to those who have dabbled with it, and if static conditions can be controlled, the fascination is bound to increase at least ten fold. And when this great day arrives rouge will end up in the old ladies home of corkscrew curls and wrinkles.

When the writer of these paragraphs was somewhat younger (say about fifteen years ago when he was in his early twenties) there was a very popular song entitled, "There's Music in the Air." Most of us then used to think so when we ourselves were singing. In other words, when we opened our tiny mouths and belched forth what self-consciousness considered melody. High C is not reached quite so clearly as we saw it then. But even if our ancient voices are getting a little thin and sharp, the world is not deprived of celestial melody. There is still "music in the air" and the channel of its conveyance is radio, and isn't it a perfect marvel? If the air can convey one sound from one place at one time isn't it reasonable to suppose that it can broadcast all sounds from all places at all times? And when it does that it will not be exactly "music in the air." It will be like a chorus of all the "has-beens" from Adam down.

The papers told us a short time since that a woman was discovered in New York pulling her husband around the house in a trunk. The only apparent reason why he so meekly submitted to the insult was because he was dead. We are told that the people of the place where it happened were horrified, and it must be admitted that is was not a very dignified thing for a woman to do, besides it set a bad example for other women, and if the practice became general it might tend to make men scarce. But when we get down to brass tacks, is it any worse for a woman to pull her husband around after he is dead than before? There are lots of women who not only drag their husbands around before they die, but actually mop the floor up with them, and nobody sheds any tears. Isn't it a great deal worse because the man knows it and feels the humiliation of it? But after he is dead he is quite indifferent to whether he is dragged around in a trunk or by the nose.

No mere vital problem is before the American people today than that of immigration. This is not a static problem, but one that is constantly changing in its phases. Years ago when this country was very raw and crude the type of immigrant called for was the man of brawn. It was the man who had the brute strength of a horse. It was the man whose biceps were as hard and tough as wrought iron. What there was above the tips of his ears could be thrown in as waste material. If a man only had strong arms they were willing to tolerate whatever brain capacity he had. The day of mere bull strength has had its inning and has passed. The real value of the immigrant today is measured by what the Creator has posited in the top of his head and put into his heart. The university graduate looms up a bit bigger than the clodhopper. Again I say that the viewpoint has changed.

There is still another angle of the problem at which we ought to look. That the old Mayflower blood of the early pilgrims is getting watery is conceded by the racial anatomist. Investigators tell us that this type of man is headed toward degeneracy. Therefore what is needed today is the infusion of new blood. But we don't want too much of it for that would give us blood pressure. Blood pressure from too much foreignism would be as disastrous as too little blood from old stock Americanism. Therefore congress has as much right to limit the number and character of its aliens, as it has to nourish the condition of its natives. Let Washington speak loud enough to be heard around the world: "We will not admit crooks, idiots, paupers or illiterates. We are in a position to select those whom we want." When the transmission of blood is necessary to save a patient it is only the blood of the strongest that is selected.

An item has recently appeared in public print that radio is keeping ten millions of our people at home nights who used to patronize places of entertainment. This may be only a wild guess rather than a carefully ascertained fact. But there is no doubt but that the number interested today in radio runs up into the millions and that they stay at home. From this there will evidently come a great benefit, and that is a larger cultivation of the home spirit, and America needs nothing more today than this. I am saying nothing against outside entertainment in the abstract, but this American habit of ours of swallowing one's supper and then rushing out to gratify a feverish craving for excitement needs some heroic setback and radio is doing the trick. Cultivating the home instinct is a powerful factor in the salvation of society.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Replying to Mr. Montgomery Again.

Mr. Editor: After reading Mr. Montgomery's diatribe or sermon or by whatever name it may properly be called, we deem it advisable to add some information as well as amusement for your readers, who already most likely see an example of Goldsmith's tutor, who "in arguing, too, the parson owned his skill, for e'en when vanquished he could argue still."

Referring to the Kreutzer Sonata, a book Mr. Montgomery declared as pure, if not more so, than parts of the Scriptures, but tells us nothing that is in it, we would turn the question with him—that being his chief form of discussion—to ask how many men in Oneco, or in Plainfield, he knows beside himself, who have read the book?

As the book did little harm, being little read, we will be excused for stating that it was the tale of a supposed domestic tragedy, in which a Russian nobleman, who was insanely suspicious of his wife's intimacy with her music tutor, came back in a brain storm of jealousy from a journey he had undertaken and stabbed her to death. After that, if we recall correctly, he lit a cigar and coolly waited his arrest by officers of the law. The whole affair is almost too sickening to read and might be a thrilling subject for a picture film. We are ignorant of whether showmen have had the nerve or audacity to screen it.

Other suggestions, about birth-control, are blemishes in the book. We never inquired into the real charges affecting its ban, but we knew it should have been condemned as a libel on the chastity of the Russian home.

Mr. Troland has no disrespect for Unitarians; he has known good men of that faith, who were not presidents. A great American statesman said he would "rather be right than be president." We assent, but we want to be understood that we do not rank a man high who does not preach doctrine he professes and is salaried for. Jesus surely taught love, even of our enemies; but he also taught us to hate sin and sham. Mr. Montgomery now discloses the fact that the Bible he studies is neither the Protestant authorized version, nor the standard Roman Catholic one. Here, again we mark our point. Mr. Troland was 16 years old when Mr. Montgomery's Bible was coming wet from the press, and he confesses ignorance of it, with no shame. At that time, he had a fair knowledge of the canonical books, from Genesis to Revelation, and has tried to add to that, more systematically, since.

Mr. Troland does not profess to know everything, but what he professes to know he does know.

JOHN TROLAND.

Norwich, April 25, 1924.

HOW MANY FARMERS SAVED THEMSELVES

Shifts from wheat production into dairying, poultry, swine, corn, alfalfa and leguminous crops in general have enabled scores of farmers in the middle west and northwestern states to cut their losses and get their farming operations on a profitable basis in the last few years. Many cases of successful readjustment in farm production plans have been reported to the United States department of agriculture by county agents. The reports cover 302 counties in Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington. They tell of cuts in wheat acreage, replacement of beef cattle herds by dairy herds, progress in poultry production, development of definite crop rotations, and expansion in the production of flax, soy beans, sweet clover, sugar beets, garden truck, and hay.

One typical instance is that of three brothers named Devosier, who were formerly large grain growers on a three-quarter section farm in Red Lake County, Minnesota. About four years ago they began to have doubts about the future of grain growing. Accordingly they laid the foundation for a good dairy herd, planted part of their farm to corn, alfalfa, clover and some sugar beets, and erected two silos, going into debt for most of the expense. Last years they sold $1,700 worth of breeding stock and $3,800 worth of milk to a local cooperative cheese factory which they helped to build. They have adopted a four-year rotation on their farm and have restored their land so that it is again profitable in small grain production. The county agent says that these farmers are on the road to "easy street." Another Minnesota farmer in Mahnomen county has reduced his wheat acreage from 400 to 40 acres. He has increased his dairy herd from 2 scrub milk cows to a good grade herd of 30 with a purebred sire. His monthly income averages $270 to $275 from cream. He has 40 acres of alfalfa, 75 acres of sweet clover, and 80 acres of corn.

Turns From Wheat to Cows

Robert Empey, in Prairie county, Montana, was a consistent wheat grower until 1917. In wheat growing he failed to get ahead. Then he turned to milking a few cows. He raised a good flock of chickens and about 10 turkeys. Two years ago he started planting beans and corn. That year he had 50 acres of corn, milked 8 cows, raised 31 hogs, 7 steers and 60 turkeys for market. He is now out of debt, and plans to enlarge his operations. Another farmer in Blaine county, Montana, by raising corn and hogs, has been enabled to pay off a mortgage of $1,400. He is storing his wheat for a better price.

An out standing example of a Montana farmer who has profited by a readjustment in his farming plans is told by the county agent of Richland county. This farmer, in 1919, was a straight wheat grower. He depended entirely on wheat for his farm income and cropped his land almost continously. Realising in 1919 that his plan was wrong, he began to change to mixed farming. His first step was to plant sweet clover for forage. Then he started a small herd of cattle and one or two brood sows. From this modest beginning he has built up a crop rotation of corn, wheat and sweet clover. He has a good heard of purebred shorthorn cattle, a bunch of purebred Duroc Jersey hogs, and a flock of poultry. He produces considerable pure registered Marquis wheat seed, Hannchen barley, Victory oats and sweet clover. Another farmer in Rosebud county, Montana, has reduced his wheat area from 150 acres to 50 acres and has planted 100 acres to corn and sweet clover. He raises a carload of hogs every year. A farmer in Stillwater county, Montana, who in 1920 raised corn chiefly, now has 35 or 30 acres of corn each year. He keeps a dairy herd with a purebred sire, and this year marketed a carload of fat, corn-fed hogs, first the corn-fed hogs ever sold from this community. He also raises barley, oats and alfalfa.

Alfalfa and Sudan Grass Profitable

A farmer in Adams county, Nebraska, who formerly raised only wheat year after year with an occasional change to corn, now has part of his wheat ground in alfalfa and Sudan grass. He has one-half of his farm in corn, and only one-fourth in wheat. He has 8 head of high-grade Holstein cows and heifers, and 125 dark brown Plymouth rocks. Another Nebraska farmer, F. A. Snedaker, of Buffalo county, has almost eliminated wheat from his cropping system and is margetting a large part of his crops through livestock. Four farmers in Fillmore county, Nebraska, who previously had large areas in wheat, have cut down their wheat acreage ,balanced their crops so as to provide feed for a dairy herd, and have increased their dairy operations more than 100 per cent. This policy has enabled them to pay off all their indebtedness and accumulate a bank balance. A farmer in Red Willow county, Nebraska, went nearly bankrupt in four years of straight wheat farming. Then he started dairying on a small scale and has got back on his feet. He has a fine modern dairy barn, a fair herd of Jerseys, and two good pit silos. Wheat has been eliminated from his farm.

Similar cases are reported from Kansas. G. A. Hughs, of Ashland county, Kansas, turned last year from almost straight wheat farming and made poultry an important side line. On an investment of $150 in 1,000 baby chicks, he made a profit of $387. Now he has added four head of purebred Jerseys to his dairy herd. Another man, in St. Cloud county, Kansas, who formerly grew wheat exclusively and often asked, "What shall I do with the other nine months?" found the answer in diversified farming. He turned to cattle, swine, and poultry production, and in...luced a definite crop rotation. This change has enabled him to distribute his work throughout the year, and has saved him from the bad effects of the wheat depression. A farmer in Labette county, Kansas, has maintained his farm on a paying basis since 1920 by practically eliminating wheat except as a filer in rotaion, and keeping Holstein cows and growing sweet clover as a soil improvement crop. On the small acreage which he still keeps in wheat he has increased his yield from 8 to 18 bushels an acre.

Turns Hogs into Wheat

An unusual way of dealing with the wheat problem is reported by the county agent of Rawlins county, Kansas. Andrew Haller, a large farm operator in that county, hog-fenced three quarter-sections sown to wheat. He raised 400 hogs in the wheat field. The hogs lived on the wheat until it began to ripen, then they ate the grass and tender weeds that came up. They had paths through the wheat but did little damage to the growing grain. The hogs were left in the fields while the wheat was in stacks, but they did not damage the stacks. Gain on the hogs was estimated at $1,600, or $10 an acre, and the wheat in the field yielded 4 bushels an acre.

The county agent in Fall River county, South Dakota, reports a remarkable recovery by W. H. Robinson. This farmer is an old "horse-man" has made considerable money years ago raising a medium grade of draft horses. But he hung on too long and when he finally cleaned up on his horses he had nothing left except a mediocre ranch in a rough part of the country. Then he turned to hog raising, borrowing money to get a start. Last fall he paid off his loan, and has a ranch stocked to capacity. He has built up a new business in two years.

One man in Crawford County, Illinois, cut his wheat acreage in half, limed 30 acres, and in addition to carrying a herd of dairy cattle on sweet clover pasture the second summer he turned under the clover and increased his corn yield 9 bushels an acre the following year. He was the only one of 19 farmers in his neighborhood who could show a profit last year although they all kept records to make a comparison. Harlan See, of Paris, Ill., a beef cattle raiser for 25 years, sold his herd and replaced it with 20 head of dairy cattle. He has reported to the county agent that his milk checks, running $250 a month, "make more profit every month than the same number of beef cows made for him in any year for five years."

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

CHURCH WORSHIP

The church lives, in proportion as it sets forth its God. What makes the church like God is forgetting itself in its opportunity. The church does not exist for the salvation of its members. It is not an ark of safety. It exists for rescue. It is a life boat. It is not a conservative force, to keep things as they are. It is a revolutionary force to change things radically. It will disturb society, and not soothe it until society grows Godlike. It does not exist for the sake of its services of worship. These exist for the sake of its larger mission. Eloquence is good in its pulpit, if it makes entrance into human hearts for the spirit of Jesus Christ. Music is good from its organ and its choir, and the united voices of its congregation, if it expresses real thankfulness and praise and send people out with uplift and heartier intent to serve.

To go to church is a good habit, but in itself it is not piety. The doctor who drives ten miles away from church, wholly absorbed in the thought that he must bring back a needed life from the edge of the grave, worships more truly than the woman who feels more at home with her calling list than with her God and the needs of His world. I do not mean that God is censorious about these lesser things. He does not ask us to live always on mountain peaks and breathe varied air only. The church is a place to rest in, a place for gathering of mind and quietness, away from the distractions of the world, a place for penitence and forgiveness and relief from burdens of many kinds, a place to help us do better the small things of every day. Do not grudge its standing open on week days, and all day long, in case some wandering child should stray into it, and find tonic in one breath of the atmosphere of heaven. Do not make it something apart from the common interests of life. Let it be not a strange, but a familiar thing, and feel it no descent to pass from it to the ordinary demands of human fellowship, in your family or in the town.

But try to learn the lesson of God in Jesus, by means of it, so that all its manifestations shall help you to live more simply and generously like him.

So the church is to bring the life of God into human affairs. It is a daring program. It deals with the very root of things. We are not going to transform life by raking the dead leaves off its surface, or even by pulling up a few ugly weeds. We have got to turn up the soil, by deep ploughing and sow much new seed, and tends crops for the harvesting which hitherto have been strange.

Take your own personal life. What is its commanding purpose? How far does it reach? What is the pivot on which it turns? Are you after things for yourself? Is that the ultimate thing you are working and pushing for? How much of your time, and hearty wish do you give to things for another reason than that you like them, or that they benefit you? Do you find yourself shutting your eyes to some suffering link in the human chain by which your comforts are passed along to you, through fear that your comforts would be lessened if you took account of those about you who know not the Christ. Do you ever condone wrong-doing because to denounce it would expose you to sacrifice? Are you bearing anybody's burdens? And if not, why not? Is it because you do not believe that Jesus did so? Or because you are not ready to make Jesus' life yours?

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

A striking example of a man who found pluck more profitable than luck is furnished by the career of John Slator, who started his business life as an office boy at the age of fourteen, at thirty had become a millionaire, and is now one of the chief factors in the British coal exporting industry. Born of humble parentage, Mr. Slater was obliged to start at rock-bottom His first job was as an office boy in a coal office. At nineteen he had become manager of the office, and a year later he entered into the coal business on his own account. Just before the war he moved his headquarters from his native town of Bolton to London, and soon his coal exporting business had become one of the largest in England. Mr. Slater attributes his success in business to work—hard work during long hours. During the years he was climbing from poverty to riches it was his habit to put in twelve hours or more a day at his desk

ELLA FLAGG YOUNG'S MANY OBSTACLES

Because of delicate health, Ella Flagg could not play with sturdier children and was unable to attend regularly the public school near her home in Buffalo, N. Y. She did not learn to read until she was eight years old, or to write until she was 14. Her mother did not believe she would live long, so shielded her from the world by teaching her at home.

Taken to Chicago by her parents, the girl was forced by their deaths, to make her way in the world when she was 16. A grade teacher at 17, she taught many pupils older than herself. Three years later she became the first head of the Practice School for teachers and made it a success. When 24 she married but continued to teach.

Elected district superintendent, she served 13 years, then resigned when the office was reduced to a mere clerical position. President Harper offered her full professorship in the University of Chicago. She refused the title until she had studied a year and obtained her degree.

Resigning four years later, she went to Europe and while there was appointed principal of the Chicago Normal school.

Another four years and the Chicago Board of Education was in a deadlock. Neither side could have its man for superintendent of city schools, so Mrs. Young was chosen, she being the first woman school superintendent in a large city in this country.

Although she was 64 years old, her success won recognition at home and outside, but she had to fight for every improvement. Politicians would not be satisfied with an independent woman in the office and became so offensive that she resigned. Press and public of the country arose and demanded her reinstatement so that the school board was forced to return her to office and to give her full charge of the schools without interference.

Mrs. Young was the first woman president of the National Education Association, and is acclaimed by the world as one of its greatest educators.

Stories That Recall Others

Some Other Lobster.

The wife of a prominent citizen was accosted by the son of their gardener. "Mrs. X." he said, "did you tell my pa that I smoked cigarettes?"

"Why, no, John, I had no idea you smoked, and I wouldn't have told your father if I had known," she answered.

"Well, mebby you didn't tell 'im, but some lobster did!"

Known, But Seldom Heard.

Library workers have a keen sense of humor. The other day one watched a young man through the book stacks for a book. He was hearing ask another young man for the book for which he was hunting.

"It was called 'Good English,'" he asked for it in this manner.

"Have you ever heard 'Good English?'"

This made the assistant smile, but she laughed when the young man came to her and asked, "Do you know 'Good English?'"

Teeth of Alaskan Natives Receive Attention

In its work in Alaska the Bureau of Education has hitherto been unable to give systematic attention to the dental needs of the natives. By means of its ship Boxer, the bureau is now affording such relief. That vessel is now cruising in southeastern Alaska and among the passengers is a dentist (employed by the bureau), whose services are greatly in demand.

Attendance at every Sunday service held in St. Peter's Episcopal church at Uniontown, Pa., within the last fifty-three years was the record attained by Miss Selina Fenn, who died at her home after a brief illness. For seventy years Miss Fenn taught the infants' class.

MAKE LIFE WORTH LIVING

Don't go around feeling tired, lacking in energy and strength, because your kidneys are not working properly. The use of Foley Pills, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys, will give your kidneys a good flushing, remove injurious waste matter and bring the kidneys back to their normal, active condition. "Your Foley Pills are the only thing I ever got to do me any good," writes Samuel Brenner, Alexandria, Ind. Lee & Osgood Co.

METROPOLITAN LIFE MOVES CANADIAN BRANCH OVERNIGHT

The organization of a Canadian company and the moving of the records and personnel from New York to Ottawa, has been accomplished by the the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company with a minimum friction without a minute's delay in the transaction of business. A special train left New York Thursday evening with half of the personnel and half the current records of a complete insurance company, with 1,800,000 policy holders. A similar train carried the remainder of the force and the records Friday night. The staff will be in Ottawa this (Saturday) morning, ready to begin business just where it was left off in New York.

Increase in the Canadian business of the company required the change in the manner of handling it. Hitherto Canada was one of the eight territories with the clerical work performed in New York. All Canadian records have been withdrawn from the 51 divisions of the Metropolitan home office and an entire insurance company, complete in ever ydetail, has been organized and set going in Ottawa.

The 400 persons making up the working force of the new company are volunteers from the regular Metropolitan organization. The majority go to Canada only temporarily and will be replaced as soon as possible by Canadians.

OBITUARY

Henry Tyler.

Henry Tyler, who passed away suddenly Thursday, at his home, 169 Spring street, New London, where he was found dead in bed, was in his 83rd year. He was born in Griswold, July 19, 1841, the son of Henry Colt Tyler and Tirzah Moen. He was a great grandson of Brigadier General John Tyler, who was distinguished for his services in the Revolutionary war and on his mother's side was a direct descendant of John Howland, passenger in the Mayflower. He was a veteran of the Civil war, having enlisted Aug. 30, 1862, from the town of Griswold, in Company F, 26th regiment, Connecticut Infantry. He was a member of this regiment Volunteer association and was its president in 1906 and 1907. He was a constant attendant at the annual reunions of this association in Norwich and at the last reunion, Aug. 14, 1923, he was the speaker of the day.

After the Civil war he lived in Griswold until his marriage on Feb. 26, 1878, to Eliza A. Wheeler, a daughter of the late Judge Richard A. Wheeler of Stonington. Then Mr. and Mrs. Tyler went to Great Bend, Kan., where they remained for about 25 years, raising grain and cattle. Later they returned to their native state. Mrs. Tyler died about 12 years ago. She was survived by two sisters, Miss Grace B. Wheeler and Mrs. Seth M. Williams, now living in Stonington. Since his wife's death Mr. Tyler has lived in New London. He was a member of W. W. Perkins Post, No. 47, G. A. R., and was to have been a delegate to the department encampment at Waterbury on April 23 and 24. As recently as last week he attended the funeral of his comrade, George A. Haskell of Jewett City. In church affiliations he has always been a consistent Congregationalist, uniting with the church in Griswold in March 1864.

He is survived by his sister, Mary B. Tyler of Goffstown, New Hampshire, now in her 93rd year, and five nephews, William M. Morgan, Edwin T. Morgan and Fred L. Morgan of Boston, Jesse M. Morgan of Ware, Mass., Daniel Morgan of Jewett City, and by a niece, Fannie Morgan, wife of Dr. S. T. Ferguson of Goffstown, New Hampshire.

Miss Sarah B. Young.

After an illness of many months the life of Miss Sarah B. Young came to a close Thursday evening at her home at 170 Broadway. Miss Young had been a long and patient sufferer, and she will be greatly missed by many loving friends and acquaintances.

She was born in Norwich, August 25, 1843, the daughter of the late David and Mary E. Harris Young, and was a granddaughter of the late Moses Cleveland, founder of the city of Cleveland. All her life had been spent in Norwich and she graduated from local grammar schools and attended the Norwich Free Academy. Until her health failed her she was an active member of Christ Episcopal church and was always a worker on various church committees.

Miss Young possessed a kind and loving disposition and easily made friends. She will long be remembered by this circle of friends and by many of the younger people, for she not only kept in touch with the older friends but took much interest in the younger people. Her going removes from this community, one who loved to give, rather than to receive.

Surviving is one sister, Miss Frances D. Young of Norwich, and there are other relatives.

BOSTON SPEAKER SAYS CONGRESS UNITES TINTED RACES AGAINST US

The net results of the exclusion of the Japanese as voted by congress will serve to cement the tinted races against us, said Prof. Homer E. Wark of Boston University of Theology, in an address which he gave Friday night at a meeting of the Men's Class of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church in the church parlors. The members of the Methodist men's classes of the Baltic and Willimantic churches were guests of the club. At 5.45 o'clock the meeting was called to order by Robert McNeely, leader of the class. Community singing of old time melodies and numbers by a four piece orchestra were followed by brief remarks of welcome by Mr. McNeely, Ernest O. Rodier and Guy B. Dolbeare, the latter a lay delegate to the general conference of the Methodists spoke briefly, after which Onward Christian Soldiers was played by the orchestra.

Charles Barnes of the Baltic club expressed regret that the pastor of the Baltic church, Rev. C. W. Ruoff, was unable to be present owing to illness. Mr. Barnes in his brief address advocated the removal of the Methodist ban on dancing and theatres by the general conference. Rev. J. Harlow Graham, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, moved that a committee be appointed to send a word of greeting to Rev. Mr. Ruoff and the matter was left with the chairman to appoint the committee. Rev. Mr. Graham then presented the speaker, Professor Wark who spoke informally to the 55 men present on some of the observations he has made as a student of the Orient.

The Bible class is organized on the basis that religion is the concern of every man, he said. The Bible class stands for the fact that man cannot live his life without religion. The Bible class is built on the idea that the Bible is a book for every man. The trouble is not our ability to understand it, but our ability to live it. Let me congratulate you on your class. Don't forget to let that class stand for service. If you will carry out the idea of service you will indeed receive great value for your work.

I am going to talk to you about the great world we call the Orient. That world of the Orient is going to be your world before long, whether you expect it or not. I went across the Pacific last winter from Vancouver to Japan in something like nine or nine and a half days. The Pacific is getting narrower every day. The Orient is right at our doors.

The greatest cities of America will probably be built on the western coast. This may not be in our time, but it is nevertheless. Japan is a country worth while for its beauty but a poor country from an agricultural standpoint. The people of Japan couldn't live unless they purchased from abroad.

Prof. Wark expressed the feeling that the U. S. congress could have been a little more generous with the Japanese in voting the exclusion legislation. It will take some years before the indignation that has resulted in Japan will pass. However, I don't anticipate any serious trouble.

The speaker made a plea for fair, just and sympathetic treatment of all peoples of the tinted races. These peoples, he said, are becoming more and more incensed at the exploitation of the whites. The race feeling is intense. The net results of the exclusion of the Japs by the U. S. congress will serve to cement the tinted races against us. I plead for a broad friendly outlook for all our neighbors whether they be Japanese, Chinese or Hindu.

I don't want to give you the impression that the Orient has nothing good. I say, as a student of the Orient, we here in the west, can learn a lot from those simple people of the east. And they can learn a lot from us. In closing Professor Wark spoke of the work of the missionaries in Japan and the Japanese attitude toward the church. He said there is a strong feeling among the Japanese Christians for an independent church in which they can regulate their own policies and elect their own bishops. He expressed the hope that the general conference will vote to give the Methodist churches in Japan that privilege. As a final word the speaker said that the principles of Jesus Christ are essential to the Japanese in the solution of their problems.

At the close of his address Prof. Wark was given a vote of thanks for his splendid and most interesting talk. Light refreshments, sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by a committee of which Mrs. A. D. Lewis was chairman.

AMERICAN LEGION CAMPAIGN FOR MEMBERSHIP STARTING

If enthusiasm and readiness to work means anything the ex-service men in New London county, those who saw service during the World war, are going to hear much of the fine work being done by the American Legion during the next few weeks, and be asked to shoulder their pack and get behind the organization which represents 4,500,000 World war veterans in this country and abroad.

In charge of Col. Webster D. Copp, commanding the 3rd regiment, comprising companies in New London county, some 15 captains, lieutenants and sergeants from posts in Jewett City, Baltic, Mystic, Stonington, New London, Colchester, Old Lyme, and Norwich met Friday evening at the Wauregan Hotel and mapped out plans for the big American Legion drive for members which is to be conducted between May 8th and 19th.

Lists of every world war veteran going out from towns in New London county are being compiled by legion posts and teams will see that every ex-service man is approached and asked to get behind the legion to see that the disabled veterans, needy veterans and dependents have a fair chance. Representing some 70,000 men in the state the active legion men are intending leaving in their companions in the service under the legion banner.

In connection with the drive for members the Robert O. Fletcher post of Norwich, has secured a complete list of every World war veteran going into service from the town of Norwich. The legion hopes to prepare a complete service record of every one of these veterans, so that a war record of all Norwich men may be passed down through the years, a record that will enable legion members to provide for ex-service men in the future if occasion should demand it. In order to get this list cards are to be provided and mailed to all World war veterans and answers to questions are to be asked. The importance of this list will grow as years go by and will save all question of doubt as to service records of Norwich men should all other records be lost.

Automobile stickers are to be provided for the drive, merchants are to be asked to back the drive and everyone is to be asked to back the movement to get the world war veterans together that a great work may be carried to a successful and creditable conclusion in years to come.

HIBERNIAN AUXILIARY WHIST WITH TWENTY-SEVEN TABLES

A successful whist was held Thursday evening in A. O. H. hall under the auspices of Division No. 54, A. O. H., Ladies' Auxiliary. Twenty-seven tables were played. The whist prizes were awarded as follows:

Ladies—First, scarfs, Mrs. Prodel; second, decanter, Miss Mary E. Shea; third, hankerchiefs, Miss Julia Breen; fourth, hankerchiefs, Mrs. Julia Pratt; consolation, Miss Catherine McCaffery.

Gentlemen—First, box cigars, Patrick McGill; second, silk stockings, Mr. Sargent; third, tie, Martin V. Burke; fourth, Mr. Mc Ardle; consolation, Mr. O'Neill.

The door prizes, a five pound box of candy and a plant, were won by Mrs. Nellie Fitzgerald and Mrs. Catherine Garvey. A prize box of candy was won by Mr. McArdle. The success of the affair was due to the capable committee comprising Mrs. Elizabeth Fitzgerald, chairman; Mrs. Hannah McGill, Mrs. Jane Moore, Mrs. Nellie Moore, Mrs. Mary Langlis, Miss Eva Hyde and Miss Nellie Nagle.

CITIZENS' MEETING ON EQUITABLE TAXATION

Arrangements for a citizen's meeting next Friday evening in the town hall when methods of tax assessment will be discussed were made Friday at a meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett will inform the citizens of Norwich what other Connecticut communities are doing toward the establishment of equitable taxation methods. T. M. Russell, president of the Russell Manufacturing Co., of Middletown has also consented to be present and tell the citizens of the recent activity of the citizens of that community toward the establishment of an honest tax rate. The meeting is opened to all citizens and it is expected that the citizens generally will take sufficient interest in this all important subject to the people of Norwich to be present at the meeting on Friday.

Later it is proposed to call a special town meeting for the appointment and authorization of a committee of fifteen citizens of Norwich to analyze the prevailing tax assessment methods and to report at a later special town meeting their findings and make recommendations for improvements in the methods, the whole purpose is to present for the consideration of the citizens the weaknesses of the present method of tax assessments in Norwich and to propose recommendations to be later legally approved by the citizens, which would give Norwich an improved and fairer method for taxable assessments.

During the past several weeks committees representative of the Chamber of Commerce, the Manufacturers' association, the Rotary club, Lions club and Building and Loan association have been holding meetings and making plans to bring before the public mind the subject of equitable taxation, and the plan for this public meeting next Friday is the result.

Other matters considered at the directors' meeting were pertaining to the annual meeting of the State Chamber of Commerce, the Thames river, community advertising, United States Chamber of Commerce referendum on the subject of transportation, state park, streets, civic pride and industrial situation.

RAZING OLD OSGOOD BUILDING ON BROADWAY

The old Osgood building on Broadway, just north of the Masonic temple, is fast disappearing and after today will hardly resemble a building, being little more than a pile of masonry at the present time, the four walls having been razed.

The street was closed for a time Friday morning while the walls were being razed to safeguard the public. Contractor L. M. Young is working hard to clear away the debris and expects to have the walks cleared away in front of the building by Saturday evening.

The building was originally built by the Edwards Bros., for the book bindery business over three score years ago, the bindery being the largest Norwich ever had. Later the building was occupied on the first two floors by The Record, this being about 30 years ago. The upper floors were used by various printers and by William Cowan and Sons for their book binding business.

Three years ago the building was bought by the Masonic fraternity of Norwich, from Charles H. Osgood who owned the building at that time.

SEDGWICK RELIEF CORPS ADDS THREE MEMBERS

Sedgwick Woman's Relief Corps, No. 16, with President Clara P. Burke in the chair held its regular meeting Friday afternoon at the Buckingham Memorial, initiating three members. A report was made of the presentation of two flags to the two rooms at the Preston school where a programme of songs and recitations was given by the children at the time of the presentation, which was made on behalf of the corps by Mrs. Grace Fowler, patriotic instructor. The gift of the flags was gratefully acknowledged by Miss Mulcahy, the teacher.

Department general orders No. 6 and national general orders referring to the encampment in Boston in August was read at the meeting, which closed in the usual form with the salute to the flag and singing America.

Rev. Emmons White Home.

Former Ledyard residents, Rev. W. F. White and Mrs. White, of Trumbull, and Rev. Emmons White his wife and daughter, are guests at W. R. Bushnell's at Saybrook. Rev. Emmons White has just returned from India, where he has been located. He is on a leave of absence.

ATTENDANCE OF 200 AT FATHER AND SON BANQUET

Nearly 200 fathers and sons attended the eleventh annual Father and Son banquet given Friday evening at the Community house under the auspices of the Norwich Young Men's Christian Association, enjoying the evening and having a chance to get better acquainted with each other.

An exceptional opportunity awaited everyone in attendance when Rev. J. Franklin Kennedy, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, of New Haven, in a most forceful manner, sold each and every father and son, the shares which, he said, would get them in on the ground floor of an organization that was bound to succeed right from the start. This concern, said Rev. Mr. Kennedy, is no less than Dad, Lad & Co.

Two things are needed to make this a success, he said, co-operation and hustling. The war awakened the fathers in this country, for when war came they found that the world to be saved, must be saved by boys, many of whom they had never before believed capable of assuming any responsibilities. When these sons came back, the fathers realized that they were equal to the tasks, denied them before, and they began to take suggestions.

In forming the organization of Dad, Lad & Co., the question is asked, Is There a Demand for the product this company can produce, can we produce it, and can we control the market? Dad, Lad & Co., has two things that the whole world wants. The Dad seen in his son that lost youth, that youth he would like to bring back to himself. He sees the boy he used to be. The Lad sees in his Dad the future, an ideal. He finds the boys of 12 and 14 hanging around the corner where boys of 16 and 18 hang out. They are there to learn things that the older boys know. In doing this they receive only a partial knowledge, similar to what a freshman in high school could give to the eighth grade pupil in grammar school. Boys, advised Rev. Mr. Kennedy, don't learn from these older boys. Go to your Dad, the man who has graduated and has his diplomas. He knows from experience and is ready to give his experience to you freely.

To you Dads, said Rev. Mr. Kennedy, there is a duty you owe to your boys. He has that spirit of youth you need, the ideals, purposes, hopes, and view of the horizon so much needed by fathers. You Dads have someone looking into your eyes who believes in you, and its your duty to see that his ideal is not lost with the coming of more education. The name plate means nothing, what counts is how the thing is treated and cared for. The father to the boy is the one who stays by him, teaches him and gives him confidence, one who lives with his boy. Make that boy play ball, make him do anything under the sun that will make him live with you—He needs it.

The banquet was held at 6.30 o'clock when the following delightful menu was served:

Grapefruit
Meat Pies
Mashed Potatoes — String Beans
Rolls — Pickles
Apple Pie
Ice Cream — Coffee

Decorations were in greens and cut flowers which added considerable to the attractiveness of the banquet hall, everything being donated and arranged by Otto Ernst and Smith, the Florist.

Grace was said by Rev. Leonel E. W. Mitchell, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, after which everyone remained standing and one verse of America was sung. Throughout the banquet selections by Swahn's orchestra enlivened the affair, adding considerably to make the evening a most enjoyable one.

Y. M. C. A. President Spoke

Following the banquet Toastmaster James M. Morton spoke a brief word of congratulation to the fathers and sons and called upon James C. Macpherson, president of the Y. M. C. A., for a few words of welcome. President Macpherson called the attention of the gathering to the fact that the attendance at the banquet proved there was no need of welcoming the fathers and sons, for the welcome was understood when fathers and sons from twelve local churches gathered together. This fact, he said, only shows how the Y. M. C. A. stands today in the hearts of the citizens of Norwich, a showing for which the association is justly proud.

At this moment mention was made of the forced absence of General Secretary Edwin Hill, and the meeting voted to send a message of greeting to Mr. Hill whose illness prevented him from attending one of the biggest events in the history of the year.

The greeting of the Sons to the Fathers was delivered by Russell Storms who urged the Dads more loyally to support the boys, for if ever support is needed it is now, for a few years hence it will count for nothing.

The response for the fathers was made by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church, who explained how the boy always comes direct to the point, claiming their greatest need is companionship and loyalty. To the boys he said, the fathers only asked that they play the game square, be loyal and "make good."

An impressive part of the programme came when James L. Case, song leader, requested all to stand at attention while the Star Spangled Banner was sung, claiming that if ever the time had come for true patriotism, that time was now, for these boys gathered here are the men of the future years, the men who will make the nation great.

Toastmaster Morton then introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. Mr. Kennedy, who, before he started his talk to the Dads and Lads called for the attention of the women and urged the need of holding Mother and Daughter banquets, claiming that there is even more reason for the holding of these banquets than those of father and son. There is more danger of a breakdown in womanhood in our nation today than ever before, he said, and I hope some day the women will start Mother and Daughter banquets, continuing that work until the daughters shall be taught that there is something greater for them in life than what can be learned from fashion plates or the drug store windows.

The closing part of the banquet was in charge of Boys' Secretary Emory H. Davis, who requested that all join hands and silently pray for the fellow on the left, then on the right and lastly for himself. This was done and the meeting closed with the benediction by Rev. Edward C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The programme was one of the best ever arranged for a Father and Son banquet and it was the concensus of opinion that the 1925 banquet will be even more largely attended than any of the past gatherings.

The tables were most attractively decorated by a committee headed by Miss Mary Richards and under the leadership of Mrs. Howard L. Stanton the following carried out the serving of the menu: Miss Lillian Crumb, Miss Villette Peck, Miss Lillian Stetson, Miss Anna Rodier, Miss Charlotte Geer, Miss Dorothy Haslam, Miss Dorothy May, Mrs. Edwin V. Ross, Mrs. Charles A. Saxton, Miss Marian Royce, Mrs. Charles W. Twist, Mrs. Robert W. Otis, Miss Gertrude Duerr, Mrs. James Barrett, Mrs. L. M. Young, Mrs. Joseph Curtis, Miss Fannie Meier, Miss Gladys Hill, Miss Marian Palmer, Miss Rose Thornes, Miss Gladys Thornes, Mrs. William C. Amburn, Mrs. Frank I. Royce, Miss Evon Broadhurst, Mrs. Joseph S. Adams, Miss Dorothy Whitney, Mrs. Clarence E. Barber, Miss May Guile, Mrs. John A. Ferguson, Mrs. Louis Geer, Mrs. James Bussy, Miss Mary Dolbeare, Mrs. George Ingalls.

D. A. R. May Luncheon

Mrs. George Maynard Miner of Waterford, honorary president-general of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is to be a guest of honor at the annual May luncheon of Lucretia Shaw chapter of New London, to be held in the ballroom of the Mohican hotel Monday, May 5. Mrs. John Laidlaw Buell of Litchfield, honorary state regent; Mrs. Charles H. Bissell of Southington, state regent and other officers of the Connecticut society have been invited to be present as well as the members and officers of the Anna Warner Bailey chapter of Groton. Mrs. Sidney H. Miner, regent of the hostess chapter, will preside.

Leaflet on Asparagus

The Connecticut Agricultural College Extension Service, under the direction of B. W. Ellis, has issued a leaflet on asparagus, dealing with the growing and marketing of the plant. The 1920 census shows that there are 130 farms growing asparagus in Connecticut with a value on the crop of $41,149. The acreage is given as 145 with a value of $291.84 an acre. This places it seventh on the list of vegetables grown in the states as to the value an acre, but it is fourth in the gross value a farm, the amount being $316.53.

South Coventry Luncheon

Miss Hattie Albro of South Coventry entertained at a luncheon on Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock. The decorations were yellow and white. Favors in keeping with Easter were presented the guests who were: Mrs. John M. Wood, Mrs. William F. Wood, Miss Elizabeth Briggs, Miss Helen Sykes, Mrs. William H. Armstrong, Mrs. Fannie Rose Bennett with Mrs. Elizabeth Zechiel and her daughter, Mrs. John Connors of Willimantic.

RIVERVIEW AND ACADEMY BALL TEAMS OPEN 1924 SEASON THIS AFTERNOON

The Riverview club of the State hospital and the Norwich Free Academy team open their seasons in their respective parks this afternoon, Riverview meeting the St. Stanislaw club of Meriden and the Academy clashing with Putnam High. In both these contests some good baseball can be expected.

The Riverview Game.

When the Riverview club lines up against the St. Stanislaw club it will be pitted against one of the strongest clubs of the western part of the state. The Meriden club last year won the championship of the city and also included among its victims is the fast Portland club, champions of the Middlesex County league. The Meriden team is considered to be one of the fastest teams in the vicinity of the Silver City. Cline will pitch for Meriden and Walsh will do the catching. Cline has made quite a reputation in semi-pro circles in the state last year and is expected to be even in better form this season. Walsh is a snappy catcher that can hold up his end of the game in a most creditable fashion.

The Riverview club will have the same lineup in today's game that slaughtered the All-Collegians last Saturday in a practice game. After a week of practice the hospital team will be in mid-season form. The lineup for the Riverview club will be McCarthy p, Belair, c, Coullard 1b, Burns 2b, Sank ss, Mills, 3b, Hart lf, Agos cf, M. Hamill rf. The game is scheduled to start at 2.30 o'clock and Paul Semke will hold the indicator.

At the Academy Campus.

After a week of hard practice under the most trying weather conditions the Academy team will swing into action this afternoon against the first real contender for the interscholastic baseball honors, namely the team representing Putnam High. Putnam usually has strong teams and it is expected that this year's team will be no exception to the rule.

The Academy lineup has been somewhat shifted around since the last game and today will find a new infield combination working. Ellis Segal, the pitching ace of the high school, will start the game, with Hollander on the receiving end. Burke will be at first and Midget Tombari will take care of the keystone position. Ciminoski replaces Phil McNamara at third, while Busch, an outfield candidate early in the season, will be at short. The outfield is not certain but Coach Brigham's choice will probably be Hinricks in left, Kilroy in center and Strickland in right. Steinman will be the relief pitcher.

Much improvement has been made by the Academy squad during the past week in their hitting. The diamond, thanks to Manager Gilman, is in the best shape in several years, having been skinned and rolled thoroughly. The Pasnik Memorial bleachers, which have a seating capacity of 150 persons, have been completed and afford excellent [illegible] for the local supporters of the team. It is expected that a large crowd will attend the game.

BABE RUTH'S HOMER HELPS YANKS TO BEAT RED SOX

New York, April 25.—Babe Ruth's home run in the third inning today, with Bush and Dugan on base, enabled the Yankees to defeat the Red Sox, 4 to 3. It was Ruth's third home run of the season and the fifth straight victory for the Yankees.

Joe Bush was in rare form, striking out seven Boston batters, three of them in succession in the fourth inning. The scores:

HAVERS AND SARAZEN PRACTICE FOR THEIR MATCH

Philadelphia, April 25. — Arthur G. Havers, British open golf champion, and Gene Sarazen, American professional champion, practiced today over the course of the Cedarbrook Country club where tomorrow they will play the first 36 holes of their 72 hole match. Both expressed satisfaction with the condition of the course.

Sarazen played two rounds with J. Wood Platt, and Havers, who knows the course, appeared late in the afternoon and played nine holes with James Ockenden, his touring partner. The Cedarbrook officials have put the markers on the back of the tees and the course will measure 660 yards for the international match. The par is 71.

Platt, member of the 1923 international amateur team, will referee the Philadelphia half of the match. The players will finish their game at the Westchester Biltmore Country club, Rye, N. Y., Sunday.

KEN WILLIAMS' RETURN FAILS TO HELP THE BROWNS

St. Louis, April 25.—The return of Ken Williams to the lineup failed to give the Browns victory today, Sisler's men losing to the Chicago White Sox in the third game of the series, 6 to 5. Williams got one walk and one single in five times up. Davis weakened in the fourth and was replaced by Voigt after he had allowed three walks and two singles.

FIRST INNING WILDNESS LOSES FOR CARDINALS

Chicago, April 25.—Wildness by Jess Haines in the first inning, coupled with Bell's error, and Hartnett's home run gave Chicago a commanding lead and enabled them to defeat St. Louis, 7 to 5, today. After the first frame Haines pitched a good game, while Aldridge, who was in hot water from the start, was relieved by Wheeler, who held the visitors safe. The score:

VANCE HAS BETTER OF PITCHING WITH DEAN

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 25.—Vance reversed the result of his recent pitchers' duel with Dean when he beat the New York Giants today, 3 to 2, in clinching his feat the Brooklyn strikeout king fanned nine batters. Meusel's home run drive over the wall with one on gave New York the lead in the sixth but Neis won for Brooklyn with a similar drive in the seventh after Vance had forced Jones.

The deal for Milton Stock of the Cardinals was reopened today, Brooklyn offered Catcher Hargreaves and $7,500 for the St. Louis holdout. The score:

PIRATES COLLAPSE AND REDS WIN OUT, 10 TO 4

Pittsburgh, April 25.—After obtaining a lead of one run, Pittsburgh's defense collapsed and Cincinnati made it two straight from the Pirates by winning today's game, 10 to 4. Morrison was hit hard and timely while Luque was effective in the pinches with the exception of the sixth inning. A double steal of the home plate and second base by Traynor and Barnhart, respectively, featured the game. Hargrave and Grimm knocked homers, each scoring a run ahead of him. The score:

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch

(Fordham Star Ball Player)

How should infielders throw to the catcher in an attempt to catch a runner coming home on a double steal or on any play where they are trying to catch a runner scoring from third?

The problem here is to save time. To accomplish that the ball should reach the catcher about knee high or a trifle lower and so he will not have to shift his position to catch it. If the catcher has to get out of his position or jump to receive the ball he cannot make the one quick motion he should in catching the ball and putting it on the runner sliding into the plate that nails most of them just before they may score. No throw is more important in baseball than this one as catching men at the plate outs off runs. That is the big job of the team in the field.

RICKARD REFUSES TO POSTPONED ROJAS' BOUT

Buenos Aires, April 25.—Owing to the fact that Tex Rickard has refused to postpone the bout between Quintin Romero Rojas and Floyd Johnson until Luis Firpo was given an opportunity to fight Rojas, Firpo said today he would not fight Rojas afterwards. He added that his offer to meet the Chilean heavyweight therefore was withdrawn.

Firpo declined to say definitely whether he would change his mind with regard to accepting other offers to fight in the United States, including a proposition made by James J. Johnston to fight George Godfrey, and Harry Wills.

Ponies Lose Close Game.

Springfield, Mass, April 25.—Springfield lost the home opening of the Eastern league season to Waterbury today, 3 to 2. Mayor E. F. Leonard threw the first ball but there were no other unusual exercises. Best and Ulrich both pitched effectively in spite of the freezing weather. Waterbury bunched its hits in the first and fourth innings, and with Best's unsteadiness in second inning, scored enough runs to win. Because of the disagreeable weather conditions, the attendance was low for an opening game. The score:

| | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Waterbury | 1 | 1 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | —3 |

Worcester Beats Albany.

Worcester, Mass., April 25.—Worcester won its opening game today defeating Albany, 12 to 7. The afternoon was very cold and handicapped the pitchers who were wild and ineffective. Worcester rallied and took the lead in the sixth on hits and errors. The visitors had a bad spell in the same inning and Worcester made nine runs. Eayr's hitting was a feature. Mayor Michael J. O'Hara pitched the first ball. There was an automobile parade, band concert and flag raising. The score:

| | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|

Two base hits, Emmerich, Graves.

Bagwell Goes to Galveston.

TWO FAST SOCCER GAMES SLATED FOR NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 25.—The New London Rangers soccer team has booked two fast teams to appear in this city within the next two weeks. The first big game is with the Scandia A. C. eleven of Hartford at Caulkins park on Sunday and the second big game will be against the Cian Campbell team of Bridgeport, on Sunday, May 11. The Rangers management is bringing these two teams to play in New London at a considerable expense and the fans should turn out in good numbers to support the team. Whatever showing the Rangers make against these teams will have a decided bearing as to whether the local outfit will be regarded as a team that should be given the right to meet some of the other leading teams in the state for the title. The Scandia A. C. eleven is entered in the northern section of the state cup competition and the Cian Campbell eleven of Bridgeport is one of the entries in the southern section cup competition.

NAVY CREWS HAVE FINAL PRACTICE ON RIVER

Annapolis, Md., April 25.—Favored by fair conditions of weather and water, eight-oared crews of the Naval academy and Massachusetts Institute of Technology took their final practice spins over the Severn river course this afternoon in preparatio nfor the opening of the intercollegiate rowing season here tomorrow.

There will be two sets of races. The first to be rowed will be that for junior varsity, and the Navy "plebes" or fourth classmen, will also enter this event. The brush between the varsity crews will follow.

The visiting crews have improved considerably in form after spending a week here, but the Navy oarsmen are undoubtedly more powerful.

Chapman Tech vs. Stonington.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 25. — Chapman Tech will open its home baseball season Saturday afternoon against the Stonington High nine in a scheduled game of the Interscholastic league of Eastern Connecticut, at Morgan park, at 3 p. m. Besides being the first contest for the Stonington High outfit, it will be the opening game of the Eastern Connecticut Interscholastic league.

Cruise will without a doubt get the assignment to heave 'em for Chapman Tech and McDonald will be on the receiving end. The Chapman Tech team will hold its last practice of the season Saturday morning. This morning the entire team went through a good two hour drill in preparation for their game with Stonington High. The infield gave a good exhibition of inner defense work and made an impression on the few spectators present that Stonington will have to go some in order to gain a victory. In the absence of Coach E. Stanley Taylor, the team was in charge of Mr. Weaver of the faculty. However, Mr. Taylor will get back from Boston Saturday and will personally take charge of the Tech team when it opposes Stonington.

Profs Hit Canavan Hard.

Hartford, April 25.—Hartford opened its home season here today by defeating New Haven, 9 to 7. Bunched hits in the first two innings gave the Senators a five run lead but New Haven pounced on Canavan for hits and runs that tied the score. Three hits in the eighth were good for the winning runs. Gehrig and Gallagher hit home runs. Demoe's batting featured. The score:

| | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| New Haven | 0 | 0 | 4 | 0 | 0 | 2 | 0 | 0 | 0 | —7 |
| Hartford | 2 | 3 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 2 | x | —9 |

Harvard Beats Georgia.

Cambridge, Mass., April 25.—Spalding allowed Georgia only six hits in the game here today, Harvard winning 6 to 2. The southerners led off with a run in the first and scored another in the third inning. Chambers kept Harvard's hits scattered, except in the fourth and sixth, in each of which Harvard scored three times.

The score by innings:

| | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Georgia | 1 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | —2 |

Chambers and Powers; Spalding and Cheek.

Mystic Inds. Change Name.

The Mystic Independents in the future will play under the name of the Rossie Velvet Athletic association. This team would like to make arrangements for games for the coming season and want to open the home season on May 18th.

TONY BARBER WINS SPECIAL MATCH FROM FILLMORE BY MARGIN OF 42 PINS

(Special to the Bulletin.)

Danielson, April 25.—Tony Barber of Danielson defeated Roy Fillmore of Norwich by six pins here tonight in the second half of the 20-string special bowling matches for a purse of $400 winning by a combined score of 2109 to 2067 for the twenty strings, Barber beat Fillmore in the last ten strings by six pins the score being, Barber 1003, Fillmore 997. In the match in Norwich on Wednesday evening Barber beat Fillmore out by 36 pins the scores for the first ten strings being, Barber 1106, Fillmore 1070.

Barber went in the match here tonight with a lead of 36 pins and in the first five strings Fillmore cut Barber's lead to 18 pins and should have won easily had he been in any kind of form. It was not Barber's good bowling that won the match but it was Fillmore's unsteadiness and poor bowling that lost for him. Fillmore had ample opportunity to emerge a winner as he certainly got the breaks in nearly every string. Little good however, it did to get the breaks for he continually missed simple one and two pin spares.

In the last string Barber had a 53-pin lead but Fillmore had a chance to win the match as he missed fully five one pin spares. As it was he picked up 11 pins giving Barber a 42 pin margin for the match. Barber's average for the match was 105.5 while Fillmore's was 103.4.

| Barber | Fillmore |
|---|---|
| 95 | 95 |
| 95 | 88 |
| 98 | 114 |
| 97 | 94 |
| 95 | 109 |
| 100 | 95 |
| 98 | 90 |
| 117 | 94 |
| 118 | 109 |
| 100 | 111 |
| 1008 | 997 |

AMERICAN ATHLETES WIN OUT IN PENN RELAYS

Philadelphia, April 25.—(By The A. P.)—Triumphs for America in all three of the international events on the program and the brilliant all-around performances of Charles West, star negro athlete of Washington and Jefferson, in capturing the pentathlon for the second successive year, were outstanding features today of the opening of the two-day Pennsylvania relay carnival at Franklin field.

The Union Jack of Great Britain went down to defeat in two of the international clashes when Eric Liddell, Edinburgh university student, who holds the British sprint championship, was conquered in a spectacular 220-yard dash by Louis Clarke of Johns Hopkins, while Cambridge university's quartet finished third in the sprint medley relay championship, which was won decisively by Pennsylvania State college's fleet, with Georgetown second.

Sharing interest with these events were two other major college relay title races, with Pennsylvania victorious over Missouri and Princeton in the distance medley and Columbia triumphant in a sensational quarter-mile championship contest. Verne Booth, elongated distance star, added further glory to Johns Hopkins' record, for the day by conquering a strong field of 24 rivals in the two-mile individual run.

The third international feature occurred in the interscholastic medley relay, in which Huntington school, of Boston, carried America's colors to victory over Hamilton Collegiate institute, of Canada, which finished second, after getting off to a bad start.

ARMED GUARDS TO PROTECT FAMOUS HORSE

Louisville, Ky., April 25.—Armed guards have been set over Wise Counsellor, John S. Ward's Kentucky Derby hope and the public's present choice for the $50,000 race at Churchill Downs, May 10, according to a copyrighted story in the Louisville [illegible] today.

Rumors of an alleged plot to "dope" the colt or to stuff his nose with a sponge, methods said to have been sometimes employed by unscrupulous persons interested in other horses, according to this version, several days ago reached Mr. Ward who warned stable managers to keep a close watch on the animal.

It has been understood that the betting public has played Wise Counsellor heavily, through bookmakers, to win the derby. Odds as high as forty to one are reported to have been laid on the colt. The result the Times indicates, is that his backers have a chance to win more than $1,000,000 from the bookmakers.

Wise Counsellor will be shipped to Baltimore Saturday where he has been entered in the Preaknes at Pimlico.

Wise Counsellor is insured for $100,000. He cost $40,000 as a two year old and has won that amount in stakes for his owner.

CELTICS HAD VERY GOOD BASKETBALL SEASON

The Taftville Celtics have ended their most successful season by winning 23 out of 25 games played and thereby winning the junior amateur title of Eastern Connecticut and also winning the Norwich lightweight title.

The only defeats were by the fast traveling Y Emps in the first game of the season, Battery B Seconds who were later on defeated four out of five and by Laurel Hill Crescents. Their wins include Baltic Bantams on its home floor and later at the Y gym, Battery B Seconds, three out of four on the armory floor and on the Y gym, Y Emps losing two games, the only defeats suffered by them on their own floor, the remaining games were played on its own floor—Speedboys 4

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

People in this section were thrilled with the horrible details of a double murder at Stonington a half century ago, when two young men were beaten to death by parties unknown. The hired man of the Langworthy family in that place was held under $10,000 bonds in connection with the murders.

Other interesting bits of news of 1874 are taken from the files of the Bulletin as follows:

Monday, April 20, 1874—Several diners at the Wauregan Hotel narrowly escaped death last evening when the ceiling in the large dining hall suddenly fell. The first descent was on the table occupied by Col. Converse and family but they luckily escaped injury. This had scarcely happened when another large section fell down striking John Spaulding who was seated at the table opposite and hit a waitress, hurting both people to the floor unconscious. Both were given medical attention and will be confined to their houses for several days. Mr. Johnson, proprietor of the hotel lost many dollars worth of crockery.

Seekers of early greens have to be content with the offerings of the water cress girls.

A Norwich Town man has a large bed of strawberries in full bloom in his gardens.

Tuesday, April 21, 1874—Stonington was the scene of a horrible murder Sunday evening when the oldest son of Henry D. Langworthy was murdered and his younger brother cruelly beaten by some kind of blunt instrument. The hired man of Mr. Langworthy also was attacked and according to his story was knocked unconscious by two men who entered the house while Mr. and Mrs. Langworthy were away. The oldest boy was found sitting in a chair, a book laying on the floor nearby. He had been instantly killed and the back of his head was crushed in by some heavy implement. The youngest son was found on the bed in his room nearly dead and the bed covered with blood. No trace of the murderers, if two men were seen near the house that evening, has been found and men are combing the neighborhood in hopes to find them and punish them for their dastardly deeds.

Several teams have passed over the new Greeneville bridge but the official opening will not take place for several days.

The schooner Golden West arrived at New London yesterday from the South Shetland Islands, with 400 skins and thirty barrels of sperm oil for Lawrence & Co.

"Drink. Go to New York." was written on the coat of an intoxicated man going down Main street yesterday afternoon.

Wednesday, April 22, 1874—Smallpox, that dread disease which held South Windham in its grasp all winter has broken out at Liberty Hill and two people have already died of the disease. People who were intending visiting friends in that place are giving it a wide berth.

Yesterday morning while workmen were digging in the A. F. Sturdevant lot they unearthed a skeleton of a man. The bones crumbled as one touched them evidently having been buried there for many years. The mystery is causing no little excitment in that neighborhood.

Ezekiel Cooper, an aged Indian and one of the few remaining descendents of Uncas died yesterday at his cabin in the woods where he had lived for many years.

The lawyers of the county are talking of a bar association and a meeting is to be held in the near future to formulate plans for the association.

Shad have not yet made their appearance in the river in any large numbers, evidently due to the cold, backward weather.

Thursday, April 23, 1874—A loud explosion of gas occurred yesterday in the shaft of the furnace of Vaughn's foundry. A large section of the wall and several stays in the building were blown down but fortunately no one was injured.

A drunken man was arrested last evening and will we hope be given the full benefit of the law today in court. He drove his horses until they were about ready to drop, then tried to drive them into the river, and failing in this, beat them and raced them up Washington street. Finally the horses dropped to the road and he was arrested barely escaping a beating at the hands of enraged citizens.

Straw hats and parasols made their appearance on Main street yesterday and they have apparently come to stay.

The City of Norwich and the two boats of the Northern Road made extra heavy trips yesterday owing to the large increase in cargoes.

Friday, April 24, 1874—The opening of the new village hall at Taftville will be celebrated by a grand entertainment consisting of vocal and instrumental music and a performance by Prof. Andrus, celebrated illusionist fantaccinist and ventriloquist. All the popular feats of legerdermain and mesmeric illusions will be given and all the features of the program promise an agreeable evenings entertainment.

A new organ has been procured for the chapel of the new Park church to be opened at the Sunday morning service.

The new Greeneville bridge has been thoroughly tested and has been officially opened for travel.

Saturday, April 25, 1874—E. H. Palmer of Greeneville is thus far champion of fishermen. He returned yesterday with a splendid string of 14 trout, two of which weighed a pound each, and with others very nearly as corpulent.

The Steamboat train from Allyn's Point met with a serious accident yesterday morning when about three quarters of a mile from that point, two of the cars being thrown from the track and both Cushing, the baggage master probably fatally injured. The train was made up of five cars. Mr. Cushing was thrown forward in the car and the heated stove with a quantity of baggage fell upon him. John James, the express messenger escaped injury by jumping through the car door into the river. Mr. Cushing was badly burned.

Uncas Lodge, No. 11, of the Ancient and Honorable Order of Odd Fellows will celebrate the 55th anniversary of the institution of Odd Fellowship in the United States next Monday evening. Past Grand J. J. Twiss will deliver an address upon the occasion and a number of grand lodge officers are expected to be present. The meeting is to be held in the lodge room in the building erected by the lodge on Water street about 30 years ago.

The Railroad avenue farmers boast of the best horticultural show in this city, comprising a solitary onion plant and twelve spears of grass.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

The Obstinate Ram

Now, let me see. I had to finish the last story so suddenly when the old Billy Goat scratched his left ear with his little stubby tail that I hardly remember what he did after that. But, anyway, before he did very much more Uncle Lucky said:

"Tell me, Mr. Goat, has your ferryboat taken many bunny children over to the picnic grounds?"

"Lots and some more," replied the old goat captain. "And all the Bunny Boys, too, with a fife and drum corps. Flags were flying and everybody was shouting:

He stood in front of the Luckymobile.

"Bunny Boys, good luck to you
You're a dandy looking crew;
Danny Fox once sees your gun.
Goodness! how he'll turn and run.
He'll regret the day you come,
With your flag and sword and drum."

"You don't say so," exclaimed Uncle Lucky. "Take us across," and he drove the Luckymobile on to the ferryboat, which creaked and groaned as it paddled across the river, for it was an old fashioned craft, you see, with great big paddle wheels on each side.

On reaching the opposite shore the little rabbits cranked up the Luckymobile and honked the horn three times and a half. Then away they went over the bumps and over the stones, until their teeth rattled and so did their bones. But they didn't care for they were so fat they couldn't have squeezed in a number nine hat.

Well, by and by, they came to a field in which were a lot of sheep, with little short tails and black noses.

At once, one sheep, whose name was Mr. Ram, became very disagreeable and wouldn't let them pass. He stood in front of the Luckymobile, his head down and horns pointed right at the brass lamps.

"Won't you please get out of the way?" asked Uncle Lucky, honking the horn and whistling through his fingers, but Mr. Ram was dreadfully obstinate which means even worse than contrary, you know.

"No, I won't," he answered. "You have no right to ride over my meadow," and he started to butt the Luckymobile.

"Stop, I say," cried Uncle Lucky. "You'll spill all the electricity."

But Mr. Ram kept right on and pretty soon, one of the lamps fell off, making Uncle Lucky so angry that he threw a lollypop at the ugly old ram, hitting him on the end of his nose.

Oh, dear! I hope that dreadful ram
Will not, poor Uncle Lucky slam,
Nor knock his wedding stovepipe off
Or give to him the hopping cough.

And the next time I'll tell you what happened after that, unless the postman brings me a bottle of milk instead of a bill from my friend the tailor man.

Contests in School Subjects Feature State Fair

Believing that the educational value of school exhibits is in the attendance of the children, contests with children from other schools, and new friendships formed, rather than in the usual exhibit work for display, the Nevada State Board of education featured contests in school subjects at the educational exhibit of the Las Vegas Southern Nevada State Fair.

In the sewing contest dresses for little girl models were made by high-school girls. At the close of the contest the little models appeared before the audience in their new dresses. Winners in the shorthand and typing contests were two girls who had come 228 miles across the desert to take part in the event.

An unusual opportunity for social contact was afforded by the tented community on the fair grounds, which provided living quarters for the visitors and brought together children from widely separated and isolated towns.

There are millions of people in China who do not eat rice and perhaps have never seen it. In North China wheat, millet, Indian corn, Kafir corn, beans, and sweet potatoes constitute the principal articles of diet.

WESTERLY

Frank N. Macomber, a member of Merrill post, American Legion, of Westerly, left town Friday morning for Boston. Today (Saturday) he will attend the fifth annual reunion of the 301st Signal Battalion, of which he was a member during the World war. The reunion will be held at the American House, Hanover street.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Ferringo with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Murano, left Westerly today (Saturday) by automobile for Quincy, Mass. Today at 6 o'clock they will attend the wedding of Mr. Ferringo's nephew, Nicholas S. Ferringo, in that city.

Shortly before 7.30 o'clock the Chevrolet coupe, owned and driven by William D. Cross, accompanied by James D. Docking of Westerly while backing out of the Westerly railroad station yard on route for Bradford, was in collision with the big Mack truck of the C. L. Carpenter & Co. of Pawtucket, which was being backed into the station yard by the driver, Mr. Hopkins, preparatory to a trip to Chicopee, Mass. The right side of the hood of the coupe was bent and punched in and the mudguard and fender were badly bent. The occupants escaped injury. Many of the passengers on the 7.30 accommodation train took some of the five minutes station stop to view the accident. The truck had just taken gas at the filling station and the driver claimed that before backing he saw nothing behind him, the mirror of the truck was on the opposite side from which the collision occurred. The force of the crash slid the coupe sideways for a distance of fifteen to twenty feet. Deputy Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell, en route to Bradford, directed that Chief of Police Brown be called and the chief later arrived and made investigations. The damages will probably be settled by mutual agreement.

The Friday morning session of the Third district court was a lengthy one, when many criminal cases were tried. Clerk M. Walter Flynn, Jr., read the following docket:

Criminal Docket

State, Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, complainant vs. Antonio Salemeno. Ready.

Civil Docket

Whittan Machine Co. vs. William McKenzie. Nisi docket.

Cornelius Conway vs. Thomas Rual. Nisi.

G. P. Tuscano vs. Frank Canalbo. Nisi.

Charles Goldberg vs. Henry Ferrond. Continued one week.

Joseph Ferraro vs. Louis Weisinger. One week.

E. P. Greene vs. William B. Rathbun, Ledwidge for the plaintiff and Gallagher for the defendant. Ready.

Westerly Light and Power Co. vs. Mystic Mfg. Co.

W. H. Reades vs. Charles Bransfield. Continued one week.

Application for supplementary proceedings, John Pannova, doing business as the American Confectionery company of Norwich vs. John Palasolo, represented by John Dunn, in whose absence the case was marked ready to be taken up one week later.

Motion to assign Westerly Motor Inc. vs. Charles Quinn. Set down for May 9th.

Additional criminal cases—

State vs. Concetta Liotta. Ready.

State vs. Antonio Salemeno. Ready.

State vs. Joseph Salemano. Continued one week.

State vs. Pasquale Salemano. Continued one week.

And in the matter of Mary Noyes Rogers vs. Louis Deutch, S. H. Davis for the plaintiff announced the case was ready.

In the Third district court Friday morning, Judge Michael J. Turano heard four liquor cases, three intoxication cases, one automobile case and a civil case in trespass and ejectment. A number of other criminal and civil cases were put over.

In the case of the State vs. Victor Gervasini of Bradford, charged with possession and sale of intoxicating liquor, defendant pleaded not guilty and the cases were continued until May 2 for trial. Surety was fixed at $200 on each count.

Kenneth Bennett, 19, was before the court, charged with operating a motor vehicle in a reckless manner on April 14. His arrest followed an automobile collision at the corner of Dixon and High streets, in which his car collided with a machine driven by Mrs. Carl Crandall. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued to May 2, surety being fixed at $500.

John Hayworth, Patrick McCarthy and James Danahey, arrested on Perkins avenue, April 25, were charged with intoxication. They pleaded guilty and McCarthy and Danahey were fined $5 and costs, while Hayworth drew a fine of $15 and costs, it being his second appearance before the court in seven months.

In the case of State vs. Antonio Salimeno Leo F. Holland of the Colbert Detective Agency testified that he visited the Salimeno store on Pleasant street on March 26, together with a friend, and purchased three drinks of gin at 25 cents a throw, also a pint of liquor for $250 from Antonio Salimeno. He turned over the pint to Chief Brown of Westerly the following day.

Chief Brown said he took a sample of the liquor to State Chemist Albert Fenner for analysis. Mr. Fenner told of the liquor being delivered to him and said that his analysis showed it to contain 39.68 per cent alcohol, and that it was suitable for beverage purposes.

The defense presented no witnesses. Judge Turano found the defendant guilty and sentenced him to pay a fine of $100 and costs. An appeal was taken and bail was fixed at $200.

The procedure in the case of the state vs. James Salimeno, charged with a sale of intoxicating liquor, was about the same as in the preceding case. Thomas F. Murphy, another detective from the Colbert agency in Providence, testified that he purchased a pint of gin from James Salimeno on March 26, and that he turned it over to Chief Brown. He in turn took it to the chemist who found it to contain 38.40 per cent alcohol.

The defendant was found guilty in this case and was fined $100 and costs. He also took an appeal and bail was fixed at $200.

When the case of the state vs. Concetta Liotta was called, Mrs. Liotta appeared without a lawyer and conducted her own defense. Detective Murphy testified to having purchased a quart of Scotch whiskey at the Black Coffee house on Pleasant street March 26. He said the liquor was sold to him for $8 by Mrs. Liotta. He turned the evidence over to Chief Brown and it was then taken to the chemist, whose analysis showed 40.53 per cent alcohol.

Mrs. Liotta cross-examined the witnesses and then took the stand. She said she had never seen the detectives before and that she had no liquor to sell in her place.

Due to a technicality in the writ which claimed that the defendant had liquor in her possession in August, 1923, Judge Turano continued the case until next Friday for sentence.

The trial of all the liquor cases was conducted for the state by Town Solicitor John Ferguson.

No one was present to claim a quart of wine seized in a raid in the Louis Salimeno case a short time ago and the property was declared forfeited to the state.

Judge Turano declared a 15-minute recess, and at 11 o'clock trial of the trespass and ejectment case of Greene vs Rathbun was started.

Four employes of C. B. Cottrell & Sons company claims the honor of opening the bathing season, though the distinction is one unexpectedly thrust upon them. While Everett Sheldon, Douglas Buchanan, Leonard Burnham and George G. Stillman were crossing the Pawcatuck river Thursday noon in a 11-foot skiff, making their usual noon trip from the Cottrell shops to their homes on the Westerly side for dinner, the boat capsized, throwing its four occupants into the chilly water. They clambered ashore on the east side of the river and speeded to their respective homes to get a dry change of clothes and dinner. The skiff, after being towed ashore by the swimmers and drained of water, was used by them to return to the Cottrell plant. The men were back at work on time.

Winthrop W. Barber of Pawcatuck was in Providence Thursday.

Bernard Baer of New York was a business visitor in Westerly and Pawcatuck Thursday.

Dr. John Champlin was a visitor on Thursday in Providence.

Pawcatuck lodge, No. 90, F. and A. M., of Pawcatuck, Frank Fried, master, at a communication held in the Masonic rooms on High street Thursday evening worked the first or entered apprentice degree.

Mrs. E. Helsten, who in the summer is proprietor of the Kenyon House at Quonochontaug, has arrived in Westerly from St. Petersburg, Fla., where she has spent the winter.

E. M. Reynolds, a summer visitor at Pleasant View, has left Orlando, Fla., where he has passed the winter and is coming north by automobile.

R. C. Everson, formerly of Westerly, having spent the past winter in Florida, is reported as motoring north with intention of stopping over in Westerly, on his return to his home in Boston.

Dr. Edwin Whitford left Thursday to attend the Connecticut State Dental association meeting at Waterbury.

PENDLETON HILL

The birthday social held at the parsonage Saturday night was a success Many former residents were present and renewed acquaintances. A supper of cold boiled ham, salads, relishes, rolls, cake and coffee was served. The tables were attractively arranged and lighted by candles. During the supper the following toasts were responded to in a very interesting manner, with Rev. E. P. Matthewson toastmaster: Reminiscences of My Boyhood Days in the Sunday School, Judge Charles C. Gray, North Stonington village; How Best to Raise Our Budget, Deacon Elmer E. Coon; Our Faith in Missions, Mrs. James Brooks, Andover, Mass.; The Missionary Spirit, Mrs. Robert Milne, Dorchester, Mass; Instigators and the Challenge of This Birthday Party, Miss Sarah F. Palmer.

A letter was read which was very interesting and which was written by Rev. Hamilton Chapman, a former resident here for many years.

Included in the invitations were little bags in which each one was expected to put as many pennies as each was years old and according to some amounts received there were some people of extreme old age. Deacon Coon, Mrs. Reuben Cook and Miss Lucy Lester were appointed to open the bags and later it was announced that over $100 had been cleared. The success of the supper was due to the efforts of Mrs. Charles H. Cottrell, assisted by the Ladies' Aid society.

An impressive Easter sermon was preached by Rev. E. P. Matthewson Sunday. An Easter selection was sung by the choir and Miss Cecile Palmer sang The Palms. The Easter offering included the dollars which each member of the Ladies' Aid society had pledged to earn, also the mite boxes. At the close of the service the ordinance of the Lord's supper was observed. The church was decorated with flowers given in memory of Mrs. Mary Palmer and Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson. The announcement was made that the one thousand dollars, the apportionment for this church toward the new world movement fund, had been raised with a surplus of nearly twenty-five dollars. Owing to such a large number of non-resident members the work of raising the fund fell to the lesser number, and through the efforts of Mrs. Charles Cottrell, who had charge of the fund and Mrs. George Palmer, president of the Ladies' Aid society the work was accomplished.

Guests at Ferndale for the week-end included Mrs. James Broks Mr. and Mrs. Robert Milne and children, Mrs. Merion Elwell and Mrs. Whitaker and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown and daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Kolstenien recently entertained friends from New York.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Totten from New York have arrived at their home for the season.

Care of Hides.

Only sound hides free from cuts on the flesh side, well taken off, of regular even pattern, properly salted and cured, can command a high price and make good leather. Greater care must be taken in summer than in winter in salting, curing and marketing hides, especially by the farmer or the country butcher who has only an occasional hide to cure. Partly decayed hides are practically useless.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

Norwich grange, No. 178, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening in Steiner hall with Worthy Master Arthur W. Avery, presiding and at the business session it was voted to begin the meetings hereafter at 7 p. m. standard time, until further notice. Eight applications were received for membership.

Mrs. William S. Murray, chairman of the ways and means committee, announced that at the next meeting there would be a paid meat pie supper from 4.30 to 6.30, standard time. It was also voted to have a large May basket for the grange for which each member is expected to bring some article that will be appropriate to fill some need of the grange.

The programme for the evening was provided by the home economics committee, Mrs. Jacob Gallup, chairman, Mrs. James Palmer, Mrs. Walter Brinkman, and was carried out under the direction of the lecturer, Mrs. Ida L. Richardson. The following numbers made a delightful entertainment, Piano solo, Papillon d'Armour Valse, Miss Lucille Guile, with encore; duet, In The Starlight, and encore, The Joys of Spring, Misses Mabel and Esther Frink, with Miss Mabel Kanahan at the piano; all these from Pachaug grange.

Billings Avery of Ledyard grange gave an instructive talk upon the farm bureau work and was followed by the solo, The Song of the Open Sea and an encore, The Cooper's Son, by William Rush. Mrs Billings Avery spoke of the woman's part in the farm bureau work and a well rendered solo was given by Miss Mabel Kanahan, who sang Welcome Pretty Primrose, with At the Dawning for an encore.

The Pachaug members were given a rousing vote of thanks and refreshments were served by the feast committee.

DEGREE OF POCAHONTAS.

Sebequonash council, No. 11, met at 58 Broadway Wednesday afternoon, instead of in the evening with a large attendance. Great Pocahontas Mary Champagne of Rockville paid her official visit to the council and spoke briefly in an encouraging way. There were remarks by several members which were also enjoyed.

At the close of the meeting a buffet luncheon was served by the entertainment committee.

On Thursday evening a number of members trailed to the Hunting Grounds of Hiawatha council, No. 15, of New London and with other councils took part in welcoming the Great Chiefs who were visiting the council. There was initiation, also splendid work was done by the degree team, much credit being due to the drill mistress, who had given much of her time to perfecting the team in the marching and work.

The feast of corn and venison was a fitting beginning of wha followed during the session. From start to finish the affair was one of the most enjoyable held by Eastern Connecticut councils in many months.

HIBERNIANS.

The regular meeting of Division No. 1, A. O. H., was held Sunday afternoon in the A. O. H. hall on Main street with President Martin V. Burke in the chair. Several applications were received and plans were made for a large class initiation in the near future.

FORESTERS OF AMERICA.

Court City of Norwich, No. 63, met in regular session Tuesday evening in Steiner hall, with Chief Ranger Maurice Looby in the chair. The resignation of Dr. Donohue was accepted and a vote of thanks tendered to him for his faithful service during the time he had been the court doctor. The degree was worked on several candidates by the degree team which carried out the work in a creditable manner. Several applications for membership were balloted upon and it is expected that a large class will go through the mysteries of Forestry on May 27th. The amusement committee announced that plans are being worked out for another smoker in the near future.

The court was visited by a number of brothers from Putnam court and after the meeting a social hour was enjoyed.

EASTER STAR

There was a large attendance at the meeting of Sachem chapter, No. 57, held Wednesday evening at the Masonic Temple and considerable business was transacted. Worthy Matron, Mrs. D. Louise Atterbury was in the chair and there was initiation and balloting on several applications.

Announcement was made by Chairman, Mrs. Charles Wright, that arrangements had been completed for the dance to be given next week by the chapter at the Wauregan House ballroom, and it is expected that there will be a large number of couples attending this affair.

The chapter Sewing Circle is to hold its next meeting on the afternoon of May 13 at the home of Mrs. Clarence Barber on Laurel Hill avenue when work for sales will be done. Plans are also being made for initiation at the first meeting of the chapter in May.

ODD FELLOWS

There was a short meeting of Shetucket lodge No. 27 Tuesday evening at Odd Fellows' hall, Noble Grand Walter Kelley presiding. Plans were made for the big smoker to be given at the meeting next Tuesday evening. Cards are to be sent out to all lodge members and two additional tickets are to be furnished, that each member may bring two friends with him as guests of the lodge.

A fine program has been arranged consisting of orchestral music, vocal and instrumental selections by lodge members and imported talent, and several members of the lodge will be called upon for brief remarks. Following the smoker refreshments will be served by the entertainment committee.

The regular meeting of Uncas lodge, No. 11, was held Monday evening at Odd Fellows' hall on Main street. Owing to the death of Vice Grand Frederick Blanchard, the meeting was short. Noble Grand Herbert Spencer presided.

RED MEN

There was a large attendance at the last meeting of Mohegan Tribe, No. 64, Sachem chapter, Geo. F. Farrel presiding. Following the transaction of routine business Sachem Farrell announced the closing of the membership drive which was very successful. Nine applications were read and these with two received at the previous meeting were acted upon favorably.

On motion of Junior Sagamore Raymond N. Harris it was voted to present Past Sachem G. A. Deane a past sachem's jewel in recognition of his untiring efforts in behalf of Mohegan tribe. It was announced that on April 30th a special meeting is to be held for the purpose of initiating a class of 25 candidates.

Announcement was also made that Great Sachem William E. Fairbanks of Naugatuck is expected to present the prizes for the membership drive and that Deputy E. H. Rose of New London will present the jewel to Past Sachem Deane.

Among the visitors expected for the meeting will be members from New London, Essex and Westerly, among the latter John E. Morrison, great sachem of Rhode Island.

EAGLES

The last regular meeting of Norwich Aerie, No. 247, was held Monday with Edward V. Mullins presiding.

As this was nomination night for officers for the ensuing year the following were nominated:

Worthy president, Timothy Fields; worthy vice president, George Nadolny; chaplain, August Hastedt; secretary, John Leirich; treasurer, Charles O. Wright; inside guard, Henry A. Congdon; outside guard, John Bowne; trustee for three years, Edward J. Mullins, Herman Arendt.

Routine business was transacted. It was also announced that the election of officers would take place at the next regular meeting to be held Monday, May 5 at 8 p.m.

As the present board of trustees has been very busy in re-decorating the lodge room they expect to have everything in readiness for this meeting.

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

A joint social evening by the Catholic Ladies of Columbus is to be held next Wednesday evening at Elks hall when cards and dancing will be on the programme of entertainment. The members are privileged to invite their friends and several delightful hours are promised for those who are fortunate enough to be included in the party.

MACCABEES

W. B. A. of the Maccabees held its regular meeting with Mrs. John F. Stein, commander, in the chair and Mrs. E. Hass of Hartford, district deputy, as a visitor. A successful whist was held at the home of Mrs. Rachel Peterson of Boswell avenue and the next is to be held next Tuesday night.

SONS OF VETERANS

John F. Gallagher, of Waterbury, was elected commander of the Connecticut division Sons of Veterans, U. S. A., at the close of the two days' session of the 40th annual encampment at Stamford, Friday. Harry E. Gregory, of Stamford, was chosen senior vice commander; Charles R. Brown, New London, junior vice commander; N. S. Buckingham, of Milford, R. R. Hagard of Ansonia, and Wilbur S. Ford, of Milford, members of the division council; R. R. Hagard, of Ansonia, chaplain; N. S. Buckingham, Milford, councillor and I. C. Jenks, of New Haven, secretary and

Delegates to the national convention in Boston, August 6, were chosen as follows: John T. Judson, Ansonia; E. L. Graves and Charles Munich, Bridgeport; John Kammerer, Hartford, and W. W. Hoyt, Stamford, S. Dednan, was elected patriotic instructor; D. W. Whiteman, personal aide, and F. A. Haviland, guide.

The convention voted down the proposition of making a 25 cent assessment of each member for memorial work and also the proposal of an assessment of $1 on each application fee for the same. The proposed age deduction from 18 to 16 years was defeated.

The Daughters of Veterans, in convention in conjunction with the brother association, elected Eva Chapman, of Derby, president; Irene Mack, Waterbury, vice president; Jennie Goddard, New Britain; Edna Gladding, Naugatuck, and Stella Blair, New Haven, members of the division council; Laura Dutton, of Waterbury, treasurer; Florence Sutton, Greenwich patriotic instructor; Nellie Selleck, Stamford, chaplain; Anna Rhodes, New Britain, inspector; Lucy Edwards, Stamford, secretary; Gertrude L. Judson, Ansonia, chief of staff; N. S. Buckingham, Milford, councillor; Lorette Chaffee, Derby, chief aide; Mary C. Bassett, New Haven, personal aide, and Mabel Wixon, Stamford, installing officer.

The officers elected were installed by Anna S. Finck, of Indianapolis, national president, and Alwyn Gerkhardt, of New Jersey, national vice president.

JUNIOR AMERICAN MECHANICS

The Junior O. U. A. M., met in regular session, last Wednesday evening at the Buckingham Memorial Hall, with Vice Councilor Elmer Leaseman, presiding. There was a large attendance. The supreme councilor on high, calling Br. Fred Blanchard, away from our land of toil and strife, was a very unexpected call. There seemed to be a shadow of darkness cast over the meeting as Br. Blanchard was liked very much by every member of the council. All of the members are in deep sympathy with his family.

Roosevelt Council, No. 8, of New London is to work the third degree on Monday night, and has extended an invitation to Buckingham Council.

As the council has several candidates it is expected that there will be a large delegation going down from Norwich. Buckingham council is still going strong in the membership drive and feels sure of capturing the first prize that is to be given by the state council of Connecticut, if the members don't let procrastination interfere with their plans.

MOOSEHEART LEGION

Women of Mooseheart legion, Norwich chapter, No. 124, met Thursday evening at Moose Home, Laurel Hill. Senior Regent Mrs. Anna Crowe presiding. Plans are being made for a whist; also a rummage sale to be held in the near future. The next regular meeting is to be held May 8 at 8 o'clock (D. S. T.) until further notice. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served following the meeting.

Mouse's Keen Scent.

An interesting example of the power of smell in field mice came under observation, writes a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian. He says: "I was staying at a house in the country where the field mice easily gain admittance by climbing up the ivy and entering the casement windows. This happened while I was there and, finding a litter on my dressing table, I discovered that these little creatures had found—what many people intend to do—that my beads were simply beans and peas painted and varnished. The mice soon nibbled off the paint and left my chain with several peas lying naked and partly eaten. Again, I carelessly left a half-eaten biscuit in the pocket of my coat, which was hanging in the wardrobe. The mice smelled this, got into the wardrobe and actually ate through the coat and then into the pocket to get at the food."

England's Oldest Tree.

An English correspondent, writing about England's trees, says: Some 12 years ago an interested person wrote to Lord Harcourt, then Mr. Lewis Harcourt, first commissioner of works, suggesting that a fence should be placed around the famous old oak tree in Hampton Court park. He received a prompt reply: "This fine old oak tree . . . is especially under the care of the keepers and staff of the park, who have strict instructions from Mr. Harcourt as to its preservation and protection." The tree in question, which is by the Long water, is said to be over 1,000 years of age, and is possibly the oldest tree in England. Its trunk, two feet from the ground, measures 42 feet in circumference. It is hollow, of course, and affords standing room in its interior for a dozen persons.

Fighting Fishes.

Prize-fighting fishes are very common on the coast of Japan and Siam. Their pugilistic tendencies are most pronounced, so much so that the natives make them take the place of boxers in Siam, and arrange matches in glass bowls between two of the species, heavy bets being laid on the result.

Discovery of X-Rays.

The property of X-rays to penetrate solid matter was discovered by accident through leaving a key on top of a desk beneath which photographic plates were kept. When the plates were developed the shadow of the key

LEBANON

A play, Three Pegs, was given at the auditorium of Lyman Memorial hall high school Thursday evening by a group of high school girls. The auditorium was crowded, every seat being taken, while many persons were standing in the hall. Each in the cast did remarkably well. Much of the success was due to Richard Bishop, who is in the theatrical business and was a great aid in arranging the stage, etc., also to Miss Christina Reid, who assisted in coaching the players. Between the acts music was furnished by other members of the high school, including a piano selection by Miss Eleanor Burgess, Miss Beatrice Littlefield and Miss Margaret Wyman, also two violin solos by Harry Bricken. Home made candy was sold by the girls. $74.25 was cleared. As a token of their appreciation the class presented Miss Reid a beautiful bouquet of roses and Mr. Bishop a billfold made of alligator skin. The money cleared is to go toward paying for the piano, also for a new curtain for the stage. The play is to be given at Colchester at some future date.

Following was the cast: Emily Weston, a woman of thirty-five, rich, cultured, Ruth Standish; Aunt Euphelia, fifty, who sees no romance in life, does everything because of a morbid sense of duty, Sara Robinson; Marguerite, ill-mannered, habitual user of slang, Lena Leavitt, Madge, dainty, delicate in health, sweet disposition, Helen Taylor; Peg, vivacious, earnest, sincere, eager to make others happy, Ruth Winograd; the three Pegs; Sarah, the cook, Imogene Manning; Lizzie, her sister, the maid, Rose Levanthal; Mrs. Contl, Edna Madley; Mrs. Barclay, Emily Weston's refined friend, about forty, Ruth Campbell.

Act I—Sitting room at Miss Weston's, morning. Act II—Same scene, two weeks later, twilight. Act III—Same scene, three weeks later.

Easter Sunday was observed at the churches with special sermons and music. At the First Congregational church a feature was a solo, Open the Gates of the Temple, by the pastor, Rev. Stanley Sellick.

At the Baptist church, Rev. A. G. Littlefield's subject was An Easter Morning; Matt. 28:6. The topic for next Sunday is The Farmer Who Fed His Soul on Corn.

In the evening, at the Baptist church, fine Easter exercises were held, a cantata and a drama. The First Easter Morn, given by the young people. It closed with a solo by the pastor, Beautiful Gardens of Prayer. The church was decorated with flowering plants, Easter lilies, tulips and hyacinths.

Father and Daughter

By Joella Johnson

"SENT for you, Betty," said Mr. Horace Tremont, leaning back in his chair and looking very fierce indeed.

I sent for you, because we might as well thrash this thing out now, as any time. Perhaps had your mother lived, she might have influenced you and this disagreeable task might not have fallen upon my already burdened shoulders."

Betty studied her slim silken clad ankles and neat pumps critically, and suppressed a yawn gracefully.

"Just what have I done, father, to add to your worries?" she asked innocently.

"It isn't what you have done—it's what you are doing. Now, Betty, let's be done with beating around the bush, and get down to business; my time is valuable."

"So is mine, father." Betty glanced at the little gold watch. "Twenty minutes more, exactly, and I have an engagement for luncheon. And besides, really, I'm not beating around the bush at all, for I can't possibly think of one thing I may be doing that could bring censure."

"In that case," answered Mr. Horace Tremont, biting the end off his cigar a trifle viciously, "I'll come straight to the point. It's about young Preston.

"Upon your recommendation and because of your affiliation in Red Cross work, I engaged Preston as my private secretary. So far, all well and good. Then, without asking my approval, my daughter allows my private secretary to make love to her, which is neither well nor good.

"They dine, dance, auto and swim together, under my very nose, and expect to get away with it.

"Now comes Harkins, in the opposite building, with a story: Young Preston is making love to my daughter, he says, that he may bask in the sunshine of luxury via my money.

"Who is he?" asks someone else.

"'Tis funny," insists another, 'Betty doesn't care to introduce him,' and so it goes. Who is he? I question also. And why does a $35-a-week secretary make advances to my daughter?"

"Mr. Harkins offered Mr. Preston $10 more a week if he would come to him, did you know that?" asked Betty, spitefully.

"Which only strengthens my argument," answered Mr. Horace Tremont, grimly. "Mr. Harkins has no charming daughter to assist him in finally getting in soft, and there you are."

"Dad, there is no idea of 'getting in soft' in Mr. Preston's head, I assure you. And as to who he is, and why we stand aloof, as it were—well, that, of course, is our secret, and when the time comes, why, we'll explain. That's all."

"Betty," Mr. Horace Tremont leaned forward and spoke almost patiently, "I've been in business now for thirty years, and I guess I'm as shrewd as they come. I know the world, and I know men. I know my daughter, and her needs, also her weaknesses. And one of her most characteristic weaknesses is to overestimate the true value of folks.

"Now, you think this young fellow is deeply in love with you just for your own charming self, and I think he's a fortune-hunter. Think it over. Hasn't your dad's judgment a right to count?"

"I have inherited a great many traits from you, I imagine, father." She raised serene blue eyes to his.

"I'm shrewd, too, but you must admit I know my own needs far better than you do. And I've always felt the need of broad shoulders and black hair, and I leave it to you, did you ever see finer specimens than Mr. Preston possesses?"

"If you please, we'll stick to business," he said.

"But we are sticking to business," Betty dimpled over so charmingly. "I'm simply trying to tell you what drew me to him in the first place. And when I found that they accompanied honesty of thought and character, is it any wonder I encouraged him?"

"Will!" fairly roared her father. "So it's reached that stage, has it?"

"It's reached a more advanced stage than that even." Betty flicked an imaginary speck from her father's immaculate cuff.

"You see, 'Will' is much too austere and formal, so I generally make it 'Billy.'"

The swivel chair holding Mr. Tremont turned abruptly until he faced his desk. He pressed one of the bells under his desk decidedly.

"Tell Mr. Preston I want to see him," he told the office boy who answered his ring.

"Perhaps," he added, without looking at his daughter, "we can appeal to his manhood."

"Hello, Billy," called Betty, cheerily, as a tall young man entered the sanctum and closed the door after him.

"Why, hello, dear," the young man answered, eagerly.

"Just a minute, Preston." Mr. Tremont halted him with a gesture. "For the first time in my career there is labor trouble in my office."

"Just what do you mean by that, sir?" asked the young man, respectfully.

"Just what I said—labor trouble. I engaged a secretary to labor for my best interests and there is no end of trouble over it. He wins my confidence and then, behind my back, makes love to my daughter. Wouldn't you call that labor trouble?"

The keen dark eyes of Mr. Preston twinkled, but his voice was quite grave.

"I shouldn't call it that," he answered, looking straight at his employer. "Betty," he said to the girl, "perhaps we may as well tell him now." Betty nodded her approval.

"Mr. Tremont, you and Garrett Bowloin were once good friends and later bitter enemies. Everybody in town knows of your absurd quarrel and the stubbornness on both sides to make up.

"When Betty and I met we thought if I could establish myself in your good graces, as she has already done in Garrett Bowdoin's eyes, all would be well. You see, Mr. Tremont, I am Garrett Bowdoin's nephew and sole heir."

The man at the desk regarded them from under his thick brows. Then he turned suddenly and pressently they heard him talking over the 'phone.

"Garrett," he was saying, "I've been an old dub, but will you forget it and come over to dinner and play checkers as you used to do?" And the breathless pair heard an answering laugh and a "Glad to get the chance, Horace."

"The labor trouble being settled," said Betty, demurely, "We can keep our luncheon engagement, can't we, dad?"

Her father's arm drew her close for a moment.

"Billy," he called quite familiarly to a tall young man with broad shoulders and black hair, his manner most dignified, but his eyes twinkling, "Billy, what do you consider the proper way to settle labor trouble?"

Young Preston's strong, brown hand reached out until a soft, little white hand nestled tenderly in his own. And then, his keen, dark eyes smiling into the shy blue ones uplifted to his, he answered:

"A union."

Vacationing At Home

By Phil Moore

FANNY BUSH was one of those rare women whom everybody likes too well for her own comfort. From the day she moved into Pink street she has been besieged by neighbors, who adored her as soon as they saw her. Usually before breakfast Mrs. McPherson, her nearest "next," began by sending her lowers for the table. After breakfast Mrs. Aldrich ran in for a chat. She was frequently joined by one or two others.

In time Fanny learned to go on with her work in their presence, but it was annoying especially as these other women kept maids. After luncheon, when she had dressed, and went to sit upon the porch with some sewing or a book, Mrs. Jennings or Mrs. Barker would dash up in a car and snatch her away for a ride. Evenings there was always some invitation to tatertere with a quiet chat with Arthur or a perusal of the new magazines.

"I never get a chance to read a word any more," Fanny told her husband, "and as for sewing—you see, dear, I've resorted to 'ready madies,' I know they really like me and wish to be kind, but it is rather troublesome to have all one's time pre-empted this way. I never was much given to society, either. I'd much rather go my own way quietly. But if I so much as hint at my dissatisfaction I shall alienate them all forever, and they are dears."

"I'll tell you, Fanny," the young husband said, "You'll have to go West with me on that business trip next week."

"Clear to Missouri!" Fanny looked aghast. "Oh, Arthur, I couldn't. I hate traveling and besides we can't afford the expense. What I should like above all things would be to just shut the door on everybody while you are gone and read and lounge around in a kimono and eat what I pleased."

"Well, why don't you try it?"

Fanny laughed. "Dear! In this neighborhood? Why they'd be coming in through the windows to find me."

"You leave it to me, Fanny," he said. "I'll think of a plan. I'm not a lawyer for nothing. There must be some way for you to get a vacation from your neighbors without offending them."

However, although he racked his brains during the days that followed he was able to think of nothing. Neither was Fanny. At the last moment the unusual parting came so hard that she threw on her hat and coat and went as far as Bennington with him, a journey of several hours. She had not even time to tell her neighbors of the fact.

At Bennington she ran across an old school friend who persuaded her to stay over night and rummage the shops for bargains. It was evening of the next day when she returned home. All the houses on Pink street were in darkness except the brilliantly illuminated Jennings house on the corner.

"My goodness!" thought Fanny. "That reception— And I forgot all about it!"

As she unlocked the side door and entered her own house the great idea came to her—the idea that she and Arthur had both in vain sought. She would have her vacation right in her own house. The fact that she had gone away and had not returned for the reception would lead people to believe that she had actually yielded to second thought and had accompanied him on his journey. She laughed aloud at the mere thought of the prank. Everything seemed to conspire to help her in her plan. The weather was cool and the days long and her larder held ample stores.

Fanny slept late next morning. Then without combing her hair or dressing beyond a kimono and a pair of bedroom slippers she lit the oil stove and prepared her breakfast. After breakfast she sewed until lunch, which consisted of tinned biscuits and sardines. After lunch she lay down on the couch with a book. Twice the doorbell rang, but the callers, after studying the closed shutters and abandoned aspect of the house, departed. Supper was similar to lunch. It was raining and the house held a slightly musty odor. Fanny snapped on her shaded reading light and finished her book. Although it was 12 o'clock she did not feel in the least sleepy. She opened another book. The first chapters were dull, and before she had read far she was asleep in her chair.

She awakened suddenly as from a bad dream. The clock on the table pointed to 1. She had a feeling that things always happened around 1 o'clock and then she heard a noise! Instantly she realized that it had been a similar noise which had awakened her.

Once there had been burglars in the neighborhood. She had heard the story several times, but it had never impressed her. Arthur was always at home nights, and he had a pistol where he could get it easily. It was in his desk in the next room. Throwing off her fear, she arose. As she passed into the room she turned on the light and began to seek for the pistol. She had forgotten in which drawer of the desk it was; she had to open them all. One stuck so fast she could not pull it out. The pistol, of course, was in that drawer. She was going into panic. Those strange sounds were increasing. She understood them now. An attack was being made upon the window. The shutter was being forced open, the window raised. With a last desperate wrench she loosened the drawer. It flew open so suddenly that she lost her balance and went over backward into Arthur's revolving chair. As she fell her horrified eyes saw the drawer was empty! At that instant also she heard some one crawling through the window of the next room. She heard voices.

"Careful! Don't fire unless you have to!"

There were two of them, or more! Armed men with intent to kill if resistance was offered. She covered her face with her hands, but not before one awful scream had escaped her lips.

"Good heavens, it's Fanny Bush!"

She looked up tragically. Sam Barker and Louis McPherson were staring down at her from the doorway like two ghosts. Sam passed his hand over his stubby gray hair. His teeth were fairly chattering.

"It's Fanny Bush!" he repeated.

"Oh, Mr. Barker, I thought you were a burglar," Fanny wailed.

"And we thought you were! My wife's been watching your light for an hour. She got up to give Jimmy something for the toothache and saw the light coming out through a chink in the blind. We had burglars round here once, you see. Then she called me. And I got Louis. We thought you being away some rascal was after your wedding silver."

Fanny had begun to laugh hysterically. "I was looking for Arthur's pistol," she said, "I couldn't find it—"

"Lucky," said Louis McPherson; "there's nothing so deadly as a woman when she undertakes to fool with firearms. When'd you get home, Mrs. Bush? You've given us quite a scare."

"It's nothing to the scare you've given me," Fanny said. "I was only sitting up reading—"

"Well," said Sam Barker, "you better go over and spend the rest of the night at our house. My wife's just about having a fit."

And Fanny went. Moreover, she had to stay there until Arthur returned from his western business trip.

Time Test.

"Great Scott," cried the head clerk, "does it take you four hours to carry a message a mile and return?"

"Why," said the new office boy, "you told me to see how long it would take me to go there and back, so I did!"

The New Forest Ranger

By Claire Wesson

"MY heavens, Janet! Look how you waste time peeling those spuds; why don't you boil them, jackets and all?"

Janet's brown eyes flashed; then a hopeless look dragged down the corners of a normally sweet mouth.

"Oh, Dick! You never think it matters how I do things, and all my school lessons on making a home attractive just wasted on you, for you don't care, no matter how hard I try."

"I'm no softy! Give me plenty of grub and a place to sleep, and what do I care about your fol-de-rols? Oilcloth on the table! Shine up the tin plates! Posies in a mug!"

A sneer twisted his none too pleasant expression still more, as the man swung out of the cabin.

Janet let her busy hands hang idle a moment in utter discouragement. She had pulled her chair into the doorway, where, as she peeled the potatoes, her eyes could sweep over a wide range down the green mountainside to a valley threaded with the silver cobwebs of rivers. The great peaks towered again on the farther side, blue, green and wonderful. The clouds rested on their crests and cool winds came drifting over to the lonely girl; but these brought no message of comfort today.

A happy girlhood in the valley school had been Janet's. The girls all worked for their board and she had delighted to put into practice the dainty household devices the school taught.

Was it only a year ago that the death of her quiet, hard working father had brought her back to the cabin of the brother who refused to provide more money for "schooling her to stay over night and rummage the shops for bargains. It was evening of the next day when she returned home. All the houses on Pink street were in darkness except the brilliantly illuminated Jennings house on the corner.

"My goodness!" thought Fanny. "That reception— And I forgot all about it!"

Two In a Canoe

By Hazel Courtney

LENORE was making speed. Crouching low to avoid the branches that overhung the river, she was fairly digging her paddle into the water and jerking it swiftly back for the next stroke. An alder stretched out its green fingers and snatched at the net which confined the wayward gold of Lenore's wonderful hair. The alder did more than tear the net; it loosened the pins and let the soft waves of hair fall free about the girl's shoulders. Tossing her head, Lenore sped on. The canoe leaped convulsively up the river.

Lenore was in a vicious mood. Less than an hour before, she had returned to the donor a perfectly good solitaire diamond set in platinum. She had never supposed that Bob would let her break the engagement. But he had, and had even seemed glad to be rid of her. The quarrel had been silly enough. It was over the matter of decorating the canoe that together they had planned to enter for the boat club regatta that night. Lenore had insisted upon pink lights in crepe paper rosebuds, and Bob had wanted a blue tartatan mist effect with Lenore at the stern as Maid of the Mist. Lenore had stamped her foot in fury as Bob showed no inclination to yield to her wishes. In the next moment she had flung his ring back at him and her engagement was broken. She had bounced down to the pier, jumped into the Ianthe, and paddled away in a rage.

And now, several miles from the boat club, Lenore was still angry. She struck at a muskrat as he leaped from the bank. She tried to knock a turtle from a snag with her paddle. Then an island invited her to land. Always a creature of impulse, she ran the canoe ashore and jumped out. Her white kid slipper caught in the mire and stuck fast. Poising on one foot, Lenore debated whether or not to retrieve the slipper, and petulantly decided to abandon it for the present. She hopped to the top of a little knoll, and, suddenly losing her balance, sat down precipitately on the grassy incline.

Turning over and lying out at full length, face down, she began to cry. Rage, blind fury, and an intense self-pity struggled within her for mastry; and a bitter disillusionment at the thought that the man she had loved had left her first impulsive suggestion that they part, filled her heart with a poignant ache that would not cease. Long she wept, until wearied to exhaustion, she caught her breath in great irregular gasps, sighed many times, and fell asleep.

Around the side of the island upon which Lenore had cried herself to sleep, the river ran with more current than was perceptible in the seemingly sluggish stream. Little by little the river teased at the grounded canoe, and finally drew it completely off from the shore.

It was the empty canoe that Bob met on his way up the river. Instantly he recognized the Ianthe, and a quick fear came over him. But when a survey of the paddles and cushions assured him that there had been no accident he concluded that Lenore, in her usual careless manner, had left the canoe unfastened on the bank and that she was somewhere high and dry by the river with no means of getting home.

After beaching the empty canoe Bob's first impulse was to leave Lenore to her own devices. She had surprised him with her fit of anger, and he had not reconciled this blazingly angry Amazon with the loving and lovable companion he had pictured her. But the strength of a kind of habit of doing things for Lenore made him reluctantly decide to go to her rescue.

Bob did not hurry. He dawdled along, exerting himself enough to make a slow progress against the current until he came to the island where Lenore slept. He saw traces of the keel of the Ianthe, and recognized with a quick thrill the white slipper in the mud.

Suddenly through an opening in the bushes he saw Lenore sleeping peacefully on the knoll with her lovely hair spread about her. As Bob watched her he forgot the petty quarrel, the angry departure; he forgot his surprise and his own sudden anger, and he knew then, as he had never known before, how much this girl meant to him and to his whole life.

On the opposite side of the narrow island he moored his canoe and waited. When the full yellow moon loomed over the black wall of pines Lenore opened her eyes. Remembering the events of the afternoon she sprang to her feet, and in the semi-darkness leaned over to pick her shoe out of the mud. Then she uttered a sharp cry. Her canoe was not there.

Tall and slender in the light of the moon, Lenore stood irresolutely on the edge of the island. The mist enshrouded her figure and seemed to catch and hold the moonlight in a hazy aura around the glory of her flowing hair. Her anger was gone, she was filled with a deep regret that she had quarreled so foolishly with Bob. Probably he was now at the regatta without her, some other girl playing the maid in his blue tartatan mist.

"Maid of the Mist," she cried suddenly, with a sob at the end. "Oh, Bob, if you were only here to see me you would know that I am your Maid of the Mist!"

"Are you, my darling?" Bob stepped out of the bushes and clasped her in his arms. "Are you, and will you be my own dear Mist Maid?"

The Maid of the Mist did not enter the regatta, for long after the prizes were awarded a man and a girl in an undecorated canoe slipped down out of the darkness to the boat club and, although for a moment they looked down at the gay canoes on the river, they saw only the light in each other's eyes.

Tough One.

"Do you call that a beefsteak? It makes me laugh."

"I'm glad to hear it, sir. Most people swear.

The man looked at the shining glass with its creamy contents, almost in bewilderment. "I seem to have struck an oasis in a desert—a desert of trees!"

He did full justice to Janet's food symphony in brown and gold; the fluffy mashed potatoes, yellow with cream, the smoking beans topped with crisp pork, the steamed brown bread stuccoed with plump raisins, and the custard pie whose thick and golden filling quivered under a meringue light as foam and over a crust that crumbled with flaky richness.

Dick ate in silence for once; perhaps the stranger's compliments for the menu twisted his mouth a bit, but he said nothing. He did not leave until Steve Sargent, the new forest ranger, had risen reluctantly from the shining white oilcloth and started on his way. Dick even grumbled an invitation when Sargent announced he would be back that way next week.

"This is a place to ride fasting seven days to get to at last. I hope I shan't wear out my welcome, but I'm afraid I'm going to try to this Summer."

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again!" teased Janet, releasing her hand from Sargent's hearty clasp—a clasp that yet had something in it so tender and reverent that she was to dream of it happily.

"That's a mighty good fellow if the tales I've heard are o. k.," said Dick, as he swung onto his own horse. "He seemed to take quite a shine to your fancy ways, Janet. Wouldn't be a bad thing for me to stand in with him for lumber reasons."

Janet only nodded in response; her eyes were fixed on the peaks beyond. They were still swimming like a blue lake, but her tears were happy ones now.

"What if I had given up in discouragement before today?" she asked herself, as she watched that distant figure turn to wave her a parting salute with his broad ranger's hat.

THE SPRING RAIN

I hear the feet of the sweet spring rain,
Dancing on roof and window pane;
The south wind tosses it to and fro,
As it softly calls to the earth below,
"Awake, oh, grass, for each bare field
Needs your emerald blades for a cloak and shield;
The hungry herds are calling you—
Come up, come up to the sun and dew!
They are waiting for you in the garden bowers;
O trees, spread out each folded leaf
And hide the nests from storm and thief;
Break up, oh, clods of frozen mould,
That the grain may grow and change to gold;
O, burgeoning buds, awaken, all—
I bring you the dear Spring's welcome call!"

THE PATCHWORK QUILT

The pattern was an album gay.
You must agree with me
It was the most appropriate
That any style could be—
From Greataunt Jane to baby Sue,
Whose curls were bright as gilt.
We all were represented in Old granny's patchwork quilt.

The yellow vest that grandpa wore
The day he made a speech,
The purple cloth that Cousin Em
Put on, the school to teach,
The satin gown my sister Ruth
Bought when she married Milt
McDonald, yielded each a piece
For granny's patchwork quilt.

Then there was mother's Sunday dress
A brown merino plain.
And Milly's pretty party frock
Of rose colored delaine,
My ruffled lawn with lilac sprigs
On which the ink was split,
And granny's watered silk were all
In granny's patchwork quilt.

On winter nights I used to lie
And listen to the sleet
That drove upon the shingle roof
And glazed the village street,
I heard the wind around the house
A song of blizzards lilt,
In granny's patchwork quilt.

I have steam heat, a bedroom done
In palest gold and gray,
And blankets filled with eiderdown
To keep the cold away—
My modern stucco bungalow
Alas! is jerry built,
And many a chilly night I wish
For granny's patchwork quilt.

PROPOSES JUNE MEETING IN MOOSUP

Dear Members of the Corner: I thought I must write a few lines this week after somewhat of a long delay. I feel rather guilty but have been so very busy finishing the house cleaning and with quite a lot of company and have been called from home by the sickness of my soon's wife. Was gone a week, but she is on the gain now for which we are thankful. So you see it was rather hard to get time to write but I thought I would steal a few minutes anyway. The last time I wrote, my letter got mixed up with Rural Delivery so you see he got all the credit if there was any. Quite a few spoke about his piecing bedquilts, thought he must be pretty smart at the job but was glad to hear that the sisters thought favorably of having a meeting at Moosup at an early date. I would make a suggestion that we have a June meeting in Moosup. How can we arrange it? I will do all I can to help carry it out. Wouldn't it be nice to have a roll call so that each one that attends may respond with something when their name is called. She might either recite or read a short piece. I think it would be nice if we could carry that out. Hope to hear something favorable soon. I want to thank all the sisters who sent me cards. It is nice to be remembered and I am going to make a note of the sisters' birthdays each week as they date them so I can remember them with a card or something. Have just attended my mother's birthday party, it being her 95th birthday. Who of the sisters can say they have a mother that old? It's a great age. There were 15 at the party four generations being present. She recieved a large number of presents and cards. Will send a prize recipe for:

Molasses Cookies: 1 cup sugar, 1 cup molasses, 1 cup lard, 2 eggs, 1-2 cup of hot water, 1 teaspoon of ginger, cinnamon and cloves, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons of soda and 4 cups of flour, or so you can handle it without sticking to board. Mix lard and sugar and then add the other ingredients. It always comes out good. Try this and see if you don't think them the best you have ever eaten.

Will close for this time wishing the editor and all good luck, remembering that a smile goes a long, long ways.

RURAL AUNTY.

KEEP ON WHILE YOU CAN—REST LATER

Dear Cornerites: Am going to tell you about my trip home to Massachusetts, Easter Sunday. We arose at 4.30, a half hour earlier than usual, finished up the chores and left here at 7 o'clock. We reached home and mother about 10 A. M., neither of which I had seen since early last November. I had counted on having a nice visit but as there were 21 there off and on during the day, and as mother had all but five of them, I did not get in much of a visit though of course I enjoyed having my old friends and some of my relatives show they were glad to see me. While there I learned that an aunt who lives on the cape was at my grandmother's, five miles further on. So we bundled up the children and went there for a few minutes. There were seven other relatives there and though it was next to impossible for any of us to finish a whole sentence, for we all wanted to talk at once, yet we had a chance to look at one another anyway. While there grandmother told me something about our ancestors.

I wonder if any of the writers know of a cemetery in Groton where the name of Wijer is on some of the stones. I presume I ought not give it such a highsounding name as I imagine it is an old grave yard where no one is buried now a days. Near the yard is, or was, a cottage in which was kept the records of those buried in that plot. If anyone knows of such a place should be very glad to learn just where it is located.

One thing I want to tell the sisters. Perhaps none of you remember but in one of my letters I mentioned my grandmother was very ill. She was 90 last January. The folks sat up with her nights and often expected her to go before morning. Well she dwelt on the fact that she was ill and going to die till she had herself sort of unbalanced and became quite a care. The doctor finally suggested she go on a visit and see what effect it would have so one of her nephews took her to her sisters in Providence, a distance of 25 miles. The result was wonderful. She stayed a month and you wouldn't know her to be the same person. So, folks, when your elderly ones have a little pain, don't send for the undertaker. Give them a change and watch. They're going to be a long time gone when they do go and there's no coming back. Not only that, let them feel they are not a burden and care. I think the majority of the older ones are of the same independent stock as are my grandparents and though they hate to be "put on the shelf," once they are placed there and told to sit still and look pretty or they will fall, they soon grow accustomed to it and like all of us who have little to interest us, soon lose hat little interest and just patiently wait to be laid away. Now is the time to have them tell you of the old days and the interesting things as far back as they remember. Don't wait till they are gone and say, "Oh, how I wish I had had sense to have thought to ask grandma that before it was too late!" Let us help them keep their minds young. Don't say, "You are old now, it is time you took a rest and let the younger ones work." Their bodies are going to get any quantity of rest by and by. I hate to see where successful men have retired to live on their gains. As long as they are healthy I believe they should keep on. They'll rest later. I've seen so many retire thinking now they will enjoy themselves before they die and find that the biggest enjoyment was when they were working. A vacation once in a while is best I think. This making away for the younger generation, and then wondering why the young ones walk all over you isn't fair nor wise. If you are incompetent mentally or physically, that is different. If you are not, tell the young one to go and find a niche of his own—don't let him take you from yours and squeeze the life blood from you in one which he chooses for you that doesn't fit at all.

I used to pray that my mother's life would be easier; that there would be less calling on her for support but I think now it was all wrong. I dread to think of what life would be to her if she had to stop doing for others. She has lifted a great many burdens from weak shoulders and borne them on her own and though she has grown prematurely old, I would not have her fathom her her soul less beautiful than it is. When I think of my grandmother, her many children and again their children I feel proud of her and my grandfather.

DON'T WORRY.

THE PLACE FOR A GOOD TIME

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I must write and tell you all what a nice time I had at the Social Corner anniversary in March if nothing happens will come up in May. Of all the socials, there is where I have a good time. All women young and old, you don't have to be so precise and pick your words, we just have a good time.

A. Corn: Just come to the social gatherings and you will forget all about that corn with the little pink center. Now I don't know what they are for I never had one, and I am away over seventeen, but I would rather have that corn with the little pink center than to have a bump on the top of my big toe joint. Try this on your corn. Get five cents worth of pulverised saltpeter, put a little in a saucer and moisen with sweet oil, rub on your corn morning noon and night and between times.

Papa's Boy: I was at the Corner picnic on Valley street in March 1916, when the Corner sisters came from Lebanon in the big sled and you had your little baby girl with you only nine months old. How we all loved her! how it did snow that day!

Ella Lou: I make your ginger cookies every week and they are O. K.

True Blue: Your begonia must be beautiful. I would like one of the cactus if they are not all given away. I will give you six different kinds of coleus if you would like and you can have a nice foliage bed this summer.

I received a dozen or more birthday cards and thank the sisters for remembering me. Some came a week late. I was pleased, I felt a week younger.

Annette: Where is my goose?

Pee Glove: Did the cats arrive safely?

LUCY ACORN.

A PILE CURE

Dear Editor and Corner Friends: How glad I am it is getting warm. It is a grand sight to see the wild flowers blooming and they will soon be out in all their beauty.

Country Sister: I think you asked for a pile cure. Here is one that is a sure cure if used thoroughly. It is one of old Doctor Sweet's remedies. I have given it to fifty or more people and have used it in my own family for twenty years and it has never failed. I can not write a real letter today but am just sending the pile cure so you can get relief if possible.

Pile Cure: Take some white oak bark and boil until it makes a strong tea. Take 1-2 cup of this tea put into some kind of a crock to boil, add enough ard to make a salve and boil until it thickens. When you think it has boiled enough take out a little to cool. If it is not thick enough put back and boil some more. When it is done put it into a cold cream jar or any kind of jar. It must not touch tin at any time. Take the inside of the bark. To remove stains or mildew from clothing, moisten the spots with clear water, rub on a thick coating of castile soap mixed with powdered chalk, rub in well then wash off.

As ever.

WINNIE.

RENOVATING TIME

Dear Sisters: It was Tom Sawyer, was it not, who let out the privilege of painting his father's fence to envious boys at so much the hour? I have always disagreed with the general admiration for Tom's cleverness in the matter. I am afraid I should have been among the number who longed to paint. Any woman who has taken a scratched oak rocker, and by simply covering it over with three coats of paint (white) and perhaps tacked on a new upholstered seat, converted it into a most pleasing piece of furniture in her bedroom, will take my point of view.

Of course now is just the time, house-cleaning time, to renovate furniture. A little before the semi-annual fury of cleanliness begins, look over the various pieces of furniture, esnecially those in the bedrooms and attic, and see how many can be freshened or improved by a coat; it will not take much longer than merely washing them, and is just as easy to do. May be you have odds and ends of unattractive furniture which have long since been relegated to the attic. When the question of giving the oldest daughter a room of her very own comes up see what can be done with these old pieces by application of a little paint, before you invest in other furniture. A mirror, a chair, an old-fashioned, painted bed-room set can be made good-looking by being done over white.

I knew a woman who furnished her morning sun room in her new house entirely from the yieldings of the attic, painted white. She did not do the work herself, though she might have; but she gave the workman who served her three dark green porch rockers, a broken morris chair, an old-fashioned settee, for the white paint treatment. The results were so pleasing that she invested in a few yards of flowered cretonne for upholstery and pillows. Built-in white book cases and window seats, combined with her renovated set in this lounging room with white woodwork, made it the most refreshing spot in the house in which to entertain formal visitors.

The attic is a good place to paint because it is usually roomy, the paint dries quickly, and the work is also less likely to be disturbed or to cause damage. Spread newspapers on the floor under your work, and provide yourself with a good, big overall apron. The brushes, a small, flat one for narrow or difficult work, and a broader one for surfaces, turpentine for keeping them soft, and a few cans of a reliable brand of paint are all that are needed. I take the bedsteads apart, and unscrew the handles or knobs on bureau drawers before painting. If the pulls are shabby and the results justify the trifling expense of new ones, they may be bought for five or ten cents each. Do not forget to look over the picture frames that will be seen in the rooms you are freshening up, a white frame would suit almost any subject that would be found in a bedroom, and is most satisfactory round an etching, engraving, or gray photographure. Dull black frames are also good especially in an otherwise light room. A little shoe blacking will help their appearance after many seasons on the walls.

Another good use to which white paint may be put is in renewing the enameled lining, and, perhaps, the outside also, a portable bathtub, or a small foot tub having a tin lining may be quite inviting with several coats of white paint, and the discouraging looking sink in the kitchen which receives attention from the same brush will be so transformed as to make dish washing seem much less disagreeable.

Unless your children are very careless it is worth while to transform dingy old painted woodwork with white; after one or two coats of ordinary paint an enamel finish will be easy to keep clean. Renovating time is especially good for this work. Fresh white trimmings will reflect a lot of sunshine into otherwise dull rooms. In the bathroom, pure white seems indispensible.

KITTY LOU.

OLD FURNITURE MADE NEW

Dear Corner Friends: When we moved into our new home I discovered that I needed a few pieces of furniture, for our rooms were larger and looked woefully bare but I could not afford new furniture. That question was settled. Necessity is the mother of invention, so my mind went seeking for ideas. While passing an old second hand store I saw two old fashioned dining room chairs. I bought the two for 75 cents. I also bought a bottle of gold paint, a can of white enamel some sand paper, padding and three quarters of a yard each in the old pink velvet. I used gilt upholstery tacks and the result was two dainty chairs for my bed-room. Then I remembered I had an old fashioned divan in my attic but it had broken leg among other defects. I brought this down and doctored the leg with furniture glue. I removed the varnish and sandpapered the wood which was fine old walnut. Then I bathed it in gasoline. Then a staining bath was given and the grain of the wood appeared like new. The springs were broken and the sawdust leaked but I tied up with moss. I tacked a heavy dark muslin underneath the springs to hide the tied places. Then I upholstered it with new tan leather, which blended beautifully with the rich wood. Next I took an old table that had once seen service as a kitchen table. I had never valued it especially; but vernish remover and sandpaper brought a rich walnut wood to light. The table had two leaves and I hired a carpenter to cut the leaves and make a library table with a drawer out of what had once reposed in the kitchen. Darkened oil and rubbing with a soft chamois transformed it, but many coats of wax and more rubbing made it positively beautiful. It fairly shone with its glory of other days.

My side board was that old fashioned one of oak with two beveled glasses, one next to the first shelf and one on top. The top glass was about eighteen inches high so I removed the first glass and set the top glass with its carved wood frame directly onto the body. The result was an up-to-date buffet.

A few coats of stain and varnish gave me an almost new set of dining room furniture. The other glass made an excellent mirrer for the hall.

ETHELYN.

GREETINGS FROM NORTH DAKOTA

Dear Social Corner Friends: It is very late to thank the giver of the nice calendar which came so long ago, but it was very pretty and I liked it very much. I have been ill nearly all the winter, and have been unable to use my hands much, so my writing has been neglected. I can still write but little at a time, and that poorly.

I want to tell you how good it was when the Corner page came last week to find it full of good, interesting letters. I have had to skip so many lately, for they were only cook-book clippings, and I never read those. I think few do, but this time every letter had something to read and enjoy and I hope it will continue to live up to this number.

Some of the sisters have been very good about writing, and some have sent me papers which were of much interest.

We have had a very fine winter—only three weeks of really cold weather, at the beginning of January. Only one snow, and that melted away very soon. There were some drifts about two feet deep, but they went away as soon as the sun shone out. Rain is needed, and we are hoping for it soon. Most of the wheat is in, and other crops are now going in. Cars have been in use all the winter there has been no sleighing at all. Incubators are going everywhere, some have the hatching done, but most of the women will keep them going this month. Many farm women clear from five hundred dollars up every year on their poultry. There is a brooder full of little white leghorn chicks, and they are so pretty, more like birds than chickens. There are many things I should like to write about, but my hands are very tired and I think I shall have to say good bye. I am looking to another nice Corner full of good letters this week.

Your far away sister,

NORTH DAKOTA.

CANDLE AND CIDER APPLE SAUCE MAKING

Dear Sisters: When I read Kingston Brony's letter about the rag carpet making and the apple sauce and candles my heart warmed to the memories of past days. I am not exactly one of the ancients, either, but my people perhaps clung to old fashioned ways longer than some did and liked to use candles to light them to bed and to the cellar and to carry about the house for purposes where now we who have no electric lights use a flashlight. But instead of the dipping process they used to make them in tin molds, holding eight or ten each. What was called candle wicking came in balls, in texture somewhat like the darning cotton we get now, several strands of white cotton yarn, only with no twist in it, bunched together. This was looped over slender, round sticks that set across the top of the mold pulled and shaken through holes in the bottom and there tied firmly. The molds were then set in a cold place and filled with melted tallow. The next day the knots at the bottom were untied and the candles slipped out. Personally I despise a candle, probably because they were always dripping grease; if not carried perfectly straight and also because the candlesticks always needed cleaning, especially the brass one, of which there were several of various patterns and brass has a habit of turning a dingy greenish brown, most discouraging to see. There were brass trimmings on the frame around the old parlor fireplace and a pair of brass andirons and shovels and tongs, with brass heads that had to be polished every little while with powdered brick, when I was a girl. Perhaps we had the mate to Kingston Brown's brass kettle which always had to be cleaned with salt and vinegar, before we used it and then with soapsuds and rinsed. Then it was ready for use. I never knew my mother to make cider apple sauce but in later years I made some several times according to my father's instructions who remembered how it was done. Our range not being of any practical use for such a job as that which required a big open fireplace, and some used to boil away cider over an outdoor fire, we opened the big fireplace in the kitchen, hung that brass kettle full of sweet cider just from the press over the fire and boiled cider all day, filling up the kettle as it evaporated, till it was the proper strength in the intervals between tending the fire and the kettle, we pared and quartered golden sweet apples, which don't cook to pieces as sour ones would, beside being pleasanter to the taste, and when the cider was just right put in all the apples the kettle would hold and cooked gently till they were tender. Then it was put in stone jars which were set away down cellar. Everyone liked that apple sauce too and I rather enjoyed making it. We used to keep a few bottles of boiled cider to add flavor to mince pies. Also, I have had a hand in helping make rag carpets, too. It used to be the fashion to invite the neighbors to come in and help sew some afternoon and stay to tea and then you would go and help them sometime in turn which relieved the monotony of so much rag sewing alone, beside having a social time.

An old, worn, rag carpet especially the hit or miss kind, is about as hopeless looking as anything I know and the hardest to "mend" decently. But a new clean one of a handsome striped pattern was good to look at, and if they were made of good rags, they wore a long time. The handsomest striped carpets I ever saw used to be woven by Mrs. Sarah Lyon at Hampton Four Corners. She has been gone to her long rest these many years but some of the sisters from that neighborhood or town may remember her. And now, not having a monopoly of the Social Corner and wishing to leave some space for the others, I think I might better close or I shall wander on too far.

IOLA.

HUNTING THE EARLY WILD-FLOWERS

Dear Corner Friends: We are reminded of the swift passage of time by the songs of the returning birds, the brown turf turning to livid green and the early spring blossoms springing up in their accustomed places. As a child I used to hunt the early flowers in their native haunts. First the little bluets—the forget-me-nots of the angels. I know so well where to find the fragrant pink and white arbutus hidden under a leafy cover, and many bunches were sent to distant friends to enjoy. It is a flower I seldom see now but the memory of days past and long to wander in quiet and leafy paths to search for it comes back to me at every springtime. The first blossoms of the saxifraga and bloodroot, which is a relative of the poppy family, with its chaste white blossoms lingered but for a day, but were found in great quantities. The many varieties of violets were always admired and Jack in the pulpit is as quaint and friendly today as ever in days of yore. When a small child I used to urge my mother "to come walk in the woods" and it was on those expeditions that I learned to love the wonders of the wood and wayside. Our letters Pedestrian, revived a responsive chord but alas, how seldom the opportunity presents itself to roam and hunt for nature's treasures. However, I have been fortunate in having brought to me, each returning season the early spring flowers in their succession.

I am too fond of my window chums to have many specimen plants, as they are too crowded for best results I find the ivy geranium is a more generous bloomer than the ordinary variety and its habit of growth will produce more blooming points. I have three varieties of those. I am fond of begonias too and have a little less than a dozen varieties. Petunias make fine blooming plants for the window as mine is now loaded with blossoms and buds.

Will those that have asked me to procure badges for them please be patient longer. I hope to receive them soon, especially those who have paid in advance for them. There seems to have been some unaccountable delay and if they cannot be located hope there will be more forthcoming so you can have them at the annual reunion in June, at least.

Dom Pedro: Your letter recieved, and was pleased with all. Thanks.

THEODA.

SERVING THE MEALS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I had wondered that my friend had so much sickness in her family, they seemed one would expect to find people in an undernourished family. But I know that her table was lavishly supplied with every kind of food. But on taking notice I found that they were not eating a well-balanced ration, but picked out according to fancy.

And the dangerously overweight was still eating an enormous amount of starch foods, as also the child who required a great deal of rough, bulky food.

The member who ought to use very little meat often took the third helping of meat.

The two year old seemed to know better than the older ones how much food he required, as he would eat part of his potato and then his dessert, which if a small one, he would then call for the rest of his potato and happily finish his meal with potato.

My friend says, "I have all the meals well-balanced but I am the only one of the family who will eat right, what shall I do about them?" I said, we had the same experience until by the advice of a food specialist we started the plan of serving each one their portion, some of each kind, but varying the quantities according to the age and condition of each one and putting no foods on the table except the coarse breads, salads and fruit.

Now we like it much better than the old way when the large platter of meat, big dish of potato and plate of white bread tempted the most careful to ask for more and to overeat of those.

We use meat for a relish, but use green vegetables and coarse breads as much as possible. We have one who eats an unusual small amount and we encourage him to eat more and are careful that he takes a little of each kind. My friend's mistake came from the fact that she always liked the coarse foods and a well-balanced ration and did not know this has to be taught to most children or they will eat only a few kinds and refuse to eat the other foods, and so will be poorly nourished. I advised my friend, the first time either is sick again, to get a nurse and have her start the new plan of serving portions, and have her make out a menu with the right quantity specified for each member of the family.

Ridicule is a strong weapon, and they will not like to have it made conspicuous that they are not willing to eat sensibly. The overweight will be ashamed of the enormous amoun of fattening food she has formed the habit of eating.

Overweight like a bad habit should be stopped before it is begun.

As much as possible we use cornmeal, rye meal, graham and whole-wheat flour in bread, biscuits, cookies, etc. Use any recipe substituting for one-half the quantity of flour the coarse flour or meal will give good results.

JEREMY.

A SUGGESEION FOR CLUB MEETINGS

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Recently, I attended a social gathering of a local fraternity, of which I am a member, and enjoyed the after dinner speeches so much, that I suggest it would be best to introduce and amusing to have the same idea carried out at a Social Corner meeting. Let the hostess have charge when ready for the entertainment. Begin at one end of the line, as the members are seated, each one telling where they were born and some note as to what that town or city was famous for, also add some significance if any, to the birthday date, (omitting the year.) For illustration, I heard one lady say, she was born in Jersey City, which is considered the dirtiest city on the map, although it is famous for the Colgate's high grade soaps. Another person said she was born at midnight of the old year, before the bells had finished ringing the announcement of the new year, in the city of Quebec. One lady said she was born in Rocky Hill, known as the town of good will. Many side jokes may be added, which may furnish lots of amustment. I heard one man say he was born in Newark, New Jersey, that state being famous for raising enormous mosquitoes, where they are bridled and saddled and sometimes so thick in the atmosphere, the sun fails to shine through them.

I hope the next meeting of the Social Corner clubs will try this novel entertainment, and see if they enjoy it. In this way each one can contribute as well as recieve a share of the amusement. If any one happened to have a birthday on February 29th that is quite a distinction, and worth speaking of. For the success of the Corner.

JENNIE.

MOUNTAIN CAKE

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: It has been a long time since I have written but I had so many cares and was sick so I couldn't do it before. Hope all are well.

I will take this time to thank the sister who sent me the apron pattern. I received it all right.

I didn't go to the April meeting and was very disappointed not to.

I will send in my recipe for Mountain cake, which I use a good deal for it is a plain cake. Perhaps someone would like it.

Mountain Cake: One cup sugar, 1 egg, 2 cups flour before sifting, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-2 teaspoon saleratus, 1 teaspoon cream tartar, 1 cup milk.

VIRA.

TAKE CARE OF THE EYES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: An eye salve is not meant to take the place of glasses. It is intended merely to relieve and heal the irritated eyelids as an ointment soothes and heals irritations of the skin. Strain of close work and exposure to intense light, wind, dust, acids, fumes and cinders, all have a tendency to irritate and inflame the eyes and eyelids. In such cases eye salve is proving of great service. For an eye wash take a few drops of witch hazel in warm water and wash eyes. It will help.

PAULA.

THIRTY-TWO'S RESPONSE

To the Social Corner Editor and Members: I need to apologize for not answering to the roll-call sooner but have for my excuse another small son, born March fourth. Am just getting correspondence and my work to going again.

To Neighbor Eveready: The address you asked for is Mrs. Allen V. Reynolds, Boyden street cottage, Worcester. It is just above the little trolley station from Auburn up College Hill, off of Southbridge street as you enter Worcester by auto.

Will leave lengthy writing until later.

THIRTY-TWO.

WHAT WILL CLEAN ZINC?

Dear Editor and Social Sisters: What a good time we had at our last meeting! Wish I could only write the lines and tell about the joyous times. How good things to eat arrived from far and near, and all came with a good cheer. I am to be hostess at our next meeting. Will Kittie, Guess and Cady come and be my helpers and bring something good?

Can any of the sisters tell of anything to clean zinc? Honing to see many of the sisters at our next meeting, I am yours truly,

WINDHAM BLUE BELL.

WHO CAN FURNISH RECIPE

Dear Social Corner: I would be pleased to have printed again the recipe of neverfail gingerbread

I made it a few times but have lost the recipe. It was delicious. Hoping to see it printed again I am gratefully yours.

A READER OF THE SOCIAL CORNER.

PLEASED WITH GREETINGS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I wish to thank all the sisters who sent me greetings last week.

Best wishes for a Social Corner friend.

CHANCE TO RELIEVE A DILEMMA

Dear Social Corner Friends: Ever so long ago when I was fairly young I was a saleswoman in a department store. A certain young salesman, who would persist in fooling in spite of all protests, one day broke my glasses. This was something of a calamity to me as they were quite essential to my comfort and several days were required to get a new lens from a neighboring city. But the young man appeared really sorry for the discomfort I was suffering on account of his carelessness and assured me he would pay me the amount of the oculist's bill. When the bill came, however, and I showed it to him, although it was only $1.75, he looked at it and coolly remarked, "You tell you troubles to the lamp post." This was a case of modern chivalry from the stronger to the so-called weaker sex. There was something about this incident that sank so deeply into my system that the memory of it still remains though I seldom think of it now, especially as I have the Social Corner instead of a marble lamp post to tell my troubles to. When the Alps were in the way of Napoleon's army I believe he said, "There shall be no Alps." Later on, however, there was a Waterloo. Most of us meet a Waterloo every now and then. I suppose it is up to us to turn defeat into victory wherever possible.

When I read my mail this morning I felt that I had met a Waterloo unless the Social Corner comes to my rescue. My birthday will be May 2 and perhaps a few Cornerites will be so kind as to send me cards. Now there is something I want more than a shower of cards and that is a shower of Autocrat tea and coffee coupons. Just ten coupons, and I will frankly tell you why. Last week I sent 40 coupons for a premium I have wanted for a long time and this morning's premium calls for 50 coupons now instead of 40 as stated in my 1922 catalogue. With only two in my family that is a discouraging prospect for me. I would gladly pay five cents each for ten coupons of I knew where I could get them. If no one wants to shower me with them for my birthday, who will sell me some?

I have never known the Cornerites to fail in lending a hand and I have faith that some of them will help me out of my difficulty.

The Corner is proving helpful along many practical lines. It is indeed becoming a real information bureau, a truly live wire and we should miss it more than we can tell. With best wishes for you all and sympathy for all in grief or suffering. Yours for mutual helpfulness.

EVELINE BURR.

THANKFUL FOR CARD SHOWER

Dear Corner Friends: I take this way of thanking you all for the shower of birthday cards. I received 32 in all and 19 Easter cards. They are all lovely. I'll not write all names as it will take too much time also too much space from some other Corner friend who might write. But I will again thank you all both in and outside the Corner. I want to say to my friends that my address is 124 Pleasant street in lieu of 96 Spring street where some of my cards were sent.

Lucy Acorn: Why not come up to our meeting next month, the last, until fall. It seems an age since I saw you. Am glad to learn some of the sisters that have been sick are getting better. Hope they may continue to improve and as the good old summer time is not far away they will gain much faster.

As Crimson Rambler has told some things salt will do there are also other things it is good for. If you spill soot on a carpet sprinkle salt over it then sweep it up with a whisk broom which will clean it all off. Sprinkle salt on an icy walk and it will prevent slipping. To prevent your glasses steaming up on entering a warm room when cold out doors take a little soap on your thumb and finger and rub it over them, then rub it off with a dry towel. Very simple but great convenience as I have had mine before now, on entering a store, steam up so I couldn't see anything until I wiped them off.

Was glad to see Brave and Kitty. Hope you will call again.

Huldy: I'm very much interested in your letters and hope you will write often. Tell us all about your trips in motoring through the country when you have time. One's time is well taken up when going sightseeing. I realise that allright. With best wishes to all.

ANNA MELL.

DOING HER BIT WHILE BUSY

Dear Corner Sisters: Its been quite a while since I took my pen in hand to let you know how I am. This is the way, when I was a school girl (a real young one) I used to write a letter every day to my girl friend who sat only two seats away from me in school. But any other day or the night before I would write her a letter and the next night she would answer and we always began our letters that way. It was real smart but then we were kids but I think I enjoyed those letters as much as any I ever had.

I was rather shocked to see so few letters in last week's paper so thought I would do my bit. I read much interestingly in the letters about corns and I can surely sympathize with any one troubled with them, as I have many years by spells suffered so much. There is nothing that will take the tuck out of you so much as to have your feet hurt. I've tried almost every remedy I ever heard of and still have my corns in good shape and full of business. Oh, I've had them so bad they have gathered and broken like a boil but the heart of the corn was still there. Just now I am using a plaster which is helping a little but not curing. The most relief I get is a good tub of hot water with a handful of soda in it and afterward freely use an old safety razor blade. You will have some relief for a few days anyway but I have failed to find a cure. So what can't be cured must be endured but, oh, my corns! I heard a story once of an old Irishman. A friend met him and said: "Mike how are you? Mike answered, "Begorra Pat, I'm as well a man as ever was only my toe." Sometimes I feel the same way. Well enough about corns.

I'm trying to get through housecleaning and hope to be done when this letter is printed. Such dreadful rainy weather coming so often keeps putting us back. Every week there is our big washing and ironing and it is nip with eleven in the family and eight beds to wash for. It takes most of the time with the cooking and rest of the work for two days. Then the next day it is most always sure to rain, then the next the wind will blow so hard you will spend most of your time holding your things on the line to air but for all my nonsense we have got most through. Tomorrow I intend to clean my pantry and it is a big one it will take most all day and tomorrow is the day chickens have to be dressed for market and there are fifteen hundred little chicks five weeks old to be cared for. But I don't do much about that, the rest help care for them. Must make pies in the morning and there will be cooking to do for there are dinner pails to be packed every day and there must be food suitable for them. Oh, we are a very busy family all the time, but my mending is always done, stockings and all. We have tied and made three large bedquilts this winter. I had a friend visiting me a few days who helped with the quilts. I have knitted three small shawls and now am knitting a rug. I saved and tore up and sewed all the rags I could find and am knitting them up in stripe about six inches wide and will sew them together. Guess I'll have a job all summer, for it is hard work and goes slow.

I would like to know where is everybody in Plainfield. We never have a letter from Blue Bird, Nixie, Grand Juror, Mrs. Buzz and only one little one from Bug. They are all alive and doing well for I've had the pleasure of seeing them lately. Do write! Any of you can write more sensible letters than I can so why not let the Corner share some of your talents.

Free Air never lets us see what she can do in letter writing, only once in a great while, now I'll expect to see a letter from all of you in next week's paper. I hope to get to Norwich for the May meeting but never can tell. I'm going to try to get Buz to come with me. Sisters, don't think I am foolish for in some things I am sensible one of them is to stop writing.

Yours same as ever.

MA OF GREENE GABLES.

FINE TIME AT CLUB NO. 8'S MEETING

Dear Social Corner: Well here I am again. Thought I must tell you about Club No. 8's meeting held the 16th. It was a beautiful day and a wonderful dinner with escalloped potatoes, macaroni, meat loaf, baked beans, rolls, relishes, pie, cake and coffee. Don't Worry and her helpers were royal entertainers. Clubs No. 1 and 3 will have to go some to beat them. After dinner there was a roll call to which each responded with something helpful) or an amusing anecdote. Then Mrs. Robinson Murphy of New York formerly of Kentucky gave us some fine music. She sang several national hymns of foreign countries in the different languages, also the sacred song of Palestine. And she rendered a colored mammy lullaby, which all enjoyed. Then Some One's daughter also played and sang very nicely for us. Two piano duetts were given by two ladies whose pennames I don't know.

Bo-peep: Was more than pleased to see you and dear Aunt Mary. Please call the next and come every time.

Members of Club No. 8: You remember the dainty doily I bought at your sale, which was made by a dear old lady 83 years of age. Well the following week she sent me three more, that I might have the complete set. Wasn't that a darling thing for her to do for me? I surely appreciate her kindness.

Jennie, Priscilla and Olive! How glad we all were to see you at Club No. 1's anniversary meet, also Cypress and Necia.

Foxglove and Whirlwind: You do seem to have a hard time getting to the meetings and we are just as disappointed as you are.

Well now as the opportunity to thank all the dears who sent me Easter and birthday cards. They were lovely. I received ten but won't try to write all the names.

Rosie: What a beautiful grand child you have, and so good! Hope he will prove a great comfort to you.

Nanny Lou: Was so sorry to hear of your dear sister's death, Dusty Miller. She had suffered a long time. Hope you are feeling better, and will soon be able to meet with us again. Brownie: I presume by now you are living in the new home. Saw where you had built a new garage. Hope you will live long and enjoy it. Mabel: Why don't we ever see you at the meetings? Are you too busy?

Iola: Was sorry you couldn't stay longer. But as you say, trains don't wait. Hope you can come again.

OLGA.

GREETINGS FROM SALLY SYCAMORE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have not met with you for a long time. Will try and be present the next time. I enjoy reading the letters. Trust you all had a happy Easter.

I have had a cold and did not go out for a while, but am better now. With good wishes to all. I am as ever

Cost of the War.

Attempts have been made by a number of statisticians and economists to compute the money cost of the World war. The results arrived at vary. According to the estimates of Professor Bogart, under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the direct costs were $180,332,687,697, and the indirect costs $151,612,542,560, making a grand total of $337,946,179,057.

Even the man who lives upright is apt to die in a horizontal position.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Stopped her Suffering and Restored her Health

Momence, Illinois.—"I surely can recommend your medicine to other women who have female weaknesses, as it has helped me very much in every way possible. I was working in a dining room in town, and sometimes I could not do my work; had pains in the lower part of my body and had to stay in bed. One of my neighbors told me what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and it has surely done wonders for me. I hope all women who suffer will take my advice as the Vegetable Compound has done so much to bring back my vigor and strength."—Mrs. ALBERT E. DESCHAUD, Momence, Illinois.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."

That is 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by druggists everywhere.

NEW LONDON WATCHING FOR RUM BOAT CAPTURED OFF BLOCK ISLAND

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, April 25.—Miss Jane Hendry, of Bank street, a teacher at the Bartlett school and Mrs. Daniel Hogan and infant daughter, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Miss Helen Gilmore, of Hope street, employed as clerk in the office of City Treasurer Herbert G. Huntley, is in New York to remain over Sunday.

Mary E. Harvey, Marie E. Harris and Nellie F. Wightman, have sold a parcel of land, corner of Crystal avenue and Williams street, to Eugene Donville.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the operator's licenses of James Kuvalanka, 18 North Bank street, Clyde B. Getchelly, 618 William street and Preston L. Sutphen, 302 Ocean avenue, to be suspended. Getchell was penalized recently in police court for speeding on Mohegan avenue, upon complaint of professors at the Connecticut College for Women. Kuvalanka and Sutphen were recently involved in accidents. The commissioner also caused the license of Samuel Brenner of 112 Bank street, to be returned to the owner. Brenner's car was in collision with another car in Groton several weeks ago.

William H. Farrell, 196 Huntington street, employed as a field agent by the internal revenue department, with headquarters in Hartford, who underwent an operation Wednesday night at Lawrence hospital, was reported this afternoon to be very slightly improved.

John F. Onderdunk, 42, and John Billcliff, 19, both of Graniteville, and both employed at the plant of Palmer Brothers, this city, were arrested last night by State Policeman Fred Caron of the Groton barracks, charged with chicken theft and in their apprehension Officer Caron believes that he has put an end to the frequent thefts of poultry from residents of Waterford. This morning Billcliff and Onderdunk were before Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton in the Waterford town court and were held for trial before the next term of the superior court. Billcliff and Onderdunk furnished a surety on their respective bonds of $400, in Arthur G. Burr, a Bank street marketman, who, the accused declared, purchased the chickens that they stole.

Billcliff and Onderdunk went Saturday night to the residence of William Caldwell, employed as clerk at the New London post office, and from the roost they are alleged to have taken 15 chickens. The following night the accused went to the hennery of Frederick L. Goss, a New London insurance agent, and from there they took a dozen chickens. The following day, it is alleged, they brought their plunder to New London and sold it to Burr for 25 cents per pound. Billcliff and Onderdunk have signed a written confession, which was obtained by Officer Caron, in which they admit the theft of the chickens and the sale to Burr.

Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney, who has been confined to his home on Howard street a week or more by an attack of tonsilitis, will be back at his desk at the police station within a day or two. Captain Pinney was able to visit the station house this forenoon for a brief time.

Traffic Officer John Courtney, who has been kept in the house by an attack of lumbago, resumed his post at the corner of Bank and State streets today.

Myra Cameron and Grace Pringle, both married to sailors in the service of the government, are in the county jail, where they will serve sixty days each for operating a disreputable house in this city. The place is at 101 Truman street and has acquired the name of 101 Ranch, after the circus company that traveled the county a year ago. The women seem to be living with their husbands, but rather to be finding husbands in other men. Louis Ramistella, a taxi driver, is credited to have been a sort of runner for the place. He was found there after last midnight, when Police Sergeant John J. Cavanaugh and Patrolman Edward Daniels descended on the place. Myra ran into the street crying and making a commotion that attracted the officers, who were outside watching the house. She was questioned by Sergeant Cavanaugh and as she appeared to have been looking upon the wine when it stirred itself aright and could give no reason for her conduct, she was nabbed. Then Ramistella was also taken into custody and the Prindle woman was taken along as she was an inmate of the house. The whole party was represented by an attorney, when they were presented in court today, but what he said did not seem to mitigate the offense of which the trio was accused and all were found guilty. The Cameron woman was fined $100 and Ramistella and the Prindle woman were ordered to pay a fine of $50 each. Ramistella hustled out and raised the funds that were necessary to keep him out of jail, but he failed to put up a dollar to help the women out. They rode up to jail for a considerable stay. The Prindle woman said her husband had deserted her some years ago and that he had not since provided for her. She claimed Norfolk, Maine, as her home. The Cameron woman, it was said, was on a spree yesterday and when she returned home she was lit up. She says her home is in New Hampshire and that her husband is on the U. S. Savannah. She has been twice married, and now seems to be smitten with Ramistella, who is also married and has children. The women didn't like the way they were treated by him and they declared that there would be something doing for Louis!

Deputy Customs Collector Joseph C. Comstock was in his first auto accident today when his Ford was crashed into by a sedan driven up Broad street at a pace that Mr. Comsock said was 30 miles an hour, while he was dragging out of Williams street at a dragsnails pace. The crash was so violent that it tore the mudguard from the Comstock car. Mr. Comsock saw to it that the driver of the sedan was ordered to appear in court tomorrow that the facts may be determined there and the blame be placed where it belongs.

The highways of the city in the southern section are being patched today with tarred gravel, filling the holes but not making a permanent improvement. Along the street railway tracks the filling was very much needed, and at the corners of many streets there were worn spots that threatened the destruction of automobiles.

The condition of Simeon L. Ewald, ill at his home, 320 Mohegan avenue, as the result of a shock, showed a slight improvement today.

The funeral of Mrs. Imogene M. Draper, widow of Charles Draper, was held this evening at 7.45 o'clock at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. William J. Coulson, 17 Mather court. Services were conducted by Rev. Myron E. Genter, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. The body will be forwarded to Worcester, Mass., on Saturday morning for burial, with services conducted at the grave by Queen Esther lodge, Daughters of Rebekah.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Linicus of Nepture park, Miss Bertha Linicus of the Hotel Mohican apartments and Mrs. Augusta Eshenfelder of Montauk avenue, returned to their homes here this afternoon, having spent several weeks at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Mrs. William Stevens, 34 Cottage street, complained to the police this evening because of youths playing ball on the property of Palmer Brothers, damaging her property.

An automobile owned by George Barclay of 55 Colver street and operated by his wife, and a machine owned by Dr. Stuart J. Lawson and in which Mrs. Lawson was riding, were in collision this afternoon, corner of Hempstead and Manwaring streets. Both cars were damaged. The cars were traveling in opposite directions and came together on a curve, the crash being heard a considerable distance.

Helen Keeney, wife of John James Floyd, 15 Williams street, died this evening at Home Memorial hospital following childbirth. The baby, a daughter, born this afternoon, is thriving. The news of Mrs. Floyd's demise will be received with sorrow by a large circle of friends. Mrs. Floyd entered the hospital this forenoon and late this afternoon she became a mother. Later in the day she suffered a sinking spell. Mrs. Floyd was the daughter of Mary E., and the late Josiah N. Keeney and besides her husband and mother is survived by a brother, Josiah Keeney, on the editorial staff of Editor and Publisher, New York, and by a sister, Miss Genevieve Keeney of this city. Mrs. Floyd was for several years employed by the James Hislop & Co., and later was secretary to the late Mayor Bryan F. Mahan. She also served as secretary for ex-Mayors Ernest E. Rogers and E. Frank Morgan. She was secretary to former City Manager James E. Barlow and for several months held this position under the present city manager, William A. Holt.

Revenue cutters Acushnet and Seminole, cruising off Block Island in the search of rum running craft, are reported to have captured three sailing craft, the Star, Aquidneck and Emerald, which, it is understood, is laden with a valuable cargo of liquor. The Star and Aquidneck were searched, but with the finding of no evidence of liquor, the craft were released. The released craft are reported to have headed for Newport for supplies. At the United States Coast Guard Academy tonight inquiry failed to determine whether the cutters were en route here, it being stated that no knowledge of the approach to port of the cutters was known there, but it was possible that such was the case as the two cutters have been in the vicinity of "Rum Row" several weeks, in an effort to put an end to the rum-running traffic.

George E. Sheehan, 24 High street, has returned home, after spending six weeks in California.

Richard W. Avery has resumed his studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, having spent several days with his mother, Mrs. George P. Avery, of Groton.

Mrs. Oliver Demosh has returned to her home, on Woodbridge street, concluding several days' visit with her son, George Demosh, employed in Washington.

Mrs. Lawrence S. M. Cook is entertaining Miss Mary O'Neill, of Staten Island, N. Y.

Misses Catherine Hogan and Marion Kennedy are spending the week-end with New Haven friends.

Miss Gertrude Mitchell, employed in New York, has returned to that city, having spent several days with her mother, Mrs. Lillie Geddes.

Announcement is made of the marriage Wednesday at the rectory of St Mary's Star of the Sea church, of Robert S. Cruickshank of Waterford and Miss Catharine E. Devine, daughter of Dennis Devine, of 103 Crystal avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John J. McGrath. Alexander Cruickshank, of Waterford, brother of the groom, was best man and Mrs. P. F. Patton, attended the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Cruickshank will make their home at 105 Crystal avenue.

Strain on Human Body.

In hot weather the human body makes an extraordinary effort to adapt itself to conditions and meet the strain placed upon it. Violent overheating or great physical effort for a few hours causes the body to throw off some four liters of fluid. In other words, the perspiration secreted in a brief while is greater than the entire blood supply of the body.

Inscribed Stone Under Lava.

Miners working more than 200 feet beneath an old lava flow at Columbia, Cal., found an irregularly-shaped granite tablet on which queer hieroglyphics were carved. Evidently the carvings, which were regular in form, date from prehistoric times. Scientists are trying to decipher them.

MOTOR VEHICLE REGISTRATIONS BEATING ALL PAST FIGURES

New motor vehicles were registered in Connecticut in the first quarter of this year than in the entire year of 1913, according to a report made by the state motor vehicle department for the three months ended March 31.

Registrations for the quarter just passed reached 124,152, an increase of 35,436 over the total number of registrations for the corresponding period of last year. Passenger cars accounted for 31,016 of this gain, and commercial cars for 3,849. Receipts of the department went from $2,510,865.00 for the first quarter of 1923 to $3,240,242 for the first quarter of the present year. The open winter is believed to have been responsible for considerable of the increase in registrations this year. The fact that, with three-quarters of the year remaining, there are already 14,000 more motor vehicles licensed in the state than there are already 14,000 more motor vehicles licensed in the state than there were for the whole year of 1919, indicates the extent to which the traffic problem in Connecticut has been complicated.

Whereas 213,395 operators held Connecticut licenses last year, the end of the first quarter of this year already shows 257,448 operators licensed, an increase of 32,351 over the number licensed at the end of the first quarter of 1923.

Motor cycle registrations show an increase in the face of the decline in used automobile values. The report for the quarter just ended shows 3,457 motor cycles registered, as against 1,038 for the corresponding period of 1923. The number of passenger cars registered for the quarter is 96,417 and the number of commercial car, 23,182. There are 246 less dealers who have registrations as such than there were at this time last year and nine less repairers, the total number of dealers of this class in the state being 531.

Five airships are on the list, and 238 hearses. It is the first year that hearses have been registered under a special classification, as there was no provision for classifying them as anything other than commercial motor vehicles before the law was amended by the 1923 session of the Legislature. Four aviators are licensed.

Receipts of the department are by law turned over to the state highway department, through the state treasury, for the maintenance and re-construction of the state highways.

Oxford University Offers Vacation Course in History

To bring teachers of history and other professional students, at home and abroad, into personal contact with representative historical scholars and to give them a fuller conception of the meaning and methods of serious study and research, the University of Oxford offers a four-weeks' vacation course in history beginning July 28, 1924. The subject of the course will be the history of the Middle Ages, with attention to the economic and ecclesiastical history of the period and medieval political theory.

Applicants for the course will be asked to state their qualifications for profiting by such a course, and the applications will be considered together at a given date, before they are accepted. Further particulars may be obtained from the secretary of the delegacy, Rev. F. E. Hutchinson, Acland House, Oxford, England.

Carrying School to Shut-in Children

To enable children temporarily confined to their home by reason of accident or illness to keep pace with their regular classroom work, and to enable children permanently removed from school to receive instruction notwithstanding crippled limbs or bodies, the school superintendent of Pasadena, Calif., has worked out a plan for sending school to shut-in children, according to School Life, a publication of the Bureau of Education. The work follows closely the subjects of the curriculum, but handwork is stressed in most of the special cases. This method gives opportunity for corrective work and the development of such muscles as need exercise. This part of the work is under the direction of the physician who has examined the case before the pupil's enrollment.

Children considered hopelessly crippled find under the special tutoring that they may contribute to the work of the family and community in spite of their handicap.

Every school day the home teacher is busy from six to eight hours, visiting the homes of the smaller children daily, the others every other day, outlining lessons for the latter during the intervening time.

Long before the time of Columbus the majority of Arabic scholars of the middle ages held that the earth is a sphere floating in space.

RECOVERY IN MARKET.

New York, April 25.—The brisk recovery in stock prices, accompanied by more active trading in today's market signalled the partial retreat of an overcrowded short interest.

Led by U. S. Steel common which closed 2 1-2 points higher at 100 1-2 on buying based on expectation of favorable developments at next week's dividend meeting, active industrials rebounded 2 to 4 points above yesterday's final figures. Rails presented a more spotty appearance, strength of "Nickel Plate" being offset by the weakness of Norfolk and Western.

Abundance of call money at low rates, which was explained by the fact that the local federal reserve bank's ratio was the highest in nearly seven years, was a contributing factor in the covering movement. Call money which opened at 3 3-4 per cent., was reduced later to 3 1-2, "outside loans" being available below this figure. Time money rates eased slightly, short term funds being available at 4 1-4 per cent. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

The demand for stocks to retire short contracts was urgent from the start, particularly among the standard industrials. Baldwin advanced from 109 1-2 to 112 3-4 nd American Can from 89 1-2 to 102, each closing slightly below their top prices for net gains of about 3 points. Studebaker old stock closed 1 1-2 points higher at 85 1-8.

Reports of marked improvement in the oil, copper and shipping industries furnished the background for a substantial advance in those groups, net gains of 1 to 2 1-2 points being recorded by Pacific Oil, American issues, Mariand, Cosden and Standard Oil of California.

Strength of Corn Products, which closed nearly 3 points higher at 170, was directly traceable to the report of the first quarter showing earnings equivalent to $8.61 a share, bettering the record of any quarter last year. While a jump of more than four points in 7 S. Cast Iron Pipe was attributed to pool operations, a heavy demand is known to exist for the company's product.

An extreme gain of four points by "Nickel Plate" was attributed to speculative expectation that the annual dividend would be increased from $6 to $7 in the near future. No reason was forthcoming for the drop in Norfolk and Western from 124 3-8 to 121 3-8, the closing price of 123 representing a net los of 1 3-4. Pere Marquette established a new 1924 high at 46 3-4 and then yielded slightly on official denial of reports that an increase in dividends was contemplated.

Foreign exchanges were again slightly reactionary. Demand sterling ruled about 1-4 of a cent lower around $4.37 1-4 and French francs were quoted slightly above 6 1-4 cents. Fluctuations in other rates were narrow and unimportant.

BOND MARKET.

New York, April 25.—Diversion of Wall street's surplus funds into investment channels today stimulated one of the year's most active trading sessions in Liberty bonds and carried leading active issues to new top prices for 1924.

The brisk activity in the U. S. government obligations was the outstanding feature of the market in which the prices of most domestic liens failed to develop a definite trend. The turnover of $1,000,000 blocks of the Liberty issues attested to the heavy volume of industrial buying. Gains in the four active 4 1-4 per cent. bonds ranged from wt-32nds to 8-32nds of a point, while the first-seoonds 4 1-4s, normally inactive, scored an advance of a full point.

Aggressive buying of the Serbian 8s, which had been in progress for several days, carried these bonds up more than a point to a new 1924 high level at 80—the objective set by a strong banking group. Steady improvement in Jugo-Slavia's financial condition, revealed in detail by the country's financial experts who recently visited the United States, has contributed to the advance in the bonds from a 1924 low level around 68. Eventually, the Serbian government expects to do additional borrowing here, but the flotaation of another loan probably would not be attempted unless its present securitise were selling near their offering price of 95 1-2.

Price movements of domestic liens were not significant today. St. Paul and other speculative railroad issues advanced: sugar company obligations scored further recoveries, and Wilson and Company and Magma Copper mortgages lost ground.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, April 25.—Cold weather over Canada and the Dakotas did a good deal today to lift wheat prices here, and so, too, did uncertainty over proposed legislation at Washington. The closing in the wheat market was firm, 5-8c to 7-8c net higher, May $1.03 1-4 to $1.03 3-8 and July $1.05 1-4@3-8 to $1.05 3-8, with corn 3-8 @1-2 to 3-4 cents up, oats showing 1-8 to 1-4@3-8c gain, and provisions at 5 to 15c decline.

Upturns in wheat values began early, aided by a slight advance at Liverpool and by the fact that offerings here lacked volume. Dearth of selling was ascribed largely to renewed chances that farm bills designed to advance to prices might yet receive the approval of congress before the end of the present legislative session. On the other hand, buying which for a time appeared to come chiefly from houses with northwestern connections was atributed to reports that field work and plant growth in the spring crop belt was being hindered.

Highest prices of the day in the wheat market were scored during the late dealings, and the close was at the top figures reached. Much of the buying at the last was said to be on eastern account, and to be more or less due to some important financial move about to be announced, referring possible to subsequent advices about the establishment of new German credits in this country.

Notwithstanding some enlargement of corn receipts here, corn and oats responded readily to the advance of the wheat market. Some of the buying of corn was asserted to be against the stock of corn at Diuuth.

Liquidating sales of May lard weakened the provision market.

CURB MARKET.

New York, April 25.—Stock prices registered marked improvement in today's curb market, which was featured by a brisk short covering movement in the oil group. Prairie Oil and Gas jumped 7 points to 226 and then eased to 223 1-2 while net gains of 1 to 2 points were recorded by Standard Oil Indiana, Vacuum, Ohio, Magnolia, Illinois Pipe, and Swan and Finch.

Recoveries of more than 2 points each in Otis Elevator new stock and Dubilier Radio were the outstanding developments in the industrial group. Revival of activity in Ward Baking shares was based on publication of the quarterly report showing earnings of $126,000 above the first three months of last year. Glen Alden Coal also made further recovery.

Copper shares were again the most active issues in the mining list, Kay Copper touching another high record for the year.

COTTON.

New York, April 25.—Cotton—Spot steady; middling 31.00.

METAL MARKET.

New York, April 25.—Copper steady; electrolytic spot and futures 13 1-2@ 13 5-8. Tin easy. Spot and nearby 48.75; futures 48.50. Iron steady. Prices unchanged. Lead easy. Spot 7.75@8.00. Zinc easy. East St. Louis spot and futures 6.10. Antimony, spot 9.50.

JEMIMA'S REST.

Jemima Underpath was hopelessly domestic. She was domestic against the protests of her family, against the lack of necessity and contrary to the doctor's orders.

The last time he came and folded away his stethescope he regarded her critically. "Get out and enjoy yourself," he told her. "Privail on Dick Henry for a lot of new clothes you don't need but will relish, and let your cook and two maids run the house into the ground if they want to—Henry can buy another and stock it as they ruin all your linen and furniture! Stop counting towels and napkins and cleaning the top shelves and wrestling with the laundress over acid in the water!" The doctor was married himself and so was smart about a lot of things. "Take it easy and live to be a hundred years old or keep on the way you are going and —" The doctor made an expressive gesture with his hands and hurried on.

Jemima Underpath lay between her embroidered linen sheets and shuddered a trifle. The thought of her lively rugs and genuine antiques, her table furnishings and fragile vases at the mercy of ignorant hands pained her.

Years back when she and Henry were married she had done more than overseeing—Jemima had cooked and scrubbed and scoured and had not counted it a hardship. Now that the children were grown she had so very little to do, not counting the teas and committee meetings which she dutifully and absent-mindedly attended, that she had gone back to critical work over the house.

Henry protested when she had her hard headaches in consequences and the children protested and scolded and gave her up. But after Henry had talked with the doctor about this last attack he told Jemima that something must be done to change her mode of life. The house was going into cold storage and the Underpath family into a hotel.

Jemima had senses and loyalty did her best to live up to the anxious expectations of her husband and children after they were established at the glittering and expensive Hotel De Luxe.

There was not an exertion possible for her beyond thinking. Maids and bellboys, valets and housekeepers were continually popping out from doors and entryways and closets asking politely, "Did you ring, Mrs. Underpath?"

She wondered whether moths were getting into the rugs in storage, and if the service plates had been accurately packed. She scorned the De Luxe method of doing up curtains and found dust in the corners of the room. Try as she might, Jemima simply could not join the rocking-chair brigade in the big sunroom of the hotel, where many women killed time and grew fat.

Beneath her determined smile she grew a bit wan and her faithful Henry began to worry over what to do for Jemima. She was well enough but she was not happy. If he asked her whether she was not enjoying her rest she invariably said indeed she was, and how foolish she had been to waste so much time on the house as she had done!

Then Henry came home unexpectedly one afternoon and his key made very little noise as he opened the door to their big suite of rooms. He stopped at the living room, blinking at what he saw.

There was Jemima, her silken sleeves pinned up, a basin of water, a cake of soap, a brush and cloths at hand—cleaning the white-enamel woodwork of the room and singing cheerfully to herself a tuneless little song as she blithely worked. The sun from the west windows caught the diamonds on her hand and turned them into a glitter of color, her perfectly marcelled hair shone expensively and her slippers and hosiery spelled some $30.

Suddenly, Henry Underpath threw back his head and laughed heartily and the soap clattered to the floor as Jemima hurled herself at him.

"I got so h-h-homesick for h-home!" she stuttered against his comfortable shoulder. "I just had to!"

"Well," said Henry Underpath, patting her shoulder, "I guess we'd better take the things out of storage and hunt up a house again! There isn't much fun in this world beyond having what you want, anyway!"—Exchange.

Strategy and Tactics.

Our word strategy is from the Greek strategia, meaning army leadership. It primarily means the disposition and higher direction of land, sea and air power in war. It is often confounded with tactics, but there is a difference. Strategy includes the general direction of a campaign, the higher leadership, while tactics deal with the actual handling of troops and ships and the disposition of forces in the battle area. Strategy is the science of military position and of the combination and employment of means on a broad scale for gaining advantage in warfare. Tactics is the art of maneuvering vessels and troops in the immediate presence of the enemy, practically in the battle area.

Gold in the Philippines.

It is said that there is not a stream rising in the mountains of Luzon—and the same is true of other islands of the Philippine group—which has not its gold-bearing sands. The alluvial deposits of the precious metal have been garnered for many years, but so thorough exploitation for gold at its sources in the mountains has been made because the Spaniards were unable to conquer the tribes inhabiting the interior regions, and American enterprise has not yet been enlisted in this matter. Some of these tribes are said to look upon the digging up of the earth as a sacrilege, and they will not seek gold in that way lest the wrath of the gods should grow hot against them.—New York Herald.

No Sinecure.

The following notice was tacked on the door of his office by the postmaster of a small southern town: "All parties expecting mail are hereby notified that they better come around for it in advance any day before next Thursday, that being the day we have appointed to go hunting, not having had a holiday from the government since July 4th, said government seeming to forget that being only human, we need rest and recreation occasional. There's some little mail here for the Hawkinses and for Joe Robertson, but we guess it doesn't amount to much, seeing it's all get one-cent stamps on it. There ain't nothing much in the business nohow. There's a newspaper from Selma here for Steve Tuttle. It says Gus Loftus left his wife. Otherwise it ain't exciting."—Buffalo Express.

POETRY

THE FOUR WINDS.

When the wind's in the north
The hilltops are white,
The waters know wrath,
And Love is a Might
When the wind's in the North.

When the wind's in the East,
The hillsides are gray,
To the greatest and least
Love showeth the way
When the wind's in the East.

When the wind's in the West,
And the mill-trees are blown,
Love knoweth his quest
Among spirits that groan
When the wind's in the West.

When the wind's in the South,
The flower-covered hills
Have no fear of drouth,
For Love guides the rills
When the wind's in the South.

When the winds are asleep
And the stars are pine-caught,
Love and I keep
The brave secrets we sought.
Whist! the winds are asleep.
—Dorothy Una Ratcliffe in Indianapolis News.

SOLITUDE

Solitude:
In a silent wood
Near a deep black pool.
Whence thoughts profound
Arise and astound
My quiet mind.
As white birch trees
And darkened pines
Point to the evening sky,
A lonely star
Reflected lies
In the peaceful lake.
As the sunset dies,
The loons awake
With a thrilling laugh,
And the amber moon rides high.
—By Mary Wickham Porcher in McClure's

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"I gave that fellow the gate."

"Yes?"

"And he took offense?"—Farm Life

Teacher—Can any one tell me how macaroni is made?

Johnny—First you take a big long hole, and then you wrap some dough around it—The Progressive Grocer.

Rich Uncle—I'll admit, my son, that I sowed a few wild oats when I was young.

Nephew—You're lucky to have sowed 'em before they got so beastly tame."—Boston Transcript.

Alice—Betty, dear, I hear you are engaged to Jack.

Betty (coyly)—Yes.

Alice—Well, I do congratulate you. He was about the nicest finance I ever had.—Exchange.

Friend—Why did you jilt that man who wanted to marry you?

Prima Donna—I couldn't make up my mind whether he was in love with me or merely wanted to hear me sing for nothing.—Twice Told Tales.

Flora—It is rumored that you're engaged to Mr. Allfront. Are you marrying him for his money.

Fauna—There's nothing in the rumor. I shall never marry—especially a man I don't love—unless he has lot more money than Mr. Allfront.—Boston Globe.

"Which weeds are the easiest weeds to kill?" asked the city chap of the farmer.

"Widow's weeds," replied the farmer. You have only to say "wilt thou' and they wilt."—The Lyre.

Mrs. Gray—So your daughter is very musical. Does she practice a lot?

Mrs. Green—No we can't get her to practise at all; the amateur quality of the work grates upon her sensitive ear, poor child.—Boston Transcript.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Florence Nightingale lived until August 13, 1910.

The landlord of a house in Paris, anxious about the possible variations in the value of the franc, refused to let his house for a long lease, except that the rent be calculated in bushels of wheat.

In the ex-kaiser's pew in the chapel a push button has been found which his ex-majesty formerly used to ring a bell in the pulpit. When the minister had preached the allotted time the all-highest would ring the bell. The dominie was expected to finish his discourse forthwith, even though he was in the middle of a sentence.

A woman depositor entered a Boston bank to deposit some money. She procured a deposit slip which required the listing of bills, checks and specie. She listed her bills and checks in their respective places but was somewhat in doubt as to what to list under "specie." After a few moments thought she wrote after the word specie, "Female," and turned in her deposit.

The addition of small quantities of potassium iodine to fertilisers has been found by French scientists to increase materially the yield of sugar beets. Larger amounts decrease the yield of sugar in the beets. It is thought that the iodine has an important effect on the power of the plants to utilize the energy of the sunlight for the transformation of plant food into plant substance.

New uses for potatoes are being sought by German scientists, who have found that by the utilization of dried potatoes a strong, palatable beer may be obtained. The potato taste and odor completely vanish if the wort is cooked. From the carbonised rotten and spoiled potatoes a useful bleaching substance has been made and this black bleaching powder, if mixed with turpentine, makes a good shoe polish.

A teacher gave a youngster in the public schools of Fairfax, Okla., a paddling. The boy had some matches and a paper in his hip pocket. The matches were ignited, the paper caught fire, which spread to the boy's clothing. The teacher saw smoke, but thinking it dust from the trousers, continued the punishment. Soon, however, she became aware that the dust was smoke, and the boy was in danger of getting more of a "warming" than the teacher had planned.

Planting of nut trees is comparatively new in this country, says the American Tree Association, of Washington, D. C. Until within the last ten years, except in the regions where commercial nut raising had become established, the individual's proposal to plant trees for the raising of nuts was usually met by scornful comment. In some European countries nut and fruit trees along the roads are sources of material profit. For a 2-cent stamp the association will send a tree-planting folder.

Oil is being used to prevent sand from being drifted by the wind across the tracks of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company and impeding or even preventing traffic. Dunes near the tracks in the Columbia river valley are sprayed with crude petroleum, which has been heated so as to obtain the required fluidity. A thin layer of asphaltic material then forms on the sand and so prevents the drifting of the surface. One application serves for at least a year and in some locations for as many as [illegible]

To Theatre-goers
Announcing an engagement extraordinary at the PALACE, of Norwich and vicinity, presenting something different from the regular run of its attractions on May 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th.
This presentation is neither drama, opera, comedy, poetry, romance, adventure or extravaganza —
AND YET it combines in a new way the elements of all these arts, embracing in its developments a period in our history which cemented the greatest of America.
The production will be upon a scale never attempted before and vivifies a tradition which is a source of pride to all true Americans.
WATCH YOUR DAILY PAPERS for detailed announcements of this great attraction.

TAFTVILLE

The directors of the Taftville Athletic association met Thursday evening and made arrangements for a membership drive.

Mrs. Earl Ray of South C Street is confined to her home with an attack of the mumps.

A well known local man got the best catch of the season when he caught a 14 inch trout in a nearby stream. It is said that he was too modest to show the prize and it was discovered in his pocket by some of his friends.

Troop 3, Boy Scouts met Friday evening in the recreation rooms of the Taftville Congregational church under the direction of Scoutmaster Victor H. Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. George Morrow and son of Norwich were callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sears and family on Providence Street, Friday.

Joseph Marshall of Norwich was a caller in town Friday.

NORWICH TOWN

With reference to various articles solicited by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Backus hospital, to be used at that institution, such as old linen table cloths, napkins, sheets and pillow cases, also jelly glasses, cold cream jars, etc, it has been suggested that contributors from Norwich Town leave donations at the home of Miss Jessie E. Hyde of 268 Washington street from now until July 1st. Miss Hyde is a member of the hospital committee.

The Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church, is to be held at the usual hour (standard time.) At this service a vote is to be taken by the members of the parish, to decide whether services are to conform to daylight saving time during the next few months.

An invitation has been extended the Norwich Town Congregational Young People's Christian Endeavor society to attend the meeting Sunday evening at 5.30 at the Community house and join with the Young People's C. E. society of the United Congregational church. Dr. Benjamin Marshall of the Connecticut College for Women is to be the speaker. After the meeting there will be a social hour.

CENTRAL BAPTIST GIRLS WIN SILVER CUP

The girls of the Central Baptist church were the winners of the silver cup Friday evening in the interchurch girls meet at Park Congregational church. The cup has been held for two years by the Park church girls.

The programme of the evening was a ten-minute April fool stunt to be put on by each girls' group, with the Central Baptist, Park, United and Taftville Congregational girls competing. About 100 girls were in attendance and the evening was one of much enjoyment for them as they participated in songs and watched the stunts of the four groups in the competition.

Refreshments were served by the Park church girls who entertained the [illegible].

PAINTERS' STRIKE SETTLED, NEW RATE 90 CENTS

The strike of the Norwich painters for a wage rate of $1 an hour, which had been effective since April 15, was settled Friday night when they voted to accept a 90-cent minimum.

Under an agreement that expired April 15 they had been getting 87 1-2 cents. They asked for $1 an hour and were offered 87 1-2 cents which they [illegible].

NORWICH READY FOR DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME NEXT MONDAY

When Norwich citizens swing into their business stride Monday morning, after the Sunday rest, it will be to the changed time schedule that inaugurates daylight saving time for the summer season. By general agreement, all the manufacturing industries will advance their time for beginning work an hour, the merchants will do the same for their stores railroad and trolley schedules will make the necessary change and the school hours will be changed so that the family schedules will proceed in the regular way without dislocation.

Naturally enough public clocks will continue to show standard time, in accordance with the supreme court decision that this legislative enactment must be obeyed, but the individual citizen will find it the easiest way to avoid confusion by merely setting his own clock or watch an hour ahead and then proceeding to follow his watch for all his ordinary vocations or duties.

The clock in the court house tower will remain on standard time and clocks in the offices there will not be changed, but the town clerk's office will open at 8 a. m. and close at 4.40 p. m., standard time, instead of the former hours of 9 to 5:30 and other offices in the building will make a similar time change. This is in line with the opinion of Chief Justice Wheeler of the supreme court that the court could set its own time for its sessions without violating the spirit of the law as long as it met on standard time.

The churches on Sunday will follow the recommendation of the Norwich Ministers association, which voted at a recent meeting to recommend that all services on Sunday April 27 should be on standard time.

The time of services for later Sundays was left without recommendation, further than a resolution declaring that the churches in this, as in other matters, are the servants of the community and will follow the expressed desire of the people in the matter.

PARK CHURCH PROGRAMMES FOR 50TH ANNIVERSARY

The church is extending a cordial invitation to all other churches to attend these services.

The celebration of the anniversary is under the direction of the anniversary committee consisting of Mrs. Frederick W. Cary, chairman, Miss Alice W. Cogswell, secretary, Mrs. Julius A. Brand, Mrs. Oliver L. Johnson, Ebenezer Learned, Frederic W. Cary, Oliver L. Johnson, Miss Amy L. Cogswell, Henry K. Tirrell, James M. Morton.

MOOSE PREPARING TO HAVE MORTGAGE BURNING

The regular meeting of Norwich Lodge No. 950, L. O. O. M., was held Friday evening at Moose Home on Laurel Hill avenue with Dictator George J. Goepfert presiding. A class of seven candidates was initiated and several applications were received.

Announcement was made that on May 4th beginning at 2:30 o'clock the biggest event in the history of the Norwich lodge will take place at Moose Home. The first big event will be the installation of officers for the ensuing year; the second, the burning of the mortgage; third, the celebration of the 10th anniversary of Norwich lodge and the holding of the anniversary banquet; fourth, big concert and entertainment. This announcement was greeted with cheers and plans are being made to take care of one of the largest gatherings of members in the history of the local lodge.

George J. Goepfert, who has been dictator of the lodge for the past two years will be installed as secretary of the lodge, taking the place of Frank B. Hazard who has served the lodge in that capacity for the past eight years. The day will be one of the greatest in Moosedom in Norwich and every Moose is looking forward to the first Sunday in May for the big time that has been promised them by the anniversary committee.

APPOINTED SUPERINTENDENT AT ULMER LEATHER CO.

Lloyd R. Cochran of this city has been appointed superintendent of production of the Ulmer Leather company. Before his promotion Mr. Cochran was foreman of two other departments, the tannery and currying shops, at the plant. With his new office Mr. Cochran is in charge of all departments of the plant.

The news of his promotion will be pleasing to the many friends Mr. Cochran has made since coming to this city from Muskegon, Mich.

600 PUNCTURES BUT STILL FULL OF AIR

A new puncture-proof inner tube has been introduced in Chicago which was punctured 600 times without the loss of any air. Motorists can increase their tire mileage over 12,000 miles by using this tube without removing it from the wheel. It costs no more than the ordinary tube. If you are interested you can write Mr. J. C. Gates at 9 West Illinois street, Chicago, for full information as he wants these tubes introduced everywhere. Wonderful opportunity for agents. Simply send name, a post card will do.—Adv.

MOTOR VEHICLE FATALITIES SHOW BIG INCREASE

Forty-six automobile fatalities occurred in Connecticut in the first quarter of this year, as is disclosed by a report for the three months ended March 31 which has been made public by the state motor vehicle department. The number is thirty greater than the total of such fatalities for the corresponding period of last year and is out of proportion to the increase of 35,430 motor vehicles registered.

Reports to the department show that there were 2,137 general motor vehicle accidents in the first quarter of this year, as against 1,905 in the first quarter of 1923. Each succeeding month has shown an increase. There were 969 accidents in January, 1,008 in February and 1,150 in March.

Hartford's record continues to be the worst of any city in the state, with New Haven a close second. Accidents have occurred in each of these two cities throughout the quarter at the rate of more than five a day. Hartford had 480 and New Haven 476. New Haven's record for March was 163 accidents: Hartford's 160; Bridgeport 109; Waterbury 55; New Britain 34; Meriden 29 and New London 27. For the same month of last year, there were 110 accidents in Hartford, 86 in New Haven, 72 in Bridgeport, 29 in New Britain, 34 in Waterbury, 31 in Meriden and 7 in New London. All of these cities showed increases in the number of accidents.

Nineteen of the forty-six fatal accidents for the quarter occurred in March, and New Haven had nine of them. None of the other large cities had more than one, and New London, Meriden and New Britain had none. There were seven motor vehicle fatalities in March, 1923, and at that time no city reported more than one for the month.

$250,000 TO BROWN FOR STUDENTS' RESIDENCE

President W. H. P. Faunce announced Friday night the gift to Brown of $250,000 for the erection of a new hall of residence for students. This gift was made by the executors of the estate of the late John R. Hegeman, former president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York. It has been accepted by the corporation of the university and the money has already been paid into the Brown treasury.

"Mr. Hegeman left at his death a trust fund," Dr. Faunce said, to be distributed among institutions of an educational or philanthropic or charitable nature. The three executors of his estate, Haley Fiske, Frederick H. Ecker and David F. Butcher, learning of Brown's need of a new dormitory or hall of residence, devoted $250,000 from this fund for the building of such a hall to be known as the John R. Hegeman Hall."

1,000 DOGS NEED LICENSING AT ONCE

Owners of dogs have been so slow this year about getting their animals licensed at the town clerk's office that there are 1,000 dogs yet that remain to be licensed in the next four business days before the first of May. The number annually licensed is 1,400 but when Town Clerk C. S. Holbrook looked over the situation Friday he found that only 400 had been licensed to date.

Without the required license no dog has a right to exist after the first of May, but any dog may be shot at sunrise. In order to give citizens the opportunity to save their dogs from the risk of such an untimely fate, Town Clerk Holbrook is to keep his office open this (Saturday) afternoon for the purpose of licensing dogs.

ACADEMY 1919 CLASS PLANNING FOR REUNION

Members of the class of 1919 of Norwich Free Academy held a meeting at the home of the class secretary, Miss Nettie Holmes, on McKinley avenue, Thursday evening, to plan the reunion of the class to be held in June. Joseph Connor was elected as chairman of the banquet and dance committee to be assisted by Misses Lillian Karkutt, Nettie Holmes, Geraldine Lang, Tyler Gilbert, Lester Hull and William Wyman.

JURY DISAGREES IN $5,000 STONINGTON SUIT

The last jury trial for the present term of the superior court in New London came to a close Friday afternoon with a disagreement of the jury which was discharged by Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin and paid off by Clerk George E. Parsons.

This was in the trial of the suit brought by Mrs. Louisa Atkinson, 87 years old, of Stonington, aganist her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Gertrude M. Ollweiler, also of Stonington in which the plaintiff asks damages of $5,000 as a result of injuries alleged to have been received when the defendant attacked her with her fists on March 22, 1922.

Evidence introduced at the trial showed that Philip Ollweiler had not spoken to his mother for nearly three years before the date of the alleged attack and that his wife had not spoken to Mrs. Atkinson for eight years. On the day of the attack, according to testimony of the plaintiff, she had gone to her son's house in company with a bill collector and had demanded that he pay her the sum of $1,000, which she alleged he owed her so that she could pay her bills. An argument ensued, which culminated, according to the plaintiff when her daughter-in-law attacked her so severely that she required medical attention.

LEBANON WILL HEAR REPORTS ON SURVEY

Reports of the results of the Lebanon agricultural economic survey are to be made at a postponed meeting to be held at the Goshen Community club rooms at 8 p. m. next Tuesday evening. Further results of the study will be announced on the evening of April 30 at 8 p. m. at a meeting in the Lebanon high school.

The Lebanon Agricultural economic survey is one of three similar studies which the federal government is helping make in different parts of the United States in an effort to arrive at certain definite conclusions of soil adaptation and land utilization. The local survey covers the entire town of Lebanon, which was selected as fairly typical of the humid regions of northeastern United States.

M. F. Morgan, agronomist of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station at New Haven, who was in charge of the soil studies, and C. I. Hendrickson of the Storrs experiment station, who conducted the economic phases of the survey, will be the speakers. The talks will be illustrated by lantern slides.

The economic survey, which is said to be the most complete of its kind ever made in America, was planned and directed by Professor I. G. Davis of the Agricultural Economics department of Connecticut Agricultural college. The plan was approved and in part financed by the U. S. department of agriculture.

Farmers who desire to have samples of their soil tested for acidity may bring such samples to the meeting at Goshen. Such samples should be moderately dry, weigh about one-fourth pound and represent the soil to an average plowing depth. All such samples will be tested free of charge by Mr. Morgan by the new system of potassium thiocyante test.

DINNER WELL PATRONIZED AT UNIVERSALIST CHURCH

The committee in charge were as follows: General committee, Mrs. A. S. Comstock, chairman; Mrs. Walter A. Bussey, Mrs. William Mitchell, Mrs. Theodore Pike, Mrs. Joseph L. Oat, Mrs. Charles W. Parsons.

In charge of the dining room: Mrs. Clarence E. Barber, chairman; assisted by Mrs. John McDonald.

Waitresses: Mrs. Lewis Oat, Mrs. Herman Bukallus, Mrs. George E. Disque, Mrs. John Anderson, Miss Natalie Bussey, Miss Blannard Smith, Mrs. A. G. Crowell, Mrs. Harold Hull, Mrs. Sumner W. Armstrong, Mrs. James Bussey, Miss Virginia Disque.

Mrs. Thomas W. Wilson sold tickets at the door.

HYACINTHS MAKE BRILLIANT SHOW AT COURT HOUSE

A round bed of hyacinths at the court house is just now rewarding Superintendent Joseph J. Fields with a beautiful display of blooms that are rich and brilliant in their coloring in white, purple and two shades of pink.

When Mr. Fields uncovered the bed about two weeks ago, the plants were three or four inches or more above the ground and they were immediately covered completely with snow as there was a heavy snowfall the day after he took off the top dressing. For a time it was feared that this might have blighted the plants, but they came through it splendidly and seem to have been improved by their snow bath.

PINOCHLE EVENING BY SPANISH WAR AUXILIARY

OHIO METAL WORKER A VICTIM

Ray S. Ball, Huron, Ohio, was a victim of coughs and colds. Both he and his sister suffered with them, but found "speedy relief" through the use of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, the old favorite cough remedy. He writes: "I have found Foley's Honey and Tar Compound a most excellent remedy for coughs and colds. My sister had a severe cold and cough a year ago and found speedy relief in Foley's Honey and Tar Compound." Lee & Osgood Co.

COLONIAL CLUB RE-ELECTS ALL OFFICERS FOR YEAR

All officers of the Colonial club were re-elected Friday evening at the annual meeting and banquet of the club, held at the club room on West Main street. Promptly at 6.30 o'clock the members sat down to a delicious chicken pie supper served by Mrs. Berry, the menu being as follows:

Chicken Pie
Mashed Potatoes

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Celery | Rolls | Pickles |
| Apple Pie | Coffee | Cheese |
| Cigars | | Cigarettes |

Immediately following the banquet the annual meeting was called to order by President Harry McNaught and reports of the secretary, William Huntington, were read and approved.

Greatest Authority On Russian History

Sir Bernard Pares, director of Slavonic Studies in the London University, Kings College, who recently arrived in New York for a lecture of the United States. He is known as the greatest living authority on Russian history.

The report of W. Smith Allen, treasurer, showed the finances of the club to be excellent. The election of officers followed resulting in the re-election of the officers for 1923, as follows: President, Harry McNaught; vice president, Charles Moore; secretary, William Huntington; treasurer, W. Smith Allen; collector, John D. Oat. Elections of directors followed resulting as follows: director for three years, W. Irving Drake, to succeed Warren W. Church. Directors holding over are Elmer R. Pierson and William J. Koons.

The committee in charge of the three pinochle tournaments which have been played at the club during the winter then announced the winners and distributed prizes. The winners were Irving Drake, 1st and 3rd; Dr. H. E. Higgins, 1st; Percival Harwood, 1st; William C. Amburn, 2nd; David Kanefick, 2nd; Harry McNaught, 3rd; Albert G. Ellibridge, 2nd; Elmer R. Pierson, 3rd.

Following the meeting a social time was enjoyed and several pinochle games were played, or pool games enjoyed.

The entertainment committee in charge of the banquet and pinochle tournaments was as follows: John B. Oat, chairman, William J. Koons and W. Smith Allen.

SPEAKER ON JAPAN AT MISSIONS MEETING

The last meeting of the season for the Missions Department of the Woman's Guild of the United Congregational church was held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Sunday school room of the church with a good attendance, and an entertaining talk upon Japan by Mrs. Lester F. McLean, dean of woman at the Hartford seminary foundation, as a feature of the meeting.

Mrs. McLean, who was introduced by Miss Nancy Lucas, chairman of the department, made a plea for friendly treatment of the Japanese and gave instances of many fine Japanese women whom she had known in her work as hostess of a Y. W. C. A. home in Tokyo. An interesting Japanese playlet, The Other Point of View, was given under the direction of Mrs. Helen B. Zabriskie and Miss Elizabeth H. Pullen by Mrs. A. C. Freeman and the Misses Gertrude Gallup, Elizabeth Smith, Marion Beebe, Emma Thompson and Clara Evans.

Reports for the year were made and tea and wafers were served. Mrs. Edward D. Fuller and Mrs. Frederick W. Lester poured, Mrs. L. M. Young being in charge of the refreshments.

FATALITY AT $1,000,000 FIRE IN THE CENTER OF LOWELL

Fire Captain Edward P. Cunningham Was Killed When Wall Collapsed—Eight Other Firemen Were Injured—Militia Units Were Called Out—Also All Reserves and Special Police in the City Were on Duty—City Hall Was Used As An Emergency Hospital.

Lowell, Mass., April 27.—One fireman was killed, eight were injured and a property loss of approximately $1,000,000 was caused when fire, starting early today in the heart of Lowell's business district, swept through five buildings, a theatre, the Knights of Columbus building and a large garage.

In addition to the sounding of a general alarm, the militia units stationed in the city were called out together with all reserve and special police in the city. Aid was summoned from the city of Lawrence and the town of Dracut before the flames could be brought under control. Only the presence of a canal nearby the square in which the blaze originated, enabled the fighters to direct enough streams on the fire to prevent a general conflagration.

Captain Edward P. Cunningham is dead as the result of the collapse of a wall of the Associated building. Other firemen on a ladder with him were hurled to the ground, or saved when their safety belts held them to the ladder as it fell against another building.

Hoseman John Gray was taken to a local hospital, suffering from internal injuries. Seven other fire fighters were less seriously injured.

The fire, which started apparently in the Lisbon Club rooms in the top story of the five story Associated building soon enveloped the structure.

A general alarm was sounded as showers of sparks set fire to the Mongeau building, a three story office building. Aid was summoned from Lawrence and Dracut and a general military call issued.

The fire wiped out the Associated building, almost hopelessly ruined the Mongeau block and razed the Academy of Music, one of Lowell's oldest theatres.

Despite efforts of the firemen to save the Knights of Columbus building, a three story structure entirely occupied by the order, the building was soon a mass of flames with the fire threatening to engage the Y. M. C. A. building across the street.

A large garage and stable in the same square, in the path of the flames, was the next building to go. Prompt work on the part of firemen resulted in the saving of 17 horses kept in the stables.

Almost total absence of wind, in addition to the presence of a canal, enabling the firemen to deluge the burning area with water, resulted in the checking of the blaze after they had been spreading for four hours. The final oil-out was not sounded until eight hours later.

The scene of the origin of the fire was directly across the street from the Lowell city hall which was transformed into an emergency hospital for dozens of firemen overcome by smoke and injured.

GREECE OFFERS LOAN OF BEAUTIFUL STATUE

Geneva, April 27 (By the A. P.).—As a mark of esteem for American democracy, Greece, the youngest republic in the world, has offered to loan the American people, one of the most beautiful of statues, bequeathed to her by antiquity—"Hermes Carrying the Infant Dionysus," the masterpiece of Praxiteles, the famous Greek sculptor of the fifth century.

This announcement was made today by Henry Morgenthau, who is on his way home to the United States after having served as financial adviser to the Greek government during the recent political upheaval, and after having successfully launched the League of nations' project to establish 1,000,444 refugees on Greek soil.

The only condition that Greece attaches to the loan of the famous statue, which now reposes in the museum at Olympia, Greece, is that the Washington government will formally request that the statue be shown to the American people. Unlike "Cleopatra's Needle," which is in Central Park, New York city, the Hermes of Praxiteles will not remain in the United States but will merely make the journey there, to stay for any length of time the United States government may desire it. Greece, it is said, would not part with this classic for any consideration whatsoever, nor will she permit its exhibition in the United States as a source of revenue for Greece.

The idea behind the offer to loan the statue to the United States is that millions of Americans, particularly the younger student generation, may find inespiration for art study in viewing this matchless example of Grecian sculpture, of which reproductions exist in all countries.

NEW HOME FOR NAT'L ACADEMY OF SCIENCES

Washington, April 27.—The new home of the National Academy of Sciences and the National Research Council, erected near the Lincoln Memorial through contributions by a number of philanthropists and the Carnegie Corporation of New York, will be dedicated tomorrow with President Coolidge delivering the principal address.

The dedicatory ceremonies will be held at 10.30 a. m., and the president's address will be broadcast through radio stations WEAF of New York and WCAP of Washington.

The new home of the two allied scientific societies was built at a cost of approximately $1,000,000, exclusive of the site, and has been under construction since early in 1922.

MAYFLOWERS FOR MR. AND MRS. CALVIN COOLIDGE

Plymouth, Mass., April 27.—More than 200 men, women and children scoured the township today for Mayflowers to carry the first fragrance of New England spring to President and Mrs. Coolidge. The results of the concerted search in every nook and corner of the woods were brought back to a local florist early in the evening for sorting and bunching.

The pickers, who brought in the first blossoms of the season, reported the flowers scarce and of poor quality because the snowfall of the winter had been light.

However, enough were brought in for one and possibly two large bunches.

WOMAN SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN AUTO OVERTURNED

Newtown, April 27—Miss Ella Sterling, of New York City, was seriously injured and four others received minor bruises and lacerations when an automobile driven by L. B. Bennett of Bridgeport turned turtle today near the Newtown country club when Bennett sought to avoid a collision with another machine. Miss Sterling was taken to St. Vincent's hospital, Bridgeport, and is said to be suffering from broken ribs, a broken shoulder and possibly a broken back. Bennett attempted to pass a machine driven by Oswald Rapold, of Danbury and was forced off the road by another car coming in the opposite direction.

WARRANT FOR ARREST OF MAL S. DAUGHERTY

Washington, April 27.—Armed with a warrant for the arrest of Mal S. Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general, a deputy sergeant-at-arms of the senate has left for Washington Courthouse, Ohio, the home of Mr. Daugherty.

DEPRESSION IN BUSINESS NOT CONSIDERED SERIOUS

Washington, April 27.—March business conditions showed indications of a slacking in commercial development in all leading lines except building construction and production of steel ingots, the federal reserve board said today in an industrial summary. The depression, in the view of officials here, is not serious.

"Production of basic commodities decreased during March," the board's statement said, "and there was a recession in wholesale prices. Distribution, both wholesale and retail, showed less than the usual seasonal increase and was smaller than a year ago."

The board's calculations showed a 3 per cent. reduction in production in March and informal advices in government circles were that the rate of decrease was sustained in the early part of April.

"Output was reduced in most industries," the statement added, "and the decreases were particularly large in mill consumption of cotton and production of bituminous coal and copper. Daily average production of than in any previous month.

"The level of factory employment was unchanged, but some curtailment in working hours was evidenced by a decline of 1 per cent. in average weekly earnings. Contract awards for new buildings in March reached the highest total value on record, owing chiefly to a large increase in the New York federal reserve district."

The board's figures showed marked decreases in wholesale sales of dry goods, shoes and hardware. This was further reflected in stocks on hand in stores which were shown to be nearly 10 per cent. below the quantity held April 1, last year. Generally unfavorable weather conditions and a late Easter, the board said, might account for some of the reduction in retail sales, but the board apparently did not charge the decrease in the volume of purchases entirely to those two factors.

In connection with the indicated recession in business activity, there was shown also a reduction of almost $125,000,000 in discounts and investments by federal reserve banks since April 2, when the total of these items in the twelve banks was more than one billion dollars.

TRAFFIC CONFERENCE IS TO BE HELD IN NEW YORK

New York, April 27.—Traffic congestion, traffic accident and traffic cost problems will be discussed by representatives from over a hundred municipalities in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut at a conference to begin here May 30.

The convention will be held on the joint call of the Merchants' Association of New York, the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, the New York State Chamber of Commerce, the Westchester County Chamber of Commerce, the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce and eight similar organizations.

The conference will consider particularly how the traffic problems of New York and the municipalities surrounding it are influenced by the height of buildings, by zoning regulations, by the location of inter-city highways, and the extent to which these problems may be alleviated by a plan for the future development of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Acceptances already received indicate that more than 1,000 will participate in the deliberations.

STANDARD TIME FAVORED IN RURAL COMMUNITIES

Boston, April 27.—The people of Massachusetts and in municipalities throughout New England arose an hour earlier today than has been their custom, as another summer of daylight saving went into effect. Massachusetts, alone of New England states, is a unit for the "summer time" measure, the majority of others permitting cities and towns to regulate the matter as they choose. Clocks were advanced one hour, in communities under daylight saving time, at 2 o'clock this morning.

Railroad schedules throughout the territory have undergone radical revision to meet the changed requirements. Standard time finds its stronghold in Vermont and New Hampshire. Cities elsewhere generally favor the "summer time," with rural communities, in general, backing standard time.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

J. P. Morgan in London.

Emigrants Arrested.

Cherbourg, France, April 27.—Six Italian emigrants who were about to embark for Canada, were taken into custody today on an allegation that the passports they held were forged. The passports were printed in the French language.

TO BASE INCOME TAX FIGHT ON LONGWORTH COMPROMISE

Washington, April 27.—Senate republican organization leaders decided today to base their final stand in the income tax fight opening this week on the rates adopted by the house—the Longworth Compromise.

This move is dependent on the defeat of the Mellon rates, declared to be inevitable by some leaders.

Chairman Smoot of the finance committee, in charge of the revenue bill, expects to bring up tomorrow the normal and surtax rates on which one of the closest party contests of the session is expected.

Before retreating to the house schedule which would provide for a maximum surtax rate of 37 1-2 per cent., he planned if necessary to put forward a series of amendments, increasing by gradual stages the maximum surtax from 25 per cent. recommended by secretary Mellon. This would bring votes on rates of 30 per cent, 32 per cent, 35 per cent and 37 1-2 per cent. At the same time republicans planned also to put aside the Mellon normal rates for those adopted by the house.

With a final decision resting between the rates and those proposed by senate democrats, the result would hinge, as the house, on a strict party vote, and the outcome would depend largely on the vote of republican insurgents.

The Democratic rates—drawn up by Senator Simmons, North Carolina, ranking democrat on the finance committee, would provide a surtax schedule starting at one per cent. at $10,000, graduating to 40 per cent. at $500,000. Under this plan the rate of $200,000 would be 38 per cent.

Surtax rates adopted by the house started at 1 1-2 per cent. at $10,000 and graduated up to a maximum of 27 1-2 pre cent. at $200,000. There is little more than one per cent. difference between the two schedules throughout while they are practically the same on incomes between $60,000 and $80,000.

The house normal rates would provide for 5 per cent. on incomes below $4,000; five per cent. on incomes between $4,000 and $8,000, and six per cent on incomes above that amount. The Simmons plan would conform to these except for a rate of four per cent. on incomes between $4,000 and $8,000. The Mellon plan would reduce the normal rates in the present law of four per cent. on incomes below $4,000 and eight per cent. above that amount to three and six per cent. respectively.

CONFERENCE ON REPARATIONS WILL OPEN IN PARIS TODAY

Paris, April 27 (By the A. P.).—The first conference between the spokesmen of the allied governments since the reparation experts' report was handed in will take place tomorrow morning, when Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Hymans, of Belgium, will meet Premier Poincare at the Quai D'Orsay. The Belgians reached Paris late this afternoon so that they would be on hand for early discussions, which are considered highly important since they will concern the more secret considerations by the governments of the experts' report for the purpose of putting it into effect.

As on many previous occasions the Belgian representatives are expected to play the role of mediators between the French and English viewpoints. They will take note of M. Poincare's explanation of certain observations he has made in reply to the reparation commission and will try to reconcile the French attitude with the British conception of the problem when they come into conference with the British prime minister toward the end of the week.

The chief difference between the French and British seems to be that the French want to make sure what penalties would automatically be applied in case of a new default before turning over to Germany economic sovereignty of the occupied territory, while the British hold that the restoration of such sovereignty is contingent upon beginning the application of the experts' plan, and that penalties should be discussed only in case of a new default.

BERLIN EXPERIENCES SERIOUS ELECTION RIOTS

Berlin, April 27—Serious election riots occurred here this evening in which great numbers were injured. Not less than forty persons needed medical treatment.

The German peoples party had announced a meeting, but the approaches to the hall were occupied beforehand by communists. When the adherents of the peoples party arrived they were attacked by the communists with clubs. Police reinforcements were ordered to the scene, and the meeting eventually was held. Later, however, the rioting was renewed, with additional casualties. Sixteen arrests were made.

NEARLY 100 JAPANESE FISHERMEN ARE MISSING

Tokio, April 27—(By the A. P.)—Nearly 100 fishermen from villages on the west coast of the main island of Japan are missing as a result of severe storms in the sea of Japan yesterday. Destroyers from Maizuru have been ordered to search for the men.

MOTORCYCLIST FATALLY INJURED IN COLLISION

Hartford, April 27.—Abraham J. Smith, 34, of this city, was fatally injured this afternoon when the motorcycle he was driving collided with an automobile driven by William O'Brien also of this city. Examination at St. Francis hospital where Smith was taken showed a fractured skull.

OBITUARY.

Dr. Gustav G. Fisch

New York, April 27—Dr. Gustav G. Fisch, district grandmaster of the Fifth Masonic district of New York state and brother-in-law of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, died today of heart disease. He was a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and was formerly president of the Eastern Medical society. He was 55 years old. A widow and daughter survive him.

Public Steam Plants Needed in N. England

Industries Will Require Large Power Plants, Supplemented by Water Power.

Boston, April 27.—The power requirements of New England industries will increase at least 15 per cent in the next 10 years, it is estimated in a report of the associated industries of Massachusetts on the New England fuel and power situation, made public today. The potential supply of water power to meet the demand is relatively small, the report says, and reliance must mainly be placed upon large public steam plants, supplemented if possible by water power from Canada.

There is undeveloped water power in New England capable of producing about 4,830,000,000 kilowatt hours, the report states.

"This would be sufficient to take care of the requirements for several years," the report continues, "but unfortunately about three-quarters of this undeveloped power is in Maine, and under existing laws cannot be exported. x x x x x.

"The total wate rpower from all sources is relatively small compared with the total power requirements for New England's growth. x x x x. It appears that the great bulk of additional power must come from large public steam plants, located not far from the load centers, and from a supplementing of such plants by large water powers in Canada, if proper agreements can be made for the export of electric current."

"Water power cannot free the industries from their dependence upon coal, the report points out, but can prevent the cost of power from continually increasing and can lessen the hazards of the coal supply."

The report, which covers nearly three hundred printed pages was prepared by a committee consisting of Charles T. Main, chairman; Henry L. Harriman, Dugald C. Jackson, George L. Finch and B. Preston Clarke.

HUNDREDS OF KLANSMEN AT FUNERAL OF O. H. POORBAUGH

Johnstown, Pa., April 27.—Clad in robes and hoods, with their masks rolled back, hundreds of Ku Klux Klansmen of the western Pennsylvania region today participated in the funeral service for O. H. Poorbaugh, who died shortly after he was removed from the county jail to a hospital. Poorbaugh was one of 26 alleged klansmen who were arrested and held on murder and riot charges in connection with the fight between visiting klansmen and villagers at Lilly, near here, on April 5.

About midway between the Poorbaugh home and the church, the motor of the hearse caught fire and the funeral procession was delayed until another hearse was obtained. Hundreds of persons stood on the sidewalks as the procession passed.

The klansmen conducted their ritual services at the grave.

SHOT HUSBAND DEAD AND THEN DRANK POISON

Keensburg, N. J., April 27—Gifford Van Cleef, a former contracting painter, of Newport, N. Y., who came here six weeks ago, today was shot and killed by his wife in their bed room, according to a report made to the authorities by A. A. Frey, with whom the couple lived. After the shooting, Mrs. Van Cleef ran into the bath room and drank poison in an attempt to end her own life, it is said. At the Monmouth Memorial hospital, at Long Branch, it was reported tonight that the woman's condition is critical.

Dr. C. W. MacConnell, who was summoned by Mr. Frey after the shooting, expressed the opinion that Mrs. Van Cleef was temporarily insane.

WEST HAVEN BOY KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

West Haven, Conn., April 27.—Thomas Nutaranzello, age 5, is dead and his father Sebastiano, is in a serious condition at the New Haven hospital as the result of being struck by an automobile operated by Tony Nartasi, of Hartford today. Nartasi is being held for the coroner under $1,500 bail.

Nartasi, according to the police, sideswiped a machine on the Milford turnpike near Derby bridge, in attempting to pass a car ahead of him, and then struck the father and son who were walking at the side of the road. Nutaranzello has a fractured shoulder blade and possible internal injuries.

90-YEAR-OLD COLCHESTER WOMAN HAD HAIR BOBBED

Colchester, Conn., April 27.—Being 90 years old is no reason why a woman shouldn't have her hair bobbed, in the opinion of Mrs. Della Schmidt, who now proudly exhibits her gray locks clipped in the latest fashion.

"What a convenience," she exclaimed as she was helped out of the barber's chair and gazed at herself in the mirror. "I feel ever so much lighter. I was never able to get the snarls out of my hair. I feel real young again."

Mrs. Schmidt advises all women, regardless of age, to have their hair bobbed.

MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER ORDERED TO HONDURAS

Balboa, Canal Zone, April 27.—Montgomery Schuyler, American minister to Salvador, who recently arrived here from San Salvador on his way to the United States, has received instructions by cable from Washington to proceed immediately to Honduras. Accordingly he took passage aboard the Panama Canal wrecking tug Favorite today for Amapala.

At this port peace negotiations are understood to be going on between representatives of the warring factions of Honduras aboard the U. S. cruiser Milwaukee.

STEAMER CAUGHT FIRE AFTER AN EXPLOSION

Adelaide, Australia, April 27.—The British freight steamer City of Singapore, with a cargo of oil and motor cars from New York, caught fire at midnight Saturday at her dock here after a terrific explosion. One fireman was killed and several firemen were injured while fighting the flames which enveloped the vessel today.

Husband Exonerates Nina Wilcox Putnam

Robert J. Sanderson Declares Charges by Ellsworth Bassett Are Baseless.

New York, April 27—Robert J. Sanderson, husband of Nina Wilcox Putnam, authoress, formally and publicly declared today that the alienation-of-affections charges with which his wife's name was linked last winter were utterly false.

The charges to which he referred concerned an alleged divorce pact. The authoress was supposed to divorce Sanderson so she could marry her chauffeur-secretary, Ellsworth Bassett of Madison, Conn., who was to divorce Mrs. Bassett in the meantime.

Mrs. Sanderson won a decree at Providence, R. I., but the courts almost immediately voided it on the ground that she obtained it illegally. Then Mrs. Bassett came forward with charges that Mrs. Sanderson had induced Bassett to divorce his wife, so that he could marry his employer.

The authoress was at Palm Beach and Bassett was attending to her fruit farm interests at Delroy, Fla., when Mrs. Bassett's allegations were published in Connecticut. She hastened to New York and here, from a sick bed in a local hospital, denied knowledge of a divorce pact and asserted her innocence of impropriety relations with her chauffeur-secretary or of fraudulently obtaining the decree against Anderson. Then she ordered Bassett to return to his wife and seek a reconciliation.

Bassett returned to Madison, but, although he denied all the charges his wife had voiced publicly, his efforts at reconciliation were reported unsuccessful. Shortly thereafter he resigned from the writer's agency "to save her further unjustified torment." Mrs. Sanderson engaged a woman to manage her affairs.

A grand jury at Providence had, in the meantime, investigated the method by which the authoress obtained the short-lived divorce decree. It found that the process had been irregular and questionable, but that indictment was unwarranted.

The last word in the case at that time was a statement by Sanderson that he had engaged attorneys to "conduct an investigations and determine whether grounds exist on which I should bring an action for divorce against my wife. In fairness to her the public should suspend judgment until facts are known."

He issued the following statement today, through his attorneys:

"I have investigated the Bassett charges made against my wife, Mrs. Nina Wilcox Putnam Sanderson in the newspapers last January, and I am only fair to her for me to state publicly that I have found them to be absolutely without foundation of fact."

BARING DENIES THAT HE POISONED HIS WIFE

White Plains, April 27.—Clarence G. Baring, rich manufacturers' representative, held yesterday for the poisoning of his wealthy wife on his own plea of "guilty except as to intent to kill," today disavowed all connection with the crime and announced his determination to prove his innocence. A plea of not guilty was entered in the court records yesterday.

Meanwhile the district attorney said Dr. Henry Vier, Mrs. Baring's personal physician during the past three years, had told him of finding signs of diphtheria and pneumonia bacteria in his patient's blood. It was his poinion, the district attorney said, that the germs had been given her in ginger ale, root beer, and solid foods.

Baring will have another hearing before Judge Bleakely tomorrow, when it is expected the prosecutor will as that he be held without bail for the grand jury. Mr. Long said he was preparedto furnish bail up to $100,000 and would insist that his client have an opportunity to tell hiss tory to the grand jury.

Mrs. Baring conferred at some length with the district attorney today. She was but one of a series of callers at his office. Mrs. Walter L. Straud, Baring's mother, also was questioned closely. Mrs. Straud came immediately on learning of her son's arrest and after a brief visit at the home of her daughter-in-law took up residence at a local hotel.

MRS. HAZEL MINER HARRIS HELD ON VAGRANCY CHARGE

Fort Edward, N. Y., April 27.—Deserted by Floyd Pellitier, after he had tatooed her to show that "she was his for life," Mrs. Hazel Miner Harris, 18, was arrested today when police sought Pellitier, wanted for burglary of a local store, in his tent on the bank of the barge canal car lock 8. Pellitier escaped by wading two creeks, waist deep in water, with bullets from police revolvers striking around him.

Mrs. Harris, held on charges of vagrancy, told police she had lived with her mother in this village sonce she and her husband separated several years ago. Last week, she said, her love for Pellitier led her to take up a nomadic life with him.

One day, she explained, when she had professed her deep love for him, Pellitier lashed her to a tree, tatooed his initial "P" upon her cheek and tatooed arrows on her forehead and nose. She said there was no need to tie her, for she would have submitted to the tatooing to prove she "intended to be his for life."

TO ENTER INTO CONFERENCE WITH JAPANESE GOVERNMNT

Washington, April 27.—Declaring the recent congressional action upon Japanese immigration has "quite unnecessarily imperilled" the friendly relations between the United States and Japan, the national committee on American-Japanese relations tonight suggested two alternative proposals for the exclusion provisions in the immigration bill now in conference.

The committee, in letters to members of congress, suggested the regulation of Japanese laborers' immigration "by the provisions of the proposed general law, in which case the Japanese quota in any year could not exceed 146," or to "empower the president and secretary of state to enter into conferences with the Japanese government for the prolongation of the gentlemen's agreement in some acceptable form, or for its revocation in accordance with the usual forms of ordinary politeness in international intercourse."

NO IRREGULARITIES IN THE BUREAU OF ENGRAVING

Secretary Mellon Has Informed President Coolidge That An Inquiry Had Proved the Charges Baseless—No Fraudulent Duplication or Over Issue of the Public Debt—Declares That the Charges Made by Charles B. Brewer Are Utterly False.

Washington, April 27. — Secretary Mellon advised President Coolidge today that the treasury had completed its inquiry into charges of irregularities in the bureau of engraving and had found them baseless.

The charges, made by Charles B. Brewer, department of justice attorney, and which were accompanied by wholesale dismissals in the bureau by President Harding, contained no element of fact, Mr. Mellon asserted. He informed the chief executive that he was enabled as a result of the investigation, ot confirm the integrity of the government's securities.

Contained in the report to the president, a document of magazine size, were specific replies to every assertion made by Brewer in his repeated assaults on the treasury and by these, Secretary Mellon said, the "utter falsity" to every charge was established. In addition, the treasury chief vigorously assailed Brewer personally, saying in concluding the report:

"His report indicates a conspicuous avoidance of fairness and the frequent adoption of artful and evasive methods. Where the facts are susceptible of distortion, Mr. Brewer resorts to distortion; where the omission of details will pervert a situation, Mr. Brewer resorts to omission where misstatement of the facts will strengthen a charge, Mr. Brewer resorts to misstatement; where irrevelance will tend to obscure the facts, Mr. Brewer resorts to irreveiance; and where neither distortion, omission misstatement nor irrelevance will serve his purpose, Mr. Brewer resorts to insinuation and innuendo.

"Before concluding, I am taking this opportunity to assure you that a most exhaustive investigation clearly establishes Mr. Brewer's charges to be absolutely without foundation. There has been no fraudulent duplication or over-issue of the public debt, but, on the other hand, by investigating the Brewer charges and establishing the utter falsity thereof, the treasury is enabled unreservedly to confirm the integrity both of the government's obligations and of those branches of the treasury service which have been engaged in the handling of public debt securities."

NATIONALCONFERENCE ON OUTDOOR RECREATION

Washington, April 27.—Invitations have been sent to more than one hundred organizations to send delegates to the national conference on outdoor recreation, called by President Coolidge to meet in Washington May 32-24, it was announced in a statement issued tonight by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, executive chairman of the conference.

"We are sure you are in full sympathy," the invitations read, "with the president's desire to secure complete consideration of the ways and means for prompting this very important aspect of our national life. It is our sincere belief that the forthcoming conference will prove an extremely valuable means of linking together the efforts of all of those concerned with outdoor recreation for the American public."

Aside from functioning as a clearing house for ideas, the letters said, the conference will formulate specific proposals looking to more effective national co-operation, and more rapid national progress in outdoor recreation." With this end in view, committees will be named to consider the following major subjects:

An educational prgoram for outdoor recreation.

Closer correlation of the agencies other than federal, and the correlation of their work with that of appropriate federal agencies.

The consummation of international agreements relating to recreation.

The promotion and co-ordination of wild life preservation.

The policies dealing with national parks, national forests and the public domain.

A survey and classification of recreation resources.

$12,000,000 MORTGAGE ON HEARST PUBLICATIONS

New York, April 27.—Following the recent consolidation of a number of William Randolph Hearst's newspaper and magazine enterprises, into The Hearst Publications, Inc., Wall street bankers, together with the Anglo-London-Paris company, will offer for public subscription on Tuesday $12,000,000 of the company's first mortgage and collateral trust 6 1-2 per cent. bonds. The securities, maturing over a twelve-year period, are priced at par.

Security for the issue is provided partly by capital stocks of companies publishing the San Francisco Examiner, San Francisco Call and Post, Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles Evening Herald, Oakland Post Enquirer, and the Good Housekeeping, Cosmopolitan, Harper's Bazar, Motor and Motor Boating Magazines. Net earnings of these properties last year totalled $6,474,133.

Proceeds from the sale of the bonds will be used for refunding purposes and for retirement of current liabilities and other corporate purposes.

TO CHANGE THE METHODS OF COTTON EXCHANGES

Washington, April 27.—Revision of trading practices on hte nation's cotton exchanges is recommended by the federal trade commission in a report on the cotton industry to be transmitted to the senate tomorrow.

The report made public tonight is a response to a resolution directing the commission to investigate alleged violations of the anti-trust laws by cotton exchanges and cotton dealers, and the effect of such alleged violations on spot cotton prices.

The commission recommended revision of grades of cotton deliverable on future contracts, changes in the system of making spot cotton quotations and differences, delivery on New York future contracts at southern ports, and publication of the total volume of future and open trades. No proof could be obtained, the commission reported, on charges that cotton merchants have pooled their interests to manipulate future prices, or of any attempt to restrict competition in the trade.

PORTUGUESE AVIATORS HAVE ARRIVED IN BAGDAD

Bagdad, Irak, April 27.—The Portuguese aviators Britol Paes and Sarmenta Beiros arrived here Saturday. The aviators, who left Portugal early in April, are on the way to Macao, the Portuguese treaty port in China on the Canton river.

Lieutenant Pelletier Doiss, the French airman, also reached here Saturday from Aleppo. He is on his way to Bushire, Persia; for which town he started this morning.

PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARIES IN BAY STATE TOMORROW

Boston, April 27.—Although both republican and democratic voters of Massachusetts at the polls on Tuesday will choose delegates and alternates to the two national party conventions this summer, it is mainly among democratic candidates that contests have developed. This fourth presidential primary to be held in the state apparently has not equalled in interest those of former years.

Within a few days, however, there has been a revival of activity among the democrats and they are now waging a campaign which, with the boom for an open declaration for Governor Smith, is expected to bring out a much larger vote than was first predicted.

The republicans, it is expected, will send a delegation of 39, seven delegates-at-large and two from each of the 16 districts almost solidly pledged to vote for the nomination of President Coolidge. The only candidate who has declared against the president's nomination is Dwight B. MacCormick of Westfield. Republicans have contests in only seven of the 16 districts.

On the other hand, the democrats, who are to pick 73 delegates, and the same number of alternates, have a fight on in every district but three. It is in the contest for delegates-at-large that the most interest is shown, for there it is a clean-cut test for Governor Smith's strength in this state.

Only one of the candidates selected by the democratic state committee has declared himself for Smith. General Charles H. Cole, who is heading the Smith campaign in this state, has attempted to align other candidates as pledged Smith voters against the committee selections, some of whom have stated that the delegations should be free to meet conditions found at the convention. Senator David I Walsh, who heads the committee slate, has been non-committal on his policy.

PLANNING A WELCOME FOR CARDINAL HAYES

New York, April 27.—New York Catholics have planned an enthusiastic welcome for Patrick Cardinal Hayes when he returns to America tomorrow on the Leviathan after receiving the highest honors of his church at Rome. A distinguished delegation of clergy and laymen on the steamship Machigonne will meet the Leviathan at Quarantine and the cardinal will board that vessel and land at the Battery. His progress up the harbor will be accompanied by salutes from passing and anchored craft.

An automobile procession will be formed at the battery with the cardinal the central figure. In the motor with him will be Bishop John J. Dunn and James Butler. Cardinal Hayes will not wear the formal red robes of his office but the black cassock and cape and the wide-brimmed hat used for street attire.

When the procession reaches St. Patrick's cathedral the cardinal will pass through a lane formed by 6,000 children of the New York parochial schools and at the cathedral Monsignor Michael J. Lavelle, pastor of St. Patrick's will deliver a message of greeting from the New York diocese.

Cardinal Hayes will officiate at his first public mass at the cathedral on April 29 when he will deliver a short address. Among those who will attend the mass will be Governor Smith and his staff, Mayor Hylan and numerous city officials, Senators Copeland, Walsh of Massachusetts, and Ransdell of Louisiana, beside representatives of various civic and fraternal organizations.

In the evening a dinner will be given in the cardinal's honor by the Catholic club at the Waldorf-Astoria.

CLERGYMAN'S TRIBUTE TO CHARLES F. MURPHY

New York, April 27.—Charles F. Murphy was hailed today as a symbolic of the "better day" in politics in a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Christian F Reisner, Methodist minister.

"Charles Murphy illustrates the better day we are enjoying," he said, "for Tammany was never as clean as now. And unless he had been a better man than his predecessors he could not have retained and increased his powers."

Dr. Reisner after paying tribute to the sincerity of the Tammany leader's charity and religious life, concluded:

"It is pathetically true that few high grade men are willing to pay the price, to stand the viewpoint of necessary to be political leaders. Most men would rather use their influence in corporation heads where commercial wards are collected and some power is respected."

WILLIMANTIC

Willimantic was without fire protection for several minutes shortly after noon Saturday when, it is alleged, a resident of Windham road took it upon himself to have his wife give orders that the entire fire department leave the city limits to fight a brush fire in the vicinity of the camp ground. A telephone call was received at the Bank street engine house that a bad fire was endangering property near the camp, but as it was out of the jurisdiction of the fire department, Chief James J. Tighe referred the call to Mayor Hormisdas Dion. Chief Tighe later received permission from the chief executive to respond with the light, Reo chemical wagon and this was done. A short while later, Assistant Chief Henry J. Kelley, who, with Hostman Edward J. Manemann had remained at the station house, received a message from Mrs. Hinckley of Windham road that Chief Tighe had given orders to take the ladder truck and the pumper to the fire. When the two other pieces of apparatus arrived it was found that the chief had given no such orders and as soon as possible the trucks were returned to the station house. In the meantime the city was left without fire protection. It was learnde later that Mrs. Hinckley had been informed by her husband that Chief Tighe had given the order for more assistance. Members of the engine company are indignant over the incident.

The blaze was on the property of Vincenzo Greodanus and spread to land of the Tryon agency, burning over four or five acres. Several houses at the camp ground were in danger, but were saved by the excellent fire fighting.

Business men, including manufacturers and merchants were made happy last week with the announcement that passenger train No. 112 would be restored on the schedule of the New Haven railroad. The train has carride No. 112 for over 30 years. Up to some four and one-half years ago it was made up in Hartford but in the fall of 1919 the train was made up in this city, proceeding to Boston as a "rattler." It was stated that it did not pay to run the rtain from Hartford to Willimantic.

The most important mail to local business men was carried on this train and was delivered by latter carriers in this city before 8 a. m. Since the train has been discontinued the delivery of mail has been greatly delayed and business men have complained. The delivery of mail in the rural towns between Willimantic and Putnam were also affected by the taking off of 112. When the train ran from Hartford, mail matter dropped off at North Windham, Hampton, Brooklyn and other towns reached the post offices in those places in time to be dispatched by rural carriers serving inland towns such as Chaplain, Ashford, Eastford and other places in that section. With the discontinuance of the train, mail laid over until the next day that might and should have been taken care of the same day it was received.

With the restoration of this train all New York and western mail will reach Willimantic at least four hours earlier than in the past. The earlier ... of the Central Vermont railroad train will also serve to advant...

Postmaster Walter R. King states ... the hour for closing the mail deliveries will be at 6 p. m. instead of ... p. m. during the period that trains are running on daylight saving time.

Several changes, for the most part part beneficial will affect Willimantic on the four divisions of the system having terminals in this city, through the adoption of hte daylight saving schedule of the New Haven railroad, which went into effect Sunday at 2 a. m. The time of the passenger trains arriving here will be advanced one hour. Radical changes have been made on the Air Line division, where only one train will go through to New Haven and hte two others leaving this city will go no further than Middletown. A delay of a few days will be made in the starting of the schdeule for the gasoline car on the Air Line which was to begin to operate Sunday.

Fathers attended church services with their sons Sunday, the opening of the activities of Boys' Week in this sermons in connection with the observance of Church day by the boys. The committee from the Rotary club which arranged for the observance of the day included, James P. Bath, chairman; Valentine L. Murphy, A. J. Martineau, William A. Dawson, Ellison S Smith, James P. Mustard and Frank H. Foss.

Further continuance was granted in the cases of liquor violators who were before the local police court Saturday morning, as the result of raids recently conducted in this city by county, federal and local police officers. Of the number raided, two of the defendants were found guilty the day after the raids and sentences were imposed. All the other cases were continued until last Saturday. It had been planned to try several of these c... on alleged actual sale, but as wi... were not present the cases were ... ver to Saturday, May 3.

T... ...endants thus affected are ... ...anga of 113 Jackson street ... Kosek of 15 Main street, Mrs. ... Chiusen of 44 Union street and ... Bouffard of 406 Valley street.

One case was heard, that of Daniel Wack, 51 Chapman street, charged with having in his possession liquor with intent to sell. Wack pleaded not guilty and with his counsel, Attorney Thatcher, put up a stiff fight for his defense. Two cases of homebrew, a gallon of mash taken from a forty-five gallon cask and a quantity of dry barley and a glass gallon container filled with barley, water and other ingredients were introduced as evidence against the accused. Prosecuting Attorney Harvey recommended a conviction. Deputy Judge Curtis Dean summed up the evidence against Wack and found him not guilty, ordering him discharged.

The continued case of Martin Shea, charged with non-support of his wife which has been on the local police court docket for the past two months, was nolled.

Antoni Allberto and Miss Foresta Caroti were united in marriage at eight o'clock Saturday morning, at St. Joseph's church, by the pastor, Rev. John R. Clark, who also celebrated the nuptial high mass. The best man was Libelle Caroti and Miss Rose Guarnazi, was maid of honor. A reception and breakfast was held at 20 Mansfield avenue. After a honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Alberto will reside at Ivinhill street.

Mrs. Marie Barre Provost, who died at St. Joseph's hospital Friday afternoon, was a well known resident, having made her home here for twenty years. She was a devout member of St. Mary's parish. She was the daughter of Joseph and Odia Charbonneau Barre, and was born in Marieville, Canada, June 20, 1864. Mrs. Provost leaves four children, Charles and Louis Provost of this city, Mrs. William F. Owens of this city, and Mrs. Joseph Mondor of Montreal, and eleven grandchildren.

Joseph Chiarzia of Quercus Avenue was taken into custody by the local police Friday charged with desertion from the United States army, dating from March 11. Chiarizia had been working in this section for the past few weeks. He spent the night at the police station and Saturday was taken to Fort Wright, Fishers Island, for Officer Arthur M. Hurley.

MAYOR HORMIDAS DION DIES SUDDENLY SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 27.—Stricken with an attack of acute indigestion about 6 o'clock Sunday morning at his home, 36 Ash street, Mayor Hormidas Dion, 69, died an hour later in the presence of his wife and three of his children. His death marked the first instance in the history of Willimantic that a chief executive died while in office. Mayor Dion, who was elected to the mayoralty, was Willimantic's seventh mayor.

Mr. Dion awakened about five o'clock and complained to Mrs. Dion of a choking feeling about the heart. A hot water preparation was secured but failed to give him any relief and his condition continued to grow worse. He expressed a feeling that the end was near and Dr. A. J. Girouard was notified but his efforts to save the life of the executive were fruitless. Members of the family were then called and Rev. H. C. Belec of St. Mary's church was summoned and he administered the last sacraments.

Although conscious to the end Mayor Dion could not talk. As a fitting close to the life which he had led he breathed his last without a sign of pain.

His death came as a shock as he had been apparently enjoying good health and was in good spirits Saturday evening before retiring. The announcement of his death made from the pulpit of the churches Sunday morning cast grief into hundreds of family circles, many of which regarded him as their benefactor or personal friend.

Flags on the schools and public buildings were flown at half mast on Sunday.

Mayor Dion is survived by his second wife, Adelaide G. Reade, four children by his first wife, Dora, wife of Joseph M. Berard, of this city; Carrie, wife of Dr. J. F. Rochambeaut, of Arctic, R. I.; Alma, wife of Alderman-at-Large George W. Hickey, and Roderick George Dion of this city. He also leaves three brothers, Antoine Dion of this city, Philias Dion of Tuftville and Simoen Dion of Waterloo, Canada. A sister, Mrs. J. B. LaFleur of St. Pie, Canada and two step-children, George M. Reade of Central Falls, R. I. college, and Bernard E. Reade of St. Joseph's school, Nashua, New Hampshire, and three granchildren, Roderick R. Berard, Evelyn Frances Hickey and Alma Marie Hickey all of this city. Burial is to be in Baltic.

Alert, enterprising and progressive, Mayor Dion had achieved success in business, social and political life.

He was born in St. Pie, Quebec, a son of Anthony and Louise Dudos Dion. Both his parents were representatives of old French families who had resided in Canada for many generations. His mother died in 1889 and in 1895.

The chief executive received his early education in the public schools of his native city, and later attended St. Cesaire college. He spent one and one-half years studying the English language and this proved beneficial to him when he moved to Connecticut, in 1872.

The family settled in Tuftville where Mr. Dion was employed in a general store owned by the company which was the predecessor of the present Fonemah Mills company.

His industrial ability became manifest even at this early stage and when he resigned, after a period of 14 years of service, he had risen from clerk to aduter of the store.

In 1886 he moved to Willimantic where he established a bakery business. He employed one man and utilized a horse and wagon in making his deliveries. The business developed and expanded and he entered the grocery field. At the time of his death he was at the head of a prosperous retail store which was enjoying a large trade. A few years ago the bakery business was taken over by his hon, Roderick O. Dion. The volume of the business which he was doing is indicated by the fact that fifteen employes, three trucks and five teams are engaged in carying on the enterprise.

As the years passed on, he made judicious investments in property and his estate comprised choice tracts of land and farm interests.

He married Delia Bourque at Baltic, July 12, 1875, and five children were born to them, four of whom survive, they having lost one child, Rosana. All the children received their education in Willimantic. Mrs. Dion died in this city, September 23, 1917, after 42 years of happy married life.

Mr. Dion was united in marriage with his second wife, Adelaide G. Reade, at New Haven, August 12, 1919.

The religious faith of the family is Roman Catholic and the members are communicants of St. Mary's church, in which Mr. Dion had been a trustee for nine years. He was a member of the society of St. Jean de Baptiste and was its honorary president. He was the first president of the Union, which includes societies in New England and some western states and he retained that honor for twelve years. Mr. Dion was a member of San Jose council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus and was one of its auditors. He was trustee of the Sacred Heart R. C. church, at Tuftville.

In 1920 he was a delegate to the national Canadian-American convention, but from its inception, covering a period of seven years, he has been president of the Federation of French Canadian societies.

His political allegiance was given to the democratic party. For ten years he served on the naturalization committee and was chairman of that body for three years. He filled the office of assessor of the town of Windham for nine years, was councilman-at-large for a two-year term and city assessor for fw eyears. In October next he would have complete dtwelve years as a member of the town school committee.

He achieved the pinnacle of political honors possible to be conferred by his city when he was elected mayor, December 18 last, by a decisive majority over his opponent, Dr. G. E. Wilcox. He met with but one disappointment in his political rise when he was defeated by three votes in a contest for the mayoralty with Charles A. Gates, during the city election two years ago.

In all these offices, social and political, he took an active and practical part and in all he did for his community he was actuated by a spirit of progress that brought substantial results as the years passed on.

He has largely furthered the public welfare in many ways and at the same time he carefully, systematically and successfully conducted his private business interests.

His good nature and kindness of heart was a tradition in family groups whi did their buying of him. It was often said that no one would starve in Willimantic as long as Mayor Dion lived and in his great heart the executive knew that he was looked upon as a benefactor and he gloried in the thought that he could serve others.

Mayor Dion's last public appearance was in an address of welcome marking the opening session Friday of the W. C. T. U. Jubilee at the Methodist church.

"Drive"

the new V-63

BECAUSE of its known leadership, the Cadillac has been purchased with greater confidence than almost any other automobile.

People have bought this car much as they would buy Government Bonds—with unquestioning trust in its value and dependability.

In many instances, they have even dispensed with demonstration rides, taking the position that the Cadillac has been demonstrated and that its very name denotes its quality.

Naturally, the New V-63 has been purchased in this same manner—with the same implicit confidence in Cadillac performance based on its reputation.

But almost immediately, the New V-63 owner discovers this striking truth—that fine and efficient as have been past Cadillac types, and enviable as has been their reputation, they nevertheless afforded him no adequate criterion of the quality of this new car.

The New V-63 simply cannot be compared with previous Cadillacs—splendid as was their performance—

And certainly not with any other automobile, either foreign or American.

The New V-63 is extraordinarily different—must be judged by new standards—higher than have ever before been associated with a motor car.

This difference is in vital phases of performance. It is due chiefly to Cadillac's new harmonized and balanced 90° V-Type eight cylinder engine, and can be realized only by riding in the car.

Consequently, even though you have taken for granted the surpassing quality of Cadillac performance—Drive the New V-63.

J. Frank Champlin returned to New York on Sunday after a week end visit in Westerly and Watch Hill.

George W. Weaver, new room clerk for the summer at the Ocean house, Watch Hill, was in Westerly Saturday.

Dorothy Anne Harding, the 2 months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harding of 338 East Forty-fifth street, New York, died on the New Haven express No. 108, due in Westerly at 12.15 Sunday noon as the south-bound Shore Line express was between Wood River Junction and Bradford. Soon after the train had left Kingston, Conductor Manwaring sought and found a doctor on the train for the infant, who had been seized with convulsions. When the Westerly station stop was made Medical Examiner Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called and on boarding the train found that the child had died. He directed the parents to a local undertaking establishment and then an effort was made to secure a death certificate that the parents might proceed to New York. Miss Ruth F. Wilcox, assistant at the town clerk's office, was located at Calvary Baptist church and the necessary papers were secured and the signature of Westerly Health Officer Dr. Samuel C. Webster was obtained.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding and family had been to Woonsocket where Mrs. Harding formerly resided on a visit and were informed that the infant, subject to convulsions, could be taken home safely.

Mr. Harding is in the employ of the American Railway Express company as a driver, and he was returning with his wife, daughter and the infant. Passengers on the train expressed sorrow for the bereaved family. Mr. and Mrs. Harding and family left with the body for New York on the 3.08 express.

Francis L. Gadbois, 113 Truman street, New London, operating the Studebaker coupe, 2093 Conn. of Anthony Melia, formerly proprietor of the New Park hotel, Westerly, ran off the road at Holman's corners, Potter Hill road, near the farm of Dr. William Thompson, Sunday afternoon at about 5 o'clock. As the curve was rounded the auto skidded and control was lost so that with scant inches to spare the automobile dashed off the road between a guard railing to a culvert on one side and a telephone pole on the other. A ditch at the side of the road was jumped, a stone wall crossed, the top stones being scattered aside and the front end of the machine buried itself in the swamp. Westerly Mr. Gadbois picked up Alfred Nelson and two other passengers who were seated in the machine and they were proceeding toward Potter Hill when the mishap occurred. Neither Mr. Gadbois or his companions received as much as a scratch and not a glass was broken in the automobile. Apparently little damage was done the automobile running gear, the machine remaining upright although several feet below the surface of the highway, and on the east side of the road. Numerous automobile accidents have happened at this point.

Title to the property, stock and business of the C. H. Gavitt Furniture Co., which has been in that family for nearly one hundred years, was transferred when John O. Mills of the Westerly Furniture company made the purchase late Friday night. One department of the business is retained by Mr. Gavitt. The business house is located in the large wooden frame building on West Broad street, Pawcatuck. At present Mr. Mills, who came to Westerly from New Britain, is the proprietor of the Westerly Furniture company. It is reported that Olcott G. Mills, son of John O. Mills, will be the manager of the West Broad street store.

Largely attended was the funeral Saturday afternoon of William Snyder, at his home, 13 Lincoln avenue, Pawcatuck. The service was conducted by Rev. Clayton A. Burdick, pastor of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church and were attended by the P. S. Barber Hose company in a body and representatives from Pawcatuck Fire Police, Rhode Island Ones and Veteran Firemen's association. There were beautiful floral pieces. Burial was in River Bend cemetery, the bearers being Elmer E. Babcock, Norman E. Lovett, Pawcatuck fire police; Moses Payne, Jr., William J. Brennan, R. I. Ones; William Minchen and Andrew Mennick, of the Westerly Veteran Fire Association. Relatives were in attendance from Norwich, New London and Elizabeth N. J.

Fire alarm box 75, corner of Dayton and Pierce streets, was sounded Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock for a brush fire more than half a mile from that point, when Polly Boyle, living out of the Westerly fire district sent a boy to pull in a fire box. All three of the pieces of department apparatus responded and visiting the place found the fire to be a brush one at a distant point. Proceeding in that direction, Engineer Passetti met Mrs. Boyle and a wordy battle followed in which it was pointed out that there should be some responsibility when the apparatus was sent for from outside the district. The apparatus returned to the department house on Union street soon afterwards.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt B. York, of Hinckley Hill, Stonington, celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at their Anguilla home on Sunday. Numerous relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. York were entertained, when they called to offer congratulations. Mrs. York was Miss Lena Potter and made her home in Avondale, previous to her marriage to Mr. York.

The nucleus of a club to be known as the Collectors Club, formed on Thursday night at the business place of George O. Murphey in Pawcatuck. Some weeks ago agitation was begun for the formation of a philatelic society and now the idea has broadened so that it is planned to include not only stamps but coins, et al. A temporary organization has been effected with George O. Murphey acting president and Earl E. Saunders acting secretary. A week from next Thursday it is hoped to perfect organization of all interested.

Sixty dollars worth of chemicals were required by the P. S. Barber Hose company to extinguish a stubborn chimney fire at 43 Garden street, Pawcatuck, at 10.40 Friday morning in response to a whistle alarm.

BACKUS HOSPITAL AUXILIARY TO HOLD PUBLIC MEETING

The William W. Backus hospital, through the generosity of two men, was built and endowed with no financial demands on the community at large. For a quarter of a century the hospital has been giving to Norwich and surrounding towns an excellent service at a minimum cost. In the early years the hospital was self supporting; with the advance in the cost of living it became impossible, even with state aid to remain so. Not until this year, however, was a direct appeal for financial aid made to the people. As was always been true in Norwich, the appeal was answered and the needed amount secured.

Two years ago, feeling the need for such an organization, the Women's Auxiliary of the W. W. Backus hospital was formed. Until this time small groups had given very efficient help in many ways to the hospital. The concerted effort of one large organization seemed to be the solution of the problem—"How can we give the best service to our hospital that it may continue its service to the community?" A hospital auxiliary is in no way peculiar to Norwich. In New London the auxiliary has been active for 13 years and has even valuable aid to their hospital.

On Tuesday, April 29th at 8 p. m. in the Community House, the first public meeting of the auxiliary will be held. This is the initial step in the drive for members for the auxiliary. It is hoped that this meeting will be attended by every one interested in Norwich and in the Backus hospital.

The following program has been prepared:

Music

Frederick W. Lester

Singing, America

Welcome, Mr. Henry A. Tirrell

Song

Mrs. Burgy

Reports from standing committees.

Women's Auxiliary of The Lawrence-Memorial Hospital

Mrs. Maurice E. Sherman.

BROADWAY THEATRE

When you intend to go to the theatre the first half of this week we earnestly advise you to visit the Broadway for another crackerjack bill is offered that without doubt will eclipse even last week's wonderful program.

The lineup of the acts is as follows:

Campbell & Father appear in Words and Music.

The Four Bellhops offer a sensational acrobatic novelty.

Casson Bros. & Marie Otter Lance in Graphonola.

The Pola Negri of "Passion" has returned.

In the Herbert Brenon Paramount production of "Shadows of Paris" which opened at the Broadway Theatre last night, the star once more comes into her own. She is quite her old self as Claire, leader of the Apache bands of the Parisian underworld. Then there is Charles de Roune as her Apache lover, who is called away to war and falsely reported killed; Huntly Gordon as Raoul whom Claire, posing as a Polish war widow marries; and Adolphe Menjou as Raoul's secretary and friend—all are featured and all give excellent accounts of themselves.

The story is one of the upper and lower world of Paris, the playground of the entire world. It is a colorful and appealing tale, an adaptation of the French play, "Mon Homme," by the author of "Kiki."

Gareth Hughes and Vera Reynolds head the strong support. Will be seen today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

THE COVERED WAGON

Since the days of Walthall, the "Little Colonel" of "The Birth of a Nation," and the lovely ideals embodied by the Misses Gish, Marsh and Cooper, the public have craved big historical drama with action as vital and characters as fascinating.

Unfortunately the movie directors have not turned their energies that way, but now, thanks to Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, one man received carte blanche and achieved for the story of the winning of the west the same or similar big epical effects that were achieved by Griffith in his Civil War story based on "The Clansman."

The name of the picture is "The Covered Wagon" and James Cruze's work will be shown at the Palace, Norwich, 4 days beginning Sunday evening, May 4, twice daily at 2.30, and 8.15.

Certainly the era of 1849-49 is just as picturesque, with its buckskin clad heroes, its poke-bonneted heroines and its dash for Pacific gold and wheatlands, as the times of reconstruction.

Fortunate indeed is J. Warren Kerrigan to make his comeback to the screen in a southern cavalier role in this "Covered Wagon" and fortunate for everybody was the choice of Lois Wilson to play opposite him in the role of the fair driver of the Wingate prairie schooner. The seat sale opens Thursday morning May 1st at box office.

AT THE STRAND

Y—ow-Gang! 'Member the old battle cry—"Powder River!" Let's Go! the whoop that put the fear into these Heinies when we were tpid to "Go get 'em." 'Member the creepy feeling that ran up and down your spine, when you were standing knee deep in slop, in those old front line trenches between 4 and 5 a. m., waiting for the word "Let's Go!" When one minute you were hot, and the next minute freezing, you went through your pockets to find a crummy piece of hardtack to chew, to keep your teeth from chattering; then your thought wandered back to those birds, behind the lines snoozing away and dreaming of home. Then your thought pictured the home folks, and you wondered whether or you would ever see them again—well anyway we're here to fight, and you swore inwardly to yourself that you would "get a dozen" before they downed you. 'Member wondering what time it was? and those minutes seem like hours, and hours, and how you were rearing to go "over" and show those Huns how to fight; then at last the whisper came along "Let's Go!" and Zowey! how we chased them.

You remember when it was all over you wondered how in the world you ever lived through it all, and carefully felt yourself over to make sure you were not wounded!

You bet you remember it all, and how when you came home, everyone invited you to pink tea parties, and wanted you to tell them how come! And you couldn't begin to tell the story.

Well, fellows, the American Legion is bringing "Powder River" to the Strand Theatre on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, especially so that you can recall those old days in France, and bring your mother, brother, sister, sweetheart, father, or wife, and show them just what you wanted to tell them—but couldn't. Every Division that saw real service in France is shown in actual action against the Germans. Our four biggest battles—Cantigny, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel Salient, and the Argonne, are complete in every detail, from the time the first shell was fired, to the capturing of the objective.

TODAY'S EVENTS

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PALACE THEATRE

Starting today and all week you are going to see another big Musical show combined with our regular picture program and at prices that can't be beat for such a program. Seats are not reserved this week so come early and get the best.

Patrons of the Palace theatre are in for a real treat beginning today when the Meanest man in the World will be the banner attraction. This is a film adaption from the famous stage play of George M. Cohan and in which Mr. Cohan personally appeared for over a year in New York City. It is a First National picture.

Bert Lytell enacts the title role and this popular player is surrounded with a cast that is truly all-star in every essence of the word. Blanche Sweet appears opposite Lytell, and others of importance include Bryant Washburn, Maryon Aye, Helen Lynch, Victor Potel, Warde Crane, William Conklin, Frances Raymond and Forrest Robinson.

The story of "the meanest man" deals with the struggles of a young lawyer who is so soft-hearted he finds himself a failure because he cannot say no to anybody.

Hiram Leeds, the local banker, seems quite interested in buying Jane's land and becomes so insistent that the attorney decides to ascertain his real motive. He finally succeeds and brings the news to Jane that she has oil land and not farm land. By soliciting through the town, the attorney gathers sufficient money together to erect a derrick and drilling is started. Leeds has a mortgage on the property, however, and sends word to Jane he is going to foreclose at noon of the day it is due. Then the dramatic moments of the picture begin with the drillers striving to bring in the well in time. At five minutes to twelve the well gushes and Jane becomes rich. Incidentally, the attorney finds he has lost his heart for Jane Hudson and Jane finds she, too, has fallen in love.

And latest Pathe News and Two reel comedy. All calculated to make the finest entertainment in the city.

Coming Thursday, Friday and Saturday, melodramatic comedy hit, The Bad Man with an all start cast including Holbrook Blinn, Enid Bennett, Harry Meyers and Jack Mulhall.

BREED THEATRE

A new William Fox special, The Net, directed by J. Gordon Edwards, characterised as a 1923 drama of mystery, opened yesterday at the Breed theatre for a three day run.

It is just that—a drama of mystery and thrills. The story commences with the marriage of a young couple temperamentally incompatible. The husband lives his wayward life on his wife's money until finally she can tolerate the farce of her marriage no longer. She leaves him, but, he needing money, follows posthaste and a violent scene takes place in the studio of her cousin, an artist, with whom she has taken refuge. At the highest pitch of physical violence, the Man enters, his mind a blank, clothes shabby.

At this stage of its development, the story takes a sudden turn and the suspense increases twofold as romance makes its bid for the spotlight closely pressed by adventure. The ending is splendid, and it will be a total surprise to you. Inasmuch as the picture is a mystery, we play fair with Mr. Fox and withhold the solution.

Director Edwards, who will be remembered for his previous Fox specials, Queen of Sheba, and Nero, has molded the wealth of material in this story into a production of rare dramatic value and throughout a charming love story is worked out to a pleasant closeup.

The cast is excellent, especially the three leads, Barbara Castleton, as the unhappy wife; Raymond Bloomer the reckless husband; and Albert Roscoe, the Man. Others include Peggy Davis, Arthur Gordon, Cornelius K. Keefe, Helen Tracy, Elliah Nadel, Alexander Gaden, Guy Combe, Byron Douglass, Claire Delorez, and Eileen Grout.

Jack Luby will be heard in illustrated songs and the Pathe news and an Educational comedy will complete the bill.

STRAND THEATRE

"The Barefoot Boy," a picturization of John Greenleaf Whittier's poem, which opens today at the Strand Theatre for a run of three days, boasts the finest all-star cast of any picture produced this year.

Producer David Kirkland has assembled the Blue Book of Film Fame for this exquisitely tender love story of twenty years ago and today. Frankie Lee, who is fast winning a enviable place for himself on the screen, portrays the role of "The Barefoot Boy" with unusual intelligence and charm; John Bowers and Marguerite Daw make an ideal pair of lovers for the later sequence, while Sylvia Breamer, Tully Marshall, Otis Harlan, Raymond Hatton, Virginia Boardman and George Periolat complete this assemblage of film celebrities.

"The Barefoot Boy" is an exquisitely tender love story based on the life of a splendid young country boy who is ambitious for a career in the city. He comes to the city, unhappy and friendless and through sheer grit and spunk and determination, soon wins an enviable place for himself in the high places of the city. His struggles, his temptations, and his final victory make one of the most thrilling stories ever screened.

John Greenleaf Whittier would be a very proud man, were he alive today, to see what Producer David Kirkland has done with the famous poet's little gem, written over fifty years ago.

Other subjects include a comedy and news weekly.

WILLIMANTIC

Willimantic was without fire protection for several minutes shortly after noon Saturday when, it is alleged, a resident of Windham road took it upon himself to have his wife give orders that the entire fire department leave the city limits to fight a brush fire in the vicinity of the camp ground. A telephone call was received at the Bank street engine house that a bad fire was endangering property near the camp, but as it was out of the jurisdiction of the fire department, Chief James J. Tighe referred the call to Mayor Hormidas Dion. Chief Tighe later received permission from the chief executive to respond with the light Reo chemical wagon and this was done. A short while later, Assistant Chief Henry J. Kelley, who, with Hoseman Edward J. Mansmann had remained at the station house, received a message from Mrs. Hinckley of Windham road that Chief Tighe had given orders to take the ladder truck and the pumper to the fire. When the two other pieces of apparatus arrived it was found that the chief had given no such orders and as soon as possible the trucks were returned to the station house. In the meantime the city was left without fire protection. It was learned later that Mrs. Hinckley had been informed by her husband that Chief Tighe had given the order for more assistance. Members of the engine company are indignant over the incident.

The blaze was on the property of Vincenzo Grodanue and spread to land of the Tryon agency, burning over four or five acres. Several houses at the camp ground were in danger, but were saved by the excellent fire fighting.

Business men, including manufacturers and merchants were made happy last week with the announcement that passenger train No. 112 would be restored on the schedule of the New Haven railroad. The train has carride No. 112 for over 30 years. Up to some four and one-half years ago it was made up in Hartford but in the fall of 1919 the train was made up in this city, proceeding to Boston as a "rattler." It was stated that it did not pay to run the train from Hartford to Willimantic.

The most important mail to local business men was carried on this train and was delivered by letter carriers in this city before 8 a. m. Since the train has been discontinued the delivery of mail has been greatly delayed and business men have complained. The delivery of mail in the rural towns between Willimantic and Putnam were also affected by the taking off of 112. When the train ran from Hartford, mail matter dropped off at North Windham, Hampton, Pomfret and other towns reached the post offices in those places in time to be dispatched by rural carriers serving inland towns such as Chaplain, Ashford, Eastford and other places in that section. With the discontinuance of the train, mail laid over until the next day that might and should have been taken care of the same day it was received.

With the restoration of this train all New York and western mail will reach Willimantic at least four hours earlier than in the past. The earlier mail of the Central Vermont railway train will also serve to advantage.

Postmaster Walker R. King states that the hour for closing the mail deliveries will be at 6 p. m. instead of 5 p. m. during the period that trains are running on daylight saving time.

Several changes, for the most part beneficial will affect Willimantic on the four divisions of the system having terminals in this city, through the adoption of the daylight saving schedule of the New Haven railroad, which went into effect Sunday at 2 a. m. The time of the passenger trains arriving here will be advanced one hour. Radical changes have been made on the Air Line division, where only one train will go through to New Haven and his two others leaving this city will go no further than Middletown. A delay of a few days will be made in the starting of the schedule for the gasoline car on the Air Line which was to begin to operate Sunday.

Fathers attended church services with their sons Sunday, the opening of the activities of Boys' Week in the sermons in connection with the observance. Clergymen had prepared their services of Church day by the boys. The committee from the Rotary club which arranged for the observance of the day included, James P. Bath, chairman; Valentine L. Murphy, A. J. Martineau, William A. Dawson, Ellison S Smith, James P. Mustard and Frank H. Foss.

Further continuance was granted in the cases of liquor violators who were before the local police court Saturday morning, as the result of raids recently conducted in this city by county, federal and local police officers. Of the number raided, two of the defendants were found guilty the day after the raids and sentences were imposed. All the other cases were continued until last Saturday. It had been planned to try several of these cases on alleged actual sale, but as witnesses were not present the cases were continued over to Saturday, May 3.

The defendants thus affected are Frank Kosek of 18 Main street, Mrs. Anna Chasson of 44 Union street and Amur Bouffard of 406 Valley street. One case was heard, that of Daniel Wack, 51 Chapman street, charged with having in his possession liquor with intent to sell. Wack pleaded not guilty and with his counsel, Attorney Faucher, put up a stiff fight for his defense. Two cases of homebrew, a gallon of mash taken from a forty-five gallon oak and a quantity of dry barley and a glass gallon container filled with barly, water and other ingredients were introduced as evidence against the accused. Prosecuting Attorney Harvey recommended a conviction. Deputy Judge Curtis Dean summed up the evidence against Wack and found him not guilty, ordering him discharged.

The continued case of Martin Shea, charged with non-support of his wife which has been on the local police court docket for the past two months, was nolled.

Antoni Aliberte and Miss. Foresta Carroll were united in marriage at eight o'clock Saturday morning, at St. Joseph's church, by the pastor, Rev. John E. Clark, who also celebrated the nuptial high mass. The best man was Ribelle Carotti and Miss Rose Guarneri, was maid of honor. A reception and breakfast was held at 20 Mansfield avenue. After a honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Alberto will reside at Twinhill street.

Mrs. Marie Barre Provost, who died at St. Joseph's hospital Friday afternoon, was a well known resident, having made her home here for twenty years. She was a devout member of St. Mary's parish. She was the daughter of Joseph and Odia Charbonneau Barre, and was born in Marleville, Canada, June 28, 1864. Mrs. Provost leaves four children, Charles and Louis Provost of this city, Mrs. William F. Owens of this city, and Mrs. Joseph Mondor of Montreal, and eleven grandchildren.

Joseph Chiarzia of Quercus Avenue was taken into custody by the local police Friday charged with desertion from the United States army, dating from March 11. Chiarizia had been working in this section for the past few weeks. He spent the night at the police station and Saturday was taken to Fort Wright, Fishers Island, by Officer Arthur M. Hurley.

MAYOR HORMIDAS DION DIES SUDDENLY SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 27.—Stricken with an attack of acute indigestion about 5 o'clock Sunday morning at his home, 36 Ash street, Mayor Hormidas Dion, 59, died an hour later in the presence of his wife and three of his children. His death marked the first instance in the history of Willimantic that a chief executive died while in office. Mayor Dion, who was elected to the mayoralty, was Willimantic's seventh mayor.

Mr. Dion awakened about five o'clock and complained to Mrs. Dion of a choking feeling about the heart. A hot water preparation was secured but failed to give him any relief and his condition continued to grow worse. He expressed a feeling that the end was near and Dr. A. J. Girouard was notified but his efforts to save the life of the executive were fruitless. Members of the family were then called and Rev. H. C. Belec of St. Mary's church was summoned and he administered the last sacraments.

Although conscious to the end Mayor Dion could not talk. As a fitting close to the life which he had led he breathed his last without a sign of pain.

His death came as a shock as he had been apparently enjoying good health and was in good spirits Saturday evening before retiring. The announcement of his death made from the pulpit of the churches Sunday morning cast grief into hundreds of family circles, many of which regarded him as their benefactor or personal friend.

Flags of the schools and public buildings were flown at half mast on Sunday.

Mayor Dion is survived by his second wife, Adelaide G. Reade, four children by his first wife, Dora, wife of Joseph M. Berard, of this city; Carrie, wife of Dr. J. F. Rochambeaut, of Arctic, R. I.; Alma, wife of Alderman-at-Large George W. Hickey, and Roderick George Dion of this city. He also leaves three brothers, Antoine Dion of this city, Philias Dion of Taftville and Simeon Dion of Waterloo, Canada. A sister, Mrs. J. B. LeFleur of St. Pie, Canada and two step-children, George M. Reade of Central Falls, R. I. college, and Bernard E. Reade of St. Joseph's school, Nashua, New Hampshire, and three granchildren, Roderick R. Berard, Evelyn Frances Hickey and Alma Marie Hickey, all of this city. Burial is to be in Baltic.

Alert, enterprising and progressive, Mayor Dion had achieved success in business, social and political life.

He was born in St. Pie, Quebec, a son of Anthony and Louise Dudos Dion. Both his parents were representatives of old French families who had resided in Canada for many generations. His mother died in 1889 and in 1895.

The chief executive received his early education in the public schools of his native city, and later attended St. Cesaire college. He spent one and one-half years studying the English language and this proved beneficial to him when he moved to Connecticut, in 1872.

The family settled in Taftville where Mr. Dion was employed in a general store owned by the company which was the predecessor of the present Fonemah Mills company.

His industrial ability became manifest even at this early stage and when he resigned, after a period of 14 years of service, he had risen from clerk to adutor of the store.

In 1886 he moved to Willimantic where he established a bakery business. He employed one man and utilized a horse and wagon in making his deliveries. The business developed and expanded and he entered the grocery field. At the time of his death he was at the head of a prosperous retail store which was enjoying a large trade. A few years ago the bakery business was taken over by his son, Roderick G. Dion. The volume of the business which he was doing is indicated by the fact that fifteen employes, three trucks and five teams are engaged in carrying on the enterprise.

As the years passed on, he made judicious investments in property and his estate comprised choice tracts of land and farm interests.

He married Delia Bourque at Baltic, July 12, 1875, and five children were born to them, four of whom survive, they having lost one child, Rosanna. All the children received their education in Willimantic. Mrs. Dion died in this city, September 23, 1917, after 42 years of happy married life.

Mr. Dion was united in marriage with his second wife, Adelaide G. Reade, at New Haven, August 12, 1920.

The religious faith of the family is Roman Catholic and the members are communicants of St. Mary's church, in which Mr. Dion had been a trustee for nine years. He was a member of the society of St. Jean de Baptiste and was its honorary president. He was the first president of the Union, which includes societies in New England and some western states and h retained that honor for twelve years. Mr. Dion was a member of San Jose council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus and was one of its auditors. He was trustee of the Sacred Heart R. C. church, at Taftville.

In 1880 he was a delegate to the national Canadian-American convention, but from its inception, covering a period of seven years, he has been president of the Federation of French Canadian societies.

His political allegiance was given to the democratic party. For ten years he served on the naturalization committee and was chairman of that body for three years. He filled the office of assessor of the town of Windham for nine years, was councilman-at-large for a two-year term and city assessor for two years. In October next he would have complete dtwelve years as a member of the town school committee.

He achieved the pinnacle of political honors possible to be conferred by his city when he was elected mayor, December 16 last, by a decisive majority over his opponent, Dr. G. E. Wilcox. He met with but one disappointment in his political rise when he was defeated by three votes in a contest for the mayoralty with Charles A. Gates, during the city election two years ago.

In all these offices, social and political, he took an active and practical part and in all he did for his community he was actuated by a spirit of progress that brought substantial results as the years passed on.

He has largely furthered the public welfare in many ways and at the same time he carefully, systematically and successfully conducted his private business interests.

His good nature and kindness of heart was a tradition in family groups when did their buying of him. It was often said that no one would starve in Willimantic as long as Mayor Dion lived and in his great heart the executive knew that he was looked upon as a benefactor and he gloried in the thought that he could serve others.

Mayor Dion's last public appearance was in an address of welcome marking the opening session Friday of the W. C. T. U. Jubilee at the Methodist church.

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, rosy skin, bright eyes, an active, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes are sold annually at 15c and 30c.

"Drive" the new V-63

BECAUSE of its known leadership, the Cadillac has been purchased with greater confidence than almost any other automobile.

People have bought this car much as they would buy Government Bonds—with unquestioning trust in its value and dependability.

In many instances, they have even dispensed with demonstration rides, taking the position that the Cadillac has been demonstrated and that its very name denotes its quality.

Naturally, the New V-63 has been purchased in this same manner—with the same implicit confidence in Cadillac performance based on its reputation.

But almost immediately, the New V-63 owner discovers this striking truth—that fine and efficient as have been past Cadillac types, and enviable as has been their reputation, they nevertheless afforded him no adequate criterion of the quality of this new car.

The New V-63 simply cannot be compared with previous Cadillacs—splendid as was their performance—

And certainly not with any other automobile, either foreign or American.

The New V-63 is extraordinarily different—must be judged by new standards—higher than have ever before been associated with a motor car.

This difference is in vital phases of performance. It is due chiefly to Cadillac's new harmonized and balanced 90° V-Type eight cylinder engine, and can be realized only by riding in the car.

Consequently, even though you have taken for granted the surpassing quality of Cadillac performance—Drive the New V-63.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Everson arrived in Westerly Saturday by automobile, having made the return trip from Florida, where they passed the winter.

J. Frank Champlin returned to New York on Sunday after a week end visit in Westerly and Watch Hill.

George W. Weaver, new room clerk for the summer at the Ocean house, Watch Hill, was in Westerly Saturday.

Dorothy Anna Harding, the 2 months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harding of 338 East Forty-fifth street, New York, died on the New Haven express No. 108, due in Westerly at 12:15 Sunday noon as the south-bound Shore Line express was between Wood River Junction and Bradford. Soon after the train had left Kingston, Conductor Manwaring sought and found a doctor on the train for the infant, who had been seized with convulsions. When the Westerly station stop was made Medical Examiner Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called and on boarding the train found that the child had died. He directed the parents to a local undertaking establishment and then an effort was made to secure a death certificate that the parents might proceed to New York. Miss Ruth F. Wilcox, assistant at the town clerk's office, was located at Calvary Baptist church and the necessary papers were secured and the signature of Westerly Health Officer Dr. Samuel C. Webster was obtained.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding and family had been to Woonsocket where Mrs. Harding formerly resided on a visit and were informed that the infant, subject to convulsions, could be taken home safely.

Mr. Harding is in the employ of the American Railway Express company as a driver, and he was returning with his wife, daughter and the infant. Passengers on the train expressed sorrow for the bereaved family. Mr. and Mrs. Harding and family left with the body for New York on the 3.08 express.

Francis L. Gadbois, 118 Truman street, New London, operating the Studebaker coupe, 2092 Conn. of Anthony Mella, formerly proprietor of the New Park hotel, Westerly, ran off the road at Holman's corners, Potter Hill road, near the farm of Dr. William Thompson, Sunday afternoon at about 5 o'clock. As the curve was rounded the auto skidded and control was lost so that with scant inches to spare the automobile dashed off the road between a guard railing to a culvert on one side and a telephone pole on the other. A ditch at the side of the road was jumped, a stone wall crossed, the top stones being scattered aside and the front end of the machine buried itself in the swamp. In Westerly Mr. Gadbois picked Alfred Nelson and two other passengers who were seated in the machine and they were proceeding toward Potter Hill when the mishap occurred. Neither Mr. Gadbois or his companions received as much as a scratch and not a glass was broken in the automobile. Apparently little damage was done to the automobile running gears, the machine remaining upright although several feet below the surface of the highway, and on the east side of the road. Numerous automobile accidents have happened at this point.

Title to the property, stock and business of the C. H. Gavitt Furniture Co., which has been in that family for nearly one hundred years, was transferred when John O. Mills of the Westerly Furniture company made the purchase late Friday night. One department of the business is retained by Mr. Gavitt. The business house is located in the large wooden frame building on West Broad street, Pawcatuck. At present Mr. Mills, who came to Westerly from New Britain, is the proprietor of the Westerly Furniture company. It is reported that Olcott G. Mills, son of John O. Mills, will be the manager of the West Broad street store.

Largely attended was the funeral Saturday afternoon of William Snyder, at his home, 18 Lincoln avenue, Pawcatuck. The service was conducted by Rev. Clayton A. Burdick, pastor of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church and were attended by the P. S. Barber Hose company in a body and representatives from Pawcatuck Fire Police, Rhode Island Ones and Veteran Firemen's association. There were beautiful floral pieces. Burial was in River Bend cemetery, the bearers being Elmer E. Babcock, Norman E. Lovett, Pawcatuck fire police; Moses Payne, Jr., William J. Brennan, R. I. Ones; William Minchen and Andrew Mennick, of the Westerly Veteran Fire Association. Relatives were in attendance from Norwich, New London and Elizabeth N. J.

Fire alarm box 75, corner of Dayton and Pierce streets, was sounded Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock for a brush fire more than half a mile from that point, when Polly Boyle, living out of the Westerly fire district sent a boy to pull in a fire box. All three of the pieces of department apparatus responded and visiting the place found the fire to be a brush one at a distant point. Proceeding in that direction, Engineer Passetti met Mrs. Boyle and a wordy battle followed in which it was pointed out that there should be some responsibility when the apparatus was sent for from outside the district. The apparatus returned to the department house on Union street soon afterwards.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt B. York, of Hinckley Hill, Stonington, celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at their Anguilla home on Sunday. Numerous relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. York were entertained, when they called to offer congratulations. Mrs. York was Miss Lena Potter and made her home in Avondale, previous to her marriage to Mr. York.

The nucleus of a club to be known as the Collectors Club, formed on Thursday night at the business place of George O. Murphey in Pawcatuck. Some weeks ago agitation was begun for the formation of a philatelic society and now the idea has broadened so that it is planned to include not only stamps but coins, et al. A temporary organization has been effected with George O. Murphey acting president and Earl E. Saunders acting secretary. A week from next Thursday it is hoped to perfect organization of all interested.

Sixty dollars worth of chemicals were required by the P. S. Barber Hose company to extinguish a stubborn chimney fire at 43 Garden street, Pawcatuck, at 10.40 Friday morning in response to a whistle alarm.

BACKUS HOSPITAL AUXILIARY TO HOLD PUBLIC MEETING

The William W. Backus hospital, through the generosity of two men, was built and endowed with no financial demands on the community at large. For a quarter of a century the hospital has been giving to Norwich and surrounding towns an excellent service at a minimum cost. In the early years the hospital was self supporting; with the advance in the cost of living it became impossible, even with state aid to remain so. Not until this year, however, was a direct appeal for financial aid made to the [illegible]. As has always been true in Norwich, the appeal was answered and the needed amount secured.

Two years ago, feeling the need for such an organization, the Women's Auxiliary of the W. W. Backus hospital was formed. Until this time small groups had given very efficient help in many ways to the hospital.

The concerted effort of one large organization seemed to be the solution of the problem—"How can we give the best service to our hospital that it may continue its service to the community?" A hospital auxiliary is in no way peculiar to Norwich. In New London the auxiliary has been active for 12 years and has been valuable aid to their hospital.

On Tuesday, April 29th at 3 p. m. in the Community House, the first public meeting of the auxiliary will be held. This is the initial step in the drive for members for the auxiliary. It is hoped that this meeting will be attended by every one interested in Norwich and in the Backus hospital.

The following program has been prepared:

Music

BROADWAY THEATRE

When you intend to go to the theatre the first half of this week we earnestly advise you to visit the Broadway for another crackerjack bill is offered that without doubt will eclipse even last week's wonderful program.

The lineup of the acts is as follows:

Campbell & Esther appear in Words and Music.

The Four Bellhops offer a sensational acrobatic novelty.

Casson Bros. & Marie, fitter Lance a la Graphonola.

The Pola Negri of "Passion" has returned.

In the Herbert Brenon Paramount production of "Shadows of Paris" which opened at the Broadway Theatre last night, the star once more comes into her own. She is quite her old self as Claire, leader of the Apache bands of the Parisian underworld. Then there is Charles de Roune as her Apache lover, who is called away to war and falsely reported killed; Huntly Gordon as Raoul whom Claire, posing as a Polish war widow marries; and Adolphe Menjou as Raoul's secretary and friend—all are featured and all give excellent accounts of themselves.

The story is one of the upper and lower world of Paris, the playground of the entire world. It is a colorful and appealing tale, an adaptation of the French play, "Mon Homme," by the author of "Kiki."

Gareth Hughes and Vera Reynolds head the strong support. Will be seen today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

THE COVERED WAGON

Since the days of Waithall, the "Little Colonel" of "The Birth of a Nation," and the lovely lassies embodied by the Misses Gish, Marsh and Cooper, the public have craved big historical drama with action as vital and characters as fascinating.

Unfortunately the movie directors have not turned their energies that way, but now, thanks to Famous Player-Lasky Corporation, one man received carte blanche and achieved for the story of the winning of the west the same or similar big epical effects that were achieved by Griffith in his Civil War story based on "The Clansman."

The name of the picture is "The Covered Wagon" and James Cruze's work will be shown at the Palace, Norwich, 4 days beginning Sunday evening, May 4, twice daily at 2.30 and 8.15.

Certainly the era of 1848-49 is just as picturesque, with its buckskin clad heroes, its poke-bonnetted heroines and its dash for Pacific gold and wheatlands, as the times of reconstruction.

Fortunate indeed is J. Warren Kerrigan to make his comeback to the screen in a southern cavalier role in this "Covered Wagon" and fortunate for everybody was the choice of Lois Wilson to play opposite him in the role of the fair driver of the Wingate prairie schooner. The seat sale opens Thursday morning May 1st at box office.

AT THE STRAND

Y—ow-Gang! 'Member the old battle cry—"Powder River!" Let's Go! the whoop that put the fear into those Heinies when we were told to "Go get 'em." 'Member the creepy feeling that ran up and down your spine, when you were standing knee deep in slop, in those old front line trenches between 4 and 6 a. m., waiting for the word "Let's Go!" When one minute you were hot, and the next minute freezing, you went through your pockets to find a crummy piece of hardtack to chew, to keep your teeth from chattering; then your thought wandered back to those birds, behind the lines snoozing away and dreaming of home. Then your thought pictured the home folks, and you wondered whether or you would ever see them again—well anyway we're here to fight, and you swore inwardly to yourself that you would "get a dozen" before they downed you. 'Member wondering what time it was? and those minutes seem like hours, and hours, and how you were rearing to go "over" and show those Huns how to fight; then at last the whisper came along "Let's Go!" and Zowee! how we chased them.

You remember when it was all over you wondered how in the world you ever lived through it all, and carefully felt yourself over to make sure you were not wounded!

You bet you remember it all, and how when you came home, everyone invited you to pink tea parties, and wanted you to tell them how come! And you couldn't begin to tell the story.

Well, fellows, the American Legion is bringing "Powder River" to the Strand Theatre on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, especially so that you can recall those old days in France, and bring your mother, brother, sister, sweetheart, father, or wife, and show them just what you wanted to tell them—but couldn't. Every Division that saw real service in France is shown in actual action against the Germans. Our four biggest battles—Cantigny, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel Salient, and the Argonne, are complete in every detail, from the time the first shell was fired, to the capturing of the objective.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PALACE THEATRE

Starting today and all week you are going to see another big Musical show combined with our regular picture program and at prices that can't be beat for such a program. Seats are not reserved this week so come early and get the best.

Patrons of the Palace theatre are in for a real treat beginning today when the Meanest man in the World, will be the banner attraction. This is a film adaption from the famous stage play of George M. Cohan and in which Mr. Cohan personally appeared for over a year in New York City. It is a First National picture.

Bert Lytell enacts the title role and this popular player is surrounded with a cast that is truly all-star in every essence of the word. Blanche Sweet appears opposite Lytell, and others of importance include Bryant Washburn, Maryon Aye, Helen Lynch, Victor Potel, Warde Crane, William Conklin, Frances Raymond and Forrest Robinson.

The story of "the meanest man" deals with the struggles of a young lawyer who is so soft-hearted he finds himself a failure because he cannot say no to anybody.

Hiram Leeds, the local banker, seems quite interested in buying Jane's land and becomes so insistent that the attorney decides to ascertain his real motive. He finally succeeds and brings the news to Jane that she has oil land and not farm land. By soliciting through the town, the attorney gathers sufficient money together to erect a derrick and drilling is started. Leeds has a mortgage on the property, however, and sends word to Jane he is going to foreclose at noon of the day it is due. Then the dramatic moments of the picture begin with the drillers striving to bring in the well in time. At five minutes to twelve the well gushes and Jane becomes rich. Incidentally, the attorney finds he has lost his heart for Jane Hudson and Jane finds she, too, has fallen in love.

And latest Pathe News and Two real comedy. All calculated to make the finest entertainment in the city.

Coming Thursday, Friday and Saturday, melodramatic comedy hit, The Bad Man with an all star cast including Holbrook Blinn, Enid Bennett, Harry Meyers and Jack Mulhall.

BREED THEATRE

A new William Fox special, The Net, directed by J. Gordon Edwards, characterized as a 1923 drama of mystery, opened yesterday at the Breed theatre for a three day run.

It is just that—a drama of mystery and thrills. The story commences with the marriage of a young couple temperamentally incompatible. The husband lives his wayward life on his wife's money until finally she can tolerate the farce of her marriage no longer. She leaves him, but he needing money, follows posthaste and a violent scene takes place in the studio of her cousin, an artist, with whom she has taken refuge. At the highest pitch of physical violence, the Man enters, his mind a blank, clothes shabby.

At this stage of its development, the story takes a sudden turn and the suspense increases twofold as romance makes its bid for the spotlight, closely pressed by adventure. The ending is splendid, and it will be a total surprise to you. Inasmuch as the picture is a mystery, we play fair with Mr. Fox and withhold the solution.

Director Edwards, who will be remembered for his previous Fox specials, Queen of Sheba, and Nero, has molded the wealth of material in this story into a production of rare dramatic value and throughout a charming love story is worked out to a pleasant closeup.

The cast is excellent, especially the three leads, Barbara Castleton, as the unhappy wife; Raymond Bloomer the reckless husband; and Albert Roscoe, the Man. Others include Peggy Davis, Arthur Gardosa, Cornelius V. Keefe, Helen Tracy, Elish Nadel, Alexander Gaden, Guy Combs, Byron Douglass, Claire Delores, and Eileen Grout.

Jack Luby will be heard in illustrated songs and the Pathe news and an Educational comedy will complete the bill.

STRAND THEATRE

"The Barefoot Boy," a picturization of John Greenleaf Whittier's [illegible] which opens today at the Strand Theatre for a run of three days, boasts the finest all-star cast of any picture produced this year.

Producer David Kirkland has assembled the Blue Book of Film fame for this exquisitely tender love story of twenty years ago and today. Beatrice Lee, who is fast winning an enviable place for himself on the screen portrays the role of "The Barefoot Boy" with unusual intelligence and charm; John Bowers and Marjorie Daw make an ideal pair of lovers for the later sequence, while Myrtle Stedman, Tully Marshall, Otis Harlan, Raymond Hatton, Virginia Foltz, Lee Boardman and George Fawcett complete this assemblage of film celebrities.

"The Barefoot Boy" is an unusually tender love story based on the life of a splendid young country boy who is ambitious for a career in the city. He comes to the city, unknown and friendless and through sheer grit and spunk and determination, soon wins an enviable place for himself in the high places of the city. His struggles, his temptations, and his final victory make one of the most thrilling stories ever screened.

John Greenleaf Whittier would be a very proud man, were he alive today, to see what Producer David Kirkland has done with the Quaker poet's little gem, written over fifty years ago.

Oliver subjects include a comedy and news weekly.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

CASABIANCA

The boy stood on the burning deck,
Whence all but he had fled;
The flame that lit the battle's wreck
Shone round him o'er the dead.

Yet beautiful and bright he stood,
As born to rule the storm—
A creature of heroic blood,
A proud, though childlike form.

The flames rolled on—he would not go
Without his father's word;
That father faint in death below,
His voice no longer heard.

He called aloud: "Say, father say,
If yet my task is done!"
He knew not that the chieftain lay
Unconscious of his son.

"Speak, father!" once again he cried,
"If I may yet be gone!"
And but the booming shots replied,
And fast the flames rolled on.

Upon his brow he felt their breath,
And in his waving hair,
And looked from that lone post of death
In still, yet brave despair.

And shouted but once more aloud,
"My father! Must I stay?"
While o'er him fast, through sail and shroud,
The wreathing fires made way.

They wrapped the ship in splendor wild,
They caught the flag on high,
And streamed above the gallant child
Like banners in the sky.

There came a burst of thunder sound—
The boy—O, where was he?
Ask of the winds that far around
With fragments strewed at sea.

With mast, and helm, and pennon fair,
That well had borne their part;
But the noblest thing which perished there
Was that young faithful heart!

—Felicia Hemans.

SIR ROBIN—SAND MASTER

Sir Robin, the aristocrat,
Is seasonable ever.
He cocks his dainty little hat,
And chirps: "Good morning," never.

He is an early riser, and
Before the dawn is breaking,
He calls his feathered songster band
To haste their music making.

And after all have gone to rest
Like haunts the moonlight bowers,
And sings his favorite lay the best
To charm the evening hours.

—Horace Seymour Keller in Our Dumb Animals.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Spring has come again. The grass is getting green and shrubs and flowers are growing. Soon the trees will have their leaves once more and before we know it summer will be here. We ought to be alive to everything about us. It does us good to know the plants, the birds, the brooks and the ways at nature.

If we study these things one bit of knowledge we will gain is that order is the supreme rule of nature. We will find that the birds come in their order, that the flowers bloom in their order, that the insects appear in their order, that the trees leaf out in their order and bear fruit in their order. This happens year after year.

Another thing we will learn is that the flow of light from the sun is steady from daybreak until noon when the ebb tide of light starts and ends at night fall with the sinking of the sun. Light is either increasing or decreasing and there are not ten minutes in the day when the light is of the same intensity.

Still another thing we will learn is that everything which sustains life is constantly changing; even life is constantly changing. We ourselves are constantly growing older. Nothing stands still. Applying this knowledge to our lives we can see where order is the thing that counts most. Only an orderly life is a long life. Disorder is always disastrous. Disorder in our lives produces disease and often times death. Keep your eyes open Wide Awakes and learn something new about orderliness every day. We should be orderly in our method of living; orderly in our homes, orderly in our pleasures and orderly in our work. Remember that as far as our lives are concerned we are never standing still; we are either going ahead or backwards.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

THE STORY OF A PENHOLDER

Dear Uncle Jed: I am sending you a story and the name of it is Autobiography of a Penholder.

I am one of the old Pike children who lived in Bay City, Michigan. I was born in 1882. I grew up very tall. One day a lumber man cut me and threw me into the water. I swam to the mill. Here a man caught me and sawed me to pieces. They sent me by freight to a factory in Massachusetts. They could not make use of me, as I was so large, so they put me into a machine and cut me thinner. They planed me. They never gave me other. I had to be patient and suffer. They cut me into small pieces and rounded and varnished me. Then they put a tin collar on me, packed me in a box and shipped me to Chicago. I stayed there in a warehouse for a month. It was hot and no air in the place. Next I was sent to Baltic, Conn. and put on a shelf in a store. I stayed there a few weeks. One day two girls came into the store and took me with them. Next day I went to school. The children were unkind. First they put a pen in my collar, then they pinched me when I worked for them. Sometimes they hit me. One naughty boy broke my back and then the teacher threw me into the furnace.

GERTRUDE BLAIN, Age 14.
Baltic.

MY GRANDPA'S BIRTHDAY

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write to you about my grandpa's birthday. My mama and my sister Ruth got up a party for him. We had the people come to our house and we all walked up together. When they went in the hall they made a noise. My grandpa said he couldn't think what it was. Then when we went into the house he was surprised. My mama made him a cake with 72 candles on it. We had a very nice time. After a while we had lunch. It was cake and coffee. Then mama and my sister Ruth cleared away the table and the others went in the library. We had a very nice time.

IRENE S. S., Age 9.
Sterling.

MY TRIP TO LANTERN HILL

Dear Uncle Jed: One Sunday morning around eleven o'clock we started for a ride. Our party consisted of a lady friend, my mother, my father and myself. We went through Jewett City, Norwich, Hallville and then we stopped at Lantern Hill. We parked our car by the Lantern Hill pond and here we ate our lunch. Then we started to climb the hill. Approaching the top we saw various colored stones. Many other people were climbing the hill and several cars were parked at the foot of the hill. There was a railroad which was once in use. It was used to carry the stones and rocks away. The stones and rocks were used for pottery. The ledges and rocks looked like marble. People say at the topmost part of this mountain seven counties may be seen. We went about half way around this mountain. We did not venture to the extreme top point as it made us very dizzy.

On our way home we passed through Mystic, Stonington, Westerly and Pendleton Hill.

MILDRED KINNE, Age 11.
Voluntown.

THE SANDPIPER'S NEST

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you so I will tell you about a sandpiper's nest. One lovely afternoon in May, when I was wandering up and down looking for flowers, I heard a cry of distress. In a moment a little sandpiper crept from under a bush, dragging itself along as if every bone in its body had been broken. Its wing drooped and its legs hung as if almost lifeless. It uttered cries of pain and kept out of the reach of my hand, fluttering along as if wounded.

Suddenly I remembered that this was the sandpiper's way of concealing from me a nest. Her object was to make me follow her by pretending she could not fly, and so lead me away from her treasure.

Then I carefully looked around for the nest and found it quite close to my feet. Mrs. Sandpiper had only drawn together a few leaves, brown and glossy, a little green moss, and a twig or two, and that was a pretty enough house for her.

Four eggs about as large as those of a robin were within. No wonder I did not see them, for they were pale green like the moss, with brown spots the color of the leaves and twigs.

I could not admire them enough, but in order to remove all fear from my little friend, the sandpiper, I went away very soon, wondering that so very small a head could contain so much cunning.

A POCKET KNIFE

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and I am going to tell you about a pocket knife.

I have just been thinging over my past like and the joys or sorrows I have caused through being lost or found. I am now an old discarded ring, lying in the bottom of a well to-do lady's jewel case. In my day I was the blade of a pocket knife. I was mined sometime early in the eighteenth centuhy and sent to a jewelery manufacturing plant. I was made into a blade and joined to a carved ivory handle. Having been sent to a jewelery store in another city I was purchased by a gentleman as a Christmas gift for his wife.

After I had got an old appearance and my blade was very dull I was kept by one of her grandchildren as a keepsake. One day while she was away her little boy, not knowing my value and wanting something to whittle with took me out doors. Upon finding that my blade would cut nothing he put me in his pocket which unluckily had a hole in it and in running and playing with other children he lost me. The punishment which he received did not bring me back to the owner and a poor boy found me, and took me home.

After he reached there as he had nothing to do for the time being he started to polish my blade. Upon seeing it glitter he took it to his mother who told him that I must be worth something and to see if he could get enough money to buy something for supper. He took me to a jeweler who gave him enough money to buy more than one meal as my handle was worth almost as much as the blade. The blade was made into a lady's ring and set with a ruby. I never was able to find what became of my handle. The ruby has been removed to a gold ring and I am now lying as I said before in a lady's jewel case.

LIGHTING THE WAY

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake circle. The name of my story is, Lighting the Way.

A judge in Newfoundland had a splendid dog, which was in the habit of carrying a lantern before his master at night, as steadily as the most attentive servant could do, stopping short when his master made a step, and going on when he saw him dispased to follow. If his master was absent from home on the lantern being produced and the command being given, "Go and bring your master," he would immediately set off and proceed to the town, which was more than a mile from his master's residence. He would stop at the door of every house which he knew his master frequented, and, laying down his lantern, growl and strike the door. The people would say, "Your master is not here tonight, Carlo." Then he would proceed farther in the same way until he found him. If he once accompanied him to a house, that was quite enough to include that house in his rounds.

THE SUN FOLLOWS RAIN

Dear Uncle Jed: I am sending you this story hoping you and the Wide Awakes will like it. One bright sunny morning last August, several friends of mine, my brother and I started on a hike into the country. I lived in New York at that time.

We walked and walked. Four hours, joyful, wonderful hours, passed and we found ourselves at the edge of a big woods. Ah! How refreshing! The trees stretched their arms out to us to make ourselves at home. Not knowingly we accepted the call of the trees.

We rested, refreshed ourselves and resumed our journey through the woods. Patter, patter, patter. Could it be possible it was raining? Yes, it was. We were already beginning to feel wet. What could we do when according to rough calculations, the nearest house was two miles away? Could we make it before a heavy rain would sweep us down? We began to run and the forest, which had aroused in us joyful exclamations now shook our hearts with cold fear.

At last with the last dash of breath, we reached a house. The kindly occupant gave us shelter, and soon we were perfectly dried.

And then, out came the sun, more brilliant than ever, transforming the landscape. The raindrops everywhere shone like gems in the warmth of the sun; much fresher and greener, the trees had grown taller and their arms stretched out farther than before. The sky was deep blue. The clouds a fleecy white.

Then we were all glad it had rained for everything belonging to nature had been changed into a fairyland in what seemed to be twinkling of the eye.

A FARM HORSE

Dear Uncle Jed: My grandpa has a nice farm horse. One day when he was getting in hay the horse was bitten by a fly. Then he threw grandpa off the hay just as he turned the corner, into the road.

Our horse Bill is very gentle. My brother rides him to water. When he goes back to the barn he gallops, and is very spry for a farm horse.

MY DOG

Dear Uncle Jed: One day I received a letter saying that my uncle was coming to visit me and that he had a surprise for me. Now can you imagine how in a hurry I was to see what he had for me. When he came I was in a hurry to see what it was and to my surprise my uncle gave me a white dog. He was very pretty. My uncle taught him to do tricks. I named him Whittie. I took him out with me every day.

One day my uncle was teaching him to do a new trick and the dog lost track and fell on his back. My uncle went over to pick him up and soon found that the dog's back was broken, and he had to be shot. I felt very sorry about losing him but my uncle said he would buy me another one so I did not feel so bad.

FIVE BROTHERS

Dear Uncle Jed: One time there were five brothers in one family. They were very active and skilful. Could write, and draw, and do many curious things.

Now it happened that just across the way, there lived another family of five brothers, who were cousins to the first five. But they were not so active and skilful as the others.

They couldn't write or draw well; and if they had a knife, they made mad work with it. So when they wanted anything made, they would go to their cousins across the way.

Soon it was found that the two families could do together a great many things that neither could do alone. The brothers that were not so skilful would help by holding things, while the others did most of the work.

In this way they got in the habit of working together, so that now they make most of the furniture they have in their houses, as well as o ther articles of use and ornaments.

AN UNFORTUNATE DOG

Dear Uncle Jed: This story is about a dog. One morning when I was sitting on my door step, a dog came and licked my hand. I petted him. When the mill whistle blew I went in my house to eat. The dog followed me in. While I was eating my dinner the dog stayed by my side all the time. When I was finished I gave the dog some bread and water. In the afternoon I played with him all the time. The next day I taught the dog tricks.

In a week the dog became my playmate. One afternoon I went down by the mill. There were men unloading coal. There were two trucks drawing coal, the other truck was just coming. I did not see it. I threw a stick out in the road, I told the dog go and get it. Just then the truck hit the dog. He rolled over and fell dead. I was sorry because it was the best dog I had.

STORY OF VALLEY FORGE

Dear Uncle Jed: The story I am about to relate happened in 1824 during Lafayette's last visit to this country. He was nearly seventy years old, but his heart beat as warmly for his adopted country as when he fought for its liberties. A grand reception was held. A line of guests passed by Lafayette who greeted each. Presently an old soldier came along clad in a worn Continental uniform. In his hand was an old musket, and across his shoulder was thrown a blanket. On reaching the marquis the veteran gave the military salute. As Lafayette gave the return signal tears came in his eyes.

"Do you know me?" asked the soldier. "No, I cannot say I do," was the frank reply. "Do you remember the frosts and snows of Valley Forge?" "I shall never forget them," answered Lafayette. "One bitter cold night general, you were going the rounds at Valley Forge. You saw a sentry in thin clothing and without stockings. He was slowly freezing to death. You took his gun and said, Go to my hut where you will find stockings, a blanket and a fire. After warming yourself, bring the blanket to me. I will keep guard until you return. The soldier obeyed. When he came back to his post, you cut the blanket in to. One half you kept, the other half you gave to the sentry. Here, general is one half of that blanket, for I am the sentry whose life you saved.

A GRAIN OF WHAT

Dear Uncle Jed: I am a grain of wheat and I am in a bag with my companions. One day in the spring the farmer came to the corn crib and took us out into a field which was all plowed and harrowed. He then took me out with a lot of my brothers and put us in a basket and began to throw us around the field. I happened to fall under a piece of dirt, and the crows came down and ate some of my friends but they did not see me. Three weeks later I was a little green sheet about 2 inches high with a lot of my companions around me. The crows visited us but I always seemed to be lucky. I kept on growing and growing and the sun began to get hotter and hotter and I was getting brown and I also noticed I had an ear of wheat on the top of my stalk with a lot of kernels.

One day the farmer came into the wheat field and said, I guess I will have to harvest my wheat soon, it is getting real ripe.

The next day a man came with a mowing machine and a pair of horses to mow the wheat.

Before I knew anything I was lying on the ground and in another second I was gathered up in a bundle with a lot of my companions and we were put up in shocks. When he was through he left me there three days to dry. On the fourth day I was put into a big wagon and hauled into the barn yard where I stayed until the threshing machine came to thresh me and my friends.

When we were threshed they took me to a mill and I was ground into flour. I was then carried to the baker and made into bread by being mixed with yeast, milk and other things.

I was allowed to cool and taken to the store. The next day a woman came and bought me and carried me home. That noon I was eaten by the woman and her husband and child and that was the end of me.

MY SCHOOL

Dear Uncle Jed: The story that I am going to tell you is a true story about the school I am in. I have been here for a long time and have learned a lot. The name of this school is Long Lane Farm. It is in Middletown, Conn. I call it a training school for girls. We all live a happy life here. It is on a hilly piece of land, and wherever you stand you can see the most magnificent hills. It is very pretty in winter or summer. The grounds of this school are very large. There are six homes where some of the girls and teachers live and the teachers look after the girls in the home. The names of the homes are Russel, Rogers, Allyn, Street, Smith, Browning home. The office is the home in which the superintendent, assistant superintendent and some of the other teachers live. Then there is the chapel where the girls go every morning to worship God.

Here is where the training of the girls begins. The sewing department is a place where each girl learns her part in all kinds of sewing. The cooking department is a place where all kinds of cooking such as bread, doughnuts, pie, cake, and other delicious things.

In the handwork department the girls learn how to make baskets, sealing wax beads, paint, crochet and embroidery.

The school department is where the girls learn all kinds of school subjects. The eight grade girls go down to the town high school.

Winter we go coasting, skating and in summer we have basketball, baseball and we all go to the beach. In five of the homes we have what we call self-government which is very nice. We have council girls who help the other girls. The titles of these council girls are mayor, judge, clerk, deputy clerk, sergeant at arms, health officer and inspector. The girls take piano lessons.

THE DISOBEDIENT CHILDREN

Dear Uncle Jed: Once upon a time there were two children, a little boy and a little girl. The boys' name was Jack and the girl's May. These children were at the seashore with their parents, and although Jack could swim and row, he was told never to get in a boat alone.

One hot day in August, having nothing to do, Jack went and asked May to come and play. May came and they began playing ball but soon became tired of this. Jack then suggested they sit in the boat, so May agreed and they ran to the edge of the water and jumped in the boat. The rope with which the boat was tied was not strong, and soon the boat gave a jerk and the children found themselves floating down the stream. Jack took the oars and began to paddle but soon became tired and put them down.

It was growing dark, Jack and May could not be found. Mrs. Brown, Jack's mother, and Mrs. Smith, May's mother, were greatly excited and sent men out looking for the children. Mr. Brown thought of the water, and with Mr. Smith and two other men set out to hunt for them also. Mr. Brown saw that his boat was gone when they reached the water's edge and at once thought that the children had purposely rowed away. The men found Jack and May a few miles down the stream and brought them home. They were given their supper and put to bed, for they were very tired.

TWO UNFORTUNATE BIRDS

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second story I have written to the Wide Awakes. I am going to write about The Death of Two Helpful Birds. We have a hen yard built under an apple tree. Birds who do not see the wire fly against it and break their necks. One day I found a brown bird with a speckled breast. His neck was broken. I have often seen birds of this kind eating insects. I also found a robin with a broken neck. Robins help farmers in very many ways. Both birds are the farmer's friends.

GOODY TWO SHOES

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and I am going to tell you about Goody Two Shoes. Little Goody Two Shoes, right name was Margery, wanted to learn how to read. She used to borrow the books from children going to school and read them during the day. She would return them when they came from school. She learned that there was only 27 letters needed to spell all the words in the world.

Margery used to teach the children that lived around her how to read and spell with letters of the alphabet. I hope all the children who read this story will enjoy it.

HELPING MOTHER

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I ever wrote to you. I am going to tell you how I help my mother. When there is no school I help mother to take care of the baby and to do her work. I live on a big farm. We have 18 cows and two horses and 200 chickens. We also have a good cow dog. When she sees us go to the barn she wants to follow us. I go to the Sacred Heart school in Wauregan and am in the third grade.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Calling on the Monkey

As soon as the disagreeable ram was hit on the nose by the lollypop, he stuck it in his mouth just like a pipe and winked at Uncle Lucky. At once the old gentleman rabbit began to laugh forgetting all about the broken lamp which Mr. Ram had knocked off the Luckymobile in the last story. Just then a tinker came by with a basket full of tinware.

"Hello, there," cried Uncle Lucky, "can you mend an automobile lamp?"

"Dunno," answered the tinker, looking it over carefully. Pretty soon he screwed it on the Luckymobile, and

"What do you do all day?" asked Uncle Lucky.

mended the electricity wire, after which he sat down and taking out his fountain pen and a piece of paper, he made out a bill for dear Uncle Lucky.

"You give that bill to Mr. Ram," said the old gentleman rabbit. "He knocked off the lamp, I didn't."

"Gracious me," said Mr. Ram, "I left my money at home."

"Oh well," said Uncle Lucky, "I'll pay it and you can pay me afterward," and he handed a lettuce leaf dollar bill to the peddler, who wrote on the bill with his fountain pen.

"Paid, Tim Tinkerman."

"Next time you come this way I'll have the money ready for you," said Mr. Ram as Uncle Lucky drove away.

"It seems to me we ought to make a call on the little monkey who ran away from the cruel hand organ man," said Uncle Lucky, by and by, after a while, to his bunny nephew.

So they turned a shady road until they came to a cute little house near a big tall tree.

"Hello," said the little monkey when the Luckymobile stopped in front of his door. He wore the same little red cap and coat, for he'd been so busy building his house he hadn't had time to go to the Tailor Bird for a new suit of clothes. And then, too, I guess he didn't have the money.

"What do you do all day?" asked Uncle Lucky, after he had tied the Luckymobile to a tree.

"Oh, I make cocoanut pies and sell them to little boys and girls," replied the monkey.

No sooner did the little bunny hear that than he took some carrot pennies out of his pocket and bought two pies right away quick, just like that, and gave one to Uncle Lucky and the other to himself.

When the pies were eaten, the little rabbit went inside the monkey's house, for they had been sitting on the little front porch so as not to drop any cocoanut crumbs on the floor, you see, and the monkey showed them upstairs and downstairs and even the cellar where he kept nice big water melons.

"I'm giving a show at the Opera House tonight. Do you want to come along?" asked the little monkey, all of a sudden.

Of course the two little rabbits did, and, inviting him to ride in the Luckymobile, started off. But what they did at the Rabbitville Opera House I'll tell you in the next story.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Of interest to patriotic organizations who concern themselves with matters of the kind, as well as to many others, is the condition of the headstone marking the grave of Captain Ephraim Warren, a soldier in the Continental army, in the Warren cemetery north of the Warren homestead, in the Killingly Center district of the town.

The stone has become so weather-beaten and worn with the passing years that the inscription is partly obliterated. A metal marker sets forth that it is a patriot's grave.

Recent visitors to the cemetery were impressed with the thought that here is a grave that requires some attention. The cemetery is in an obscure section of Killingly, its location probably unknown to 90 per cent of the present residents of the town, but there lies the mortal remains of an officer in the army of the Revolution and the memory of his services to his country in its most trying hours should be sufficient to bring about a movement—for a new stone to mark his last resting place.

There are from 200 to 300 buried in this old cemetery, possibly more. It has been cleared of brush, but the grave markers, mostly rough slabs of field stone with crude workmanship showing in the inscriptions, are in numbers of cases, toppled over and in some instance flat on the ground.

In that cemetery rest some of the early settlers of the town of Killingly. Some of the stones show deaths that occurred as early as 1780. This cemetery has not been used for a great many years and is now reached along a grass-grown lane once part of one of the principal highways of the town, but long since abandoned and now impassable to traffic.

An alarm about 3.35 Sunday afternoon, called firemen into the northerly Maple street section to fight a brush fire. The fire did not amount to much and was quickly extinguished, the damage being practically nothing.

The body of John Thomas Smith, who died in California a week ago Sunday, arrived here Saturday evening. The body was accompanied east by Mr. Smith's only daughter, Mrs. Pearl Livesey. Mr. Smith was for nearly half a century boss of the weaving department of the Wauregan mills.

A forthcoming financial statement of the Brooklyn Fire district covering the past year will show, it is said, a reduction in indebtedness during the year. The Brooklyn district includes the territory familiarly known as the West Side of Danielson.

There were further demonstrations Saturday and Sunday that there is essential need of borough officials meeting at the matter of parking regulations and arriving at some basis of regulation. With cars parked in long rows on each side of the Main street, all that was required to start some of the traffic jams that ensued was the appearance of a trolley and some moving motor traffic. One particularly bad tieup occurred Sunday morning, holding all traffic, while the drivers of cars tried in various ways to open a path for the workcar of the Connecticut company to get through. The matter of parking regulations has been hanging fire for about two years, and as yet no rules are in force and the need of them becomes more pressing from day to day, as the season's traffic increases.

Mrs. L. S. Ingalls returned recently from a ten days' trip to Washington, D. C., where she attended the continental congress of the D. A. R. and was a guest of relatives in Mrs. John Gallup on Maryland avenue.

Charles H. Pellett remains critically ill at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, where he has been a patient for about ten days.

St. James' parochial schol will open this (Monday) morning after the Easter recess.

Numbers of the members of St. Alban's church attended the service at Trinity church in Brooklyn Sunday.

New and heavier rails are being put in through the borough, though the change in the Main street crossing has not yet taken place. This will involve tearing up the fine granite roadbed put in last fall.

Farmers owning sheep were interested in the announcement that the Windham County Farmers' association arranged a docking and sheep-shearing demonstration at the Henry F. Buell farm, Eastford, Saturday. R. E. Begg, sheep specialist at the Connecticut Agricultural college, gave the demonstration.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman A. Reeves will return today from their wedding trip. They have been visiting in Boston, New York and Washington.

Prayers of the congregations were asked at all masses at St. James church on Sunday for Mayor Romildos Dion of Willimantic, whose death occurred Sunday morning.

Miss Rose Ouimette is seriously ill at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Whalen of Boston spent the week and visiting with friends in Danielson. Mr. Whalen formerly lived in Danielson.

Howard A. Hillman of Providence was a visitor with friends in Danielson over Sunday.

Beginning Sunday, the Connecticut company's south-bound cars out of Danielson connection with cars at Central Village for Norwich on the odd hours, Danielson leaving time, instead of on the even hours. For instance, the 2.20 p. m. car no longer connects, but the 3.20 will, and the same rule applies to other connections.

William M. Franklin of Broad street has entered a real contender for the first prize offered by the Danielson Rod and Gun club for the largest trout caught by a member in Windham county waters during the fishing season. Mr. Franklin brought in a trout Saturday afternon that was 18 inches in length and weighed a pound and three-quarters.

Miss Margaret Sullivan of Academy street will have the members of the Treble Clef club at her home for a rehearsal Wednesday evening.

Motorists who venture onto some back roads find that there is sufficient mud remaining to stall their machines and involve getting horses to release the mired cars.

Danielson is to have a carnival during May, it is announced, under the auspices of St. James' band.

Travelers will recall to their advantage that passenger trains operating through Danielson on the New Haven road are running on an earlier schedule this (Monday) morning. Failing to remember the change made some people here lose trains on Sunday.

On Thursday of this week Rev. Joseph Deshaux, M. S., pastor of St. James' parish, will reach the thirty-second anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

It is stated that several thousands of dollars of losses are represented in today's quotations by local investors in certain monies of foreign countries.

A reception was given in Worcester, Saturday evening, for Mr. and Mrs. Lee Dion, who were married here a week ago this morning. They will live in Worcester, where they have a newly furnished home.

Youngsters who like to follow an old custom are anxiously awaiting the opening of the May basket season next Thursday evening. Incidentally, some of the boys find May an excuse for stunts that also have been in vogue for a long time.

A joint Easter service attended by numbers of the members of St. Alban's church and the choir was held at Trinity church in Brooklyn Sunday morning.

A frost, but not a killing one, occurred early Sunday morning, after an unusually cold night for this period of the year.

Pipes for the new high pressure gas line between this place and Putnam are being distributed along the route between Danielson and Dayville.

PUTNAM

There will be a halt in the Boys' week program Wednesday, when the first anniversary of the founding of the Putnam Rotary club will be observed. At 8 o'clock in the evening Rotarians from the neighboring clubs will join the members of the Putnam club in Odd Fellows' hall in their anniversary exercises.

Agent John F. Reardon of the Groevenordale company is the new club president. Other officers are: Vice president, John Ash; secretary, Henry S. Lyon; treasurer, Omer J. Milot; directors, John F. Reardon, John Ash, Ralph C. Jenkins, Ray C. Bosworth and W. J. Bartlett.

Fifty Rotarians from New London and twenty-five or more from Norwich will arrive by special train in time for the anniversary dinner which will be served by the Rotary Anneas. A like number is expected to motor over from Willimantic and, with the thirty members of the local club there will be a substantial gathering. An important part of the after-dinner exercises will be the address of the district governor, George Cooper, of Pittsfield, Mass., who will be accompanied by his daughter, Miss Myra Cooper. There will be other speeches by members of the clubs represented. Singing will be led by John H. Corbett of Putnam and "Bill" Parks of Norwich Rotary club. Henry J. LaFontaine of Norwich will sing several solos.

A special meeting of the Arcanum club was held at the club rooms on South Main street Sunday afternoon, when matters pertaining to the welfare of the club were discussed. During the winter months the club has been renovated and transformed inside and early this spring the outside of the building was painted.

The second round in the banana battle was being fought Saturday, and the song-famed fruit was selling at less than a penny a banana, to be exact, 39 bananas for two bits. It is a bloodless warfare and the non-combatants are getting the better of it by taking advantage of the low prices. From looking on, one is unable to see which of the contestants, if either, is being put to rout.

It was learned Saturday that work on the erection of a nurses' home at Day Kimball hospital, which it was hoped would be begun this spring, will have to be postponed for the present. Bids on the building received were from $40,000 to $50,000, and as the building fund at present is but $35,000 it is not thought advisable to go forward with the plans. In all probability there will be a drive of some kind during the summer months, in hopes that the fund may be augmented by sufficient additional money to allow the committee to go forward, or that possibly building costs may be reduced. The home is a much-needed adjunct of the hospital, a growing institution, and the room now occupied by nurses is needed for patients. On the other hand, a fit place for the nursing staff to congregate while off duty will make the hospital more attractive to the nurses.

By order of the superior court, Judge Frank D. Haines presiding, the short calendar session scheduled for Friday, May 2d, will be continued to the following Friday, when short calendar matters will be attended to and cases assigned for trial, court to be held in Willimantic.

C. Dwight Sharpe and Ralph C. Jenkins were delegates from the Men's club of the Congregational church to the first annual organized Eastern States Bible class, held in New Britain Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning.

Dr. Henry S. Mathewson, a former Pomfret young man, has been transferred from the United States Marine hospital at Vineyard Haven to Portland, Me. Dr. Mathewson lived in Pomfret during his boyhood days, and his sister, Miss Eleanor Mathewson, still resides there. For over a quarter of a century he has been on the medical staff of the navy department and has been stationed in various marine hospitals throughout the world.

Boys' week began Sunday morning, when in all the churches in the city special sermons were preached by the pastors. The effort to have boys present was successful and a great deal of interest has been manifested in the week's program, with boys holding the center of the stage.

On account of the change in the running time of trains, the hours at the Putnam postoffice are changed to meet the hour-earlier service. Clerks in the postoffice will have to be on the job at 5.30 a. m., an hour earlier than heretofore. Offsetting the early morning rising is the hour earlier closing. Instead of being kept open until 8 o'clock, the postoffice will close at 7 o'clock. City and rural carriers will, however, maintain the old schedule. The public will receive some advantage, for all mail will be opened and distributed by the time the business man arrives at the postoffice or at his place of business.

The new time card of the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad went into effect early Sunday morning. For the most part the direct effect on Putnam is that train service is one hour earlier and that railroad departments are also on an advanced schedule.

There are, however, one or two drastic changes. The present 1.31 train, Boston to Willimantic, is discontinued. Commencing this (Monday) evening, there will be a new train from Boston. This is an express, leaving Boston at 7 p. m. and arriving in Putnam at 8.45, service that will be appreciated by Putnam business men visiting the Hub. This new train runs week days and makes but one stop between Boston and Putnam and only two stops from Putnam to Hartford. The most perturbed over the changed running card are the milkmen, who have to arrive from the outlying sections before 6 o'clock in the morning for the milk train.

F. W. Edgerton, librarian at New London public library, will be the speaker at the meeting of the Parent-Teachers' association. His subject will be "The Relation of the Library to the Public." The meeting will be held at the Israel Putnam school Thursday,

May 1st, at 2.45 p. m. There will be a general discussion of suitable reading matter for children that will be of interest to every parent and teacher. Following the addresses, there is to be a social hour, and light refreshments will be served. The hostesses for this meeting are Mrs. Charles Franklin, Mrs. Carrie B. Gascoigne and Mrs. J. B. Tatem, Jr.

Grangers from all parts of Windham county gathered in Wolf Den grange hall, Abington, Saturday night for the special meeting of Quinebaug Pomona grange. The entertainment committee served a supper from 5 to 7 o'clock following which the meeting was opened in the fifth degree, and the degree was conferred on several candidates. An interesting address was delivered by Charles M. Gardner, Springfield, High Priest of Demeter. An entertaining monologue was given by Mrs. S. Irving Frink of Brooklyn grange, and Mrs. Alexander Maitland of Quinitisset grange, Thompson, sang several times. The granges in eastern Windham county were well represented and prizes were awarded for attendance.

The body of Eli Weeks of Eastford, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. I. Morse, Willimantic, Tuesday, was brought to Putnam Friday evening for burial in Grove street cemetery. The funeral service was held at the Eastford Congregational church, with a large gathering of friends and relatives in attendance.

From outward appearances the fine new Putnam Savings bank building on Main street, the erection of which was begun last fall, is practically completed. The finishing touches are being put on the interior, and the fixtures and office furniture are being installed. The building will be ready for occupancy within a few days.

Edward L. Greene, manager of the Boston Better Business commission, will be the speaker at the annual meeting of the Putnam Chamber of Commerce at the Putnam inn Thursday evening. Mr. Greene will talk on business and on how to create better business. The address will be preceded by the annual dinner.

The golf season of the Putnam Country club was formally opened Sunday. There was a good number of entries in the first swapsteke tournament. The greens and the fairway are all in excellent condition for this time of year, but will improve as warmer weather starts the grass.

BODY OF BOISONEAU BOY RECOVERED FROM RIVER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, April 27.—The body of 5-year-old William Henry Boisneau Jr., was recovered from the Quinebaug river, Saturday morning about 11 o'clock. The body was discovered by Edmund Guilbert, operator of the moving picture machine at the Bradley theatre and a member of the Putnam fire department. He was assisted in taking the body from the river by Arthur Davison and Walter Carey, who were in another boat.

Guilbert had put in many hours in patrol service. Saturday morning he was in the vicinity of Priests Island, about a mile south of where the drowning accident occurred, and was paddling a boat with one oar near the shore. As he passed over a sand bar Guilbert saw what appeared to be some white buttons. He gave a closer look and saw a pair of little shoes. By this time his boat had passed the spot and on account of the current and only having one oar he could not get back, so pushed ashore. He called to the other two men further upstream to come down. The three men with rakes got the body out, after it had been viewed by the medical examiner, it was removed to the Boisneau home on South Meadow street.

The boy was drowned shortly before noon last Wednesday. He was on the river bank with a playmate, Pauline Cody, throwing stones in the river when he lost his balance and fell in. The stream is high and the boy was carried swiftly to midstream. The little girl ran and gave the alarm and the fire alarm was rung and the members of the department were organized as a patrol. The police later took charge of patrolling duty and men have been on the river every day since.

The little boy was one of two children of Mr. and Mrs. William Napoleoneau, the other being a 6-year-old daughter. The boy was a bright child and a short time ago had been a patient at the Day Kimball hospital where his good-nature and cheerfulness won the hearts of all the nurses.

The body was partially buried in sand, the lad's little cap was still on his head, his hand was clasped and there were no marks upon the body nor was his clothing torn.

HELPING HONDURAS.

The move for the adjustment of the situation in Honduras is one that cannot fail to arouse widespread commendation. Honduras under its present disposition is headed for even more deplorable conditions than exist today. It began wrong and has kept going from bad to worse, until difficulties in providing protection for the subjects of other nations have been experienced. It is bad enough where any country insists upon settling its elections by resort to bullets instead of ballots, but when they get into one grand fight among themselves that ignored constitutional requirements and threatens the external as well as the internal conditions it is time for the peacemakers to see what they can do.

That the move which has been made is a wise one is indicated by the acceptance by the Honduras factions of the offer made by this government. Even though the United States found it advisable to sever diplomatic relations when the Honduras government disregarded its constitutional requirements, it has not cast Honduras out of its mind. Its desire is to help it rather than to harm it. Its good offices have been offered in the spirit of friendship, and it is to be sincerely hoped that it will be the means of re-establishing peace in that republic.

Good judgment has been used in soliciting the aid of other countries in endeavoring to reconcile the differences within Honduras. Strange as it may seem, the good intentions of this government, its altruistic purposes, have been too often misjudged. Though it has never acted in the [illegible] conquest that is the view [illegible] often taken by others, [illegible] Central American countries with the United States [illegible] trouble in Honduras by the [illegible] of the facts it is made [illegible] that this government is [illegible] to dictate. Not only will the effect be good upon Honduras itself, but it cannot fail to impress the other republics which might look upon our endeavors alone as suspicious. Action in concert will entirely overcome such a view.

MEANS' LATEST.

During the investigations in Washington from time to time the country has been furnished a lot of statements based upon the testimony of Gaston B. Means, directly or indirectly. Means is one of those investigators who long since got out of touch with federal department affairs. He had had a career that has brought him into the limelight at various times, and which hasn't served to bolster up the belief in his testimony. But he had been praised for his work as an investigator for the department of justice. Two superiors have been frank in their admissions to his ability in this direction.

It is therefore with an increased amount of surprise that the country learns that Means has been outwitted during the big investigation by men he doesn't know, but who, according to his story, were able to get away with his valuable records and concerning the men and the papers there is not the slightest clue.

Means tells a story that reads like fiction. For one who is so well versed in the schemes of sleuths and those out for information it is a surprising tale. Not once did he attach any suspicion to the method employed after they had produced badges as assistant senate sergeants at arms, who it is now learned have no badges, and also presented a letter signed by the chairman of the investigating committee, demanding the release of the documents to the bearers, which is now claimed to be a forged signature.

The caution which might be expected from such a man does not appear. Whatever suspicion he disclosed at the demand for his papers was quickly and easily offset by those who were more clever than he is reputed to be.

The real significant thing in connection with the affair is that when Mr. Means is called upon to support his claims with documentary evidence those documents disappear in a mysterious manner, quite like the thrilling chapter of a detective story. Means is of course the very man who should have smelled a rat and nabbed the guilty messengers.

CHARLES F. MURPHY.

When it comes to wielding the power of a political "boss" it is probable that none held greater authority or exerted greater influence in this direction in the past two decades than Charles F. Murphy, the leader of Tammany in New York.

He wasn't the first leader of that powerful political organization and he will not be the last. There are others who have made a more spectacular head of that organization, and there are others who have conducted it with far less credit to themselves and to the city. When Charles F. Murphy took up the reins following the regime of Richard Croker, the notoriety of the organization were not diminished, except as they were replaced in keeping with the disclosures of fact revealing investigations. Mr. Murphy was the boss and kept his hand on the influence wielded by Tammany. His methods differed from his predecessors. He was more easy going. He was not a grandstand player, though he was one who invariably had his way. He had ways of exerting influence through Tammany that reached out beyond the city to the state and in no small degree to national democratic politics. Though milder than Croker he was quite as powerful and maintained a strong machine. Not always was he successful, but time after time the efforts to defeat Tammany, despite its notoriety, failed.

The sudden death of Leader Murphy prevented any consideration of a possible successor. It has not been anticipated that he would be relinquishing his leadership for some time. Understudies are probably numerous but making the change at this time is bound to call for much care because of the existing political situation and the effect which Tammany influence will or will not have upon it.

In connection with the history of Tammany, the Murphy administration must figure conspicuously. He was a clever politician without the fireworks, and no doubt his even tempered ways were to a great degree responsible for his long continued control of that office.

WILL THE SENATE HEED?

It has been repeatedly established that what congress ought to do and what congress will do are not the same thing. Perhaps more is expected of the senate than of the house, when it comes to giving consideration to clear out facts, but from the manner in which it has been demonstrating its judgment on matters of vital concern to the nation there's no telling what may be expected from it.

Concerning the revenue bill which is now before it, Chairman Smoot of the finance committee has directed the attention of the senate to the committee action upon it and stressed the importance of adhering to the recommendation that the Mellon plan be approved. As an authority on revenue and taxation Chairman Smoot is a leader in congress. Thus when he declares that the Mellon plan will "stimulate business, encourage investments in productive enterprises and in the long run increase the revenues from the taxes on the larger incomes," more than passing attention should be given to it. It is not a matter that ought to be kicked about politically. The general welfare of the country deserves consideration and reliance upon the senate to give that to such an important matter as revenue and tax cutting is no more than what should be expected from the country. It is the fear that it will not get such consideration that is responsible today for the interest in the action of the senate.

This is a matter which the country has relied upon congress to put through. Strange as it may seem, congress has balked and fought it at every turn, and it is no secret that it has been the means of lowering congress in the estimation of the electorate.

GREATER SAFETY WITH HELIUM

Whether or not we appreciate the fact that there is in this country practically a world monopoly of helium gas will depend upon the use we make of it and the development that come about.

Attention has been diverted from the balloon type of aircraft because of the greater progress made with the airplanes, and the seeming greater possibilities in such craft. In connection with balloons and dirigibles hydrogen gas has been depended upon for inflation. Its buoyancy is unquestioned, but the danger comes from its inflammability. Numerous disasters can be attributed to that hazard, and the danger cannot go on unobserved.

In helium gas there is a substitute which is satisfactory. It may not have quite the same lighting power as hydrogen but there is the satisfaction of knowing that it is not explosive. It is much more expensive, but properly controlled that feature cannot be any objection as long as it overcomes the explosive danger.

While less attention is given to them, it has not been diverted entirely from the gas-floated craft. There are uses to which they can be put and there cannot be overlooked the advantage which accrues to this country from our natural endowment of helium gas.

Properly employed, this should provide the means of testing out the uses of such airships and their efficiency with the greatest degree of safety—a matter of no small consideration when the number of lives and the value of the property at stake are realized.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Turn doughnuts constantly while in the fat and they will always be well and evenly cooked.

A clothes dryer that folds close to the wall is very handy in the sewing room to hang the work on before and after finishing.

Salt cooked with the vegetables before cream is added will not curdle the cream.

Steel wool is excellent for many things. It was originally intended for aluminum.

To cut marshmallows, dip your scissors in ice-cold milk and use them without drying. Cut about ten pieces, then dip again. The marshmallows will not stick to the scissors.

It is hard sometimes to remove paper from raisins. Place the package of raisins in the oven a few minutes, the paper comes off like magic and the raisins will fall apart.

When making dropped cookies if you dip teaspoon in cold milk before putting in the mixture the dough will slide from the spoon very easily.

If new enamel saucepans are placed in a pan of warm water and allowed to come to a boil and then to cool they will be found to last much longer before either cracking or burning.

If you bring sausages to a boil before frying they will not burst open. Put them in a pan of cold water and bring to a boil, then brown them on a broiler.

To cut a hot cake warm the knife. To warm a knife never put it in the fire; dip the blade in boiling water.

When boiling fowls or fish add to the water the juice of half a lemon. This will make them beautifully white.

To remove machine oil from white silk, wet a cloth in coal oil and touch the spot with it; no trace of the oil will remain.

To remove ink stains from colored cotton cloth without injuring material, mix dry mustard and water to a paste. Spread over the spot and allow to remain fifteen minutes, wash and rinse well and the stain will disappear.

Coarse sandpaper and a little elbow grease will take the brown spots from your kitchen sink, when soap and cleaning powder fail.

EQUAL TO NEW

If the kitchen oilcloth looks shabby, as it does when the colors begin to wear off, it may be made to look equal to new by being treated in the following manner: Use brown paint—four or five cans will cover a large floor. Choose a time when the kitchen can be closed for two days. Coat the oilcloth carefully and when thoroughly dry give it a good polishing with furniture cream.

TO CLEAN A CLOCK

To clean a clock saturate a piece of absorbent cotton about as large as a hen's egg with kerosene oil and place it in the bottom. Close the door and let the oilcloth remain for three or four days. Then take it out and swing the pendulum. Unless something is broken, the clock will go all right, as the fumes from the oil cleanse the works.

THE ODOR OF PAINT

After a room has been painted, an excellent way to remove the smell of the paint is to place a pail of water to which have been added a few slices of raw onion in the room and leave it there overnight. Keep the doors and windows closed and the smell will be entirely gone by morning.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A soothing lotion for the sunburned skin of the baby is a teaspoonful of soda to a pint of water.

Soak a new toothbrush overnight in a glass of water. The bristles will not come out and the brush will last twice as long.

To remove tartar moisten the toothbrush with warm water and dip it in magnesia. A few applications are sufficient.

A very long finger should never have a long nail, at the same time it should not have too short a nail, because this will bring the finger to such a sudden end as only to attract attention to its length.

People who have not learned to like the taste of plain water may make their daily water ration more palatable and none the less beneficial by adding a little fruit juice to it. An adult usually requires five or six glasses of water a day.

HOUSE CLEANING

Spring and fall have for decades been set aside by all good housewives as the sacred seasons of housecleaning.

In the so-called "good" old days, there was reason enough for this. In the first place, stoves were more commonly used by average American families than now. Today a furnace in the basement is not considered any special luxury. In the second place, carpets and mattings were almost universally used, and they were fastened to the floor with tacks, set at six-inch intervals.

When housecleaning time arrived, stoves first had to be put up or taken down, according to the season. Then the dusty carpets were taken up and carried to the family clothes lines, where hours of beating were required to make it clean. While the carpets were up, the paperhanging and painting were attended to.

Modern heating systems, loose rugs, laid on waxed floors, vacuum cleaners, and dustless dust mops have brought daily, not semiannual cleanliness into even the most modest homes, and today the housekeeper is independent of weather or season, she still seems to think spring and fall the logical time for redecorating.

As a matter of fact, she can often get much more satisfactory work done by her local paperhanger if she will ask for his services at some other season, when he is not rushed with orders and short of men. In houses warmed by our modern systems the paper dries as readily as it would on the balmiest spring day.

Midwinter papering is thoroughly sensible. Then when languorous spring days come, the homemaker who has taken time by the forelock and got her decorating done early, can devote herself to matters sartorial, horticultural, or purely spiritual, while her less wise neighbors all the hours with housecleaning.

CRACKS IN FURNITURE

Ugly cracks in furniture may be easily filled in with beeswax so that the marks will hardly show. Slightly soften the beeswax until pliable, then press it firmly into the cracks and smooth the surface with a thin knife. Sandpaper the surrounding wood and work some of the dust into the beeswax. This gives it a wood finish and when it is varnished the cracks will have disappeared.

DICTATES OF FASHION

A very ornate pair of slippers are of Paisley brocade with crossed silver straps.

As the season advances the tailor tailored suit becomes more modified and the lines tempered to a more feminine mold.

Smart little silk dresses for children are trimmed with tiny bands of cut out flowers of felt. The bands are used as trimming around the hem of the skirt.

Some of the newest skirts exploited by a Parisian designer are 12 inches from the floor.

Biscuit and oyster white coats on strictly tailored lines are making their appearance for summer.

An unusually effective necklace is made of large, graduated cube-cut crystals with a small amethyst between each crystal.

A very beautiful set of lingerie is in thin striped silk, the stripes being in distinctively springlike colorings. These include pale green, gray, faint lilac and softest rose.

Sand and tan, gray and black—these are the color combinations on of the new pumps for young girls. Sensible enough, the toe is round and the heel low.

Sheer white voile frocks completely covered with delicate machine embroidery in colors are delightfully new and charming. One dress has a long tunic reaching almost to the bottom of the skirt.

It is worthy of note that navy and very dark brown hats seem to be on the wane today. The favorite shades now are the greens—split pea, Nile, willow, and the yellows—golden, orange, straw and sulphur.

Attracting attention because of their novelty, are frocks made of men's shirting pleated from neck to hem and with Eton collars of the material frequently stiffened like the collars of small boys.

Ralph silk dresses for young girls are extremely practical and pretty. They are trimmed with appliques of other colors and have little collars and cuffs of gray silk.

DIRECTOIRE AGAIN

At present there seems to be a determined effort to introduce directoire gowns with very short waists and tiny puff sleeves. These dresses are developed in taffetas and floating tulle, with many ruffles of the same airy stuff. Whether the public will accept these remains to be seen.

TO PRESERVE CHAMOIS GLOVES

To prevent chamois gloves from tearing the first time they are worn after washing, wet the fingers slightly with warm water; the gloves will then slip on the hand without difficulty, and the wet spots may be dried by pressing with a clean towel.

SAILOR HAT RETURNS

Once more the straight brim sailor hat returns. It is smaller than heretofore, in deference to the cloche and other small hat vogues, but it is definitely here as the ideal hat for the strictly tailored ensemble.

AN ORIENTAL TOUCH

From far-away Algiers come smart new frocks for summer wear. These dresses are made of a heavy white material somewhat on the order of ratine. They are cut on very simple lines and have much oriental embroidery done in heavy colored wools. They are oddly new and different.

LAUNDRY HINTS

If the busy mother will wash the baby's jackets or the children's sweaters in the usual way and then put them in a clean pan and set in a warm place to dry, they will be like new. Turn them often and shake a little as they dry.

Never sprinkle pongee to iron. Roll in a towel while wet and iron when still damp.

To iron men's soft collars, begin at the points and press toward the center of the back. This will prevent the unsightly wrinkles that are usually seen on the home-laundered collars.

When ironing a garment that has a row of buttons, fold a Turkish towel into several thicknesses, lay the garment, buttons down, on the towel and iron into the towel and the garment will be smooth and well ironed.

If you burn an article ironing it, wet the goods and apply cornstarch to the burned part, rubbing it in well. Allow this to dry and all traces of the burn will have disappeared.

CARING FOR CLOTHES

For the sake of sanitation, men's clothes should be cleaned regularly—for the sake of neatness they should be pressed regularly. Very often big cleaning bills can be saved by a little first aid at home when clothes are stained. Any woman with a little skill and care can save money by following these hints;

Candy or sugar—Apply clean cold water.

Coffee, tea and fruit—Dip in hot solution of soda—one pound to a gallon of water—then in hot soapy water. Should this not remove stain, dip in a solution of ammonia and soda and hang in sun.

Ink—Soak the spot in strong salt water and rinse in strong solution of ammonia. Repeat if necessary.

Mud—Soak in kerosene and rinse in hot water.

Nicotine—Hot water and soap.

Oil and Grease Stains—Place clean cloth or blotting paper beneath the spot, rub with gasoline or benzine. Cover with fuller's earth or powdered chalk and leave in sun for a few hours.

Paint—Mix half ammonia with half turpentine. Shake well and dab on stain. Scrape off and remove spot with benzine. If not thoroughly removed, proceed as for oil and grease stains.

Scorch—If not too severe rinse in soapy water, dab on white vinegar and allow to dry in sun. Repeat if necessary.

Shoe polish—Use turpentine and remove with benzine or gasoline.

Tar—Soften tar with glycerin. Scrape off well. Dab on benzine. Wash in soda water with ammonia. Another remedy is to soak in warm milk and salt.

GAY PORCH FURNITURE

Wicker furniture on the living porch seems to be a foregone conclusion, and well that it is so, for nothing could be more attractive for this greatly-to-be-desired room.

With wicker furniture, and the term "wicker" seems to cover reed, willow and fiber—what could be better than rugs of fiber? Not only do they fit into the decorative scheme, but they are wearable and almost weatherproof, making them ideal for the out-of-door living room.

The old style folding bed that shut up like a jacknife has served its day, and in its place is a modern, completely comfortable davenport bed. It adds beauty to any home and an extra room in the twinkling of an eye.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The last census enumeration showed only one woman listed as a butler.

Forty per cent of the needle workers in Alcester, England, are women.

First woman in the British Empire to be appointed a judge in any court of law, Mrs. Arthur Murphy of Edmonton, Alberta, is also an author and a leader in numerous other activities.

There has been 500,000 more women than men, more than 11,000 of whom are past 80 years of age.

Almost one-half the transportation patents granted to women in the United States are concerned with motor traffic.

Miss Julia Marcum, aged 70 years, of Williamsburg, Ky., is the only woman member of the National Grand Army of the Republic.

FOR PAINTED CEILINGS

To clean painted ceilings use plenty of warm water, with a little ammonia, soda or borax in it. A sponge is much better than a cloth for this purpose.

TO FROST A CAKE

Cakes must be cold before being iced. The best results are obtained when the cake is made one day and iced the next.

RECIPES

Corn Meal and Rice Bread: Mix 1 cupful of corn meal, 1-2 cupful of boiled rice, 1 teaspoonful of salt and 1 teaspoonful of sugar. Dissolve 1-2 a teaspoonful of soda in one pint of sour milk or buttermilk, and to the mixture, you have prepared add enough of the milk to make a stiff batter. Stir into it one beaten egg and the rest of the milk. Beat thoroughly, add one teaspoonful of melted shortening, and bake it immediately in a shallow, greased pan.

Lamb Salad: Cut cold roast lamb in thin slices, pour over a French dressing, cover, and let stand for one hour. Also marinate with French dressing one-half a can of French peas. Cut one tumbler of mint jelly in small cubes and arrange in the center of a bed of lettuce. Surround the lettuce with a border of lamb, and the lamb with a border of peas. Pass mayonnaise dressing with this salad.

To make the jelly, soak one tablespoonful of gelatin in a third of a cupful of water, strain it, heat it boiling hot, and add it to the gelatin. Season with salt and pepper and set away to cool. You may add a dash of green vegetable coloring to make the jelly greener.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Well Impressed With City.

Mr. Editor: Having read your interesting paper for a good many years and also having spent the past three months in your beautiful city, I will write you some of the fine things which my attention and mind have been observing.

We find this city located at the stopping point of water navigation where boats from all over the world can stop; showing good water fronts, also good steam and electric roads, with trolley connection, and that improved buses for people to travel on state roads are coming into use; also, that the large wholesale houses are using trucks for carrying freight.

The city contains a very industrious and healthy class of people who have improved the good stone ledges by building solid buildings and streets, and between these stone lines of ledges there are very rich and fertile valleys where fruit and garden things are raised, if properly cared for.

In the suburbs of the city and in the surrounding country we see a large number of fine houses being built, with the ground improved by large lawns with shrubs and flowers, and gardens with fruit and vegetables.

Having been a personal friend of one of your physicians and surgeons, whom the city has placed in a responsible position, which he has filled with honor, and hoping to do your city some good in the future, I am your friend,

A. B. RANDALL.

Norwich, April 26, 1924.

A New View.

Mr. Editor. This writer's excuse, if an excuse be needed, is that he wants to inject a new argument into the discussions, and, which notwithstanding its importance, has not before—we think, been introduced. We mean the sanitary one; but in order to make it plain to your readers we must preface with a corollary concerning the calling this writer is engaged in—the plumbing business. It may not be generally known that the health and vigor of our American population is largely due to our sanitary appliances and laws, and that the installment of these and the laws for their enforcement is due to the forethought and force of an association of men called The Master Plumbers' Association of the United States of America, and, that the United States leads the world in sanitation.

Tourists who visit hotels in Europe, and others, can testify to the lack of such accomodations as we have here in common, and which are spreading there through American influence now operating upon the good sense of proprietors catering for our patronage.

Anecdotes, told by our travelers in the past, seem incredible, and comically ludicrous, because so true and uncleanly. Statistics are not in point here, but the Master Plumbers' association embraces thousands of most practical and intelligent men, many above the average, as writers and speakers on all subjects pertaining to health and disease and its eradication.

This writer can remember when even in Nowich, good residences were destitute of a "lavatory," or such a thing as was then designated, "a W. C." but, now, those are necessary, and obliged by law, to be installed and kept repaired in the cheapest tenements.

All this outlay of mechanical skill and legal enactment for the health of the nation and the individual is due to our craft, and which as a kind of corollary we offer to buttress our argument, already, perhaps, surmised by the attentive reader, and which we offer with apology—if apology is needed.

Now while it is a trifling act to turn the hands of a clock forward or backward on its face—the hands of nature's clock can not be so forced forward—nor backward one hour at pleasure, nor five minutes often, nor anytime, without ill results. Do we need a physician to tell us that? Or does not the simplest mind realize this? In a few words this is our new, yet very old argument against daylight saving, so called. We can get up steam on the locomotive, and start a train at an earlier hour, easy enough—but can we start or stop nature's courses in our body—so fearfully and wonderfully made, per order, or abuse its functions with equal impunity? Can the promoters of this "world war innovation answer us on this score?

JOHN TROLAND.

MELLON, THE QUIET BOY

Andrew W. Mellon was the son of a rich man; he inherited wealth, and had a good education, but always he has been the quiet, bashful, modest self-effacing person.

He attended the Pittsburgh public schools and Western University of Pennsylvania, working in his father's bank in vacation time "because it just seemed to be the thing to do at the time," he said in his reserved manner.

Graduated from college, when 15, he asked his father for a loan, that he might go into business. "You haven't any security to offer; you're a bad risk," his father said as he charged a stiff rate, just to teach him about interest. Fifteen months in a small town, working 14 hours a day as boss, bookkeeper, clerk and helper, he built a real estate, lumber and building supplies business, then sold it for $16,000 profit.

Back in his father's bank, he had to dig out his knowledge alone. Within a year he became a partner when his father retired, and when 25 was appointed manager. It was a one-man, private bank, and he had no directory to help him decide questions. In 25 years he made it the Mellon National Bank, one of the largest in the country, then built up three other financial institutions.

As a banker he was a retiring, diffident young man, and visualized possibilities of plans brought to him on paper. Carnegie, Frick and others went to him. He made the carborundum and aluminum industries big, built up the coal, coke and steel business, founded Donora, Pa., challenged the United States Steel Company and successfully defied the Standard Oil Company.

Director in four banks and 70 other corporations, he was practically unknown outside of Pittsburgh or New York when Senator Knox "pushed him" into President Harding's cabinet as Secretary of the Treasury—and he gave up a yearly income of hundreds of thousands of dollars to accept.

Today, at 70, he also is the second richest man in the world, and is interested in many benevolent and educational institutions, but all had been done very modestly, calmly and quietly.

Tomorrow—Venizelos, Victim of Ingratitude.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Harry A. Garfield, who has been summoned to testify in the Muscle Shoals hearings before the senate committee at Washington today, has been president of Williams College since 1908. He is the son of James A. Garfield, twentieth President of the United States. Like his father, he was graduated from Williams College. Having decided upon a life of scholarly and educational pursuits, he found a chance to teach history after leaving college. But law and its practice soon claimed him, and he began to rise at the Cleveland (O.,) bar, at the same time teaching in Western Reserve University. In the course of time education triumphed over law, and he accepted the chair of politics at Princeton University, where he remained five years, until called to the presidency of Williams College. During the war Dr. Garfield served as United States Fuel Administrator. He also headed a commission working under Food Administrator Hoover, which was to determine the price to be paid for the wheat crop of 1917.

CHILD TRAINING

SPOILING THE CHILD

By Elsie F. Kartack

One often hears a mother say, "Let the children play now because they will have to work hard enough when they grow up." Does she stop to think that a childhood spent in play is inadequate preparation for the work to be done in manhood or womanhood? To be sure childhood is the time for play and we should be trained to assume small responsibilities, gradually increasing them until he is ready to go out into the world fully prepared to take his share.

Mothers think that they are helping their children by waiting upon them, but they are in truth harming them. I have in mind a young girl whose mother was so devoted to her that she never allowed her to do anything for herself. The mother assumed the working out of each of her problems. When she finally left home to go away to school, she was helpless indeed. She was tardy at classes, lessons were improperly prepared, she lost her books and purse, and, in general, was a sad trial to her teachers and others with whom she came in contact. Finally, her training completed, or supposedly completed, she secured a position as teacher in her home town. On the opening day of school she overslept. Her mother did not awaken her, and she entered upon her duties an hour late thus making a poor impression for herself at the very beginning of her work. Then, unaccustomed to seeing things to be done unless pointed out to her, she failed to note many matters needing her attention during the first days. The principal did not find her in her room one morning, but after a search he found her in the school yard, playing with the seventh grade children. And that was where she belonged; she could assume about as much responsibility as a seventh-grader.

A child's training with regard to responsibilities should begin in babyhood. As soon as he can walk across the floor and play with a ball he should be taught to put that ball in its place before he goes to bed. As his playthings become more numerous he should, gradually, learn to take care of each in the same way.

As he grows older he should be taught that each one in the family circle has his work to do. Father earns the money for food; Mother cooks it; Brother and Sister run errands and wash the dishes. And if the mother constructively instructs, corrects and praises, he, too, will soon look for opportunities to prove himself an active member of the family circle.

Stories That Recall Others

The Strategy of Youth.

Mrs. A. was very anxious that her young son should come to the table with his face and hands clean. They were just ready to sit down at the noon meal when his mother looked up and exclaimed:

"Why, Harry, your face and hands are not clean!"

"Well, you just wait," he sheepishly replied, "I ain't wiped them yet."

Erratic Judgment.

E. was not experienced in the line of buying green vegetables at the grocery. One day she went to a store with the intention of getting several heads of lettuce, which were marked at a sale price.

At sight of the lettuce she thought she was certainly getting a bargain. After selecting several choice heads, she carried them to the clerk. When he attempted to weigh the heads E. interfered.

"Oh," she said, "I thought they were six cents a head."

"I beg your pardon, miss," answered the clerk, keeping back his laugh, "this is cabbage."

"Well, of all things! I didn't know the difference," and she disgustedly exchanged the cabbage for the desired vegetable.

I Still Look 20

after 32 years as a star
By Edna Wallace Hopper

Some of you remember me as a famous stage beauty over 30 years ago. Perhaps in "The Girl I Left Behind Me," in "La Belle Helene," in "Wang," or "Florodora."

Many of you see me now, playing young girl's parts still, looking like a girl in her 'teens.

Thousand of women have asked me the secrets of this perennial youth. I have supplied them to many, and they, like I, have kept their girlish charms.

Now for all women

Now I am persuaded that I owe this information to all womankind. I have obtained by world-wide search the best beauty helps in existence. I know they could bring to millions what they brought to me.

So I have arranged to supply these helps to all who want them—as a duty to my sex. I have had them prepared with the utmost skill, without regard to cost. And they are sold at modest prices, with small regard to profit.

Thus I hope to bring to girls and matrons everywhere the benefits I got. And no woman could ask for more.

My beautiful mother

My mother died a girlish beauty at the age of 57. From my earliest years she taught me her secrets. Then together we traveled the beauty-loving world in search of better methods.

We consulted able scientists, beauty specialists and famous beauties everywhere. The search cost us a fortune. But it brought to me and mine, and friends of mine, decades of added youth.

Now those helps are yours if you desire—the best that science knows. And I hope that my results will lead you to employ them.

WHITE YOUTH CLAY

I owe my debutante complexion largely to a superclay. Not like the crude and muddy clays so many use today, but a clean, refined clay which dries white. It is based on 30 years of scientific study by the ablest of clay experts.

One who applies it feels the impurities fairly drawn from the skin. All that clogs the skin comes out—the causes of blackheads and blemishes. The blood is brought to the surface. Large pores, lines and wrinkles yield.

Wash it off when it dries, then behold a new complexion, soft and rosy, clear and firm. The results will amaze and delight you. Many women in those 20 minutes seem to drop ten years.

Clay is a beauty essential No woman looks her best without it. none keeps her youthful bloom. Women who use clay today stand out in any crowd.

Don't use crude and muddy clays, for they will disappoint. Try this supreme creation—the last word in facial clays. It will be a revelation.

Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay comes in tubes, at 50c and $1.

FACIAL YOUTH

This is a liquid cleansing cream which I learned about in France. It contains no animal, no vegetable oil, so it cannot assimilate with the skin. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. All the grime, all that clogs the skin goes with it. I use it night and morning, and whenever else my face needs cleaning.

Compare it with any cleansing cream or any cleansing method. You will be surprised at the extra dirt my Facial Youth removes. And a clean skin is essential to beauty.

The greatest beauty experts in the world now advise this formula for cleansing. But they charge a very high price. Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth sells for 75c per bottle.

YOUTH CREAM

This is my cold cream which I apply at night. Also in daytime as a powder base. Also after every application of my Youth Clay or Facial Youth.

Youth Cream contains both lemon and strawberry. It is the only cream, I believe, which combines these fruit effects.

It softens, whitens, feeds and firms the skin. After its use I awake in the morning blooming like a girl in her 'teens.

In all my many years of searching, I have never found a cold cream to compare with this. Nor has any woman whom I know. Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream costs 60c per jar.

It comes in two types—the Cold Cream type and the Vanishing type. Be sure to get the type you want. Both have the same essentials constituents. Neither grows hair on the face.

HAIR YOUTH

My hair is my greatest glory. It is thick, silky, lustrous and grows finer every year. Before I bobbed it, it fell below my knees.

I have never had falling hair or dandruff, and never a touch of gray. Nor has any friend who uses my formula. Nor had mother, who found this formula in France. She died at 67 with hair like mine today.

This is due to my Hair Youth. I apply it daily with an eye-dropper—just enough to dampen the scalp. This method does not muss the hair.

Hair Youth daily combats th hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair's growth. It stimulates and fertilizes the hair roots, from which come hair health and hair color.

Look at my luxuriant hair. Then use what I used to get it. Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth costs 50c and $1, with an eye dropper.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Beauty Helps are now sold everywhere. But I will gladly send you a test of one, and with it my Beauty Book. Check in this coupon the one you want and send it in today.

SECOND ANNUAL BANQUET BY PRINTERS AND ENGRAVERS

Printers and engravers of the Norwich branch of the United States Finishing Co. held their second annual banquet Saturday evening at the Wauregan house, with a notably enjoyable evening for the thirty who gathered around the tables where the following menu was served:

Grapefruit Cocktail.
Celery. Olives. Gherkins.
Cream of Tomato Soup au Croutons.
Roast Maryland Turkey—Stuffed.
Giblet Gravy. Cranberry Sauce.
Potatoes Mashed. Boiled Onions.
Mashed Turnip.
Salad—A la Bon Bon.
French Bread.
Harlequin Ice Cream.
Assorted Cakes.
Cigars.
Demi Tasse.

The All Stars orchestra furnished a fine musical program and George A. Turner as song leader and toastmaster filled these positions with great acceptance. The cordial co-operative spirit existing between the management and the working force was emphasized in the remarks of the speakers, who included General Manager John F. Rogers, Vice President John G. Bausher, who represented President H. M. Thompson, who was unable to be present, and Samuel R. Smiley, foreman of the printers. The gathering passed a vote of appreciation to the management of the company for its attitude towards the printers and engravers.

Entertainment for the evening was very acceptably furnished by Walter H. McNeely in baritone solos, Mrs. Maud Hardwick of Boston in clever character recitations and fine soprano solos, and by Prof. William Banfield in mystifying feats of magic.

The success of the evening was due to the work of the arrangement committee consisting of John W. Wainwright, chairman; George A. Turner, wright, chairman; George F. Kelly, William H. Disco, Clarence A. Dudek.

WILLIMANTIC CYCLE OFFICER INJURED IN COLLISION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 27.—Motorcycle Officer Grant Bombria of the local police department was severely injured about 7 o'clock this evening in a collision with an automobile, owned and driven by Nelson A. Daniels, of this city. Mr. Daniels in his Buick sedan was traveling along West Main street in an easterly direction, while Officer Pombria, on his motorcycle, was headed west on the main thoroughfare, at the junction of Mansfield avenue and Main street. The South Coventry trolley car due here shortly after 7 o'clock came to a stop and Mr. Daniels swung from behind the trolley to the left of the road in order to turn up Mansfield avenue where Officer Bombria continued on his right. The machines crashed almost head-on. The officer was thrown from the motorcycle to the road and he was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital in a commandeered automobile by Lieut. Frank McLean who was riding on the trolley at the time. The officer is suffering from a broken bone in the left hand, sprained ankle, and a severe cut over the left eye. Both machines were damaged to some extent. Officer Bombria was later taken to his home on Lower Main street.

WILL PAINT CROSSWALKS IN BUSINESS SECTION

All crosswalks in the business section of the city are to be painted shortly by the street department, according to an announcement made by Acting Street Commissioner John C. Donovan. The repair work on Geer avenue is well under way, a ledge having been removed there by the street department men. A wall is under construction there and a house is being raised to allow for the raising of the street grade.

Holes in Thamesville, Greeneville, Laurel Hill, Shetucket street and Main street are being filled up as rapidly as possible. Extensive repairs have been made on Boswell avenue, Broad street and several other streets. Union street is being scarified and top-dressed and the same treatment will be given Franklin street to Pratt street. All the cross streets in Greeneville and Preston are to be put in proper condition as soon as possible. The walls erected at the approach to Laurel Hill bridge are being completed.

OFFICER FENTON RESCUES MAN FROM THE RIVER

Nicholas Halloran, a transient, was found struggling in the Thames river near Wilcox's fish boat which is tied up at the dock near the New Haven freight house, Sunday night, about 9.30 o'clock by Officer Henry Fenton. The man was pulled ashore and taken to police headquarters. He was intoxicated and had evidently fallen into the river from the dock.

The effects of the liquor he drank were so pronounced that Dr. W. T. Driscoll was summoned to attend him. Halloran was booked on a charge of intoxication and will be presented in the city court this (Monday) morning.

Celebrated Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Raymond of 77 Fourth street, celebrated their 10th wedding anniversary Friday evening by giving a family party. During the evening a most pleasing dinner was served, the menu consisting of escalloped potatoes, shrimp salad, potato salad, cake, coffee and ice cream.

Gave Baked Bean Supper

A baked bean supper was given Saturday evening in the social room of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church by the C. L. class of the Sunday school. The patronage was unusually large and a good sum was realized for the class treasury.

PARK CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

PARK CHURCH OBSERVES 50 YEARS OF SERVICE TO COMMUNITY

REV. S. H. HOWE, D. D.

Special services arranged for the morning and evening at Park Congregational church on Sunday, which were attended by good sized congregations, impressively celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the church as a religious force in the community.

The sermon at the morning service was by the pastor Rev. Dr. S. H. Howe, who spoke from the text Ephesians 5:32, I speak concerning the church, addressing his congregation in eloquent words that had their appreciative attention. The church, he said, is a company of Christian people who are seeking spiritual orientation, who desire alliances with God It was born at the cross of a divine sacrifice and is here to create a new type of life. It is selective, a people who want to live at their topmost bent, a company of the ethical elite. The churchman's vision is binocular, looking at two worlds at the same time and deriving inspiration from both.

The church is the most powerful agency in the world's thought and action and the only organized institution that is combatting at once the whole mass and group of the world's evils. The church is universal. It struck the universal note at the very beginning and has been doing it ever since and never with more authority than today. It was born with the promise of a great future and has a great future. The church cannot fail because Christ cannot fail. We do not need to ask what can be done to save the church. It is planted upon the rock and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

Referring to Park church, he said that its history had been fifty years of not wholly unproductive work in the city. It had included in its membership noble men and women who have represented the highest types of our community and no other church has produced a fine grade of citizenship. We believe, he said, a great future awaits it. Reminiscences are well but let us face the opportunities and the chance of writing even a better record fifty years hence in order that the then existing constituency may then recall us with gratitude for the part we have played.

Rev. Dr. Benjamin W. Bacon of Yale college, son of the late Rev. Leonard Woolsey Bacon, the second pastor of the church, occupied a seat upon the pulpit with Dr. Howe, reading a scripture lesson and offering prayer. Following the sermon he spoke briefly, supplementing the words of Dr. Howe upon the potent force which the church has been and is in the world.

The music for the service was by the church quartette, giving a fine rendering of the anthem, Te Deum in B flat minor (Foote), and for the offertory singing the anthem, Sleepers Wake, A Voice is Calling (Mendelssohn) from the Oratio of St. Paul, which was the same anthem sung at the offertory at the dedication of the church fifty years ago.

Evening Service

The church was well filled for the evening service which opened at 8 o'clock standard time with an organ prelude, Cristo Trionfante, by Yon, played by the organist, Miss Annie L. Taft. The choir and congregation joined in the singing of the Doxology which was followed by the Lord's Prayer, Rev. Samuel H. Howe, D. D., the pastor, leading. After the singing of the hymn Children of the Heavenly King, the first Bible reading was read by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church. Rev. Mr. Abbott read as the first lesson St. Mathew, 5. The choir, assisted by the quartette of the United Congregational church, sang as the anthem The Recessional, Kipling, set to music by H. Alexander Mathews.

Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church read as the second Bible lesson, St. Mark 16, beginning with the 13th verse. Rev. Gordon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, Norwich Town, offered prayer after which the choir and congregation joined in the singing of the hymn, Stand Up, Stand Up, for Jesus.

Anniversary Sermon

The sermon was delivered by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London, who preached on the topic, Salt of the Earth. Rev. Mr. Danforth took his text from the sermon on the mount, Matthew 5:13: "Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted?" In part he said:

"How Connecticut first gained the flavor of nutmeg I do not know, but we surely stand for it now. And we like it. This is no insipid state. Its people have taste in more ways than one. The life lived in the land of steady habits is interesting. Our characters and characteristics go together. Both are interesting and add to the relish of life in general, wherever the people of Connecticut go or stay.

One thing we sometimes forget. You cannot have nutmeg without mace. In the complete spice box one is just as necessary as the other. But where they grow they are parts of the same fruit. The mace is the husk which grows around the nutmeg, just as a husk grows around an ear of corn or a hickory nut. No mace no nutmeg.

There is a certain environment which the spirit of Connecticut must have. The language is just as our fathers found it. The air and the sea are still with us. It is for us to put forth exertion as they did, and gain from land and ocean the power of body and brain they got. The price of power has not risen. We can pay it as well as they did. And we do. We know more than they did. All that we need is to care more about it. We believe as many religious truths as they did; only we sometimes do not turn as deep a furrow in the fields of the soul. But we can if we will. We have both the nutmeg and the mace.

For fifty years this church has given its fine flavor to all around. But it has done more than that. It is the salt of the earth. That is a bigger thing than the nutmeg and mace of Connecticut, fine though those are. The world has wide horizons, and salt is more needed than spice.

The fingers of the servants of God fly fast. Just as the rivers of New England are as fair as the rivers of any other region, and as more work, so the churches of our loved region are just as appealing to the eye of God and man as those elsewhere and they work harder than most. Hence the result. Hence too the praise against which you must steel your hearts.

The hour of vision is also the hour of humility. When we see our task we see its size. We feel solitary swimmers in the ocean, lost in the sea of humanity. Who wants to be a clear nutmeg? Who would devour salt by the spoonful? A little nutmeg flavors the whole cake. A little salt is all you need to bring out the full taste of your dinner. We do not want to make all humanity like Lots wife, a pillar of salt. That would be a sad result. The world has a deal of goodness in it. It needs to have it brought out. And ye are the salt of the earth that can do it.

Blest Be the Tie That Binds, was the closing hymn, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. E. G. Crowdis. The organ postlude was Festival March in D., by Faulkes.

This (Monday) evening a 50th anniversary reception will be held in the Parish House at 8 o'clock to which an invitation has been extended to all members of the church and congregation. An historical paper will be read by Miss Amy L. Cogswell.

MOTORCYCLE RIDER WAS INSTANTLY KILLED

Henry Hoethler, 19, of South Coventry, one of four men on motorcycles who were riding towards Willimantic Saturday night, was instantly killed about midnight near the Frink farm in Franklin on the Willimantic road when his machine hit the rear wheel of a truck and he was thrown off. He landed under a fence, receiving a fractured skull, broken neck, fractured left arm and left leg and a broken rib on the left side of his body.

The truck which belonged to the John H. Ford company of this city was being driven here by Peter Moran who had his young son with him. In the belief that Hoethler might be alive, passing automobilists rushed him to the Backus hospital but he was dead when he reached there. Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve, medical examiner, pronounced the man's death instantaneous.

Hoethler had been attending the carnival on the East Side here and started for Willimantic with Horace Geer of Mansfield, Arthur Baldwin of Willimantic, and Walter Greiner of Willimantic, each on a motorcycle, riding in the order named, with Hoethler next to last in the string.

According to the statement made to Medical Examiner Gildersleeve by Moran, the driver of the truck he could see Hoethler's machine wobbling in the road as it approached him. It went by the front end of the truck all right but suddenly shot into the rear part of the left rear wheel. The motorcycle rider was thrown off with much force as was indicated by the way his leather jacket was ripped and torn.

After he had been taken to the hospital word was telephoned to The Hurteau-Bosse Corporation, Willimantic undertakers, who removed the body to their rooms. State Policeman Fred Caron from the barracks at Groton made an investigation of the accident.

Mr. Hoethler is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sexter Hoethler of South Coventry, three brothers, George of Willimantic, Fred of South Coventry, William of Willimantic and a sister, Rose of South Coventry.

SPRING RALLY OF NORWICH C. E. UNION

There was a large attendance at the spring rally of the Norwich Christian Endeavor Union held Saturday afternoon and evening at the First Baptist church, members of the union attending from several churches in New London county.

President Orrin Maples opened the meeting after which there was a devotional service led by Rev. W. B. Oakley. The address of welcome was given by Miss Gladys Tortoiseshell, president of the First Baptist C. E. society and the response for the union was made by Ralph Marsh, vice president of the Norwich C. E. union.

A talk on the state convention was given by Percy Allan, president of the New London C. E. union, who presented a program and plans of the 30th Connecticut C. E. convention to be held in Hartford, May 16, 17 and 18th. Each society sending five registrations, he said, will be rated a banner society.

At 5.30 o'clock group conferences were held, Miss Edith A. Ellis of the Central Baptist church speaking on the Society Committee; Rev. Roderick McLeod of Hanover for the lookout committee; Mrs. Harry Eastland of Trinity M. E. church for the prayer meeting committee; Rev. Edward C. Dunbar for the quiet hour.

At 4.30 o'clock an address, The Value of the Young People's Society to the Church, was delivered by Rev. Wilson R. Stewart, Congregational pastor-at-large, for the state. Rev. Mr. Stewart in part said that the future stability of the church depends upon its ability to meet the needs of the community. Formerly there was no place in the life of the church for the young people but the Christian Endeavor society has brought the young people into activities of the church. This society affords opportunity for young people to find themselves, find their possibilities, and many business men owe much of the training and self confidence to the training received in C. E. meetings.

J. Pierpont Morgan says that the biggest asset in the financial and commercial world is character. The C. E. societies hold up before its members, Christ's ideal and standard of character. As members of a C. E. society we are responsible for the value of our society to the church and world. Many small run-down churches are held together and revived by a live C. E. society.

As humanity moves along lines of the least resistance, too many of us are sitting down at ease, watching others do the work all should do. Our task is to bring all men into a living relation with God and His incarnate Son. If young people would adopt the slogan, America for Christ, set a date and set to work to accomplish it, we should see the world really Christian.

The afternoon session closed with benediction by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey of the Congregational church, Norwich Town.

At 6.30 o'clock a social hour was held, in charge of Miss Ellis of the Central Baptist church and at 6.45 o'clock a delightful supper was served by members of the C. E. society of the First Baptist church, the committee composed of the following members, the Misses Lillian Sanderers, chairman, Edna Jones, Justine Briggs and George Hollingsworth and Lawrence Browning. The menu was as follows:

Cold Boiled Ham
Potato Salad
Rolls Pickles
Coffee
Cake Ice Cream

The evening service opened at 7 o'clock with a song service in charge of Mrs. Walter M. Cowan, followed by the address of the evening by Professor Woodman Bradbury, D. D., of Newton Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass., whose subject, Shall We Follow the Gold Rule? In part Prof. Bradbury spoke as follows: What is the Golden Rule? Will it work? We cannot follow the golden rule unless we know what it is, and we won't want to follow it unless we knew it will work. In recent tests in our college only 68 per cent. knew what the Golden Rule was. "Don't do to anybody else what you don't want him to do to you" — Confucius said it just about that way. The world would be a far better place if everybody lived up to that rule.

If this rule was lived up to there would be no profiteering, Wall street would go out of existence over night if Confucius' rule was lived up to. Is this kind of living, that of the golden rule. It is not the rule of Jesus, for that rule is something better than that. Jesus said: "Find out the ideal and do it constantly, consistently, persistently." Christ said you read all your Old Testament, read what the prophets said of the good time coming. Christ spoke of the golden rule when he said, "Who will compel you to go one mile, go with him two."

Second, will it work ?? Will it work between individuals, classes, races and nations? Incidents related in your Bible show that it can and does work if applied correctly. Christ told us to love, he did not say to like. In the national question we see the application of the golden rule in America's attitude toward China in the Boxer uprising. Confucius said: "When small pay-back's good be even man's good. Then shall peace like a lane of willow light lay athwart the land forever."

The meeting came to a close with the benediction by Prof. Bradbury, after an announcement by President Maples, that next Wednesday evening at the Y. M. C. A., an evening of music and entertainment had been arranged for the C. E. societies of the union, and their friends.

FINAL LANMAN LETTER— GLIMPSES OF LIFE IN 1861

Following is the concluding letter in the series written by Peter Lanman, father of Admiral Joseph Lanman of Norwich, and other members of the family, and reprinted by The Bulletin during several weeks. These letters have proved of much interest, not only to the prominent Lanman family and its connections in Norwich, and elsewhere, but to the general public, showing, as they do, conditions in social, political and civic life in the period from about 1854 to 1861.

New York, Saturday, Nov. 23, 1861.

My dear Brother: It has been some time since I have written you, tho dear Jonathan has kept you advised of my painful & unpleasant month at the Revere House, Boston. I have now been home nearly two weeks and am probably as well as could be expected of a man of my age who has seen so much service. But I will go at once to business. You will see by the enclosed account current that there is now in my hands due you $138.44 after remitting to Cornelia $100 per month for three months and sending her this last month $26 which she wanted to pay the freight on the Looking Glasses & other traps left behind and not previously sent. She says she will return it in Jan'y but I have written her that she need not do it as I have charged the amount in your account. As Avery Smith wished to pay your note I invested the amount of $1600 in 2 certificates of U. S. 7 1-10 per Stock in Cornelia's name and sent her the certificates on the 21, registering the letter. I sent her by Express for Bell a very pretty double cased Watch and chatelaine for Bell which cost $66.75 & quite as pretty as either of my daughters have, I also added as a present from me a pretty pin set with the hair of her dear Grandparents, to be handed to her with the Watch. I had a letter from her dated the 19th in which she says all are well, also a letter from Sister Abby at Hartford dated the 22 also one from Brother Peter yesterday—all are well. Mr. Stone's Son is now better of Typhus Fever but not able to be moved, his Sisters and Mother have been staying with him at the colledge where he is.

Abby says she thinks she will go to Brother Peters, tho' she says she has no heart for thanksgiving. I think she will feele more contented & independent at Brothers than any where else certainly she can do as much good as anywhere. Our family are pretty well, my health is I suppose better, but I suppose it will take time to bring my general health up to ever. I am not strong and am tremblingly nervous with much vertigo in the head so that I can sometimes hardly stand. Dear Jonathan we hope is now quite restored. I did not see much of Cousin Edward when in Boston, his Son Edward died when we were there.

Whilst in Boston we saw many Notables at the house amongst whom Gen'l Totten, Gen'l Buttler, Col. Henry C. Demming, Capt. Calhoon on his return from the Coast of Africa, the purser had charged him as being a Scorpion but he was only not a Abolitionist but a true Union man, many southern officers I hope are. He wished to be remembered to you and said he had sailed with you. Your ship San Jacinto, has made herself famous by Capturing the Rebbell commissions in the British Mail Packet Steamer Trent just out of Bermuda in the bahama Channel. Captain Wilks will be fully sustained by the Administration and unanimously by the people. Your nephew Fred was under fire at Beaufort & after wards went up to the Town which was deserted. I believe our People intend to hold it until they have reinforcements. Comm. Stringham enquired about you a few days since he had some words with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Mr. Fox who it is said feels his oats, and as the length of that kid Ass. Wells arm & was taken at the commodore's word when he told the Secretary that if they were not satisfied with his management as commander of the squadron they could get someone else & he was taken at his word, retired. Paulding has now the Yard at Brooklyn. Poor chanalus Temper has again led him his Ship, and command, tho' I believe the case is not yet terminated, his pretty little Wife has on her arrival here a compleat school.

I wonder I have been able to write you such a long letter. Mary & her intended seeme very happy, alas poor child she does not yet know life, but so it is.

With much love I am affly
D. T. LANMAN.

SUPREME COURT HERE TO OPEN AT 9, S. T.

George E. Parsons, clerk of the superior court for New London, county, has been notified by the chief justice of the superior court that the supreme court will convene at the court house in this city, Tuesday morning. The court will open at 9 a. m., standard time.

Norwich Girls Did Hike

A party comprising four local young women, the Misses Mariam Shapiro, Dora Bendett, Libby Kasseman and Anna Tiger hiked to Gardner Lake Sunday, enjoyed boating on the lake during the day and made the return trip later in the afternoon.

The party left this city at 9 o'clock Sunday morning and reached the lake in three hours, arriving home shortly after 6.30 in the evening. The girls expect to enjoy several other hikes during the coming months.

Was in Dean Robinson's Office

In referring to the death a week ago at Hamden of superior court judge, James Henry Webb, the papers are recalling the fact that after his graduation from Yale law school and his admission to the bar he entered the law office of the late William C. Robinson, who was connected for so many years with Yale law school, before becoming head of the Catholic University, Washington.

Dean Robinson was a native of Norwich, born in the Robinson homestead on Sachem street.

For D. of V. Convention

In order to attend the annual state convention of the Daughters of Veterans in Bridgeport Tuesday and Wednesday, Mrs. Genie Evans, president of Clara Barton tent, Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue, Mrs. D. Louise Atterbury, past state president, are to leave here today (Monday). Others of Clara Barton Tent who will leave Tuesday for the convention are Mrs. Alice Brinkman, Mrs. Cora Botham, Mrs. Maud Moody, Mrs. Emma Tyler, Mrs. Lillian E. Brewster and Miss Lillian J. Brewster.

On Banquet Committee

Through an oversight the name of Mrs. William Fitch was omitted from the list of general committee members for the Father and Son banquet of the Y. M. C. A. held Friday evening at the Community House. Mrs. Fitch has served on that committee for the past two years.

CLEAN-UP SUGGESTIONS FROM STATE HEALTH DEPT.

A placard issued by the state department of health has been issued. A suggestion of the card is "Make sunlight, soap and hot water your first assistants—no germs or filth can exist when they get busy." Furthermore, a "good brush broom, a mighty arm, work wonders as house cleaners," the placard says.

The bulletin has the following recommendations:

Attic and cellar have been storing useless goods—let the rummage sale or junk-man make them useful.

Get ahead of the fly season by screening windows and doors and by having a tight cover for your garbage can.

Keep out your rat boarders by stopping their holes with tin or concrete.

A pot of white paint brightens many a dull spot. It should be used before the "spring fever" season opens.

Give your neighbor a pleasant outlook—Clean up your yard.

Reduce disease germs by an anti-spitting campaign.

Provide your street with waste receptacles and your papers with a secure resting place.

Burn up the rubbish and save the empty lot from disfrace.

Provide for adequate garbage collection.

Let your streams run clean without carrying away your waste contributions.

HAVERS OVERCAME 3-HOLE LEAD AND BEAT OUT SARAZEN IN LAST HALF

New York, April 27—Shooting almost par golf over the difficult Westchester-Biltmore course, still soft from recent spring rains, Arthur Havers, British open golf champion, defeated Gene Sarazen, American professional champion, 5 up and 4 to play in an exhibition 72 hole match, the final 36 holes of which were played today. The first 36 holes, played yesterday in Philadelphia, gave the American champion a lead of three holes over his British opponent, but the Englishman, displaying brilliant direction and distance, especially in his approach shots, squared the match on the sixth green of the morning round today and won it on the 32nd green of the afternoon round.

Haver's victory today gives him an even break with Sarazen in the two exhibitions they have played in this country, Sarazen defeating Havers in a Pacific coast match a short time ago by the same score. After today's match arrangements were made for a third to be played in England in June when the American champion crosses to compete in the British open.

Havers' play today was a decided contrast to the brand of golf displayed by the American titleholder. Havers was on top of the pin in almost every instance, driving straight down the fairway and generally landing on the green on his approach. On the other hand Sarazen was erratic from the start. His drives were short, his approaches either right or left of the pin and on the greens his putts often went past the hole.

Havers's card contained four birdies in the morning round and one in his afternoon round in addition to numerous pars. Sarazen had two birdies but more frequently was a stroke over par.

Coming from behind Havers squared the match on the sixth green of the morning round by shooting a brilliant birdie four on a 462 yard hole which Sarazen shot in a par five. The Britisher went into the lead on the next hole by shooting par while Sarazen was one over. The American champion squared the match again on the eighth green and then halved the ninth with the match all square.

Havers took the lead on the tenth which he shot in par three while Sarazen was forced to chip to the green from a sand trap for a four. Havers won the next two holes, halved the third, lost the fourth, halved the fifth and sixth and by taking the next two completed the morning round even up. In this round Havers shot a par 75 while Sarazen's card read 82.

In the afternoon round they both shot a 40 for the first nine but by winning the tenth, halving the eleventh, winning the twelfth and halving the fourteenth after losing the thirteenth, Havers placed victory beyond the reach of Sarazen. A gallery of 1,500 spectators followed the golfers over the soft course.

The record for the morning round was:

Sarazen, out—4 5 5 6 4 5 4 5 5—43
Sarazen, in—4 5 5 6 4 2 5 5 5—40—83.
Havers, out—5 4 5 5 4 4 5 6 5—39
Havers, in—5 4 4 5 5 5 4 4 5—36—75.

The afternoon score was:

Sarazen, out—4 4 5 5 4 4 4 5 5—40
Sarazen, in—4 5 4 5 4 5—32—82.
Havers, out—5 4 5 5 4 3 5 6—40
Havers, in—5 4 4 5 5—31—61.

SENATORS TAKE LOOSELY PLAYED GAME FROM BOSTON

Washington, Apr. 27.—Washington emerged victorious in the late innings of a loosely played game today, winning 9 to 8. Boston completed a triple play in the first inning. J. Harris batted Rice to Lebold, Lebold to Ruel and S. Harris, on first and second, respectively, had run with the hit. Harris tore to Lee caught Leibold at second, and the relay retired S. Harris at first. Score:

DUGAS IS READY TO TAKE ON BARBER

Chip Dugas of Taftville, winner of the Eastern Connecticut bowling tournament, is ready to take on Frank Barber of Danielson in an individual match. Barber challenged Dugas immediately after the Taftville boy had won the title for $500 a side. Whether the title will be the side bet in the coming match is not known as no terms have yet been agreed upon. The two will get together some day this week and fix up the terms of the match.

ABOUT 30 TO COMPETE IN ROAD RACE TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, April 27.—The Junior road race that will take place Monday evening from the Y. M. C. A on Church street is looked forward to by a representative De Mars of Eastern Connecticut as an event that is just as important as the Boston road race. All of course this event is held in the estimation of the boys of Eastern Connecticut as being a most important road race and not the Amateur Athletic Union. This road race is not so important that it will mean that the winner will be sent to France with the Olympic team accompanying this entry. It is open to 28 youthful [illegible] stars of Frank Zunas or whatever you would like to call them have entered in the meet. Entries have been received from Colchester, Norwich and several other towns and hamlets in this section of the state. There are two classes, the lightweight class for boys that weigh under 118 pounds and the heavyweight class for boys that weigh over 135 pounds. The two classes are distinct groups and each class will have its own prizes to be awarded to the winners. The race, however will be run simultaneously with the second similar exhibition of the season. He also pilfered second base in the ninth inning. Score:

GIANTS COME FROM BEHIND TO BEAT DODGERS

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 27—New York overcame a three run lead gained by Brooklyn on two successive homers by Jacques Fournier with men on bases at Ebbets field today and scored their third victory of the series, 8 to 6. The Dodgers knocked Bentley out of the box in the third inning. The Giants retaliated by driving Dickerman off the mound in the fourth and pounded Ruether hard. Over thirty thousand fans saw the contest. Score:

Carpentier-Townley Bout Postponed

Vienna, Apr. 27.—The fight between Georges Carpentier and Arthur Townley, the English lightweight boxer, which was to have taken place today, has been postponed until Sunday afternoon, May 4. Uncertain weather conditions, following a heavy rainfall this morning which drenched the open air arena, were given as the cause for the postponement of the bout, although the sun was shining brightly at 4 o'clock this afternoon, the hour when the men were due to enter the ring.

American Given Banquet

London, Apr. 27.—The American Olympic rugby team were guests tonight at a dinner given by the British Olympic association. Lord Decies, in toasting the visitors, said they had shown a wonderful broad-minded spirit in coming so far to support France in her efforts to make the Olympic games a success.

How It's Done in the Majors

By Frank Frisch

Which infield position do the majority of baseball men consider the most difficult to play?

Third base is considered the most difficult position to play due to the fact that there are so many hard hit balls in that direction especially at critical times.

The most important play of the third baseman is to be able to field bunts perfectly. To do so, he must come in on the run and pick up the ball while in motion and still be able to make a long underhand throw—the most difficult play in baseball.

Third baseman also have to study play and fast runners—men who bunt a great deal and those who very seldom do.

The third baseman plays close to the line near the grass at about three or four feet from his bag until the batter has two strikes. Then, he moves back as very few batters attempt to bunt after two strikes have been called on them.

The ideal third baseman must possess a good pair of hands, a strong throwing arm, and an accurate one. He gets more high foul flies that are hard to judge than any other infielder. You will find that the majority of them are tall men. When there is a fast man on third, the third baseman has to keep him close to the bag so he will not have an opportunity to steal home. Good teams always have their third baseman arrange signs with the catcher.

CHAPMAN TECH EASILY DEFEATS STONINGTON HIGH

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, April 27—The Chapman Tech baseball team opened its home season by easily defeating the Stonington High school team by a 5 to 2 score. Incidentally it was the first victory for the Red and Black at victory in a regular game of the Eastern Connecticut Interscolastic this season out of four starts and the league.

Chapman Tech deserved to win for they took advantage of the mistays of the Brown and White and piled up a three run lead in the third inning that decided the contest right there. Chapman Tech outhit their rival team, 9 hits to 7, and these nine hits, coupled with errors at critical times and base on balls was enough to give the contest to the local nine. Both runs made by Stonington were earned, while the majority of the runs registered by the Chapman Tech nine were not through the clean hitting phase of the contest, but came after one of the Stonington players miscued on a grounder. Many of the hits made by the Red and Black were wasted as shown by the number of men left on the base paths—nine.

The day was anything but ideal for baseball and the fans in the grandstand were continually leaving the contest during the early innings. There was a cold wind coming from the northwest that was not a bit likeable and made things exceedingly uninteresting throughout the entire game. What the day's coldone, the game was turned into a draggy affair. There was little or no pep in the movements of the rival teams which made the contest wane in interest from the second frame.

Cruise for Chapman Tech receiving better support from his team mates than Pupillo, the Stonington hurler was able to get the game under his winning column. Cruise, except for two innings held the situation well under control. Although he had very little on the horsehide, he managed to clip the third strike by several of the Stonington batters. In all he accounted for 14 strikeouts, while the best Pupillo could make take the bench via the strikeout route was only five. It seemed as though both pitchers were fighting to the coolness of luck throughout the entire game, for neither showed the slightest semblance of having a curve in their repertoire. Cruise relied mainly upon the speed he possessed and in the latlooked as though the Stonington batsning killed off at least two more runs, er innings he began to slow up and it men would find him—they did for a single run but but poor base running Pupillo's greatest asset was a slow and fast ball—but then every one of the balls that he threw out the heart of to be in the race for the Eastern Conto scout around for a new hurler and let Pupillo go back to his old station the plate. If the Stonington team is necticut honors, their coach will have at second where he will do more good to the team.

Pupillo led Stonington with the stick getting a double and a single out of three times at the bat. Grimes was the fielding star of the afternoon, making several good stops and a good catch of Ferace's foul fly in the seventh. The right side of the Stonington infield is strong and second base is the only weak point of the inner defense. The score:

The Paris City rugby team, on which are six members of the French Olympic rugby team, defeated the London Team 30 points to 3. The Frenchmen outclassed the Englishmen in every department of the game, including kicking, in which the Frenchmen supposedly were weak.

ACADEMY WINS ONE-SIDED GAME FROM PUTNAM HIGH SCHOOL TEAM

A bad streak of wildness by Cartier in the second inning caused the downfall of the Putnam High team Saturday afternoon at the Academy campus, they winning the game 13 to 5. The Putnam team was able to do little with Segal although they bunched hits in the second and third innings for four runs. Segal was in good form and although the weather was far from ideal for baseball, he pitched a nice game, eleven of the visitors fanning.

The Academy team showed marked improvement over the teams of the past few years which is encouraging to local supporters of the Academy. Coach Brigham worked a new shift in the infield which promises of great things for the Academy. Capt. Phil McNamara who has played third for the past two years, has been shifted to the outfield where he performed brilliantly in Saturday's game. McGowan, who has been playing short, was shifted to third and Busch, who was an outfield candidate early in the year has been put in at short. Busch was the star of the game Saturday, his fielding being exceptionaly good besides he crashed out a double that scored two runs. Burke and Tombari also hit well.

The game was really interesting to watch although it was somewhat one-sided after the second inning. There were many good plays during the game, one being the perfect throw of McNamara from deep right to the plate which cut off a run in the third inning.

The game started well, Segal fanning the first three men to face him. The first three men on the Academy team were easy victims of the infield. In the second inning Arnold, the first man to face Segal hit safely and then Cartier singled. Murphy sacrificed, and Hannifan scored both Arnold and Cartier on a single. This ended the scoring for the inning.

When the Academy came to bat, McNamara the first batter, singled and stole second, Cartier walked Hollander and then hit Hindricks, filling the bases. He passed Tombari forcing in McNamara, Burke fanned and Segal walked, another run being forced. Kilroy fanned and Cartier, who was very wild, hit McGowan and Busch the next two batters, forcing in two more runs. In his second time at bat McNamara hit sharply to Dupre, who fumbled, and another run scored. McNamara being safe. With the bases full Cartier passed Hollander again forcing in the sixth run. Hindricks fanned ending the inning.

Three hits and an error netted Putnam two runs in the third inning. McNamara cutting off a score at the plate by his perfect throw from deep right. This ended Putnam's scoring until the ninth inning when two errors and a hit gave them one run.

The Academy scored twice in the fourth and one in the fifth on hits by Milneki, Tombari and Burke. In the seventh the locals scored four runs when Burke, Busch and McNamara each hit for two bases. The score:

New London, April 27.—Albert W. Tyler, colored, made an assault upon Yee Seen Wah, a laundryman, last January while the latter was in Green street. He was caught and was sent to jail for six months. He remained in custody about five months and then foolishly made his escape, when allowed the liberty of th jail yard. A good many years ago, when the late Frank Hawkins was sheriff of this county, it was a fixed rule at the jail that if any prisoner made his escape he must be recaptured, no matter what the cost or how great the expense of getting him. So when Tyler got away Winder Reed, the jailer, set the traps that he was confident would catch him. He knew Tyler came from the vicinity of Boston and there he sought him. The past week Tyler fell into the trap and was returned to New London. Saturday he was sent back to jail to stay six months in addition to the unexpired time of his previous sentence. There are costs attaching to Tyler's case, because he was not apprehended without the expenditure of some money, and the costs will keep him about up an additional thirty days.

George Maltsch has been operating a motor truck some dozen years but he evidently has not overcome the speed mania for he operated his truck with a load of ladders on Main street Friday at a speed of 35 miles an hour, according to State Policeman Henry. That led to the apprehension of Maltsch by th officer and Saturday he was fined $25.

Grace Prindle, a Main woman who married a sailor here was sent to jail because she could not may a fine of $50 imposed on her Friday for frequenting a house on Truman street that was reputed to be a bad place. She was mad and while she said she was not guilty she blamed for her trouble, Louis Ramistella and a woman he was intimate with and who was fined $100 for keeping the place. She intimated that she knew something she had not told and talked of getting square with somebody. Evidently she had some facts to reveal that Ramistella did not care to have come out, so he hustled about and paid hte fine imposed on Grace, she did not sleep at the jail. Mrs. Prindle says her husband deserted her and that she has not had any assistance from him in more than a year, so circumstances compelled her to consort with the woman who is intimate with Ramistella and where she was found when officers visited the place, after midnight Thursday. The keeper of the house is still in jail, she being without the means of paying her fine. Ramistella is married and has children.

Lawrence W. Eaton, formerly of New London, was arrested, in New York this morning on a warrant issued by the New London police and charging him with forgery. Arrangements are in progress to cause Easton's return to New London for trial. He is accused of having forged a check of the Structure Oil company, a corporation under the laws of Delaware and doing business in New London, in the sum of $165, payable to the French-Lindsey company of Pittsburgh, Pa. The check was drawn on the Old Colony Trust company of Boston, Mass., under date of Dec. 30, 1923, and is alleged to have been negotiated by Easton. The check was represented to be signed by F. L. Drake, treasurer of the Structure Oil company and countersigned by L. Y. Spear. The Structure Oil company is a comparatively new concern in New London and stock in it is owned by New London interests.

August W. Anderson, 50 Lincoln avenue, has complained to the police because of the destruction of shrubbery in the yard of his home by mischievous boys.

A. Staverman, 825 Stamford avenue, Los Angeles, Cal., has communicated with the New London police requesting their aid in locating Staverman's wife. Staverman states that he has not seen his wife nor heard from her since 1918, at which time she was residing in New London. rMs. Staverman was Genevieve Helen Davis. The name of the woman does not appear in the New London city directory, nor is she known to the police.

Herman Hellam was arrested late Saturday afternoon by Sergeant Frank Howard and Patrolman Braxton Hill, charged with breach of the peace. He will be in the police court Monday morning. Hellam is complained against by Marion Lewis, also colored, of 14 Federal street, who declares that Hellam visited her house and after quarreling with her attacked and beat her.

Ocean Beach presented a mid-season appearance today for the first time this year, for many of the places of business there were open for business, the concession enjoying but limited patronage because of the small number of visitors at the shore.

Albert C. Woodruff, 51 Fremont street reported to the police aSturday night that his son's bicycle had been stolen.

Marion De Barberi of Golden street, Mrs. Antone Vesconti and infant daughter of East street, Alfred Kelley, Essex, William Holloway, Washington street, Ole Peterson, School street, Mrs. Laura Watson, Broad street, Mrs. Anthony Rayside Hamilton street, Mrs. Harriet Beckett, North Stonington and Peter iVlia, of Westerly, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

Charles H. Thompson's novel, "The River Road," recently published, is soon to be dramatized for the screen by a film company, by which concern Mr .Thompson is employed in the New York office, has started arrangements for filming the picture. Employes of the scenario branch were in New London Friday and visited places where the scenes of the novel are laid, with a view to obtaining information which will aid them in producing the picture. The pictures will not be taken in New London where most of the scenes of The River Road are laid, but will be taken at the New York studio. Mr. Thompson is a former resident of New London and was at one time editor of The Morning Telegraph, since seased publication.

Harold C. Albin of 147 Winthrop street, went to Danceland at Ocean Beach last night and in an intoxicated condition. Albin became such a nuisance that he was taken into custody by Patrolman Clyde Murphy and is being held at the police station awaiting presentation in the police court oMnday morning.

Morris Greenblatt, proprietor of the Howard Street Coal company, has been ordered by Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin to appear in the police court Monday morning and answer to a charge of giving short weight in the whole sale distribution of coal. Greenblatt was complained against by Louis Gadbois, proprietor of grocery stores on Truman street and Montauk avenue, who alleges that in the recent purchase of coal from the Howard street company bags that were supposed to contain 90 pounds of coal, were short in weight.

An automobil owned and driven by Motorcycle Officers William T. Babcock of 212 Jefferson avenue, who is on his vacation, was in collision with an automobile owned and operate by Mrs. Fay E. Nugent, of Uncasville, Saturday afternoon at the corner of Broad and Williams streets. Both cars were damaged.

John K. Foran, administrator of the estate of Ellen T. Foran, has sold a house and lot on Hill street to Thomas W. and Laure E. Coleman.

Elizabeth A Cronin has sold a building lot on William street to Thomas A. Moran.

Patrolman John Foley, in making his rounds through Masonic street late Saturday night discovered one of the rear windows of the store of James Hislop & Co., open. Night Watchman Samuel Barnes, who has access to the store, was notified and caused the window to be made secure.

Captain of Police Charles A. Finney, who has been confined to his his home on Howard street a fortnight by an attack of bonsilitis, resumed his duties at the police station today.

An automobile owned and driven by Benjamin Tauber, R. F. D., No. 1, of Uncasville, struck and painfully injured Timothy Dwyer, 2 Winthrop street, Saturday. As a result of the accident Tauber has been ordered to appear in the police court Monday morning charged with reckless driving. Tauber was operating his machine southerly on Main street and turned into Douglass street at a rate of speed estimated at between 20 and 25 miles an hour. Dwyer was crossing the intersecting street, did not see the automobile, so was struck and knocked down. Pedestrians went to the assistance of Dwyer and placed him in an automobile, owned by Samuel Shapiro and had him driven to the office of a physician, wher the examinaiton revealed that he had suffered lacerations of the head, face and hands. After the wounds were dressed Dwyer was taken home.

Sarah Davison, 17, of 41 Spring street, was struck and slightly injured on Bank street, near Golden street, Saturday, when she attemptde to cross the street. She failed to notice the approach of an automobile, owned and driven by Robert P. McCarthy, of 33 West 42nd street, New York, and was struck. The girl sustained bruises, but otherwise was unhurt.

New London liquor dealers, at the time prohibition went into effect, are to make an effort to recover money they paid for licenses, when the privilege of selling was taken from them by the Volstead act. They held a meeting this afternoon and with an attorney to represent them in attendance, they proceeded to discuss the matter and to appoint a committee which should interview all who were in the saloon business at the time the bars were put up (put up in more senses than one) to get the funds necessary and to bring about another meeting, when all interested will be on hand to express opinion and decide upon what course to take. It is understood that the opinion is that the state be asked to refund money it collected without right and that the cities of the county shall also be asked to disgorge the money the liquor dealers paid for a privilege they did not have and were forbidden by law to exercise. In New London the license money due is for three months and it was in proportion of about $500 a year for each dealer. Of this amount the state received 35 per cent, for firemen 5 per cent, the county 5 per cent and the city the balance or 65 per cent. In New London it is claimed that some $12,000 was appropriated by the council to refund the money to the liquor dealers, but the payment was not made and the appropriation was used for other purposes. The legislature has voted to recompense the dealers, it is said, but no payment has been made. The county commissioners are declared to have stated the opinion that the money sought should be given to the former dealers, but the commissioners have no money which they were authorized to spend for the purpose.

The claim is made that Norwich treated the ex-saloonmen much better than did New London for there the money is set aside for the payment whenever it is authorized to be made.

The opinion seems to prevail that the dealers must wait the convening of the next general assembly to recover the money claimed from the state and from the county. In the cities the matter rests with the councils and that body can pay whenever they decide to do so.

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Caulkins of Hammond street, Norwich, spent today with Mr. Caulkins' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Caulkins.

Tony Cucolo, 65 Jefferson avenue, Waterbury, employed by the Waterbury Concrete Construction company, was arrested this afternoon by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray, charged with reckless driving. He will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning. Cucolo was operating a Nash touring car through Broad street and at the corner of Connecticut avenue he was observed by Ray traveling at an estimated speed of 40 or 45 miles an hour. Ray put chase to Cucolo and overtook him several blocks from where the speeder was sighted.

Mrs. Catherine Carroll Conner, 79, widow of James J. Conner, died this afternoon at her home, 667 Bank street, after a lingering illness due to infirmities attending age. Mrs. Conner is survived by two sons, George W. Conner and Attorney William T. Conner, of New London, and by two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Carroll of Brookline, Mass., and Miss Katie Conner of New London.

WOMAN VISITOR SANE— GOES TO MONTVILLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, April 27.—Mrs. Nellie Alexander of Providence, was taken into custody this morning by Traffic Officers Frank Linehan and Clyde Murphy as it was believed that the woman was not of sound mind. She was at the corner of State and Main streets where her queer actions attracted the attention of the officers. When questioned her answers were such as to further indicate her being mentally deranged. At the police station Mrs. Alexander declared that her sister, Mrs. Robert French, resided in Montville Mrs. French was communicated with and later visited the police station and took charge of the woman, whom Mrs French was expecting at the Montville residence today. In the meantime City Physician George P. Cheney had examined Mrs. Alexander and had pronounced her sane.

JEWETT CITY

The Jewett City Creamery company celebrated its thirty-sixth anniversary in Odd Fellows' Hall on Friday evening. Creamery patrons, stockholders, officers and friends filled the room and anterooms, for it was an event which has never taken place before in this town, or any nearby town. The programme was unusual in its varied make up. And was very entertaining. E. C. Bliss, the superintendent of the creamery made all the arrangements and presided, his introductions and reminiscences being ver yapt and witty.

He said it was also his thirty-ninth anniversary as a buttermaker, he being the oldest butter maker in the matter of number of years in the business, in the state. W. C. Terry, the president, presided. He stated that his farm was the only on ethat had been in nthe creamery from the start until now. The first president of the creamery.

George A. Ross, with his wife, had motored from Wellesley Hill, Mass., to be present at this anniversary. He told of the reasons for starting the creamery, which was that the farmers needed to dispose of their milk. For a long time he and Whitin Fitch peddled milk at four cents a quart. He spent six weeks riding around trying to get the farmers interested in a creamery. Then Joseph Rood and Charles Standish went to Hampton to visit that creamery and then the creamery here was started. It has been a success from the start.

Clark C. Palmer, one of the oldest farmers in town, who oversaw the construction of the Creamery building, and fixed up the boiler the first time, was on the platform, but did not care to speak, as he said his think-box did not work as quickly as it used to. Frank E. Robinson, secretary during the time of organization, also one of the first cream gatherers, living in Lisbon then, gave several items of interest taken from the record book. Arthur M. Brown, who has been the legal advisor of the company for a long time. He particularly emphasized that it was a fitting thing for an institution to be proud of so many years of honest achievement which has never been anything but a benefit to Griswold and many other towns. It is a good thing to boost the interests of one's town.

Elmer Starkweather, who was thirteen years a cream gatherer and has been on the board twenty years and who worked on the building, spoke briefly. Mr. Bliss then introduced Adelard Morin, the vice president of The Plaut-Cadden Co., who had brought up one of his best victrolas and fine records and who also furnished the programmes. Four numbers were played: Norma Overture by Arthur Pryor's Band; Villanelle by Galli Curci, A Dream (in English) by Chruso and In a Monastery Garden by Victor Orchestra, with male chorus.

Mr. Bliss then spoke of the up to date farm which Mr. Anderson is conducting on the one-time Bennett farm and said Mr. Anderson was willing to answer any questions about the business. Rev. H. S. Stephenson spoke of the cooperative plan among the farmers in their business in Kentucky, telling of the Kentucky and Indiana Dairying Associatica. The object is not to monopolize the market, but be a factor in it.

Rev. E. E. Seaten was a former pastor in Vermont in one of the richest dairying communities the section being called the Garden of Eden. His church owned three farms with seventy-seven cows. As his salary was paid from the income of these farms, he was naturally much interested in cows. He gave a most interesting description of the large condensatory which was located here and its operation.

Mrs. James B. Palmer read a humorous story and Miss Mabel Kanahan gave a whistling solo add encore. Master William Stebbins sang a motion Flag song, accompanied oy Mrs. E. H. Hiscox. Misses Esther and Mabel Frink sang two duets, Miss Kanahan accompanying them. Mayor Milo R. Waters of Norwich brought the best wishes and congratulations of Norwich to this aniversary of an industry that through all these years has injured no one and helps everybody. He also spoke of wha ta fine thing it is to boost the town and congratulated the creamery on its progress. The closing number was by Francis Campbell, who impersonated Harry Lauder in two songs, being in kilts. His numbers made a big hit. He was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Celia Geist.

Then Mr. Bliss announced that refreshments, would be served by people from several Norwich caterers including The Terminal. The butter, cream and pimento cheese came from the Jewett City Creamery and the ice cream was made from creamery cream. Cake was given by women in town and punch was served. Napkins were furnished by a borough bakery. Victrola music enlivened the refreshment time, and old fashioned dances with music by Driscoll's orchestra with F. H. Gilbert, prompter concluded the evening.

Mr. Bliss had on exhibition a picture of the creamery, and several framed certificates of merit he has been awarded as well as a large silver water pitcher he had received as a prize. There was also a photograph of himself in his spotless white working uniform and the real coat as a sample of the cleanliness carried out in the business. The Bliss family crest was among the exhibits.

During the latter part of the time that M. G. Young was butter-maker the late Joseph E. Leonard was superintendent. It was his anxiety to keep the butter as its already high standard of excellence, that influenced him in engaging B. W. Smith.

Mr. Young died quite suddenly during Mr. Leonard' sadministration as superintendent. For more than a month the wife of the butter-maker at Putnam came down to Jewett City every morning and took charge of the manufacture of the day's product.

She was at that time the only woman butter-maker in Connecticut. In order that she might render this temporary service, E. H. Hiscox, then employed by Mr. Leonard, (25 years ago) ran the steam engine and boiler, and performed the many duties too heavy for a woman's hands. Mr. Leonard was superintendent for six years.

Another incident of interest during the earlier days of the creamery, is that, at the time B. W. Smith was butter-maker here, he married Miss Luella Bancoft of Springfield, Mass. She was the daughter of the then leading dairy authority of the state. As changes have been recorded in the 36 years of the Jewett City creamery's existence, none serves better to indicate its steady advancement than the change in the method of paying the patron for his cream.

For the first twenty years the Cooley creamer was in use, with its cans submerged in ice water. Every day the collector calling for the cream, turned a crank on the side of the big tank. The cans were thus raised above the water, he then too them off the elevator rack, and by means of a faucet, drew off the skimmed milk from the buttom. The cream was then measured by graduated spaces on the side of tre can. Today the separator does the work for the farmer. Each day an ounce sample of his cream is brought to the local plant in an individual numbered bottles. Every afternoon, Superintendent, by means of the Babcock tester, determines by the action of centifugal force as applied to the rapidly whirling bottles, just what per-cent of butter fat each patron's cream contains, and what its comparative value is, then, the producer is paid by the pound, for butter fat. In the old days, unscrupulous persons would sometimes keep an eye out for the approaching cream col-

MARKET REVIEW

New York, April 27—(By the A. P.)—With the markets rallying on short covering, a large share of interest in financial and business circles last week was devoted to the condition of the steel industry. Chairman Gary's remarks at the steel corporation's annual meeting were awaited eagerly and were made the occasion for a demonstration by the bear party. Inspection of the full text of Mr. Gary's remarks failed, however, to reveal anything which could be considered pessimistic.

He admitted the recession in buying during the last six weeks, but said it was smaller than he would have expected. The inference was that he did not consider it surprising or disturbing. At the same time, he came out strongly against reducing prices and expressed his confidence in continued prosperity.

Those who following the corporation's affairs closely believe that the first quarterly earnings statement which will be published on Tuesday, will be excellent. They also maintain that the results of the current quarter will be very good. Under these circumstances they expect the directors' action on dividends to reflect confidence in the situation.

Reports from the industry itself, meanwhile, showed that the reduction in activity has gone further. Production of steels is now at about 75 or 50 per cent. of capacity, with the larger companies maintaining a better rate than the average. Prices continue on the easier basis recently reached, and there has been no convincing evidence of a rallying tendency. Consumption, however, was said to be well maintained and the manufacturers pointed to the continued, extraordinary volume of building construction and to the heavy demands for materials by the railroads.

Car loading for the week ended April 19 showed an increase over those in the previous week but were still substantially below those in the corresponding week of last year. The heavy slump in coal loadings again furnished the principle explanation of the decline. Loadings of merchandise and less than carload freight still exceeded those for the season in any previous year.

The first of the railroad earnings statements for March confirmed the theory that the month's results would be excellent. The returns for the first twenty roads to report showed the normal improvement over February and compared favorably with those of March last year, when the class roads earned 5.84 per cent on the interstate commerce commission's valuation.

The slump in coal mining drew forth considerable comment both because of the effect on car loading and on coke and pig iron prices. The large stocks of fuel which were accumulated against the possibility of a strike on April 1 have demoralized the market and production has dropped to about 60 per cent of normal. With coal selling below the cost of production, however, some observers believed that the position was being readjusted.

Money was slightly cheaper, the call rate on the New York stock exchange dropping to 3 1-8 per cent. Time money for short maturities was available at 4 1-4 per cent, the easing was attributed to large gold imports and the recession in industrial activity.

Several of the leading European exchange rates made new highs for the year under the impetus of short covering. This was considered to be due partly to the necessity of making settlement on May 1 contracts. Bankers continued optimistic over the reparations situation. Underwriting of an acceptance credit for Germany of $5,000,000 by a syndicate of American banks in part of the plan which Dr. Schacht has developed for a gold credit bank to finance German foreign trade. The Dawes plan contemplates the absorbtion of this Schacht bank by its own new bank of issue.

MYSTIC

Although not a resident of Mystic, the death of Horace G. Williams, 89, which occurred Friday evening at his home in Old Mystic, brings keen regret to residents here who have had business dealings with him for many years. "Williams' Store" in Old Mystic is a village institution and has been associated with the life of the village for about 50 years. Mr. Williams had been in failing health for some time but was not confined to the house and his death came suddenly.

Mr. Williams was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Old Mystic and was actively interested in its welfare both in a financial way and in personal service, having been chorister there and superintendent of the Sunday school for many years, and was also a regular attendant at the annual conference of the Methodist churches of this district. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ellen S. Williams, and by two sons, Harold and Frank Williams, of Old Mystic who were associated with him in business.

Invitations have been received here from the board of managers of the New England Deaconess Association to the twenty-sixth annual commencement exercises of the New England Deaconess hospital school for Nurses, to be held in St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal church, Brookline, Mass., Tuesday, April 29th, at 8 p. m., one of the thirteen members of the graduating class being Miss Frances Eleanor Trevena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Trevena, of this place.

J. F. Noyes and L. E. Kinney were visitors in Worcester Friday.

Miss Catherine Glines of New York was the guest Friday of Miss Edith Rathbun.

Mr. and Mrs. Odell Tompkins and daughter, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., have been at their summer home on Pequot avenue the past week. During their stay here Mr. Tompkins has been supervising the planting of shrubs, bulbs, etc., about the grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman White have returned to Orleans, Mass., after a visit with Mrs. White's mother, Mrs Walter T. Fish.

Commander Theodore Anderson and Adjutant John Tedford, of Richard William Morgan Post, American Legion, were in Norwich Friday evening attending the meeting and banquet held at the Wauregan house in the interests of the membership campaign to be held next month. The state commander has appointed the commander of each post captain in this drive and each captain appoints his officers, those appointed here being: Captain, Theodore Anderson; lieutenant, John Tedford; sergeants, John Wheeler, Edward Feeney and Charles Gremley; corporals, Charles Stribi, Arthur Berry, Dr. C. R. Chapman, Jeremiah Sullivan, John Jennsen, Ernst Franke, William Noyes, Russell Sparks and George Weimers. A special meeting of the legion has been called for Tuesday evening to complete the details for the membership drive, which will be in charge of the above officers, which will be held from May 5th to 19th.

Eli Gladhill arrived home from New York Friday.

At the meeting of the sewing society of Charity Chapter, No. 61, O. E. S., at the home of Mrs. George D. Johnson, Friday afternoon, whist was played, with seven tables in play. The prize for high score went to Mrs. Truman A. Jewell and the consolation award to Miss Lucy B. Kellogg. Mrs. Johnson served refreshments.

C. Lyston Morgan, of Chicago arrived here Sunday, called home by the critical illness of his father, Christopher Morgan.

Benjamin F. Burrows was taken to a New London hospital Friday for an operation.

Senator Wheeler Indicted

U. S. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Butte, Mont., "prosecutor" of the Senate Committee investigating Daugherty, who has just been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury in Great Falls, Montana, on a charge of unlawfully receiving money as a retainer fee to influence the issuance of oil and gas prospecting permits.

BEFORE CITY COURT

FOR SKIPPING BOND

Several local men were before the police court Saturday morning charged with intoxication. All gained their freedom after paying fines and costs imposed by the court.

One autoist's case, for violation of the parking laws in leaving a machine too far out from the curb was settled on payment of $3.

Peter DeIsle, alias French Peter, charged with an old count of violation of the liquor law, dating from last August, through his attorney asked for the hearing to be continued until Monday, (today). Judge Arthur F. Libby agreed and fixed bonds at $750. The man went to jail for lack of a bondsman. The reason for the large amount asked as bonds is that Peter, released last August in the custody of his attorney, V. P. A. Quinn, to go out and find a bondsman, failed to return and it was not until last Friday that his whereabouts became known and he was arrested by Constable Louis A. Paquette of Taftville.

State Officer of Amaranths

Dr. Emma Dunham attended the grand court, Order of Amaranth, held Saturday in Meriden, as a delegate from Jasmine Court, No. 8, of New London. Dr. Dunham was elected one of the grand officers of the state for the ensuing year of which Jasmine Court is proud.

PLAINFIELD

The annual reception of Deborah Avery Putnam Chapter, D. A. R., was held Friday in the auditorium of the Plainfield Community House. Shortly after 8 o'clock, the grand march was led by George W. Loring and Miss Annie Tillinghast. The March was followed by a program of eighteen dances, to music by the Peerless Orchestra, of Willimantic. The fox trots and one-steps of the third gram, were interspersed with waltzes and old-fashioned dances, making the affair enjoyable to all. The hall was attractively draped with American flags of different sizes. The floor manager was William H. Heywood, with Dr. W. W. Adams, Thomas J. Seaton, George W. Loring, Lucius Cranska and Edward C. Tillinghast as aids. John Leahy as prompter for the Virginia Reels, Quadrilles and Paul Jones which were a part of the program. Light refreshments were served during intermission. A large crowd attended.

A delightful party was held Friday evening when friends and relatives were invited to the home of Nathan Exely, to help Mr. and Mrs. Exely celebrate their 35th wedding anniversary. Games were played during the evening, and other forms of diversion helped make the affair pleasant. Light refreshments were served. An anniversary cake, with thirty-five lighted candles, was cut by Mrs. Exely, and served to twenty-one relatives and friends. Among the relatives were Mr. and Mrs. Claude Griggs of Hartford, and Mrs. Frank Bailey of Danielson, and a number of friends from Canterbury.

Miss Marion Cleland, who is attending school at Hartford, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cleland, accompanying Rev. William C. Prentice, who made a visit to Hartford with his family Saturday.

Harold J. Lewis has been appointed chairman of the public welfare committee of the Lincoln club.

This (Monday) evening the Executive board of the Lincoln club, is to meet with the president of the club, Alfred Ashley, to make plans for the Jolly Night.

The meeting of the Benedict library association is to be held in the Benedict library at the Congregational parsonage.

It is with a great deal of gratification that the supporters of Plainfield High school noted another victory for that school, when it defeated the team of former baseball stars of this town, who played the school at the Carpet Grounds Saturday, under the name, Old Timers. When the High School boys had finished trotting around the bases, they were found to be sitting on the long end of a 10-4 score. The team played its hardest Saturday, giving Bibeault, who pitched, two innings and Belknap, who finished the game, the best support possible. It is hoped that Bibeault will soon be able to use his arm without trouble, and that he will be able to take his position on the mound for a whole game. The feature of the game was the home run made by Jimmy Wallace, with three men on base.

Greek Easter Sunday

Sunday was Easter Sunday for the people of Greek faith in this city and special services were carried out in the Greek churches. Several of the stores run by Greeks in the city were closed Sunday in observance of the day.

Several states in the Union, it is said, are still without women dentists.

POETRY

EASTER ANTHYMOCHETS.

"God hath given us Eternal Life and this Life is in His Son." (1 John 5 11.)

Analogy of resurrection it may be
When buds of Springtime decorate the tree,
Though branches bared thro' winter seemed to show
It's life had ended 'neath the ice and snow—
Yet an tree really dead responds to Spring,
Nor mid'st its boughs will robins nest or sing.

And no cocoon in which the worm had curled
Will yield the butterfly's gay wings unfurled
If an ichneumon's sting has pierced its shell—
From that sure death no beauteous life will swell.
"All souls immortal!"—Scripture fails to teach
Lessons like this, and Nature does not preach.

"In ME whoso believeth shall not die,
Nor perish"—Nature may tell the reason why.
As right conditions bud the trees of spring,
Or from an egg nestlings will hatch and sing,
He who hath not the Son, God's sure word saith,
Conditions not obeyed insure but death.

The Immortality Christ "brought to light"
Should be interpreted and read aright—
Life thro' His life who triumphed o'er the grave
Is given free to souls He died to save.
Without the Son of God life may not be—
"Life give I unto all who live in Me."

Think not 'tis natural, then, for souls to live,
Nature to things quite dead no life can give—
The germ of life must in each seed be sound,
Or sprouts from buried corn ne'er pierce the ground,
Hope of Immortal Life beyond, wouldst see?
Thro' Christ alone gleams Hope of Life for thee.
—Rev. George G. Phipps, in Boston Transcript.

WISDOM.

With the first tears that came with our first love—
That sorrow which is close akin to bliss;
With the faint ache that follows the first kiss,
We knew at last the grief they whispered of
Who have sung always of love's bitter-sweet—
The worm that waits for every opening rose,
Dark clouds that gather are the sunset glows;
The pain the gods give to a love complete.

No longer was Life's meaning hid from us;
In one revealing instant we were sure
That through the years we had been very poor,
Lacking the heartbreak and the rainbow
Yet saving grief which brings the soul new power—
Knowledge that springs out of one splendid hour.
—Charles Hanson Towne, in the May Scribner's.

Critical Customer — Really, Mr. Smithers, you get dearer and dearer every day!

Grocer—Not so loud, ma'am. My wife's very jealous!—Progressive Grocer.

"We want a man for our information bureau", said the manager. "He must be a wide-awake fellow and accustomed to complaints."

"That's me," replied the applicant, "I'm the father of twins."—Exchange.

Smith—Yes, I'm engaged to be married, and I've only known the girl two days.

Jones—What folly!

Smith—Ziegfeld's.—Legion Weekly.

Say, Bill, I was held up by the coffee trap today.

The what?

The tippie coff—the caffe trop—the tropic caff—the—Oh, hang it, you know what I mean!—Boston Transcript.

"My dear," called a wife to her husband in the next room, "what are you opening that can with?"

"Why," he said, "with a can opener. What did you think I was doing it with?"

"Well," replied his wife, "I thought from your remarks that you were opening it with a prayer."—Progressive Grocer.

First Tramp—How yer gettin' along now, Al.

Second Tramp—Oh, I just tried No. 45 last week, but I ain't going there no more.

First Tramp—Fraid on account of the dog, I s'pose?

Second Tramp—Yes, my trousers are.

First Tramp—Your trousers are what?

Second Tramp—Frayed on account of the dog—Boys' Life.

TAFTVILLE

Miss Dorothy Wood of the state normal school, Willimantic, spent the week-end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wood and family of South Second avenue.

A tennis club was organized Friday evening at Ponemah hall, when a number met to discuss the matter. E. Tracy Clark acted as chairman of the meeting and the following officers were elected: President, E. Tracy Clark; vice president, Alfred Lauderson; secretary, Earle M. Wood; treasurer, Miss Elsie Heap; board of directors, the officers and John D. Sharples, E. W. Terrington, Archie Mellour, Mrs. Andrew Frohnrader, Miss Katherine Hasler, John Wohlleben, James Murphy and Samuel L. Armitage. The board later announced that they had appointed the following committees, constitution and by-laws committee, Charles T. Webster, Miss Flossie M. Meyer and Andrew Frohnrader; membership committee, Miss Rose Murphy, Albert Mathewson and Ruth Kupky. The membership limit has been fixed at 75.

Friends and relatives of Sister Mary of Calvary and Sister St. Agnes, both former Taftville residents, have been in Manchester, N. H., to bid them adieu when they left for South China to establish a convent of Sisters of the Precious Blood in that country. The long trip has already begun and the nuns are on their way to Seattle where they will embark for Shanghai. A high mass was celebrated at Manchester with Bishop Guertin attending, before the five nuns left the convent.

TRYOUT FOR SCOUTS FOR STATE MEET

Scout Executive Frederick A. Benton held tryouts Saturday afternoon on Chelsea Parade for members of the several scout troops desiring to enter the state meet of scouts to be held in New Britain on May 17th.

In charge of Scoutmaster Jonathan L. Johnson, Troop 12 of Park Congregational church, entered the tryouts and succeeded in placing several members in line for the state meet.

Scouts of Troop 12 who will represent Norwich council at New Britain next month finished the tests as follows: First aid raise, Thomas Baldwin and Harold Disco. Fire by friction, test time of 53 seconds, made by Scouts Allen Latham and Thomas Peterson. Morse signalling, test speed 34 letters per minutes made by Scouts Thomas Baldwin and Allen Latham. Semaphore signalling test won by William Tirrell and Harold Disco.

These scouts have been selected to represent Norwich council in the state meet. Other scouts who may be picked to go to New Britain on May 17th to represent Norwich are as follows: James Mullen and Alfred Swift, fire building and water boiling; William Tirrell, Alfred Swift, ... Haynes, Richard Shaver, Franz ...rse, Blackstone Perkins, Dun... Perkins, Sherard Ingalls and James Mullen, all for knot tying.

It is expected that several other scout troops will enter men in the state meet and a number of Norwich scouts will go with the members who are to represent Norwich in the competitions in New Britain.

HARTFORD MAN KILLED IN NORTH FRANKLIN AUTO CRASH

Driving a new Dodge touring car, Joseph Petrizzo, 138 Vine street, Hartford, about 45 years old, was instantly killed about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon when his machine turned over several times on the Willimantic road in front of the farm of John Gowacki in North Franklin.

Angelo M. Petroziella, 50, 316 Windsor street, Hartford, who was riding on the front seat with Petrizzo, had his collar bone fractured and three women who were in the back seat were all thrown out but suffered only minor scratches and bruises. They were Jennie Petrizzo, 18 daughter of the owner of the car, Mrs. Teresa Polotte and her daughter Marion of 318 Windsor street.

Petroziella was taken to St. Joseph's hospital in Willimantic and from there to Hartford in the hospital ambulance. The body of Petrizzo was removed to Gager's undertaking rooms in this city.

The accident happened on a straight stretch of concrete road just above the Lebanon road corner. According to Miss Petrizzo, her father was adjusting the windshield as he was driving along at no great speed when the car suddenly swerved off to the left of the road and struck a post holding a rural free delivery letter box and the slight bank at this point. Two men named Crandall, eye witnesses of the accident, told Coroner J. J. Desmond and Medical Examiner C. C. Gildersleeve that the automobile turned end over end several times. It came to a halt on all four wheels, off to the side of the road about 75 feet from where it hit the post.

Telephone messages notified the Norwich police, the coroner, the medical examiner and the Willimantic hospital of the accident. The body of Petrozzi lay by the side of the car, covered over with the top until the arrival of the medical examiner and the coroner. His skull was fractured and one of the rods of the top had been driven through the back of his head from side to side.

Deputy Sheriff George Hoxie of Lebanon and State Policeman Kenerson from the Groton barracks assisted in handling the crowds and machines that stopped along the road during the afternoon. Residents of the neighborhood gave all the help they could to the members of the automobile party.

YANTIC FIREMEN'S BAZAAR REALIZES ABOUT $700

The three night bazaar given by the Yantic Fire Engine Co., in their hall proved a big success. The crowds attending Friday and Satuday night were the largest ever seen in the history of the company. Old and Young entered into the spirit of the occasion and everybody enjoyed themselves. On Thursday night Prof. Banfield, mystified the crowd with his clever manipulation of his magic wand receiving great applause for his skilful work. Friday night was the big carnival night and everybody pronounced it one of the most enjoyable features ever put on anywhere. A large sum of money was spent for favors consisting of paper hats of all sizes and descriptions, balloons, streamers and confetti. Saturday evening, the last night, was turned over to Fred Bowers, a very entertaining local man hailing from Greeneville. His Scotch songs took the crowd by storm and he received round after round of applause. He was accompanied at the piano by Prof. Thumm of Thumm's orchestra. Mr. Powers appeared in full highland costume. The drawing on the door prizes followed.

The booths were finely decorated and special praise was given John Lamphere, for the beautiful manner in which his candy booth was arranged with sweet peas.

All the booths were well lighted with large lamps and showed up the well ladened shelves to good advantage. The refreshment booth was in charge of Jacob Camf, who has had considerable experience as a chef, his new method of cooking hot dogs proved a big hit. Norton Pierce and Francis Hanrahan, assisted.

The booths were in charge of the following: Silver, Thomas Sullivan, captain, Eric Johnson; leather, Walter Scott, captain, Roy Errickson; roasters and hams, Frank Johnson, captain, Eugene Manning; aluminum, James Cobb, Captain, Andrew Larado; blankets, Joseph Wheeler, captain, Harry Salisbury; silved (special) William Shaw, captain, John Meehan; Candy, John Lamphere.

Committees as follows: General H. J. Gibbs, Edward Smith, James Hart, W. E. Manning and Andrew Grieve. Purchasing, W. E. Manning, Edward Smith; Howard Bishop and Andrew Grieve; electrical, Howard Bishop and Edward Seymerock; entertainment, Robert Lyons, Frank Johnson and Andrew Larado; printing, Rev. R. B. Day and Andrew Grieve; checking, Vincent Perkowsky and Ernest Sherman.

Thumm's orchestra furnished music for the dancing and were highly commended for their good quality. Robert Lyons was floor manager. The bazaar has become a regular yearly feature with the company and is looked forward to by old and young alike every year. About $700 was realized and will be added to the fund already started for the purpose of adding a new light apparatus to the pumper now in use. The company appreciates the hearty support given by its good friends.

LEBANON HAD TWO FIRES ON SUNDAY

Lebanon people had two fires to contend with Sunday afternoon which gave the people plenty to do for several hours. The first fire was shortly after 2.30 o'clock at the home of the Barrows family in the old Smith house in the Goshen section. A pile of hay and straw which had been spread around the house to keep out the cold was accidentally set afire by children playing with matches and the outside of the house was damaged to some extent before neighbors, who had rushed to the fire managed to extinguish it.

The second fire was early in the evening when over an acre of land near the Lebanon waiting room was burned over. As soon as the fire was discovered word was sent out and neighbors fought the fire checking it before any serious damage was done. The fire was on the old Browning place.

Celebrated Her 50th Birthday

An enjoyable party was given by Mrs. Martha Bogdanski of 83 Uerth street Sunday afternoon and evening in honor of her 50th birthday. Friends from Norwich, Montville, New London, New York, Philadelphia, Newark, N. J., Scranton, Pa., were present and games were played, after which an appetising supper was served by the hostess. Following the supper an automobile trip to several surrounding towns was enjoyed. Mrs. Bogdanski received many congratulations on her birthday.

MRS. W. R. MOTT DIED SUDDENLY ON SATURDAY

Shortly after returning from an automobile ride Saturday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock, Susan Etta Gardner, widow of William R. Mott, of 52 Broadway, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage, and died almost immediately afterwards.

Mrs. Mott with her daughter, Marion, and her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coreland of 15 Russell road, had been out riding for a time Saturday afternoon and upon returning to the Copeland home, Mr. Copeland got out of the machine and started to fix a part of the car that had become loosened. Mrs. Mott stood nearby watching him and suddenly suffered a shock. She was immediately carried into the Copeland residence and Dr. H. E. Higgins was called, and upon his arrival pronounced that death had been instantaneous. Medical Examiner Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve pronounced death due to a cerebral hemorrhage and gave permission for the removal of the body to the parlors of C. A. Gager.

Mrs. Mott was born in Lisbon April 27, 1867, the daughter of Horace Gardner and Charlotte Noyes Gardner, and received her early education in that town. About 35 years ago in Pachaug she was united in marriage with William R. Mott and for a while the couple resided in Lisbon. About 20 years ago she came to this city where for a number of years Mr. Mott was caretaker of the Norwich Young Men's Christian association building on Broadway Mr. Mott died in this city about six years ago.

Mrs. Mott was a member of the United Congregational church and of Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 21, I. O. O. F. She was a woman of loving and kind disposition and her chief joy in life was to be with her family. News of her sudden death will be received with sorrow by a host of friends.

Those surviving her are a son, Harvey Mott, a daughter, Marion Mott, of 52 Broadway, a step-daughter, Mrs. Earl Frink of New London; two sisters, Mrs. Leonard W. Stanbley and Mrs. Charles Copeland of Russell road, and several nephews, nieces and cousins in Norwich and out of town.

GAVE MUSICAL PROGRAM FOR HOSPITAL PATIENTS

Patients at the William W. Backus hospital were entertained Sunday afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock with a musical program under the auspices of the young people of the Central Baptist church. An orchestra comprising violin, cornet, flute, clarinet and piano furnished a number of pleasing selections and a group of solo numbers was rendered by Donald Gildersleeve and the Misses Maida Wright and Viola Hill. Douglas Hunt and Russell Storms pleased their audience with cornet and clarinet numbers. The programme was enjoyed by the patients and was splendidly carried out by the young people of the Central church.

NO. STONINGTON PUPILS HAVE ANNUAL CONTESTS

At the annual speaking, spelling and athletic contests of the children of the grade schools of the town of North Stonington held in Grange hall Wednesday afternoon, the judges of the speaking contest were Mrs. S. Hussey Reed, Rev. Thomas M. Ockford of Poquetanuck and Guy Ayer, of Norwich. They awarded first honors to Evelyn Miner of District 6, or Miner school, Miss Edith M. Palmer, teacher. Second honors went to Margery Gray of Shunoc school, Miss Harriet E. White, teacher.

During the exercises there were three violin solos by Miss Ruby Swain, accompanied by Mrs. Myrtle Senior.

The speakers were Carl Benson, who gave The Knight's Toast; Clifton Coats, Contentment; Catherine Burkbeck, the Last Leaf; Evelyn Miner, Defense of the Alamo; Frank Baxter, Horatius at the Bridge; Mildred Jones, The Fatherland; Margery Gray, The Wind and the Moon; Sally Stewart, The Pilgrim's Vision.

In the spelling contest, the winner was Mildred Main of the Center School, Miss Anna L. Chapman, teacher. The others taking part in the spelling contest, were Frances Johnson, Evelyn Maine, Helen Ryder, Genevieve Mattison, Patricia Harris and Frederick Birkbeck.

The girls of the Center school won in the balancing beam contest and those from Miner's made the best score in bean bag throwing.

The boys' athletic contest was won by the team from Hewitt's school, Clark Coon, teacher.

The members of the various teams contesting in athletics were: Girls: Team 1, Sally Stewart, Mildred Maine, Violet Swain, Bertha Edwards and Katherine Maine; Team 2, Evelyn Maine, Margery Gray, Alice Maine and Elsie Maine; Team 3, Gladys Palmer, Mildred Jones, Patricia Harris and Margaret Maine; Team 4, Genevieve Mattison, Stella Anyzeski and Anna Anyzeski; Team 5, Irene Maine, Amelia Johnson, Frances Johnson and Mary Stedman.

Boys: Team 1, Anton Johnson, William Heino, Henry Daniels, Alvah Jones, Carl Benson; Team 2, Wallace Stedman, Clarence Bailey, Chester Coats.

The winners in the contest will go to Uncasville May 22, where they will compete with other winners from the surrounding towns, in a public contest; those who win at Uncasville will go to Hartford, where the state contests will be held before the close of the school year.

THE PEACE ALL MEN CRAVE GOD PROVIDES, SAYS PRIEST

Extra chairs were in use to accommodate the congregation at St. Patrick's church at the 8 o'clock mass Sunday, when Rev. Rocco J. Guerriero, who read the low mass, also preached from the gospel for the Sunday, John 20: 19-31. In this gospel, which narrates the incident of the doubting of Thomas, occurs the passage, 'He breathed on them; and He said to them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost, whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them; and whose sins you shall retain, they are retained.' This commission of Christ to His apostles and their successors is the divine command and authority for the sacrament of penance—confession—in the Roman Catholic church.

Father Guerriero declared God's greatest gift to man is the Holy Eucharist—Christ's own body and blood, actual and divinity, in the satrament of the altar. This gift the Saviour provided for man, that from it and through it mortals may receive the great boon of peace. When Jesus came and stood in the midst of His disciples, His salutation was "Peace be to you." At His birth, when the angels sang, it was of peace to men of good will. Before His death upon the cross, the Redeemer willed peace, not vengeance to men. There can be this holy peace, which all hearts crave, only when the soul is untroubled by sin.

When, however, divine peace is lacking, it can be restored through the sacrament of penance. All Catholics realize this consoling state which comes to the soul of the penitent, following the contrite admission of sins, of sorrow for them, of the firm purpose of amendment, then of the reception of absolution from the priest, the duly authorized representative of the Saviour, Who has promised, "whose sins you shall retain, they are retained; whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them." With penance, with the worthy reception of Christ in the Blessed Eucharist, the soul knows true peace.

In administering Holy Communion to the many hundred penitents at this mass, Father Guerriero had the assistance of the rector, Rev. Michael H. May.

LEBANON JUSTICE COURT HAS BUSY SESSION

Justice William T. Curry of Lebanon had a busy session in the Lebanon justice court Saturday afternoon when court convened at 2.30 o'clock. The first case was that of Abraham Kossover of Lebanon charged with breach of the peace. Justice Curry fined Kossover $5 and costs and sentenced him to 30 days in jail, suspending the jail sentence for one year. The court bill was paid and Kossover discharged.

David Brackin of Lebanon charged with assault, using abusive language and breach of the peace was found guilt of the latter count and fined $5 and costs and given a sentenced of 30 days in jail, the sentence in this case also being suspended.

The case taking the greater part of the court's time was that of David Dion of Taftville, charged with theft of articles from the home of John J. Zezulawesz of Lebanon. The theft was alleged to have taken place on or about April 17th when $15, a revolver and a ring were stolen. According to evidence presented at the court the [illegible] was spent by the accused and two companions and when one of them told his mother of the wrongdoing, she made him tell the Lebanon authorities, the arrest of Dion following. The ring was recovered, the revolver traced to a Norwich sotre where it had been sold for $1.50, but the money was gone. Dion pleaded guilty and was sentenced by Justice Curry to ten days in jail and fined $5 and costs. Dion was taken to the jail in Norwich later in the day to serve his sentenced.

Murphy Shows Close Week Here.

The Frank J. Murphy shows which have been appearing on the Duwell club baseball grounds on the East Side closed their Norwich engagement Saturday evening and will begin the swing into various New England cities. The show conducted by Mr. Murphy is a clean one and there was nothing on the grounds that could not have been seen by women and children, and Norwich may feel satisfaction that the shows come from this city, for they are above the average run of carnival shows that have visited this city in past years.

Two hundred thousand years ago the climate of Greenland was still temperate.

The sudden death of Mrs. Etta Mott in Norwich Saturday was a shock to friends here, where the family lived years ago. Mrs. S. A. Thompson is a sister-in-law of Mrs. Mott.

Mrs. Blanche Lanman Carr, county chairman of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women, is to address the local council at 7 o'clock S. T. in St. Mary's Hall, tonight (Monday). Following the formal meeting refreshments will be served. Miss Margaret Driscoll is chairman of the local council. Mrs. Carr, who is the wife of Admiral Clarence Alfred Carr, U. S. N., residing now at The Pequot, New London, is a daughter of Admiral Joseph Lanman, of Norwich. While Admiral Carr was stationed at the New York Navy yard in Brooklyn, and again while he was at Philadelphia Navy Yard, Mrs. Carr was very active along every line of welfare, charity and benevolent work.

Mrs. Frank B. Davis of Jamaica Plain, Mass., is a guest at Martin Davis'.

Mrs. Esther Partridge has returned from a visit in Boston with relatives.

Early in the year, the Sunday morning worshippers at one of the churches heard a sermon of the sort to be remembered and profited by. The main theme of the address was deduced from statements made by Canon Samuel Wilberforce, born in 1805 and died in 1873 he being the bishop of Oxford and later of Winchester. This good man summed up the main requirements for a life of piety, under the titles of admit, submit, commit and transmit. Last Sunday, in an appeal that can not be excelled for able efficiency, the same ministers met with a hearty response; meanwhile the audience was convinced of the need of the addition of "remit."

Mrs. Jennie Wild, of Jewett City, in a Ford sedan, and a Buick, driven by a man named Sullivan of Boston, sideswiped each other near St. Mary's cemetery, about 8.30 Sunday night. With Mrs. Wild were Mrs. Gilbert and her son, Joseph. All were more or less cut by flying glass. The wheels were smashed on both cars and traffic was blocked, automobiles being lined up both sides of the street for some distance. A state policeman and Deputy John Dolan took charge of the trouble and two local wreckers had removed the damaged cars by 10 o'clock. The Massachusetts man was going to Norwich to spend the night. It is believed that the drivers were blinded by the headlights.

About 9 o'clock Sunday night a Russian, whose name was not known to the police, but who has lived here for some time, appeared on Main street looking for Officer Viegard. His nose was nearly severed from his face by some kind of weapon and he was covered in blood. He claimed that, while near the Polish hall on Factory hill, a man named Tony, hit him with some sort of weapon. Officer Viegard took him to Dr. J. H. McLaughlin, who sewed the nose onto his face. It is probable that an arrest will be made this (Monday) morning.

FIRE DESTROYS 25,000 YOUNG PINE TREES

James L. Goodwin of Hartford, wealthy summer resident of Clarke Corner, Windham county, and owner of the Pine Acres estate in that village suffered an enormous loss Sunday when sparks from an engine on the Boston train set fire to grass along the railroad tracks and spread quickly, destroying 25,000 small pine trees that he had set out during the past ten years.

The fire spread over 25 acres and lasted for over four hours before a force of 50 men who were fighting the flames checked its further spread. Fortunately during the spread of the fire no buildings were destroyed. One of the residents in the neighborhood threatened by the fire removed much of the furniture from his house, and another removed live stock and farming machinery as the fire headed toward his farm, but fast work by the force of fire fighters stopped any destruction of buildings.

The fire was seen by workmen within a short time after it had started but checked by a high wind the flames jumped through the small pines with lightning speed and much of the 25 acres had been burned over within 30 minutes of the start of the grass fire.

The amount of the damage could not be ascertained Sunday but it will run into many dollars as the young pines are valuable and would bring top prices in holiday seasons. The pine grove was one of the largest in this part of this state and probably one of the largest privately owned groves in the state. The trees had been set out with great care and were growing rapidly.

IN ACCORD with our business associates in neighboring states and cities, the following banks in the City of Norwich will open and close on Eastern Standard Time, one hour earlier than at present, commencing Monday, April 28, 1924, and ending Saturday, September 27, 1924.

The New Scientific Treatment for the Quick Relief of Colds Influenza Bronchitis Catarrh Whooping Cough Asthma Hay Fever

DAKOL is the first and only treatment of its kind, endorsed by physicians, scientists and bacteriologists, that prevents and gives quick relief to colds, influenza, bronchitis, whooping-cough, sore throat and other troubles caused by inflammation of the mucous membrane of the nose and throat by destroying the bacteria or germs that cause them.

Dakol is a soothing, cooling nasal cream, harmless and positively non-poisonous, yet it has been proven, by recent laboratory tests in one of America's great universities, that it will destroy, in a few minutes, harmful disease bacteria that have been breathed in with the air in the nose and throat. Dakol restores the irritated membrane of the nose and throat to its normal condition, in a fraction of the time needed with medicine taken internally.

Dakol with its soothing, cooling, healing qualities can be safely used with children and will stop a fresh cold over night.

Dakol has been used by the medical profession for the past five years to prevent the contraction of diseases inhaled from the dust of the street and the bacteria-laden air of the factory, sick room, crowded trains, theatres, cars and schools.

Dakol replaces internal medicines by killing disease germs before they are absorbed by the system.

Dakol is made in two sizes, 50c and the large home size 75c.

STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT COOLIDGE CLARIFIES MUSCLE SHOALS IMPUTATION

Conclusively Disproves That He Had Ever Considered Delivering Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford, as Has Been Alleged by James Martin Miller, Newspaper Correspondent—President Had Stated His Position on Muscle Shoals in Message to Congress December 6, Five Days Before Mr. Ford Came to See Him.

Washington, April 23—A telegram quoting President Coolidge as saying he was "trying" to "deliver Muscle Shoals" to Henry Ford was introduced at today's (Muscle Shoals hearing of the senate agriculture committee and soon afterwards a flat denial that the president had made any such a statement was issued at the white house.

The message was sent from Washington on October 12, 1923 by James Martin Miller, former Washington newspaper correspondent and was address to "William" J. Cameron or "Ernest Liebold, care Dearborn Independent, Dearborn, Mich." It follows:

"In private interview had with President Coolidge this morning he said incidentally: 'I am friendly to Mr. Ford, but wish some one would convey to him that it is my hope that Mr. Ford will not do or say anything that will make it difficult for me to deliver Muscle Shoals to him which I am trying to do.'"

President Coolidge's statement said:

"I have never said I was trying to deliver Muscle Shoals to Mr. Ford or to anyone else. I do not think his favor is for sale. My position on Muscle Shoals is fully stated in my message to the congress delivered December 6. My message went out November 28 five days before Mr. Ford came to see me."

An executive of the Dearborn Independent, Ford's weekly newspaper, issued a statement in Detroit declaring Miller "had never been on any Ford payroll and never was authorized to act as Mr. Ford's agent in matter." Miller, it was said, had contributed articles to the Independent, but the never had had any other relations with the paper or with Mr. Ford."

Secretary Weeks was on the stand when the telegram was read to the senate committee by Chairman Norris. Before reading the telegram, Norris asked the secretary if he could explain why Ford came to Washington aggrieved with the administration over the sale of the Gorgas Steam plant, part of the Muscle Shoals property, to the Alabama Power Company and after an interview with the president became friendly toward the administration and endorsed Coolidge.

After the telegram had been read Secretary Weeks said:

"I don't believe that the president at that time or at any other time stated that he was anxious to turn over the Muscle Shoals property to Mr. Ford or anybody else I think he expressed his opinion in his address to congress on the sixth of December. His secretary never has expressed any such opinion to me, and he has never intimated any such thing to me.

"Personally, I am in favor of turning that property over to the men or corporation, if it is to be turned over, that will make the largest return to the government, and I don't think Mr. Ford's offer is the best offer and therefore I am personally not in favor of it."

Secretary Weeks said in answer to Chairman Norris that on the same day that Ford had had the interview with President Coolidge, Ford called at his office with his secretary and engineer and one or two others and said he had not come on business but to pay his respects, that it was entirely a social call, and business pertaining to Muscle Shoals was not discussed.

Secretary Weeks said the criticism, which Ford made of the sale of the Gorgas Steam plant, in a published statement on October 12, 1923, was a personal attack on him and was not aimed at the administration.

Chairman Norris asked if Secretary Weeks had had an interview on October 12, with "James Martin Miller, who was then representative of the Dearborn Independent in Washington."

"I don't know," the secretary replied.

Norris said the records of the white house showed that Miller had a private interview with the president on October 12 and on that date the telegram was sent to Dearborn. The telegram was turned over to the committee by the Western Union Telegraph company in response to a subpoena. Norris told the committee Cameron was the editor of the Dearborn Independent and Liebold was Ford's private secretary.

Chairman Norris asserted that in Secretary Weeks' reply to Ford's attack last October 12 the secretary said that "if Mr. Ford wanted it the price the secretary had obtained for the Gorgas plant could be credited on what he was to pay."

"Was that your original idea to put that in the statement? Was there anything in the statement that came from the president?" the chairman asked the war secretary.

"I cannot tell whether the president made any suggested changes in the statement," the secretary replied.

Norris asked the secretary if President Coolidge had influenced him to reply to Ford without any vituperation after Ford had attacked "the administration" in strong language.

Mr. Weeks replied it was his own idea, explaining that as a member of the cabinet cannot indulge in vituperative discussions with anybody."

"If I had been a private citizen, I should probably have answered Mr. Ford in a somewhat different way," he added.

MAINTAINS HE CORRECTLY QUOTED PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

New York, April 23.—James Martin Miller, whose telegram to the Dearborn Independent quoting President Coolidge as saying he would try to deliver Muscle Shoales to Henry Ford was repudiated by the president today, asserted tonight that his telegram was correct.

"A man cannot afford to have a controversy with the president of the United States," Mr. Miller said, "but I want to say that I quoted the president in my telegram, perhaps, however, Mr. Coolidge has forgotten because in the thousands of duties that have claimed his attention it may be difficult for him to recall one of many conversations."

Mr. Miller, a newspaperman and former Washington correspondent, asserted that the subject of Ford and Muscle Shoals had been brought up by the president himself, after he (Miller) had called on him concerning another matter. The president's statement was made, he said, a short time after Mr. Coolidge had talked to Secretary of War Weeks concerning an attack on the latter by Mr. Ford, published that morning.

Mr. Miller repudiated statements made by Ford representatives in Detroit tonight that he was not on the Ford payroll and had never been authorized to represent the motor car manufacturer in any capacity. He declared he had been engaged in December, 1922, by Ernest G. Liebold, general manager of the Dearborn Independent and general secretary to Ford, as an "observer" of things political relating to the manufacturer's presidential boom.

He had resigned last January 1, he said, because of personal differences with Liebold, and had since instituted suit against the Independent for salary for his year's employment and for moneys he said were due him for contributions to the paper and expenses incurred in his work as an "observer."

Mr. Miller added that he had copies of scores of telegrams and confidential letters written by him to Ford and Liebold. He also said he had telegrams and letters from Liebold, in which he was given instructions concerning his work for the motor manufacturer.

"I was not employed to look after the Muscle Shoals project," he said, "and did no lobbying for that or any other measure before congress."

He reverted to his alleged conversation with the president concerning Muscle Shoals.

"If there is a fight on between Senator Norris, the administration and the republican national committee organ, which is attempting to read Senator Norris out of the republican party, a working newspaperman like myself should not be drawn into it."

Last October 12 the day he called on the president, Mr. Miller said, was the date of Ford's published attack on Secretary Weeks.

"I called just after Secretary Weeks had left after an interview with the president concerning the Ford attack," Mr. Miller continued. "After I had finished by business with Mr. Coolidge—it did not concern Muscle Shoals—he spoke of Mr. Ford's statements concerning Mr. Weeks. It was then that President Coolidge said to me the words which I incorporate in my telegram to Mr. Ford, sent within half an hour after the president spoke them. The White House records will bear out my statements concerning my call on the president."

BOBBER-HAIR "SAILOR" GETS PERMANENT SHORE LEAVE

New York, April 23.—Adelaide Andrews, the first bobbed-hair "sailor," went home today on permanent shore leave, the 18-year-old girl passed only a month on the battleship Arizona of the Pacific fleet disguised as a sailor, but few adventurous youths who have answered the lure of the slogan, "Join the navy and see the world," can boast of more thrilling experiences.

Spending most of her time in the engine room, moving from hiding place, receiving food from sailor friends, Miss Andrews managed to escape discovery for a month. Then a puff of wind—a passing whim of the sea—betrayed her. The brim of her sailor cap was lifted and a sailor caught a glimpse of her hair. He reported his discovery to an officer and Miss Andrews' career as a "sailor" soon ended. She was put ashore at Panama and brought back to New York today on the steamship Christobal.

After she had learned her way about the big warship, Miss Andrews said, it was comparatively simple to evade detection. Soon after the Arizona had put out of New York on March 15, she said, she ventured to the deck and later attended the movies. While at the movies, she declared, she saw two other women—wives of sailors on the warship—disguised also as sailors.

Miss Andrews said she owed her adventure to a sailor on the Arizona who provided her with a uniform and helped smuggle her aboard. Going out to the battleship in a launch with recruits and other sailors, she said she got past the guard without difficulty. She steadfastly refused to tell the name of the sailor who assisted her.

When she first was questioned the girl said her name was "Madeline Blair." Later she admitted her name was Adelaide Andrews. Her mother had appealed to the police to help find her missing daughter.

NEWSPAPER COLLECTED $8,000 RAIN INSURANCE

Milwaukee, Wis., April 23.—The first time in history that a metropolitan daily newspaper has collected rain insurance on an edition of its newspapers occurred here today when the Milwaukee Journal company collected $8,000 insurance because of several hours rain yesterday afternoon on an insured special real estate edition of its Sunday paper.

The policy was taken out to insure the advertisements of real estate men who expected to show lots and houses Sunday afternoon.

The Journal agreed to re-run all advertisements next Sunday.

REFUSED TO PROSECUTE GIRL FOR THEFT OF HORSE

New York, April 23.—Helen Hayes, 20 year old Greenwich, Conn., girl, who on April 24 was arrested at Nelcong, N. J., charged with the theft of a valuable horse belonging to Robert Menzies of The Bronx, was released today when the owner of the animal refused to prosecute the complaint.

When arrested, the girl told the police that she "loved the horse" and was driving it to Texas.

MacDonald Favors France

Port Talbot, Wales, April 23.—(By the A. P.)—Prime Minister MacDonald, speaking here this evening to the electors who sent him to parliament, declared he was not going to lose a single chance of putting the report of the reparation experts into operation. "And I want France to be with me. • • • Let there be no doubt about it," he said.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

The senate approved a number of amendments to the tax bill.

A conference on plant quarantine and embargoes began at the department of agriculture.

The state department was informed that revolutionists had captured Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras.

Commissioner Haney of the shipping board testified before the house committee investigating the shipping board.

President Coolidge was the principal speaker at the dedication of the new building of the National Academy of Sciences.

President Coolidge, after being quoted as saying he was trying to deliver Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford, issued a categorial denial.

A number of conferences were held on the Japanese exclusion provisions of the immigration bill without any announcement of results.

Senator Magnus Johnson, farmer-labor, Minnesota, introduced a resolution asking whether meat packers contributed to the 1920 republican campaign fund.

HOPE ABANDONED FOR THE RESCUE OF ENTOMBED MINERS

Wheeling, W. Va., April 23.—Hope had been practically abandoned tonight that any of the 115 miners, entombed by an explosion today in the Benwood mine, of the Wheeling Steel Corporation, would be rescued alive. The bodies of eight miners had been recovered but the progress of mine rescue crews was made difficult by upoisonous gases that filled the workings. Two of the miners were yet alive when found but died a few minutes later.

Only a faint hope was held out by officials of the mine rescue car Holmes for the other 107 men in the mine at the time of the explosion. If any of them escaped being killed outright and had time to barricade themselves in rooms filled with fresh air, some of the trapped miners may yet be found alive, they declared. Upon that possibility rescue crews in short shifts worked frantically throughout the day and night but had not reached the scene of the explosion tonight.

The only victim whose body has been identified was that of J. T. Foyle, the fire boss. His bulletin board at the mouth of the mine indicated he had inspected the mine and pronounced it safe before the daylight shift went to work. The explosion occurred a short time after the day shift entered the mine.

A temporary morgue has been established at the mouth of the mine at Benwood to care for the bodies when they are brought to the surface. Physicians and nurses stand ready to render assistance to any who are rescued alive.

It was a tragic day for Benwood and the surrounding mining region. The day force had been in the mine only 16 minutes when those on the surface were startled by a violent quake and a distant rumble. All knew what had happened and men, women and children, taking no heed of a drizzling rain, dashed to the mine mouth. They found the entry blocked by a cave in, and through this mass of rock and earth drifted spouts of smoke and gases.

The main power of the region was massed at the mine while awaiting the arrival of the mine rescue car with its crew of trained rescue men. Volunteer crews dug frantically at the blocked entries, while others rushed to the air shafts, located back in the country, in the hope that they could get into the workings. It was through these airshafts that the first rescuers were let down.

Six of the bodies recovered were found near the Browns Run air shaft, two and a half miles from the mouth of the mine. The other two miners had been cut down when they were within a few hundred feet of the mouth. They were still breathing faitly when found but died before their rescuers reached the mouth of the mine.

CAPITAL OF HONDURAS HAS FALLEN TO REVOLUTIONISTS

Washington, April 23.—Honduran revolutionists fought their way into Tegucigalpa, the capital today, just as the state department had been advised that the last of the Central American republics had accepted the invitation to participate in a five power mediation conference at Ampala for restoration of order and constitutional government.

There was nothing tonight at the department to indicate whether occupation of the capital by the combined revolutionary forces which have held it under seige for more than a month would materially change the conference situation. It appeared possible that the development might insure a cessation of hostilities and thus help to forward the work of the mediators.

Officials here expect no new danger to American lives or interests to result from the revolutionary victory at Tegucigalpa. The revolutionary commanders reached an agreement with Minister Morales some time ago in which they gave him assurances that foreign nationals and their holdings would be fully protected.

M. S. DAUGHERTY FILES PERSONAL BOND OF $5,000

Cincinnati, April 23.—Federal Judge Smith Hickenlooper here lated today allowed M. S. Daugherty, brother of Harry M. Daugherty, former United States attorney general, a writ of habeas corpus under a personal bond of $5,000 after John J. McGrain, deputy sergeant at arms of the United States senate had served a warrant charging Daugherty with contempt. The writ is returnable forthwith and calls for Mr. Daugherty's appearance in United States district court on May 10.

Governor Mc Cray Of Indiana Guilty

Of Using the Mails in Furtherance of a Scheme to Defraud — Sent to Marion County Jail.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 23.—Governor Warren T. McCray, found guilty late today of using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud by a jury in federal court after less than 15 minutes deliberation was ordered taken to jail to await sentence at 9 a. m., Wednesday by U. S. District Judge A. B. Anderson.

Unless McCray tenders his resignation as governor of Indiana, he will continue in office until impeachment proceedings are brought against him in the general assembly of Indiana. Early in the governor's financial difficulties when efforts were being made by party leaders to have him resign he stated he would get out of the charges made against him were proven.

In denying bond to the governor and ordering him taken to jail, Judge Anderson declared he "had never seen so many felonies committed by one individual."

"He is a man," continued Judge Anderson, "who devised a scheme to defraud and carried it on almost entirely by use of mails. He has testified that he wrote 2,500 letters, and if so, he is guilty of violating the statutes 2,500 times. He is guilty of forging hundreds of fraudulent notes. He is guilty of obtaining money under false pretenses. He has violated not only the written laws but the laws of his own conscience as well. I think I shall have to order him to jail."

ROYAL WELCOME IN NEW YORK FOR CARDINAL HAYES

New York, April 23.—Amid the acclamations of thousands, Patrick Cardinal Hayes, newly appointed Prince of the Church, returned home on the Leviathan today, clad in the habiliments of high ecclesiastical office with which Pope Pius XI recently invested him at Rome.

From the time the huge steamship sighted land until her distinguished passenger was escorted through cheering throngs to his prelate's throne in St. Patrick's Cathedral, his home coming was one of triumph and continuous aclamation.

He was met far down the bay by William L. McLaughlin, dean of harbor pilots, who, clambering aboard to direct the Leviathan in, first presented the new cardinal with an embossed manuscript testifying to the affection in which he was held by men of the sea.

A dozen harbor craft swarmed around the Leviathan as she reached Quarantine. These were gaily bearing municipal departmental bands and glee clubs; another carried city officials; a third decked from waterline to masthead with the yellow and white papal colors, brought high dignitaries and laymen of the church, who had come from distant cities to do the cardinal honor. A fourth was crowded with hundreds of parishioners—men, women and children—all with news reporters and photographers, and so on.

Harbor craft dinned him a salute with whistles and bells.

In the midst of it Cardinal Hayes made his first appearance on the decks of the Leviathan. A committee of priests, decorated with papal ribbons and silkhatted, and of laymen, wearing cravats of cardinal red, escorted him from the big vessel to the smaller "Machigonne" of the official welcoming delegation.

MEMBERS OF REPARATIONS COMMISSION ARRIVE HOME

New York, April 23.—Charles G. Dawes of Chicago, Owen D. Young of New York, and Henry E. Robinson of Los Angeles, authors of the reparations commission's latest plan for the restabilization of Europe, arrived on the Leviathan today, convinced that early adoption of their programme was imperative.

"We must cease talking about responsibility for the war," said one of the trio. "We must consider it as a calamity that has occurred and one that all who participated in must help pay for or we'll go broke together."

Mr. Dawes and Mr. Robinson declined to discuss any subject which bore however remotely upon the reparations plan. They delegated to Mr. Young the duty of answering questions.

To the questions how long it would be—if the plan were approved by the allies and Germany—before it could become operative and its predicted beneficial results to world economic conditions become effective, he said: (1) It depended upon how promptly the reichstag passed enabling legislation and, (2), how promptly the reparations commission, or whoever was delegated, nominated personnel for executing the plan.

Mr. Young declared the plan probably would be "a very large issue" in the impending German and French elections.

Concerning the possibilities of floating the proposed $200,000,000 loan for Germany, he said America should handle $100,000,000 of that amount; that England would be good for $75,000,000 and nations of continental Europe for the remaining $25,000,000.

Mr. Young hesitated to discuss the prospect that the plan might fail of general adoption.

REV STRATON WINS IN DEBATE WITH DR. POTTER

New York, April 23.—The Rev. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, tonight won a unanimous decision over Dr. Charles Francis Potter, pastor of the West Side Unitarian church in the fourth of their series of debates on religious modernism and fundamentalism. The question debated tonight was "Resolved, That Jesus Christ was entirely man instead of incarnate deity." Dr. Straton supported the negative.

TO SELL SHARES OF HUNGARIAN NAT'L BANK

New York, April 23.—Negotiations are in progress for American bankers to assist in the sale of shares of the Hungarian National Bank, Ltd., a central bank of issue which is to be created under the auspices of the league of nations. The bank will be capitalized at 30,000,000 gold kronens, about $6,000,000, and shares will have a par value of 100 gold crowns. Sale of the shares will mark the first step in Hungary's economic rehabilitation, which it is expected will be aided by an international loan.

Senate Amending The Revenue Bill

Votes to Modify the Corporation Tax and Repeal Tax on Telegraph and Telephone Messages.

Washington, April 23.—Modification of the corporation tax and repeal of the tax on telegraph and telephone messages was voted today by the senate in advancing consideration of the revenue bill. Notice was given, however, that contests would be made later on both of these levies.

The corporation tax was increased for 12 1-2 to 14 per cent. with the understanding that the capital stock tax would be eliminated. This latter amendment is yet to be acted upon.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking democrat on the finance committee announced that minority members were drafting a substitute, amendment, proposing to replace the present corporation tax with one carrying a graduated scale.

Pending the writing of this amendment, Senator Simmons said he would ask for postponement of consideration of the income tax rate section over which the main contest on the bill will center, these rates were reached today but were passed over at the request of the North Carolina senator.

In voting for the repeal of the tax on telegraph and telephone messages the senate rejected the recommendation of the finance committee. Repeal of this tax had been suggested by Secretary Mellon and was voted by the house. Chairman Smoot of the finance committee announced he would ask for a record vote on it later.

Senator Smooth explained the tax involved revenue amounting to $36,000,000,000 annually and it had been restored to the bill by the committee because it was found necessary to raise more revenue than would be forthcoming under the measure as framed by the house.

He was supported by Senator King of Utah, a democratic member of the committee, while Senators Willis, republican, Ohio, and McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, urged elimination of the tax.

Little opposition was voiced to the proposed change in the corporation tax, but discussion of the subject stirred up considerable debate, with Senator Jones, democrat, New Mexico, arguing against the general principle upon which the tax is levied and in favor of a graduated scale tax.

Mr. Jones was joined by Senators Norris, republican, Nebraska, and Shepstead, farmer-labor, Minnesota, in his contention that the present flat tax paves the way for evasion.

Leaders of both parties were busy today lining up their forces for the approaching fight on the income tax rates. Modifying the program announced yesterday, Chairman Smoot declared tonight he probably would go no higher in proposed amendments on a maximum surtax rate than 33 1-2 or 35 per cent. in retreating from the Mellon plan if that is defeated furthermore, he said, his amendments would not call for a reduction in the normal rate below that proposed by the treasury scheme of 3 per cent. on incomes below $4,000 and six per cent. above. Yesterday Mr. Smoot had planned to cut the normal rates to the house level.

Other republican organiation leaders, however, were preparing today to make a stand on the house income rates, adopted with the income tax schedule, which proposes a maximum surtax of 40 per cent. and lower normal rates than the house or Mellon plans.

At the same time Senator Simmons declared democrats not only stood a good chance to gain adoption of the higher surtax schedule but that the rates in this schedule might even have to be increased above 40 per cent. to satisfy the wishes of a majority. The present maximum surtax is 50 per cent.

A bitter fight is expected on the income rates, with perhaps more than a half dozen amendments to be voted upon, and leaders of both sides consider it unlikely that this section will be disposed of within two days.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER OF EAST PROVIDENCE GIRL

Lincoln, R. I., April 25.—A rudely constructed camp showing signs of recent occupancy, a blood-stained axe, a torn letter bearing a Providence address and an automobile hub cap were among the clues discovered today by authorities seeking the murderer of nine year old Clementine Cosmo, East Providence girl, whose body was found in a hastily dug grave on Cobblestone hill last night. Two men were seen in the vicinity of the grave last Friday night, woodchoppers told the police today.

Physicians who performed an autopsy on the body, reported late today that death had occurred several days ago and prior to burial. They said that death had resulted from strangulation. The body bore marks indicating a struggle.

In the search today investigators found an axe with a bloodstained handle, hidden in rocks fifty yards from the grave. Since the discovery of the crime, police had been seeking the implement used by the murderer in cutting through roots in the hurriedly scooped hollow.

Hidden from view, about half a mile from the Louis Quisset pike, the main roadway near which the grave was found, the authorities discovered the remains of a rudely built camp, consisting of two pine boughs as uprights with bed comforters flung over a supported limb, forming a tent. The ground about the tent was strewn with tin cans and jars which had contained coffee. The tins were not rusted, the police said, asserting that the absence of rust indicated comparatively recent occupancy.

FORMER OFFICIALS IN CASES BEFORE WAR DEPARTMENT

Washington, April 23.—Three former cabinet members and four former senators, all democrats, were listed by Secretary Weeks in a report to the senate today as having appeared either in person or through their law firms in cases before the war department within two years after their retirement from office and since January 1, 1918.

The cabinet members named were William G. McAdoo, A. Mitchell Palmer, and Thomas W. Gregory, and the senator were J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Hoke Smith, of Georgia, Christie Benet, of South Carolina, and Willard Saulsbury of Delaware.

FUNERAL OF C. F. MURPHY A CEREMONY OF MAGNITUDE

One Hundred Thousand Persons, of All Stations in Life, Paid Final Tribute to the Chieftain of Tammany Hall — In Front of His Home 100 Policemen Were Necessary to Keep the Crowd Moving — More Than 8,000 Persons Crowded Into St. Patrick's Cathedral For the Impressive Solemn High Mass of Requiem.

New York, April 23.—One hundred thousand persons, high and low, rich and poor, today paid their final tribute of respect to Charles F. Murphy, for two decades chieftain of Tammany Hall. Not in many years has the metropolis witnessed a funeral of such magnitude.

The impressive silence of the immense throng was the dominant note. Early in the morning such a crowd had gathered in front of his modest old fashioned home in East 17th street that a hundred policemen were necessary to keep the crowd moving.

For hours there was a steady stream of men, women and children—the majority from the Lower East Side—into the parlor where the body lay. Laborers, with lunch boxes under their arms, shop girls, silk-hatted dignitaries and women in costly gowns knelt for a moment in silent prayer before the coffin.

When the body was taken to state-ly St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth avenue, the cortege passed through streets packed with people, with heads bared. Here and there the silence was broken by the sobbing of a woman.

More than 8,000 persons crowded into the cathedral where Bishop John J. Dunn celebrated the impressive solemn high mass of requiem. Outside the edifice, 5,000 persons bowed their heads while the ceremonies were in progress.

When the services were concluded and the cortege started for Calvary cemetery in Queens, where interment was made, fully 50,000 hushed persons were packed along Fifth avenue. A thousand bluecoats lined the route to the cemetery.

The widow, who for two days had been in bed, prostrated, bore the ordeal bravely. Several times her feet faltered, but relatives assisted her.

Governor Alfred E. Smith, an old time friend of the leader, headed the honorary pall bearers. The governor plainly showed his grief. He was flanked by Mayor John F. Hylan. Other honorary bearers included United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, Norman E. Mack, democratic national committeeman; George E. Brennan, democratic leader of Illinois; James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany; Bernard M. Baruch, William J. Kelley, democratic leader of Syracuse; Hamus S. Koenig, republican county chairman; Herbert Bayard Swope of the New York World; and close political associates of Mr. Murphy.

Among others who attended the services were Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the late Woodrow Wilson, United States Senator Harrison of Mississippi; Edward Huley, former head of the shipping board; George F Mara, vice-chairman fo the democratic national committee; John R. Voorhis, 94 years old grand marshal of Tammany; State Senator James J. Walker; John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain; members of the democratic executive committees from all the boroughs, a delegation of the National Democratic club, members of the Knights of Columbus and the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

FRANCE AND BELGIUM IN ACCORD ON SEPARTIONS

Paris, April 23.—(By the Associated Press)—France and Belgium today reached a completed accord as the course to be taken by the two governments as their part in putting the reparation experts recommendations into effect.

As a result of today's decision, taken at a conference between Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Hymans of Belgium, and Premier Poincare of France, the two governments will separately endeavor to reach a similar agreement with Great Britain, after which the final untangling of the reparation snarl will be attempted in a general allied conference.

At today's conference the whole question of pressure on Germany, the results obtained from the occupation of the Ruhr and the proper form of the eventful penalties to be applied to Germany in the case of default in the execution of the experts' plan, was canvassed in its military, political and financial aspects with Marshal Foch, Paul Tirard, president of the International Rhineland commission and M. Francois-Marsal, French finance minister, participating as counsellors.

The rapidity with which the accord was reached was taken in political circles as indicating that the Belgians had agreed with Premier Poincare that some plan for the eventual application of penalties must be adopted before the allies could abandon the pledges in the Ruhr.

The next stride in the move toward a general settlement will be taken next Friday when Premier Theunis and M. Hymans will go to London to confer with Prime Minister Macdonald of Great Britain. The exchanges of views preliminary to the general conference are expected to continue until a common meeting is arranged, probably for some time soon after the French elections.

The French government, it is understood, will communicate the results of today's conference to Mr. Macdonald through the Count De Saint Aulaire, French ambassador to Great Britain, so that discussions may go on between London and Paris pending the visit of the Belgians to Chequers Court.

CHARGED WITH CARRYING BOMB AND REVOLVER

New York, April 23.—Charged with carrying a bomb and a loaded revolver, a man who gave the name of Alexander Kiss, was arrested this afternoon in Stuyvesant Park near the home of Charles F. Murphy. A few hours before the park and neighboring streets had been filled with thousands of persons, many of whom were of national prominenhce, who had gathered to pay their final respects to the dead Tammany chieftain.

A pedestrian told a patrolman that he had seen a revolver protruding from Kiss' pocket. The officer arrested the man and found in another pocket a sealed jar filled with yellow powder said by the police to be dynamite. The jar was equipped with a fuse. Four other fuses were found in the man's pocket.

In the prisoner's furnished room the police found another bomb.

Kiss who said he had been in this country five months, denied being a radical and told the police he had found the gun and had made the bombs with a view to ending his own life.

WATERBURY FIREMEN HAD 18 CALLS IN SEVEN HOURS

Waterbury, April 23.—Local firemen were called out 18 times within seven hours today to fight fires in various parts of the city, and it will go down in the annals of the department as one of the busiest days in history. The fire loss, however, was comparatively slight, as brush fires were responsible for 15 out of the 18 times that the apparatus responded to calls.

ARIZONA'S DELEGATION INSTRUCTED FOR COOLIDGE

Phoenix, Ariz., April 23.—Arizona's delegation of nine to the republican national convention was instructed "to use their utmost efforts" to secure the nomination of Calvin Coolidge by the republican state convention.

PRESIDENT URGED TO APPROVE IMMIGRATION BILL

Washington, April 23.—Approval of the immigration bill as a "great service to our country," was urged today upon President Coolidge by Senator Shortridge, republican, California.

Denying that the exclusion provision was aimed at any nation, Senator Shortridge in a letter sent to the White House declared the president was in a position to assure Japan the measure was designed solely to protect "the economic, racial, political welfare" of the United States.

"I conceive my duty," said the letter, "to address to you a few earnest words concerning the pending immigration bill which as to certain provision is now in conference.

"The two houses having agreed as to provisions in the bill which exclude from our country 'aliens ineligible to citizenship,' with certain specified exceptions, these provisions are not in conference.

"The exclusion clause of the bill under immediate consideration applies to over $50,000,000 of the human family, all of whom are denied United States citizenship. Such has been our national policy for over 134 years or since the act of 1790.

"Of the more than $50,000,000 Oriental or Asiatic people affected by this bill Japan, which contains but seven per cent of the vast number, alone affects to see in our legislation some intended insult. Of course no insult is intended. Upon a little calm reflection Japanese statesmen will perceive that in shaping our immigration policy we are not giving just cause to offense, for they will observe that we are exercising an acknowledged right even as Japan is exercising the same right."

DUSE IN DEATH COMMANDS HOMAGE PAID IN LIFE

New York, April 23.—Mme. Eleonora Duse, beloved Italian tragedienne, today commanded in death the homage she received in life.

Thousands of admirers stole a few moments from their daily tasks to kneel in reverence before the bronze casket encasing the great artiste's body in the Church of St. Vincent de Ferrer. The casket, draped with the Italian flag and banked with laurel and flowers, was mounted in a carpet where it will remain until Thursday forenoon when high mass of requiem will be celebrated. After the mass a hearse bearing the coffin will head a procession from the church to 45th street and the North river, where the bier will be placed on board the liner Duilio for transportation to Italy.

TO THOROUGHLY PROBE TAX CONDITIONS IN BRIDGEPORT

Bridgeport, April 23.—State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett after his third hearing on the taxation here today announced his intention of probing tax conditions here to the bottom. Former city officials were on the stand here this afternoon and testified concerning common council tax abatements, said by Blodgett to have totalled $177,000 during last year. The hearing will be resumed on May 6.

COURT UPHOLDS DECISION AGAINST AMERICAN T. & T.

Washington, April 23.—The supreme court refused today to review a suit against the Radio Corporation of Mexico and the De Forest Radio Telephone and Telegraph company brought by Alfred Emerison and others, involving whether the American Telephone and Telegraph company could by contract authorize the radio corporation to sue for infringement of patents on inventions relating to radio.

Coscob, Conn., April 23.—James Mulvoy, 35, employed as a lineman by the Connecticut Light and Power company, was electrocuted this afternoon when his body came into contact with high tension wires.

Mulvoy's home was in Norwalk. He was catcher for the Wallingford baseball team.

WILLIMANTIC

Public buildings, including the town building and the Bank Street Engine House of the fire department, were draped in mourning Monday in remembrance of the death of Mayor Hermisdas Dion. Photographs of the late "chief," set against black backgrounds were displayed in a number of the show windows of business houses about the city. Words of sympathy and sorrow could be heard on every side.

P. J. Laramee, president of Conseil Fleurmond No. 76 l'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique of which the late Mayor Dion was the first president, received a telegram from Elie Vezina, grand secretary Monday stating that twelve members of the general board would arrive here this (Tuesday) evening. Members and officers of the local council will meet at the Al-Pierre Tabarin at eight o'clock and will proceed to the church where the grand ritual will be carried out. The body is to lie in state this (Tuesday) evening at St. Mary's church, from 4 to 10 p. m.

The representatives of the general board will also attend the funeral.

In accordance with the city charter the office left vacant by the death of Mayor Hermisdas Dion early Sunday morning is to be filled by Alderman-at-large George W. Hickey, president of the common council, who now becomes acting mayor with full powers of the chief executive. The office of alderman-at-large which automatically becomes vacant is to be filled by the choice of the board of aldermen from candidates classified as [illegible] of the city." In relation to [illegible] who shall succeed to the [illegible] prayer upon the death, absence or resignation of the chief executive, the charter reads as follows: Section 18: "At the beginning of each municipal year the board of aldermen shall elect from among its members a president, who shall preside in the absence of the mayor and in case of death, resignation or absence or inability of the mayor to act shall possess all powers and perform all duties of the mayor, until said mayor shall return, or be able to act or until the expiration of the term for which said mayor was elected and until his successor is elected and qualified."

Ruth, the two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keiser, of Colchester sustained severe burns about her body, shortly before noon Monday, while Mrs. Keiser was out of the house. It is believed that her six year old brother, Samuel lighted a piece of newspaper and in some manner set fire to his sister's clothes. The two, with another child, were alone in the house at the time. Neighbors found the child enveloped in flames and managed to smother the fire from the child's clothes but not before she had been badly burned. It is said that the boy was seen with the lighted newspaper. The injured child was taken to a hospital in the afternoon. All the clothes was burned from the baby's body.

The old David Russ place, a landmark in the Mount Hope district, was totally destroyed by fire of unknown origin Sunday while the occupants, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Howlett were visiting relatives.

The fire was discovered by a salesman from Providence who happened to pass the place, about 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon. He rushed to the house and called for the occupants but receiving no answer he battered down the kitchen door. He found the room in flames. A general alarm was spread in the neighborhood and rural fire fighters from Storrs, Warrenville, Ashford and other surrounding localities rushed to the house but could do little, as the fire had made such a great headway. A shed and storehouse caught fire and were practically ruined. The house was burned to the foundation, nothing remaining standing but part of the chimney and the kitchen range in the center of the ruins. About two hundred spectators looked on helplessly as the flames destroyed the structure. A good sized barn was in danger of being burned but the fire force managed to save it.

The Russ place was erected about seventy-five years ago and was a large frame country house. The present owner, Clifton H. Wright purchased it about five years ago. The furniture and household contents were all destroyed. Mr. Wright, a resident of Ashford has placed his loss at about $5,000 on the house, which is partially covered by insurance. The contents were not insured.

The work of bringing to justice liquor law violators in Willimantic is progressing by leaps and bounds. Three more cases of alleged violation of the liquor law were assigned in the police court Monday morning to the already long docket to be heard next Saturday morning. The alleged bootleggers who were ordered to court on warrants are Joseph Kannell, a grocer, on Bank street, Louis Brettschneider a Chapman street store owner and E. John Connors. The cases were ordered continued to Saturday morning and the men were released on bonds of $500 each.

Miss Mary Jane Griffin, daughter of Mrs. Mary Griffin, of Bricktop Road, and John Yushalk of Norwich were united in marriage at St. Joseph's church here Monday morning at nine o'clock. Rev. Charles M. Kelley performed the ceremony, also sang the nuptial high mass. William Curry of this city was best man and Catherine Yushalk, sister of the groom was bridesmaid. The bride wore white silk, wore a wreath and veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor wore a blue silk gown and carried carnations.

The ceremony was followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride's mother. Relatives and friends attended from Norwich, Boston, Williamantic and Franklin. Mr. and Mrs. Yushalk are on a honeymoon journey to Boston and upon the return they will reside with Mrs. Griffin. The bride received many gifts. The groom is employed in the local plant of the Providence Dairy Company; the bride has been employed at the American Thread Company plant.

A garage, leased by the state highway department on the state road, about half a mile east of Andover station, was broken into and robbed Saturday morning. Entrance was made through a window and small property belonging to the employes was stolen. Arthur Nye who leases his car in the garage during the day reported tools missing and Francis Freidrick reported similar losses. A fur coat belonging to Mr. Waylette, an employe was also taken. The state police are conducting an investigation.

At the office of the town clerk, Frank P. Panton there are fourteen death certificates on record for March. Eight of these dying were over fifty years of age. Following is the list:

30—Annie M. Kenfield, 65, bronchial pneumonia.

31—Kenneth R. Brown, 15, acute suppurative appendicitis.

Jefferson H. Hooker, 86 died Sunday at his home 290 Prospect street after four weeks' illness. Mr. Hooker was associated with his brother, the late Chauncey Hooker in the hotel business here. The latter erected the Hotel Hooker and the business connections between the two brothers began. Both brothers retired in 1909. Mr. Hooker was a man of genial disposition and to meet him was to always remember him as a friend. He was born in Sturbridge, Mass., November 12, 1837, a son of Levens A. and Carolina Clemons Hooker.

He is survived by his wife, a sister, Mrs. Wilbur Witter of North Brookfield, Mass., and a daughter Mrs. F. L. Alsaugh of this city Mr. Hooker was a member of the Venerable Club. His wife was Hattie E. Bradley, of Seymour.

Funeral services for Mrs. Maria Provost were held from the home of her daughter, Mrs. William F. Owens of 47 West Park street Monday morning. Requiem high mass at nine o'clock in St. Mary's church was sung by Rev. J. J. Pipilon Mrs. J. P. Gaudreau was at the organ. The bearers were, Cleophas Turcotte, Albert Kelly, Louis Gervais, Amarie Rivard, Marcel Fontaine and Joseph Racicot. A committal service was conducted at St. Joseph's cemetery by Rev. Father Papillon. The attendance of relatives and friends was large and many beautiful floral tributes were sent. Funeral arrangements were in charge of the Turteau-Bosse Corp.

It was stated Monday by Chief James J. Tighe that Mr. and Mrs. William Hinckley had called at his office and cleared their names of any blame for the calling out of all the fire apparatus, for a brush fire outside the city limits, Saturday afternoon. The fire officials are satisfied that they had accused the wrong parties.

John Michael of Mansfield avenue collided with an automobile owned by Dr. F. E. Guild and driven by his chauffeur, Clarence Ellison, while riding his bicycle down Walnut street recently. The boy was thrown but was uninjured. Some damage was done to the bicycle which will be repaired by Dr. Guild.

Ralph Lee, of Greenemdale, was charged with speeding within the city limits, at the session of police court Monday morning. Leo was arrested about midnight Saturday by Officer Bombria. The man pleaded guilty but said that his mount was nothing more than a Ford and at its best could not make very fast time. Due to injuries sustained Sunday night the officer who made the arrest could not be present in court and Chief MacArthur informed the court that Leo was alleged to have been traveling thirty-five miles an hour. Judge Dean imposed a fine of $25 and costs, amounting to $30.15 which was paid.

A Pierce-Arrow coupe parked by the road in Phoenixville, one mile south of the bridge caught fire and was destroyed, shortly before noon Sunday. A party of Willimantic people came along whe nthe machine was blazing and attempted to put out the fire with stand and water but to no avail. Within twenty minutes nothing but the iron work of the [illegible] and the chasis was left.

The machine was owned by a Massachusetts party, who were fishing the river at Phoenixville. When the men returned the sight of the wreck failed to excite them. One calmly remarked: "That's tough luck! Now I'll have to buy another."

At a special meeting of the common council, held Monday evening with Acting Mayor George W. Hickey presiding a resolution was unanimously adopted on the death of Mayor Hermisdas Dion. The members of this board voted to attend the funeral in a body and ordered the common council chamber draped in mourning for a period of thirty days. The resolution, introduced by Alderman William A. Buck was approved by the acting mayor.

Plans for the suspension of school activities during the services were discussed at a special session of the town school committee held Monday evening. The members will attend the services. During the funeral from 10 a. m. to noon all stores and shops in the city will be closed and it is expected that the various manufacturing plants will suspend operations during those hours.

Monday evening the members of the common council paid a visit of condolence and respect to the home of the chief executive, 26 Ash street.

JEWETT CITY

Joseph Guillotte gave a reception Saturday evening in Bijou hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Fountaine and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Guillotte. The bride of the former couple and the groom of the latter are Joseph Guillotte's daughter and son, respectively. A large company of relatives and friends enjoyed a social evening, the guests being there to give them welcome as the young couples arrived. Their honeymoon was passed in Central Falls, R. I., New Bedford and Springfield, Mass. Their new homes will be on School street in the new Dawley apartments, which were erected last summer.

The borough electric light commission has completed its part of the new lighting system that is being arranged for Sylvandale and a short ways down the state road.

The construction work has been done by Supt. E. S. Hiscox and Wilfred LeClaire. For the Sylvandale part there has been eight new poles erected, one being a 40-footer, which carries a new 10 K. W. transformer. Those to whom the light is continued are E. F. Burleson, F. D. Ballou, Alex McCluggage, Baptist parsonage and Frank Johnson. The part being put up by those to be served with light includes David Bothwell, Charles Wolf, John Whalley, Sherman Waters, A. F. Anderson and Paul Geist.

The superintendent will oversee such lines as border the state road. The poles to be erected in the fields, will be attended to by the property owners. There will be for them to furnish, not far from three miles of wire, and about 50 poles, each customer will have a separate small transformer. When this new system is in working order it will be taken over by the borough commission, and their superintendent will read the meters and make collections, as in the borough.

Wasn't that an awful auto smash in Lisbon Sunday? Insure today with Burdick and McNicol.—adv.

Jewett City swung into line on the advanced time without slipping a cog. To those who set their time-pieces ahead there is no change in the time for taking the trains or trolleys at the local station. To illustrate: the 7.03 trolley for Norwich in the evening, still goes at 7.03 by the time-piece that has been advanced. The only change in the train schedule is, the forenoon steam train for New London now leaves at 11.01, advanced time, and connects at New London for New York. Under the previous schedule, when this train left Jewett City at 10.44, one could connect at New London with the Colonial express for Washington, D. C. The present operation of trains destroys this connection.

There is always more or less of visiting between Jewett City and her sister borough a few miles up the line. Business as well as friendly relations are always in closest harmony. During the advanced time epoch it is hard to figure, with Danielson holding to standard time, whether one going there from Jewett City will arrive before he starts or after he gets back.

Not so long ago, this section, with its large tracts of woodland, was able to market to all the country around, the finest of chestnut poles, ranging in height from 30 to 60 feet. The work of the chestnut blight has been as complete as it has been deadly. Withing a few weeks local timber sections have been searched, and the woods literally combed, to locate the necessary poles for new electric light and telephone construction. Harry Fitch, of Lisbon, was able to furnish a few, but they had been killed by the blight, as they stood in the forest. Several handsome 50-foot trees, straight as a candle, and sound as a silver dollar, were dead. Rot does not ruin these blight-killed trees for several years. The boss of a trunk line telegraph gang, learning where a certain forty-footer came from, allowed no lost time as he drove to the farm with everything open. The day of the Griswold chestnut pole, once so plentiful and so valuable, is about done.

Tree buds and early out-of-doors flowers, made an appreciable gain Monday from sunrise to sunset. June never could boast of a rarer day than the weatherman gave to this borough Monday. With a warm air from the south and the mercury standing above 70, everything that lives took a new lease of life. One man said, as he admired the new green lawns, and viewed the budding trees, that this old town was good enough for him, b'gosh.

Miss Gladys Jeffers had as week-end guests, her cousin, Harbert Jeffers Smith of Phenix, R. I., Earl Johnson of Providence and Marion Wickie of Atlanta, Georgia.

The invitation dance held under the auspices of Faith chapter, O. E. S., was very well attended Friday evening. The platform was decorated with ferns, potted plants and with flowers donated by Mrs. A. A. Young. Music was by Morey's orchestra, with Prof. Tinkham, of Hanover, prompter. The committee was Mrs. Grace Webster, Miss Gladys Jeffers and Miss Ethel Thompson.

PLAINFIELD

Twenty-two members of Plainfield Grange, P. of H. 149, attended the Quinebaug Pomona No. 4, held in Abington Grange hall, Saturday evening, when the fifth, or Pomona degree was worked on a class of 33 candidates. Ten of the members of the class were members of Plainfield grange. A supper was served to the guests, before the meeting by members of Wolf Den Grange of Abington.

The subject of the pastor's sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning was Walking in the Garden. The evening service was a variation from the usual evening service the members of the Congregational church at Canterbury Green being especially invited to this service. Assisting the pastor were Rev. Ralph Knight, the present pastor of the Canterbury church, and C. L. Butler, who, with Rev. Mr. Prentiss, spoke on the topic, How Jesus Loved and Served. Short discourses on this subject were heard from Jason P. Lathrop, and Clarence Winser. The new organ was used for this service, with Harold Burgess, organist at the Moosup Baptist church, playing.

The high school started on its new time schedule Monday morning, school opening at 8 o'clock, and closing in the afternoon, at 1.30. This change was made necessary by the changing of the time of the trolleys, since most of the students at the school go to and from school by trolley.

James Muldoon and Oyer Lemieux, manager and assistant manager at the local A. & P. store, were in Providence Wednesday last attending a banquet and dance, which were coupled with a meeting of the employes of the A. & P. stores of the Providence district. During the meeting, the winners of the contest for the largest gain in sales during the past year were announced, the local store taking third prize among sixteen of the stores of the Providence district.

The Knockers' club held its weekly meeting recently, in the club rooms, with the president in the chair. After the transaction of business, addresses were heard from several of the members. Two of the best were by Joseph Labrecqu on the Secret Service and the Eighteenth Amendment and by John Albro, who related a story of a snake which he shot back in the 70's. Mr. Albro's story was that the snake, the species of which he did not give, was 18 feet long, and two feet in circumference at the largest point. He could not carry the snake home alone, being forced to hire a horse to haul it to his home, five miles distant. He placed it on exhibition, leaving it there for some time, many people from distant places coming to see it.

At the last meeting, a jumping contest was held, the contest being won by Officer Greenwood, who defeated John Albro by a small margin.

Joseph Labrecque, Nelson Greenwood, Joshua Peterson, Robert Barry and Frank Guertin were holders at Narragansett Pier during the week end. Although they did not have very good luck, all reported an excellent time.

Duffy Piche visited his father in Rhode Island over the week-end.

George Ouillette spent Sunday in Pomfret.

Adelard Lafleah and family spent the week end in Occum.

Jessie Miller was a caller in Baltic Monday.

Miss Rose Champagne and brother Alfred Champagne spent the week end at the home of Joseph Lafleah.

Clarence Bateson demonstrated his skill as a disciple of Isaac Walton when, Saturday, he exhibited a fine string of three trout, one of two pounds, and the other two weighing one and one-half pounds each.

Jewett City Odd Fellows avenged up the score with Plainfield, when Thursday evening, they invaded Plainfield territory, and defeated the bowlers representing the Plainfield Odd Fellows, by a margin of 48 pins. Each team has now won a match from the other, and it was decided to re" the deciding match in Danielson. Following are the scores:

STAFFORD SPRINGS

State Policeman Harmon, Hadesty Hurlburt and Heinold of the local barracks, assisted by Deputy Sheriff Hayes and officers from the Hartford barracks raided the saloon of George Panciera and the Bernarda pool room on Main street, Saturday afternoon. In the Panciera establishment they found a half gallon of moonshine whiskey 25 half pints of jamaica ginger, a quart of Vermouth and a large supply of bitters which, upon analysis, was found to contain 37 per cent. alcohol. In Bernarda's place a quantity of wet goods was secured the nature of which will be determined by having it analyzed. The officers also seized a slot machine and a den punch boards. Panciera pleaded guilty to the charge of keeping with intent to sell, reputation and two sales. Judge Heald imposed a fine of $350 and a jail sentence of 30 days, provided that if Panciera dismantles his place within two weeks the jail sentence be remitted. The case against A. D. Bernarda was continued until Thursday.

Aldo Bernardo who has been in charge of the place for several months was out of town when the road was made. William Weber who was found in the Bernarda pool room said that he simply had charge of it for the day. He pleaded guilty to receiving money from a slot machine and paid a fine of $20 and costs amounting in all to $30.06. Panciero's fine and costs amounted to $369.00.

Matthew Sullivan was sentenced to six months in jail, by Judge Heald, for assault on his wife, breach of the peace and intoxication.—Mrs. Sullivan appeared in court and exhibited a badly bruised face and a black eye which she said her husband gave her Saturday night.

NOANK

The Black Tigers held a New England supper in their club room Saturday night. About 15 members attended. The room was attractively decorated. The president of the club Dexter Holliday gave a short address which was enjoyed by all. Places were reserved for the officers. Berand Carson and Keith Eckerts served them, and at the end they gave three cheers and songs. The club is open to the public at any time. The Black Tigers baseball team did not play Saturday as the New London team did not come over.

Herbert Fitch of Jacksonville, Fla., is spending a few days with relatives here.

Lewis Main of New Haven was a caller in town Saturday.

Charles Wolveston after spending his vacation here, returned to Yale college Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Sennlott of Hartford were at their cottage at Groton Long Point for the week-end.

Charles Ward of New London was a caller in town Sunday.

Mary Ward and Rube Jewett of Mystic were in town Sunday.

Quite a few baseball fans attended the game in Groton Sunday.

Ken Butson was a caller in Mystic Sunday.

Black snakes have been seen. One Saturday at Groton Long Point was about five feet long.

George Lamb was a caller in West Mystic.

BLACK HILL

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Exley have a red mark on their calendar for Friday, April 25, this being the date of the 35th anniversary of their marriage. A very merry party assembled at their home to help them celebrate. All the children and grandchildren were present with one exception. Lucius, who is a student in an Ohio college. A number of old friends from various towns were present to offer congratulations. A very tempting lunch was served and a social time was enjoyed, during which memories of the past 35 years were revived and discussed.

Horace G. Brown of Worcester is visiting his brother H. Beecher Brown.

Selectman Chabot has greatly improved the highways in this section.

Roger C. Brown of New Haven spent the week-end with his parents.

Several from Black Hill attended an interesting meeting Friday evening of the Poultry club.

Mrs. Nathan Exley and William Exley, Mr. and Mrs. Everett E. Brown, Mrs. H. Beecher Brown, Stanley and Helen Brown attended the Pomona meeting at Ashington Saturday evening, at which nearly 300 were present and a class of over 80 was given the fifth degree. Natchaug grange won the prize for highest attendance.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

A battalion of a hundred men started the job of excavating a trench from Danielson to Putnam, a distance of over nine miles as the route will be followed Monday, when the operations that will bring about the laying of a high pressure gas main between the two places began to hit its real stride. No difficulty was experienced by the representatives of the Eastern Connecticut Power company in getting the laborers. There was a surplus of applicants so married men were given the preference and set to work. They made the dirt fly from the first hour they were employed and at the end of the first day's operations had made a very creditable showing. The force of workers was strung along Mechanic street, from Hutchins street to a point north of Westfield avenue. With each man digging less than 57 feet a day of trench which will be a little more than three feet in depth, a half mile of trench will have been completed each nightfall.

The progress made Monday indicates that the job of putting in the gas main is going to be accomplished in fast time, considering the magnitude of the work. Laying of the pipes also will go through rapidly. In addition to the pipes already put down at points where they are to be installed other carloads of them are set on the siding near Attawaugan crossing and were being unloaded Monday.

It has been seen again! Its footprints have been found! It has been shot at—possibly wounded! The strange animal appears in the news again this morning—just crashes its way in and will not be denied in obscurity. Charles A. Benham, who lives on the old Kendall place, a mile north of Wauregan, on the Brooklyn road, has both seen and shot at it. John Harrington, resident in the Church screet section of Brooklyn, Eli J. Dagenias of Danielson and Dr. William Saretzki of Putnam, all well known hunters, have seen the animal's tracks.

The mystery animal, however, remains unidentified as to species. Mr. Benham declares that he does not know what it is, and he is familiar with all the native animals. Dr. Saretzki and the other men who have seen its tracks declare they are entirely puzzled as to what it may be. Dr. Saretzki is a bit inclined to the belief that it is a kangaroo, but Mr. Benham, who has seen and shot at it, does not incline to that theory, though he declares that it hops along instead of running in an open stride, as does a dog or other various animals known hereabouts when they are hitting the high spots.

Mr. Benham got a shot at it as it was heading through an open field toward a state road running between Brooklyn and Wauregan. It was just at dusk. The animal evidently was bound for the Allen hill section, where it was first reported as being seen. It saw Mr. Benham as he came along the road and turned and fled in the direction from which it came when it saw him. He let go at the strange thing and believes that some of the shot from his gun peppered it, but it kept going and disappeared in the woods.

The tracks, more than a score, can be seen by any one interested enough to go there, just to the west of a brook that passes under the road beyond the John Harrington farm and just east of the Beigh Gardner Jr. farm in the Church street section of Brooklyn. The tracks are clearly imprinted in the sand in a gutter beside the roadway. By actual measurement they are 6 1-2 inches in length and, where the five toe marks spread out, are four inches in width. At what may be termed the heel and instep the tracks are about 2 1-2 inches in width. The entire track is very much different from that of any animal known to inhabit this region.

All the foregoing makes queer reading but is based on fact. A determined effort to get the animal has been formulated in the minds of many hunters.

At St. James' church, Monday morning, at 8.30 Miss Delia LaBonte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. LaBonte of Connecticut Mills avenue, and Omer Durand of Putnam were united in marriage. Rev. F. X. Richards performed the ceremony and was celebrant of the high nuptial mass, which was attended by many relatives and friends.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and wore a veil. Her bouquet was of bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Antoinette LaBonte, the latter's gown being of lavender satin, with hat to match and carried a bouquet.

William Durand, brother of the bridegroom was best man.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by the organist, Mrs. Joseph Gareau, for the processional, and the wedding march from Lohengrin for the recessional, the violin accompaniment being by John Maher. At the offertory, Ave Maria was sung by Miss Albina Boucher.

Following the church service there was a reception for a large number at St. John's hall. Refreshments were served and dancing followed. Later in the day there were many guests at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride received many beautiful gifts, Mr. and Mrs. Durand left during the day for a wedding trip.

Clara Adams, 21, was lying dangerously ill Monday afternoon and her brother, 7, was recovering, after both had eaten of a chemical mixture of a poisonous nature used in spraying potato plants and such, which they found at their home. Late Monday afternoon the condition of the little girl was so serious that there was some doubt as to her chances for recovery. The sick children are stepchildren of Thomas Grady and live at the Byron Wood place, opposite the plant of the Larkin Reed company on East Franklin street. Medical assistance was quickly sought for the children upon their becoming ill and knowledge gained of what they had been eating. The little boy responded to treatment more readily than the little girl, who remained in a semi-conscious condition late Monday afternoon. The family only recently moved into their present home and it is believed the children found the poisonous mixture in their explorations about the place.

State officers from the local barracks were at Putnam Monday, to appear as witnesses in the case of Samuel Smith, charged with violations of the liquor law, and bound over for trial at the superior court, as told in the Putnam news this morning. Among the many spectators, numerous enough to fill the superior court room, were a number from this place.

Fine progress is being made on the construction of the new dancing pavilion being erected at Wildwood park by P. J. Sheridan, who has managed the popular summer resort for several years past and is now the owner of the property. The new pavilion is larger and more attractive than the one that was torn down that it might be replaced by the new structure. The new pavilion is something on the order of the Bal Tabarin at Hartford and when completed and ready for use during the coming month will be one of the finest structures in this part of the state.

Secretary Harold B. Atwood of the Danielson Rod and Gun club said Monday that arrangements are practically completed for the annual banquet of the organization Thursday evening. Members are much interested in the event and a large number of them will be in attendance. A feature at the banquet will be an address by a representative of the largest manufacturers of powder for firearms in the country.

At St. James' church Monday morning, Miss Anna Privey and Leo Peloquin, both residents in the Connecticut Mills section of Danielson, were united in marriage by Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., who also was also celebrant of the nuptial mass.

The strength of the Federal Reserve System is behind your deposits if made in the savings department of The Windham County National Bank. —adv.

Mrs. Lucien Lambert has been appointed chairman of a committee that is to hold a whist under the auspices of the Catholic Welfare council.

C. B. Dolbeare of Pawtucket was a visitor with friends in Danielson Monday.

J. C. Witter and N. A. Witter were at Woodstock Monday conducting an auction sale at the Spalding place.

This is vacation week for the pupils of the graded schools in Danielson and elsewhere in the town of Killingly.

State officers are still keeping a careful lookout for overloaded motor trucks. One large vehicle was held up for inspection by Officers Edward Stephens, in the business section, Monday at noon.

Bodies that have been in the receiving vault at St. James cemetery during the winter months were being interred Monday.

The 18-inch trout reported in this column Monday as having been caught by William M. Franklin turns out to have been a pickerel, on a journey up a nearby trout brook, so the boys who are out for the Rod and Gun club prize still have a chance.

PUTNAM

While about everyone in the neighborhood was away to an auction at the Dr. Spalding place in Woodstock Monday afternoon, fire of unknown origin broke out at the George H. Shaw farm, near the farm of Leonard H. Healey at North Woodstock and caused a total loss of the two and one-half story house, the barn and sheds on the premises. The loss is estimated at between $4,000 and $5,000.

There was no one at the farm when the fire broke out, Mr. Snow being away on a fishing trip. Motorists who happened along saw smoke issuing from the barn and stopped to investigate. Finding no one answering to their alarm of fire, they went to the barn and released a horse and three cows, which were taken out safely.

Word was sent to the Spalding place where many were gathered at the auction, but by the time those who came to help arrived at the Snow farm the buildings were practically consumed, having burned like tinder. Included in the loss was a considerable amount of antique furniture of considerable value.

Work is about to be resumed on the extension of the cement highway out through Killingly avenue, from a point where the work ceased last November. Stakes have been set out as guides for the route to be followed and along which the old macadam, in a very poor state of repair, is to be torn out as one of the first operations this spring. At the present time the new roadway extends from Grove street cemetery at Grove street to a point near the Putnam-Killingly line. The contract to be completed will carry the road well across the line into the town of Killingly, within about a mile of Attawaugan. Materials to be used in the construction are being assembled and the work will be underway within a few days.

At his office here, Dr. William Saretzki has a drawing of the footprints of the strange animal that has been seen several times within the past two weeks in the town of Brooklyn, where Dr. Saretzki frequently visits and where he has done much hunting in past seasons. The track, unlike that of any other animal known hereabouts, is 6 1-2 inches in length and 4 inches in width at the point where the animal's five toes made an imprint in the sand where the tracks were found, near the Hugh Gorman, Jr., place in Brooklyn. Dr. Saretzki is not at all satisfied as to what kind of an animal made the track, but is more than half inclined to think that it is that of some kangaroo that has escaped from some zoo or circus and wandered into this territory.

Eugene Bibeault, many years resident in this city, was knocked down Sunday evening, at Richmond and Main streets, when he was struck by a car driven by a Grosvenordale young man. Mr. Bibeault received attention for what happily proved to be minor injuries at the office of Dr. J. F. Russell. He was able to return to his duties at Willimantic Monday morning. Mr. Bibeault was for years employed at the Putnam inn, but has been a resident of Willimantic for several years.

Of interest to young people who may be desirous of entering the State Trade school in this city, and who are resident of other towns in the eastern section of the state is the opinion obtained from Attorney General Healey, that the state board of education is well within its discretionary powers in paying transportation of such out of town students. The tuition at the school is free. The transportation decision is of interest at this season, when many who are finishing school would like to take a trade school course if expense did not stand in the way.

A number from this city were at Danielson Monday morning to attend at St. James' church the wedding of Miss Delia LaBonte of Danielson and Omer Durand of this city. William Durand, brother of the groom, was best man.

Lewis F. Battey will be in New Haven today (Tuesday) attending a meeting of the Americanization officers for Connecticut. Mr. Lewis is at the head of the Americanization work in this city.

A considerable number of Putnam people were at the Dr. Spalding place in Woodstock to attend an auction sale being held there Monday.

One hundred men are engaged on the excavation work for the trench for the high pressure gas main to be run by the Eastern Connecticut Power company between this city and Danielson.

Jacob Alpert of the S-A Amusement company was in New Haven Monday on a business trip.

Funeral services for William Henry Boissoneau, Jr., drowned in the Quinebaug river last Wednesday, were held Monday afternoon at the home of his parents in Manhasset village. Burial was in Grove Street cemetery.

Local members of the organization have received notification that the annual banquet of the Danielson Rod and Gun club is to be held in that place on Thursday evening of this week.

There are to be special devotions at St. Mary's church during May, in accordance with custome.

The operation of New Haven road passenger trains on an earlier schedule Monday caused some confusion for those who had not posted themselves relative to the change.

SAMUEL SMITH, HOTEL MAN HELD IN BONDS OF $2,000

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, April 28.—Such was public interest Monday when the hearings of cases against Samuel Smith and Thomas Cully, charged with violations of the liquor laws, came before the city court that adjournment from the court room in the municipal building to the superior court room was found advisable, to accommodate all those who wished to attend. The hearing was long drawn out and ran into an afternoon session. At the close of the arguments Judge M. H. Geissler found probable cause for holding Smith for trial in the superior court, fixing his bonds at $2,000, on charges of reputation and keeping with intent to sell. A count alleging A sale on April 5 resulted in a not guilty finding. On similar counts Culley was found guilty on one and fined $25 and costs of $15.14, and the other two counts were continued for a period of six months.

On the witness stand, Culley repudiated a lease put in as an exhibit, this lease, executed last October, setting forth that Culley had taken over the management of the hotel from Smith, owner of the property. The lease was executed after Smith had been found guilty, last September, of violating the liquor laws and after presentation with a group of other Putnam men in the superior court on bench warrants served 15 days at the county jail in Brooklyn.

Culley, on the witness stand, represented himself as having been no more than a room clerk and a man for all round work at the hotel during all his employment there.

He was sharply cross-examined by Attorney Irving H. Miron, counsel for Smith, as to sales of liquor about the hotel since last October and particularly as to whether he had seen any of the members of the Putnam police force about the place, not in their capacity as officers, but as visitors and habitues. Culley denied ever having seen Captain William J. Jarvis at the hotel, but admitted having seen Patrolman John Ryan there, engaged in playing games of cards with a group of men. He never recalled seeing Officer Ryan obtain any liquor. At this time he was testifying as a witness in the case of the state vs. Smith. On the ground that to answer might incriminate him Culley declined to answer direct questions of Attorney Miron relative to sales of liquor at the hotel. The refusal, on the advice of Culley's counsel, Attorney E. C. Morse, precipitated sharp discussion on the point between counsel in the case, Attorney Miron insisting that Culley be required to answer. The court ruled that the particular question over which the controversy centered might be admissable if put in different form, but Attorney Miron did not press the issue. Nothing of particular interest developed from the examination of several witnesses, asked as to the reputation of the place, until William Kirby, who roomed at the City hotel until about four weeks ago was called to the stand. He testified to having purchased liquor of Culley on one occasion.

Interest in the proceedings sharpened when Miss Mollie Smith, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Smith, testified that on one occasion last summer she was in the kitchen of the hotel when she heard a crash, and, looking out, saw Patrolman Ryan at the wheel of her father's car, the machine having hit an obstruction. Her testimony and that of her mother, Mrs. Lea Smith, was along the line that Officer Ryan had been in the habit of making trips to Providence with her father to get beer and on the occasion of the crash supplies were being obtained preparatory to making ready for the crowds who would be in the city for the Elks' fair.

Testifying in his own behalf Officer Ryan denied all of this and said he had never driven Smith's car excepting upon one occasion on School street in this city. He had never been to Providence with him to get beer or liquor, he insisted, under cross-examination by Attorney Miron.

The first national chemical equipment exposition is to be held in Providence, R. I., next year, in connection with the meeting of the American Engineers.

GALES FERRY

At Sunday morning worship preceding the sermon, Rev. W. D. Woodward received Stanley C. Faford into membership, with the church, by letter, from the M. E. church of Mystic, and extended him the right hand of fellowship. The offertory solo, More Love to Thee, was sung by D. E. Povey. Rev. Mr. Woodward prefaced his sermon by speaking to the children, from the topic, What a Brick Can Teach. Psalm 61: 14. The text was "Faithful is he that calleth you who also will do it." At the close of the service a vote was taken to adopt daylight saving time for the church services beginning Sunday, May 4. It was also planned to hold the Sunday school sessions at 9.30 o'clock, in the vestry instead of at noon. Church notices included for the week, District Superintendent Rev. W. H. Bath of Norwich to hold first quarterly conference with this church, Thursday evening at 7.30 D. S. T. An invitation to the Gales Ferry Epworth League to attend The Mohegan Trail Circuit League, at the M. E. church, New London, Friday evening, May 9, at 7.45 D. S. T. At the Sunday school session at noon awards for regular attendance were given as follows: Myrtice Coman, gold star, one year; Matilda Harold, silver star, one year and six months; Helen L. Colver and C. E. Colver, Jr., each gold wreath, for two years; Robert Allyn, rolled gold pin, ten months, gun metal star, one year and four months, to Harold Huributt. Enid Latimer, rolled gold pin, ten months; Margaret Parker and Eleanor Smith, each a gold star pin, for four years.

At the Epworth League evening service with the Rev. W. D. Woodward leader, the topic was, Taking Paul's Advice. Following the service of song Rev. Mr. Woodward gave a talk on Korea, in the interest of the World Service work, preceding the topic of the evening. Readings on the topic, were given by Mrs. Fanny A. Molthrop, Miss Jennie G. Perkins, Mrs. W. D. Woodward, Miss Alice Satterlee and Mrs. Alton Stoddard. Misses Myrtice Coman and Margaret Parker sang The Sweet Bye and Bye. At the close of the service a nominating committee was named for the Epworth League officers, for election for next year. Miss Satterlee, R. Irving Huributt, Mrs. Andrew P. Miller.

Four new electric lights were added to the streets of the village, last week by the Eastern Connecticut Power company, three being on the Main street of the village and one at Huributt's Corners, one near the M. E. church and another below Twin Oak cottage, with the fourth on Library lane.

Edgar F. Chapman of Groton had as his guests his sisters, Mrs. Stephen Perkins of Brier Hill, Groton, and Mrs. Halmon L. Parkins, with her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Birch of Gales Ferry, to motor Saturday to Palmertown, to call on their cousin, Mrs. George O. Allen.

Robert Miller, radio operator of the S. S. Newton, arrived Friday evening to spend a few days at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Andrew P. Miller while the steamer is in dry dock at Boston.

Miss Jennie G. Perkins attended a meeting of the New London Northfield club, at the parlors of the First Baptist church in that city Saturday afternoon, when her former teacher, Miss Fannie G. Hatch brought greetings from the Northfield schools. Miss Perkins was made secretary of the club.

The contests were under the direction of S. Hussey Reed, state supervisor of the schools of Preston, Bozrah, Ledyard and North Stonington. The team from Gales Ferry was taken to Poquetanuck by Karl Nylen Sr., by automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Faford, with guests from Mystic, motored to Norwich Saturday evening, to attend the Broadway theater.

Mrs. Billings F. S. Crandall of Stoddard's Wharf, Miss Alice Satterlee of Gales Ferry, with Mrs. James A. Stoddard of Long ove, members of Anna Warner Bailey chapter, D. A. R. attended a meeting of the chapter in Westerly Thursday.

Mrs. Charles W. Pierce and sons John Kappes and Jay Stoddard Pierce and Mrs. Pierce's sister, Mrs. Walter Duffy and three children, moved last week from West New York, N. J., to the former home of Mrs. Pierce's mother-in-law, the late Mrs. Charles J. Pierce at Allyn's Point, which it is understood they have purchased.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Maynard of Preston were recent visitors at the home of Mr. Maynard's mother, Mrs. Eliza D. Maynard in the Stoddard district.

Mrs. Robert Townsend of Plainville was a recent visitor at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rufus W. [illegible] but.

Endorses the LIFEBUOY Health Protection Movement

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
CITY OF NORWICH
CONNECTICUT

Lever Bros. Co.,
Cambridge, Mass.

Gentlemen:

In my opinion you are making a real contribution to the cause of Health Protection, and it gives me pleasure to endorse your campaign.

Science has shown very clearly, I think, that most sickness is avoidable, and that the surest every day protection to health is to keep clean.

I compliment you on the impressive manner in which you are presenting this health argument in Lifebuoy advertising.

You may reproduce this letter in your health propaganda publicity.

Sincerely yours,
MILO R. WATERS,
Mayor.

The MAYOR'S LETTER

Health's surest safeguard

It agrees with your skin

HEALTH AUTHORITIES say that mothers and school teachers are doing more to protect the health of the community than all other influences combined—

Simply by teaching children constantly to PURIFY their hands.

School children are democratic. They all touch the same things—books, door knobs, stair rails—and one another. Some of these children come from homes less clean than yours—where they are careless about sickness.

It is the habit of personal cleanliness as taught in school and home, which safeguards the health and good looks of millions of children and prevents them from spreading contagion.

Gracious to skin

Lifebuoy is a perfect health soap because it is so pure and mild that it can be used many times a day with benefit to the skin.

Yet the wonderful antiseptic released in the rich, creamy lather removes germs and gives real protection to health.

This gentle antiseptic exerts a soothing influence, tones up the skin, keeping it soft, smooth and attractive—with the rosy underglow of a radiant complexion.

So that your whole family may keep well and happy enforce this simple home law: "Lifebuoy when you get up, after work or play, before eating and before going to bed."

You will quickly become fond of Lifebuoy—especially of its wholesome, vanishing odor—it gives one such a comfortable feeling of being utterly, safely clean. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

THE CHOICE AS KEYNOTER.

In the selection of Congressman Burton of Ohio as the temporary chairman and keynoter of the Cleveland convention choice rests upon one who can be regarded as sane and sound. This is an important post in the convention. A man well equipped for the duties is necessary and in the gaining of one of Ohio's sons who's judgment is well known throughout the country during the long period that he has served in Washington such a man has been chosen.

The selection of a man from the mid-west is fitting. That is the section of the country from which appeals for recognition are coming, and because of the excellent prospects of the nominee being from the east it has been desirable to avoid easterners for this position.

Congressman Burton has served both in the senate and the house. He began his congressional service in that body where he served for several terms before being advanced to the senate. Following that he dropped out of Washington activities only to be returned to the house where he stands as a stalwart supporter of good government. He has demonstrated repeatedly his ability as a statesman and he can be relied upon to sound the party's keynote in a manner that will inspire the convention, emphasize the party's policies and bring about that enthusiasm and solidarity that is expected of the convention and the campaign to follow.

As a constructive figure in the national legislature his choice should cause favorable reaction in all sections of the country. The extremists on neither side have been favored. The tendency has been to keep away from representatives of such branches of the party in the effort to harmonize the factions by a straightforward, middle of the road course. Probably no better man could have been selected for that duty than Congressman Burton of Ohio. As a keynoter he should be as successful as he has been as a member of congress where his rating is high in the opinion of members of both parties.

CHILD LABOR RESOLUTION.

Decisive is the action of the lower house of congress regarding the resolution favoring a child labor amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It reflects the same spirit that was manifested when the child labor law was adopted, only to be found later on, after scrutiny by the supreme court, to be unconstitutional. This resolution has now advanced one step beyond the committee report. What reception it will get in the senate remains to be seen, but with favorable action by the upper house and the approval of the president it would then require the favorable action of three-fourths of the states in ratification in order to make it effective.

Not a little opposition to the resolution has come from the fact that it is regarded as taking away the rights of states and as controlling the labor of children to an unjustified age.

By the resolution congress would have the power to limit, regulate or prohibit the labor of children under 18 years of age. The resolution gives no inkling as to what congress would do under such authority. Because it might have the right to prohibit the labor of boys and girls under 18 doesn't necessarily mean that it would go to any such extent. It is because there is a well founded belief that there should be no such prohibition to any such age that opposition has arisen and efforts have been made to modify that particular figure.

In endeavoring to get a proper regulation of child labor through federal control, there ought not to be a willingness to overdo the matter. It is only natural to find much opposition to the idea of giving congress the authority to regulate or prohibit employment of children under 18. It seems to set a goal, even though the goal may not be approached by such regulations as may now be contemplated, provided the amendment is adopted.

The fight against child labor is one that has properly gained strength in the last two decades. It is important that it should continue and that children should get the protection and the opportunities they are entitled to, but there is reason to guard against making mollycoddles by law.

DIVIDING IRELAND.

Probably it was too much to expect permanent peace to prevail in Ireland as the result of the setting up of the Free State government. There were those in the part of Ireland which that government covers who were opposed to it. They have done their best to upset it and to have a republic established. It has meant the loss of many lives and much property, and the creation of serious disorders well calculated to try the patience of any government.

In the northern part of Ireland there has of course been opposition from the first to joining with the Free State government. Ulster in a successful fight against it and after the agreement the boundary between the two governments in Ireland was to be fixed by a commission of three made up of a representative each from the Free State, Ulster and the British government.

The trouble with this arrangement and it seems to be a serious one, is that Ulster refuses to name a member of that commission. Without a commission there can be no boundary fixing and the British government is hard put to get around the situation and reconcile the differences.

Ulster as a province is opposed to joining the Free State or to giving up any of its counties thereto, though it is aware of the fact that the population in some of the counties along the boundary line is disposed to go with the Free State. It is this refusal to permit the processes to go on that would bring about the giving up of part of Ulster that presents the knotty problem.

Ulster is unwilling to part with any of its territory, or to let a minority of the province fix the boundary line. Ulster insists upon acting as a whole regarding the dividing line and as in previous affairs it rests with the British to act as the peace maker, a job which it fully understands and which there are reasons to believe it does not hanker for.

BALLOON RACING.

No records were established but neither were there any deaths as the result of the balloon endurance race from San Antonio last week. This annual contest for the determination of the balloon and pilot able to cover the greatest distance always arouses much interest. There have been years when it occasioned much anxiety and excitement, for storms have blown them far away into the wilds of Canada or into the lakes, involving great danger if not resulting in death to one or more of the occupants.

The balloon race is one of those big sporting events which is necessarily restricted to a few. The ordinary type of balloon has its limitations. It is not able to fight a storm. It must either go before it or come down. Storms were the means of forcing several of the contestants this year to land before they otherwise would have, but the winner managed to reel off 1100 miles before stopping, at which time he was 72 miles short of the record.

Navigating the air in a balloon which has no means of guidance cannot have the appeal or the fascination of riding in an airplane. Ballooning has its dangers and its uncertainties even though there are those veterans who have made flights so often that they feel at home aloft. As long as there are those who are willing to risk their lives in such races it can be expected that they will be held both nationally and internationally, but it is to be hoped that there will be no more international contests in which the committee insists upon the entries taking the air at a fixed time, even though a fierce thunder storm is underway.

RECLAMATION SERVICE.

Certain policies are put into effect by congress under the belief that they will meet the situation. Invariably they do and are continued. Sometimes they do not and unfortunately they are not corrected until large losses are disclosed.

This seems to be the situation in regard to part at least of the reclamation projects. There has been an advisory committee at work studying the reclamation activities, having been named by the secretary of the interior. Having made their report, it is submitted to congress by the president at which time he also takes the opportunity of recommending that there be a revision of the reclamation policies.

Under existing arrangements landowners who have been benefited by the government operations have been expected to make payments for such, but the committee finds that more than $18,000,000 cannot be collected because those owing it cannot pay. It is evident that the result of the operations have not been what was anticipated.

In making assessment for benefits which are expected to be received, the president suggests that the practice of fixing a flat rate for such service there be substituted a rate that will correspond with the benefits actually received as shown by the productivity of the soil. This would make necessary the wiping out of the amount which cannot be collected, and starting anew on a policy that is in keeping with the improvements that have actually been made.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Washington, D. C., April 28.—Congress has got its dander up and is determined to adjourn before the national conventions, whether or not the insurgent republicans agree to that proposition. Not only do the republican leaders want a before convention adjournment, but the more conservative democrats join in the desire to get away at that time, and it is more than probable that some non-partisan agreement will result and the leaders have the unusual sensation of really leading the senate and house.

Senator Lodge, Speaker Gillett, Floor Leader Longworth, headed a delegation of working republicans in a visit to the president this week, in which they assured him that there would be a get-together move in both senate and house that would result in adjournment by the first of June, with all the important business of the session brought to completion.

The democrats have already taken steps to block certain legislation in order to make the party slogan against a "do-nothing congress," but it is unlikely they will carry it to a point of an all summer session, although in spite of the present outlook it would not be impossible.

The scandal mongers have at last got far off the key in pitching their tune, and are overdoing the "investigation" mania which they earlier developed. The attacks in the cabinet, as planned, have not worked out to their satisfaction. The Coolidge and Harding attacks roused the country to a sense of what was the main object of many persons giving so-called "testimony" and the Mellon and Weeks attacks fell flat. Now it looks as if the leaders of that sort of political policy, would drop it.

Politics are sizzling in Washington. The approach of the two great national conventions, the possibility of the forming of a third party and who will be the democratic nominee take first place in the ranks of speculation. Who will be selected to be the running mate of President Coolidge, whose nomination seems now entirely assured, is the second question in point of interest.

The republicans know that Mr. Coolidge is their biggest asset; they seem entirely willing he shall choose his own running mate, feeling sure that he will pick the man with a view to his vote drawing power in the doubtful states.

Among the list of possibilities are mentioned Kenyon of Iowa, Lowden of Illinois, Lenroot of Wisconsin and Capper of Kansas, all men who now or formerly have been closely associated with the more progressive wing of the republican party or still more closely identified with the farming interests of the west.

Senator Lodge would undoubtedly be named as the man to serve as permanent chairman, if it were not for bringing New England too much into the foreground. As it is, the men most prominently mentioned for that position include Willis of Ohio, who made the Harding nomination speech in 1920, Borah of Idaho, Beveridge of Indiana, and Lowden who seems to have friends backing him for both the chairmanship and the vice presidency.

There is no change here in the democratic situation. That New York will see one of the stiffest political struggles for the first time in the ticket, is assured by the fact that as possible candidates are already in the field or being urged to get into the running—and the leaders of that party feel they have a splendid lot of men to select from, when the time comes. Beyond that, but few statements regarding the probable outcome, are advanced.

It has been a great gratification to New Englanders visiting the capitol this winter, to find the home delegations busy at their prescribed duties as national legislators, and not engaged in the mud slinging campaign that prevailed. Neither have they wasted the time of the senate or house in endless and useless debate and argument.

Connecticut has been especially fortunate in this respect. Senators Brandegee and McLean fill very important committee chairmanships; they rank both sound speakers when matters pertaining to the work of their committees, or to home interests are up for discussion, but neither man has the habit of "butting in" when other topics are before the senate or of taking part in the strictly partisan onslaughts led by men like Caraway, Heflin and Robinson on the other side of the chamber. Over in the house the same condition exists with the Connecticut delegation. Tilson, Merritt, Freeman and Fenn have done their session's work well and with telling force, but they have not talked the house to death or in any way made themselves objects of criticism. They have spoken forcefully when occasion required and have cast their votes for what seemed to them to be for the best interests of the country and the districts they represent.

As chairman of the judiciary committee Senator Brandegee has had a strenuous path to tread. Every proposed change in the constitution, all matter pertaining to the judiciary laws of the country and many other matters of great importance from a legal standpoint, have been before his committee for action before going to the full senate. And through it all Senator Brandegee's fairness and ability has remained unchallenged, even in this congress of bitterness.

The principal topic, outside political matters, has been the coming opening of summer training camps. The New England headquarters Camp Devens, will have a large quota this year, and the war department is doing everything in its power to increase interest in the military training of the young men of the country. The experience of officials when the draft was put in force, showed that the men of military age who were taken from civilian ranks, lacked not only training but education and to a great degree, interest in obtaining it. So this year the camps will be made especially attractive to men who might not be otherwise interested in the movement.

President Coolidge sets a fine example to the country by having his two sons enter the Camp Devens list. And his sons will get a taste of strict military training along with other boys of the same age, instead of having a white house vacation. The physical condition of many fellows who underwent the physical examination under the draft law, showed tremendous need of building up the men of military age. Something like one-fourth of the men examined on mental tests were unable to read, and other deplorable conditions brought to light. The officers in charge of training camps tell stories of remarkable improvement in the boys who entered, in the way of bracing up, losing slovenly habits, and as one officer expressed it "when a fellow learns how to salute the flag and his commanding officer, he also learns much about true patriotism, discipline and moreover gains in self respect, as well as in respect for his country."

Washington is at the height of its beauty, it is also at the height of its tourists season and people who have neglected to secure accommodations in advance, find themselves about ready to join the Tin Can campers down on the banks of the Potomac, in a reservation set aside for such travelers, who make Washington a stopping place when returning from a winter in the south, and traveling in their own cars, which run all the way from a touring car, converted into an apartment house, to the typical Tin Lizzie.

Some idea of the tourist crowd may be gained from the statement by white house officials that while a few hundred people stroll through the grounds every day, last Monday showed a turnstile record of 36,648 persons entering the white house grounds that day. That was the day of the Easter egg rolling, so is not an average, but the officers in charge added that 1,400 persons called at the white office and were permitted to pass through and catch a glimpse of the president at work a near by desk, while 4,500 more were admitted to the office at other periods during that day.

Yet the democrats are raising a hue and cry against the president for not stopping all national work and shaking hands daily with those great crowds, who are receiving the full courtesy of admission to the private grounds of the white house. It will be recalled that during the Wilson administration even passing through the grounds was prohibited, the iron gates being kept locked and extra police stationed it them to see that the no trespassing orders were not broken.

Another instance of the boot being on the other leg.

They are telling a new story of the D. A. R. congress, just closed that is worth circulating. The story runs along these lines: At one of the evening sessions, after a long, hard day for the delegates, one of the speakers exceeded the fifteen minutes alloted to him, and his discourse ran into an hour. It was a very good talk, but the speaker spoke calmly and it acted as a soporific on some of the Daughters who had taken an active part in the week's programme. One after another the ladies nodded with closed eyes, but the speaker kept right on. Finally growing eloquent in his efforts to rouse the organization to great deeds he fairly shouted, "Wake up Daughters, Wake up!" And the dosing ladies woke, blushed guilty, not at first comprehending what the speaker referred to inactivity in work and not to their drousiness.

It has been a week of changeable weather in the house judiciary committee, where not less than 51 bills for modification of the Volstead law have been "heard" together with counter hearings on the dry side of the question. The bills are identical in purpose and each ask for a substitute of 2.75 per cent. instead of the existing law. They were introduced by the 51 members of congress who openly advocated the modification of the act, when a poll of the house was recently taken.

HOME TALENT

Jean Spencer Allen scanned her audience from the tiny platform of Millerton assembly hall. She had come 60 miles from Chicago to give one of her Readings from Modern Poets before the Woman's club of her home town, and there was a bubbling of sentiment in her heart. She was not going to charge a penny for her services—not even the railroad fare.

At breakfast that morning her husband had said he wished he could go to Millerton with her to see the populace fall on her neck, but that part hadn't happened yet.

The president of the club—a perfect stranger—had acknowledged her presence, but with the distracted manner of a person completely tangled up in parliamentary law. This business program was evidently absorbing to all present, and yet, as Mrs. Allen's glance roved over the group, she surprised furtive gleams of recognition.

"The mask of years," thought Mrs. Allen, rather pleased with the phrase. Though, after all, the years had not been many. True, it was her first visit to Millerton since high school days, but she was still very much of a girl—ridiculously young-looking to be the mother of a 6-year-old boy, every one said.

"People do age faster in small towns," she concluded restfully, as a grim-faced elderly person turned into a former belle of Millerton, and a bulging figure on the front seat revealed itself as trim Mrs. Bagley, who always used to look so neat about her work. But that pompous gentleman back by the door, with the enormous tight-fitting vest—who was he, and why was he here—the only man in the room? Involuntarily, she glanced down at herself. It certainly did pay to diet.

Then she heard the club president saying: "Now that the essential part of our program is finished, we may regale ourselves with the superfluous luxury, as it were. You are all familiar with the new plan by which we are to have, each month, one literary and one artistic program. This is the literary program." And nobody smiled.

"At our next meeting, as you know," the president went on, "we expect to have a really famous speaker"—mentioning the name of a Chicago sculptor—"but we can't strike twelve at every session, and sometimes we enjoy relaxing in a home-talent program. I say 'home-talent' because our entertainer today grew up in Millerton—Miss Jennie Spencer. You are Jennie Spencer?" she asked, turning to their guest.

"Mrs. Allen—now," murmured the home talent meekly, as she smiled to the audience, and began her program. It was not the happiest session ever planned, but she was determined to give her best to Millerton, and did.

As she finished, the fluent president stepped briskly forward.

"I hope everybody will remain for a social cup of tea," she said. "After a program like this we are all fatigued and nothing wakes us up and sends us home refreshed like a good cup of tea. And I am sure you all join me in thanks to Mrs. Spencer—or Allen rather—for coming so far to give us this trite and charming entertainment."

A ripple of laughter ran across the room as the president graciously held out her hand to Mrs. Allen, and, though that lady divined that the word "trite" had not been intended in its dictionary sense, she felt hone the less dashed.

Then an old lady from the audience seized both her hands. "Jennie Spencer! And you've grown to look like your Aunt Lizzie Baybrook. You don't remember her, do you? She new was one of these real elocutionists—made gestures, and all. She was fine!"

"Jennie Spencer!" another old neighbor was saying. "I took care of your ma when you were born. You hold your age good, Jennie."

And a mother—and another, until through the buzzing crowd, Jean Spencer Allen saw the pompous gentleman advancing. He was ruddy and quite bald—an utter stranger. But suddenly something in the way his brown eyes popped worked an Alice-in-Wonderland trick. Framed within his rotund outlines—looking from his moonlike face—Mrs. Allen saw a slender dry-goods clerk who, though considerably older than herself, had been the object of her worshipful admiration as a young girl.

"Well, well, well!" he exclaimed, soncrously. "Jennie Spencer! How you have changed."—Exchange.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Hon. John Francis Amherst Cecil, whose marriage to Miss Cornelia Vanderbilt, daughter of Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt and the late Mr. Vanderbilt takes place today at Biltmore, is a member of the Exeter branch of the Cecil family, long famous in English history. He is a son of Lord William Cecil and the Baroness Amherst of Hackney, his mother being a peeress in her own right. His career has been given over entirely to diplomacy. At present he holds the post of First Secretary to the British Embassy at Washington. His older brother the Hon. William Cecil, was killed in action in 1914, leaving a wife and two small sons. An older brother is the Hon. Thomas James Amherst Cecil, and a younger brother, the Hon. Henry Hufford Amherst Cecil, is an officer in the British navy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Correction

Mr. Editor: Will you kindly allow me to correct a most serious mistake in your otherwise excellent report of the services at Park church Sunday morning. The preacher did not say: "No other church had produced a fine grade of citizenship." He did say "No church has contributed to the community a greater number of great citizens or a "finer" grade of Christian citizenship." The preacher does not want to be held responsible for so impossible a breach of charity as the report of the sermon reveals.

Law Enforcement

Mr. Editor: Recently I read this question in one of our daily papers: "What are women thinking of." I surmised that this question was put by a politician who realized that the voter of women can no longer be ignored. No better answer could be given than the resolutions of the women assembled at Washington on the 10th and 11th of April in the interest of law enforcement. These women, 1,000 strong, represented ten large organizations which represented ten million women voters. The Washington papers reported: "Never had a convention of women met with greater success than this; crowds were turned away from every session."

The salient plank in the platform adopted by the convention reads:

This convention shall formally petition the national convention of all political parties to include in the party platform a strong plank for law enforcement and specifically for law enforcement in connection with the 18th amendment and its accompanying enforcement legislation, and whereas the supreme court has declared that the limitations of beverage alcoholic contents fixed by congress at one-half of one per cent. is justified in the interest of enforcement we urge that the party platforms declare against any change."

These women have planned to form state committees of 100 members, with sub committees in every county and important city to create and mobilize public sentiment; to act as bureaus of information, especially on the stand of candidates for political office duties of enforcement officials; to report law violations, attend trials, obtain enforcement planks in state political platforms, etc., etc., etc. Can anyone doubt that a large number of our women have come to look upon the general breakdown in law enforcement as a emergency and as a crisis? Can anyone doubt that women are thinking deeply when they have frequently summed up three classes of offenders as expressed by Mrs. Pinchot; "high officials who both in their personal behavior in their failure to enforce the law as they swore to do; second, the bootleggers who are encouraged by this very attitude of those in autnority and third, the moral obtuseness of those who buy the stuff, for without buyers there would be no sellers; without a market there would be no rumsellers, no poisoned alcohol.

Concretely she summed up the three, "as unfaithful official, venal procurers and lawless consumers." It cannot be denied that there is a nucleus of woman who are as bad as the men. Human nature seems to be about the same in both sexes.

For ages women have been canonized as saints for their service to their country. When Israel was on the verge of destruction God raised up Deborah to lead the army against the enemy.

Christ in the critical hour sent a woman to His disciples to announce His resurrection.

Surely we may wait God's call to women in this great crisis which faces us.

"Christ, the source and fount of progress,
Christ, the leader of the free!
In Thy work of world up-lifting
Help us still to work for Thee!"

VENIZELOS VICTIM OF INGRATITUDE

In Greece his Royalist foes call Eleutherios Venizelos the "Madman of Crete" and speak of the "mad exploits" of his youth.

Born to affluence, he sacrificed his fortune and position to become spokesman of the poor and oppressed in Crete, which was then ground down by Turkish misrule.

Leading the "Barefoot Party," he gained control of the Cretan Assembly, and, in 1897, started an insurrection to throw off the Sultan's rule. The Powers' warships rained shells upon his banner of freedom, dispersed the insurgents and drove Venizelos to the mountains. A price was placed on his head, friends joined with foes to assassinate him in his refuge, but he defied them, and they gave up, in shame.

His momentary failure awakened Europe to the shameless rule of the Sultan, and eventually he gained for Crete a modified independence.

As premier of Greece, he saved the monarchy in its moment of peril, brought King Constantine into popular favor and reorganized all departments of the government.

In 1910, Greece annexed Crete; in 1912 Premier Venizelos formed the Balkan League, which defeated the Turk in a great war. Later he formed the League which saved Greece from Bulgaria.

When the World war started, Constantine refused to keep the treaty pledge to aid Serbia when warred on by an aggressor, and with his general staff wanted to join with Germany.

Venizelos saw Greece's opportunity if it united with the Allies; he established an independent government at Salonika, and invited their co-operation.

The war won, Venizelos was a prominent figure in the Treaty of Versailles negotiations. Later, through the Treaty of Sevres, he secured so much from Turkey that its delegates insulted him. Later an attempt was made on his life. He was gravely wounded, but recovered.

Then Greece again turned against him and called back Constantine. Since that time the empire has crashed behind him and it again called for Venizelos recently.

Teeth are Jewels

Make them glisten

Each day remove the dingy film.

You can buy no pearls at any price to compare with pretty teeth. Then why not fight the film on teeth, as millions are doing now? Make this free test, and see what new beauty comes.

Remove the cloud

Most teeth are clouded by a film—that viscous film you feel. It clings and stays, because no ordinary tooth paste can effectively combat it.

Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. That is what makes teeth unsightly.

Film also causes most tooth troubles. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Such troubles are almost universal among people who don't fight film.

That is why dental science has been seeking film combatants. Two have now been found. One disintegrates the film in all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never was a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

At the Show

"Hey diddle, diddle,
There goes the fiddle,
The horn and the drum,
Tum, tum, tum-a-tum.

And the Opera House there
Is ablaze and aglare
With calcium light
To make it look bright.

Come on to the show,
It's a scream from the go,
For this monkey's a wizard
And swift as a blizzard," shouted a man outside the opera house as the two little rabbits with their friend, the monkey, drove up in the Luckymobile.

Photographer Crane was sitting in the front row.

"Ha, ha," laughed the monkey, "that man knows how to get the people. Now, you go to the front way while I run around to the stage entrance where I have a little dressing room, you know."

Handing the ticket man the two passes which the monkey had given them, the two little bunnies hopped in and sat down.

Well, the orchestra was playing, Dandy Ella, and a half dozen little bens were selling ice cream cones up and down the aisles and in between the seats. Up in the gallery, Photographer Crane was sitting in the front row. Goodness me! His legs were so long that he had bought a seat just below him in the orchestra, to rest his feet on! Wasn't that funny? And every once in a while, the usher, a white curley poodle, had to scold a little boy for tickling the Crane's big toe.

Pretty soon the show started. First the monkey came out dressed like a soldier boy and sang:

"Jackie Rabbit, get your gun,
And shoot old Danny Fox,
The Sunny Meadow Bunny Boys
Are running in their sox!"

Then he went behind the curtain and in less than five hundred short seconds came out dressed just like a clown. He stood on his head and flung by his tail and turned somersaults backward and sideways, and after that he threw popcorn balls at all the little boys and girls in the theatre.

When the show was over, Uncle Lucky shook hands with him and, hopping into the Luckymobile with Little Jack Rabbit, drove home. But, oh, dear me, they had forgotten to fill the lamps with electricity, and, of course, it was now nighttime.

Just then along came two lightning bugs who promised to sit inside the lamps. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

WEDDINGS.

Maynard-Boyd.

Miss Ethyl Catherine Boyd, daughter of Andrew Boyd of 39 Fifth street and Arthur Maynard, son of Arthur Maynard of New London were married Monday morning in St. Mary's rectory by Rev. Frederick Cohlan. The bride was attended by Miss Mary Covey and Robert Boyd served as best man.

The bride wore a gown of poudre blue Isabelle crepe and a picture hat to match. The bridesmaid was gowned in silver blue and wore a black picture hat.

After a breakfast at the Wauregan hotel Mr. and Mrs. Maynard left for a wedding trip to New York and Washington and will be at home to their friends in their newly furnished cottage at 27 Morgan street, New London, after May 15.

Allen-Lambert.

Miss Ann Lambert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lambert of 31 Wilson street, Pittsfield, Mass., and Alfred Pierce Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Allen of 13 Huntington place, this city, were united in marriage Monday morning at 10 o'clock in St. Charles rectory, Pittsfield, by Rev. William J. Dower, D. D., pastor of the church.

The couple were attended by Miss Maybelle Lambert, sister of the bride, and John H. Perkins of Norwich, an intimate friend of the groom. Only members of the families of the bride and groom attended the ceremony and a reception followed at the home of the bride.

After a wedding trip to Washington and Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Allen will reside in Norwich. The bride has been secretary to the vice president of the General Electric company at its Pittsfield branch and the groom is bookkeeper in the Uncas National bank of which his father is president. He is also secretary and assistant treasurer of the Norwich Water Power company.

Seventh Birthday Party.

A most enjoyable birthday party was given last Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Doomi, in honor of the 7th birthday of their daughter Charlotte. During the afternoon refreshments were served by Mrs. Loomis, who was assisted by Mrs. Allen. Later in the afternoon entertainment was provided and there were vocal and instrumental numbers. A novelty feature was a May basket party.

Charlotte received many congratulations and wishes were expressed that she may enjoy many more happy birthdays.

Those present were Nancy Grillo, Mabel Decker, Mary Lewis, Dolly Terry, Dorothy Emback, Francis Diggins, Margaret Twomey, Victoria Kancha, Louise Gay, Christine Loomis, Harry Loomis, Jr., James Loomis and George Loomis.

Odd Fellows' Anniversary

Shetucket lodge, No. 27, I. O. O. F., will observe the 106th anniversary of Odd Fellowship, this (Tuesday) evening at Odd Fellows' hall on Main street by holding an entertainment and smoker. All arrangements had been completed Monday night to welcome one of the largest gatherings in the history of Odd Fellowship in Norwich and the committee has announced its slogan as "The more the merrier."

Smoke-Stained Teeth Bleached White

New Safe Method

Say Good-bye to unsightly tobacco stains on teeth! Bleachodent Combination—the new, safe treatment—removes stains and gives teeth a new flashing whiteness, almost "while you wait!" Consists of mild, safe liquid which softens the stains, and a special kind of paste. The paste is vitally important as it not only removes the softened stains—but prevents formation of new stains. No effect on enamel as its mild ingredients are intended to act only on stains—not on enamel. To avoid disappointment beware of cheap liquid imitations. Always insist on genuine Bleachodent Combination—the SAFE treatment. Money instantly refunded if not delighted with results of first application. For sale at all good druggists including

BIG AUDIENCE APPLAUDS STORRS COLLEGE PLAYERS

Under the auspices of Pequot, Tatapochon and Oneneco Camp Fires of the United Congregational church the State College Players, from the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs presented three one-act plays Monday evening at the Community House before a large audience.

The plays varied from the farce comedy to the tragic and were presented in a manner worthy of the highest commendation, credit being due each and every one of the players and also to the play instructor, H. A. Seckerson, professor of English at Connecticut Agricultural College.

The first play was Suppressed Desires, a story woven around a woman's belief in psycho-analysis. This play was more of the comedy type, the various situations which arose during the play causing no little amusement, ending in the conversion of the leading lady to the belief that psycho-analysis held no charms for her, when it meant another woman was to take away her husband.

Suppressed Desires, written by Susan Glaskell and George Cook, was presented by the following players: Dorothy Stellenwerf as Henrietta Brewster, the wife; Russell Whit as Stephen Brewster, the husband; Marie Bronson as Mabel, the other woman in the case.

The second presentation, Ile, by Eugene O'Neil, was more tragic and had to do with the whaling trip by Captain Keeney, who took his wife into northern waters with him. Failure to find whales led the captain to continue his stay in the ice-bound waters for many months, the play ending when Mrs. Keeney, no longer able to stand the tortures of being away from her home for many months in the land of ice, lost her reason and became violently insane. The cast of characters in this play was as follows: Ben, the cabin boy, Russell White; the steward, Lawrence Parker; Capt. Keeney, Martin O'Neil; Slocum, second mate, Milton Moore; Mrs. Keeney, Phyllis Smith; Joe, a harpooner, Norman Dickens. Members of the crew of the steam whaler Atlantic Queen.

The last play presented was a farce comedy entitled The Trysting Place, by Booth Tarkington. The scene of this play was laid in a hotel lobby where young lovers were accustomed to meet. One young man arriving early overheard the endearing remarks of the several couples who came to the room to "bill and coo" and the play ended when he came out from his hiding place and told what he had heard, causing no little concern among the couples who knew that their most treasured secrets were known to all. The players were as follows:

Mrs. Carter, Phyllis Smith; Lancelot Briggs, Russell White; Mrs. Briggs, Hazel Pierpont; Jessie Briggs, Marie Bronson; Rupert Smith, Milton Moore; Mr. Ingoldsby, E. J. Beckerson; A Mysterious Voice, Fred Sweet.

Before and after the plays there was a fine musical entertainment by an orchestra cmoprising Miss ViVola Levitske, pianist; Miss Jamie Lambert and Miss Miriam Grover, violins; and Arthur Fitch, drums. Home made candy was also sold during intermission, this table being in charge of Miss Mildred Francis, who was assisted by the Misses Aabel Kennedy, Dori Kennedy, Ruth Brown, Cora Button, Natalie Holden and Mary MacInnisa.

Patrons and patronesses for the evening, all graduates of Connecticut Agricultural college who now reside in Norwich were: Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Imbert F. Fellows, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Shell, Mr. and Mrs. Walt erHolden, Bradford Ricketts, Eugene A. Manning and Mervin B. Leffingwell.

Arrangements for the play were in charge of Miss Dorothy Holden and Miss Elizabeth Smith, guardians of the Camp Fires. The proceeds realized from th sale of tickets and home made candies are to b used for the summer camping trip of the camp fire groups.

PYTHIANS WILL CELEBRATE FIFTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

The committee in charge of the 55th anniversary banquet of Waurgean lodge No. 6, Knights of Pythias, met Monday evening at the home of the chairman, Rudolph Henschel on Main street and completed arrangements for what is considered one of the biggest events the lodge has planned to stage in Norwich.

Over 125 members have signified thier intentions of attending the banquet which is to be held at the Elks' ball ruom. Chancellor Commander Harry Salomon is to give the address of welcome shortly after 7.30 o'clock after which Toastmaster H. B. Parmalee will take charge. Following the banquet and during the several courses there will be carabet numbers by entertainers from Hartford.

Guests of honor will include Mayor Milo R. Waters, Past Grand Chancellor Thomas H. Troland of New London and a number of state and district officers.

The program of the evening is to come to a close with a dance and entertainment.

SAYS AUTOMOBILE DRIVER WOULDN'T SHOW LICENSE

Gaffney, 252 Montauk avenue, New London, reorted to the police Monday about noon that he had had an accident with his automobile in West Thames street and that the driver of the other car refused to show his license. Gaffney's car registration is EX-339. He said the registration of the other car was N-2081.

Automobile Killed Dog

Andrew Barel of 169 Palmer street reported to the police Monday morning that he had struck and killed a dog belonging to Noel Hasard, while driving on Thames street.

Morris Solovetizik, 46, who died early Monday morning at his home in Pawcatuck, was buried Monday afternoon in the Hebrew Cemetery at Pawcatuck.

RECEPTION CLOSES PARK CHURCH HALF CENTURY ANNIVERSARY

In recognition of the 50th anniversary of Park Congregational church a reception was held Monday evening in the parlors of the Hugh Henry Osgood Memorial parish house. The large attendance included a number of the older members of the church. The reception committee comprised Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Howe, Mrs. Frederic W. Cary, Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughn, William H. Allen, Miss Louise Howe, Frank H. Bunnell and Mr. and Mrs. George L. Ingalls. Those on the hospitality committee were Miss Adelaide L. Butts, Ebenezer Learned, Mrs. Allen Latham, James M. Morton and Frederic W. Cary.

The programme opened with music by a three-piece orchestra comprising Jay Ricketts, piano; Bruce Rogers, saxophone and Tyler Gilbert, violin. The address of welcome was given by the chairman, Henry A. Tirrell, a deacon of the church, and a member of the church society committee. Greetings from absent members and friends were read by Miss Alice W. Cogswell, secretary of the anniversary committee.

A well prepared and very interesting historical paper, Park Church Fifty Years ago, was read by Miss Amy L. Cogswell. In part Miss Cogswell's paper follows:

We are gathered here tonight, a company of friends, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of this church, to recall the past, and honor the founders whose foresight and enterprise made provision for the spiritual needs of the people on the plains. Old Norwich Town had long had its Congregational church and the people of the "Landing" as my grandfather used to call what we designate as "down town," were well provided for, but it seemed more and more apparent that Norwich was destined to grow northward, until that space between the Landing and Norwich Town Green, then but sparsely settled, should be covered with the homes of the people.

Days of the Horse Car.

Those were leisurely days, when a little horse car ran up Franklin street in Norwich Town—not too often—and when Harvey's omnibus made occasional trips from Thamesville to Lincoln avenue, to accommodate people who lived on Broadway and all along the route.

Horses, now almost extinct, were in their glory then, but they were not the universal possession as is the automobile of today. We did not mortgage all our worldly woods to possess them. Moreover, there was a strong feeling that man and beast should rest on Sunday.

To walk a mile—more or less to church and then—back again—up hill and down dale—was a task for the grown-ups, and a long, long twelve for the little legs of children who went regularly to church with their elders, and then to Sunday school.

For, I assure you, they went as simply and naturally as they breathed the fresh air of the Rose of New England, and without any special admonition or coercion. The parents set the example. The children were not asked, "Are you going to church" but "Are you ready for church" and the good habit (as easily formed as a bad one) became fixed.

Business was fast invading and altering "East Chelsea" where many old Norwich families used to live, under those arching elms of which we were once so proud—now, alas, but a memory.

People were moving up Broadway and away from that part of the West Side which once housed people whose roots struck deep into the soil of New England and who were Congregationalists by birth and tradition.

Of the three hundred and thirty resident members of the Second church—in 1868—only thirty-two came from Laurel Hill and the West Side—Greeneville had its own church—one hundred and ninety-seven lived above Broadway grammar school, and the trend for householders was steadily northward.

So then, the town was growing northward and the situation called for attention and as the people met and talked it over, it was hoped that the needs of the majority should prevail and all migrate, as one family, to a new church home on Chelsea parade.

General Ely was appointed to sound the people and solicit funds and some subscriptions were made as early as 1872, but no decisive step was taken for a year and a half. Meanwhile the Second Church society voted that it was not wise to move in a body and that the old church should be maintained to shelter all who believed it best for them to remain downtown.

In 1872, at the house of J. Hunt Smith, all who favored the building of a new church were called together to discuss ways and means and the raising of money began in earnest.

Church Site a Gift.

Mrs. Harriet Peck Williams, the widow of General Williams, and the owner of much valuable land in the vicinity of the park, offered to present for a site, the fine lot, an acre in extent, upon which this church now stands, and valued, even in those days, at $12,000. To this initial gift she added a handsome sum of money.

More than fortunate then, in the site given for the new church the next thing was to consider what manner of building should be erected in so commanding a position, for it was to be a church seen from all sides and must be equally attractive from all points of view.

A building committee, composed of three men—John F. Slater, Ebenezer Learned and my father was appointed, and these three men were asked to go to Springfield, Mass., to see a beautiful new church in process of construction there, which might well serve as a model for us. The visit resulted in a favorable report, and, later on, presentation of plans and specifications presented by the architects, Messrs. Earle and Fuller, the committee was empowered to enter into a contract with Norcross Bros. of Worcester, to erect a building at a cost of $65,000.

Ground Broken in 1873.

The ground was broken with appropriate services on the afternoon of May 8, 1873, and the cornerstone was laid with public, religious exercises on the afternoon of July 10, 1873. During the summer and fall the work went on rapidly and by winter the roof was on and slated.

Attention was then given to the completion of the chapel and it was finished and ready for occupation by the first of April, 1874 and on the 12th of April, 1874, the chapel was dedicated to religious worship.

The Park Congregational society was organized on March 10, 1874, and the first society committee was composed of the building committee, Mr. Slater, Mr. Learned and Mr. Cogswell, with Frank Johnson as treasurer, and Oliver L. Johnson Jr., as clerk.

The Park Congregational church was organized on April 28th by an ecclesiastical council of which the Rev. H. P. Arms, D. D., was chosen moderator. One hundred and thirty-eight members were duly recognized by the council as forming the constituency of the new church, presenting letters of dismissal from other churches to unite with this one.

The completed church was consecrated to the worship of God Tuesday evening, November 10th, 1874, with a service in which the clergymen of the city took part, the Rev. William Adams of New York, preaching the sermon on this occasion. In the newspaper account of this service, we read that the church, planned to seat 900, was packed to the doors, twelve hundred people taking part in the exercises. The flowers and decorations were pronounced most beautiful and a great credit to Mr. Henry Edmond and a large committee serving under him.

The organ, ordered by Mr. James L. Hubbard, as his special gift to the church, had not arrived and there was a great empty space where the organ pipes were eventually to be placed. Resourceful Mr. Edmond who could do anything to which he laid his hand, laid his hand, and—more than that—did it, arranged a temporary screen for the arched space of plaited [illegible] on which were sewn floral letters making the fit inscription—"Enter into his courts with thanksgiving, and into its courts with praise." One of our members remembers the making of this screen and I think I saw something of it, for we were all very keen for our new church, and little children caught the general enthusiasm.

No organ—and a fine program of music required. What was to be done about it? Major Learned, nothing daunted, secured to supplement a large sized cabinet organ, five brass pieces and the Bulletin says: "the effect was extremely rich and stirring." Cannot you hear the choir singing to this accompaniment, "Sleepers wake, a voice is calling!" and to quote further, "at the close that stormy Gloria Patri so often hear in Park church, and arranged by Major Learned."

It is customary to consider that volunteer workers, in various forms of organized activity, are, on the whole, unsatisfactory. That a salary is the only thing which ensures regularity in the performance of duty. This is, no doubt, the rule, but a splendid exception which goes to prove it, is the record Major Learned made for himself as a leader of Park church choir for so many years, absolutely without money and, without price.

A thorough-going musician, with a taste for nothing but the best, to sing under his direction was an inspiration and those of us who had that privilege when we were young and at an age when tastes are being formed, received from Major Learned something which is almost priceless.

When the church was finished it was found that $34,998 had been expended in the erection of Park church and many other gifts, not in cash, had been made to embellish it.

Gifts to Church

Of the givers who contributed according to their ability, Mr. Slater, who was well able to do so, made the largest cash gift—practically one third of the entire amount required.

Perhaps, since many of us are unfamiliar with certain facts which were well known to all fifty years ago, it will be well to enumerate the special gifts made to the church when it was built.

Mrs. Williams gave the site, the clock, the chimes.

Mr. James L. Hubbard, the organs for the church and chapel and the baptismal font.

Memorial windows were given by Mrs. Williams, Mr. Slater, Mrs. David

Smith, Mr. Charles Bard, Mr. Ebenezer Learned, Mr. E. B Huntington, Mrs. E. M. Gibbs.

Mrs. James L. Hubbard gave the communion service.

Mrs. Franklin Nichols gave the large central chandelier.

Miss Sarah L. Huntington gave the communion table and the choir railing.

Mrs. Ebenezer Learned and Miss Sarah Johnson gave the bibles for the pulpit and desk in the church and Sunday school room respectively.

A hymn book for the pastor's use was the gift of Mrs. Dana. Mr Edmond gave an easel and Miss Emily Gilman a table.

The Cheerful Workers, a society of young ladies collected money for the clock in the chapel, and a chair for the pulpit, while the furniture for the pastor's room and the carpet were paid for by the women of the congregation.

The choir of the church raised money to pay for the motor to drive the organ and the young men of the congregation paid for the electric battery used in lighting the church.

This account of the gifts made to the new church makes us aware of the intense interest and cooperation existing at the time, and we can easily understand the pride of the people in the new building.

Fifty years ago, architecture in America had suffered partial eclipse, and the old Colonial standards which have stood the test of time and are America's own peculiar contribution to architectural styles, were relegated to the rear.

A glance at the architectural page of Godey's Ladies' Book of fifty years ago or Frank Leslie's illustrated weekly of the sixties and seventies, will show us what was popular at the time. Were we not fortunate, than, to escape the "What might have been" and secure a building whose elevations have stood the test of time so well, and enable us to call our church, in truth, a thing of symmetry and beauty.

The church to be seen from all sides—to be fortunately placed—with open spaces about it, which may not, in the ordinary course of human events, be built upon, was more difficult to design, than the church whose

"Now the rest of the acts of Josiah and his good deeds, according to that which is written in the law of Jehovah and his acts, first and last, behold they are written in the book of the Kings."

Individuality—the eternal difference between one person and another makes it impossible that we should always agree on all subjects at all times, but it seems to me, as I look back upon it, that this church, founded by a group of people of singular quality, has maintained its early standard with credit, and that, today, as we carry forward the programme outlined fifty years ago we need feel no shame for our present achievement.

Greetings Are Extended.

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church extended greetings from the local churches. One couldn't live five years in this city without recognizing the indelible mark this church has made on the community, said Rev. Mr. Abbott. With reference to Rev. Dr. Howe, pastor of the church, the speaker said that "he has blessed us in the ministry in this community as no one else has. He has impressed us with the fact that our aim is to make God plain."

Rev. J. Beveridge Lee of New London brought greetings from the conference, James M. Morton extended greetings from the new members and Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London, who delivered the anniversary sermon Sunday evening, brought greetings from the New London churches. Brief remarks by Rev. Dr. Howe during which he made reference to the early days of his 40 years of service as pastor of Park church, brought the programme to a close. The remainder of the evening was given over to a social hour during which music was provided by the orchestra. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by Mrs. William H. Allen and Mrs. Zebulon R. Robbins, who were assisted in the serving by the Misses Elizabeth Johnson, Janet Blackstone, Helen Tirrell, Catherine Bunnell, Beatrice Learned, Harriet Geer and Helen Clapp.

It is an interesting circumstance that the direction of the music at the church has remained in the same family for the entire fifty years, first under Major E. F. Learned, of whom Miss Cogswell spoke with such appreciation in her historical sketch, and then under his son, Ebenezer Learned, the present choir director and tenor in the quartette, who is continuing the same devoted service as was given so many years by his father to the part that music plays in the worship of the congregation.

Those on the anniversary committee were Mrs. Frederic W. Cary, chairman, Miss Alice W. Cogswell, secretary, Mrs. Junius A. Brand, Mrs. Oliver L. Johnson, Ebenezer Learned, Frederick W. Cary, Oliver L. Johnson, Miss Amy L. Cogswell, Henry A. Tirrell and James M. Morton.

POST OFFICE SCHEDULE ADVANCED ONE HOUR

Postmaster C. E. Bailey stated Monday night that the post office service would go on an advanced time schedule today (Tuesday) to accommodate its office hours, carrier deliveries, and mail collections to the daylight saving schedule adopted Monday by Norwich businessmen. The postmaster said that he had not ordered any change on Monday, having waited to see how general the adoption of daylight saving time here would be but that he desired to accommodate the patrons of the office and accordingly the post office schedule would be moved forward an hour to conform with the business practice in this city.

With the Norwich business houses going on a daylight saving schedule Monday while the post office stuck to the old time, considerable embarrasment and some irritation was caused in some quarters when business men found that they had to wait an hour to receive their first mail in the morning. This will all be removed today with the post office working on hours in conformity with the city's business houses.

The police department went on a daylight saving schedule Monday, keeping its clock on standard time but advancing the time for the different details of the force to report one hour.

CHAPMAN TECH WINS EASY GAME FROM MORGAN HIGH AT CLINTON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Clinton, April 21. — After losing three games in a row and then turning the tables on Stonington High Saturday at New London, the Chapman Tech baseball nine met Morgan High this afternoon and left the town with the scalp of the local high school squad. The final score was 5 to 2 in favor of Chapman Tech, errors playing an important part in the victory of the Red and Black. The home nine made a total of twelve miscues during the game, losing the contest.

Schetsel, the Morgan High twirler, pitched a fine game and allowed the Chapman Tech outfit but five hits and struck out 13 men. Brown, who occupied the mound for the visitors, received wonderful support from his teammates and was able to win the first game in which he took up the pitcher's burden. Courbois, a Norwich boy attending Chapman Tech, gave a good account of himself at the hot corner. Every one of the four assists made by him had class written all over them.

The runs gathered by the home team were earned while those made by the visitors came as a result of errors with men on the base paths. In the first inning Chapman Tech made the first run of the contest, when Hewitt was safe on Eastbland's error of his ground hit ball. Both teams had an easy time stealing bases, both Guy, the Morgan High catcher, and McDonald, receives for the visitors, had weak arms and allowed the base runners to run wild on the bases. Hewitt pilfered second and came in on Cruise's one base slam.

Two runs were added to the Red and Black scoring column in the next inning. Errors figured prominently in the scoring. The Morgan High players were throwing the ball around the lot and Chapman Tech taking advantage of this golden opportunity to score enough runs to put the contest on ice did so by scoring twice in this frame. The fourth found the local high school players still inclined to throw the ball around the field and to muff up easy grounders that should have been easy putouts. The result was that Courbois and Crouch scored in the fourth and fifth innings and in the seventh the Tech outfit scored three more runs making their total eight. The home team players on the other hand scored one run in the fifth on Eastbland's double and Bloom's single. Another run was scored in the seventh by this team and an error put Bloom on the base and an error by Licklotter on Wellum's grounder brought him home.

Eastbland, the local High school shortstop, led his team in hitting with a double and a single out of four times to the plate. Duhaime for the New London high school team had two hits also.

The fielding of Bloom at second was good, while Courbois for Chapman Tech played a good game in the field.

Johnny Brown, who twirled his first game for Chapman Tech did a good job and he may be called upon to share the pitcher's burden more often. It was at first expected that Licklotter would start the game, but Coach Taylor put Brown in the contest in the last minute. The score:

How It's Done In the Majors

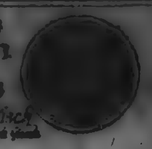
By Frank Frisch
Fordham Flash, New York Giants



Is any position on the infield considered the easiest to play?

Discussions of this kind arise from time to time and while some consider that first base is the easiest position to play, this is probably due to the fact that a catcher or a substitute outfielder is placed at first base when the latter is injured.

A first baseman handles a good many balls during a game but in the majors the infielders are accurate throwers so few errors result. His hardest proposition is to handle a ball hit at him when there is a runner on first base. This is because he must make an accurate throw to second and then get back to his bag in time to complete a double play.

A first baseman may be slower than other infielders as he doesn't have to be so sure on ground balls and he is helped in being a sure catch by the fact that his glove is larger than that used by other infielders.

When there is no runner on the base he plays back of the baseline. When there is a runner on first he plays on the bag to prevent this runner from taking too big a lead. When the case comes up where the batter may bunt, the first baseman plays in on the infield.

While the first baseman doesn't have as many difficult plays to make as the other infielders, at the same time, you can hardly say his job is the easiest one.

SENSATIONAL BOXERS IN BENEFIT FIGHT TONIGHT

New York, April 28.—Young Stribling, Paul Berlenbach and "Cannon Ball" Eddie Martin, juvenile sensations of the ring, will feature forty rounds of boxing at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night for the benefit of the American Olympic games fund.

Stribling, in his first New York appearance, will be limited to six rounds in his light heavyweight bout with Mike Burke, by the ruling of the state boxing commission which holds fighters under 21 years of age to the short distance.

Paul Berlenbach, middleweight knockout artist, will face Harold Abbott in 10-rounds. Jack Zivic, of Pittsburgh and Ever Hammer, of Chicago will clash in a 10-round lightweight battle.

"Cannon Ball" Eddie Martin, a bantamweight, won forty short fights before graduating into the 10-round division recently when he became of age. His opponent will be Charlie Phil Rosenberg.

Ruth Up With Record

AMERICAN RUGBY TEAM ARRIVES IN GAY PARIS

Paris, April 28.—(By The A. P.)—Tired and disheveled, the American Olympic rugby team reached Paris late tonight. They had been the cause of anxiety to the French Olympic committee because word had been received in Paris that they would reach the French capital at four o'clock in the afternoon.

The Americans neglected the formality of having French vises on their passports before they left England, and when they landed at Boulogne after an exceptionally rough passage they fell into a red tape entanglement from which it took all afternoon to extricate them.

The French reception committee having given them up for lost, there was nobody to meet them at the Paris terminal. They did not know where to go or what to do, when providence in the shape of an American newspaper correspondent appeared and piloted them to a hotel on the other side of Paris where rooms had been reserved for them.

FILLMORE TAKES SIX FROM MORIN AT TAFTVILLE

Roy Fillmore took six out of 11 strings from Mike Morin at Taftville in the last match between these two rollers in the Eastern Connecticut bowling tournament. Neither man was exceptionally good and it was a pretty even match, Fillmore winning out with a spare in the last box of the eleven strings. The score:

TILDEN WILL NOT DISCUSS PROFESSIONAL TENNIS

Philadelphia, April 28.—While admitting that he had heard "rumors" of professional competition next year among a number of tennis stars who may come under the player-writer ban of the United States Lawn Tennis association, William T. Tilden, national champion, said tonight he would rather not discuss the matter until it took more definite form.

Tilden declined to state whether he would consider becoming a professional should the plans reach perfection. He declared that he had not received any overtures or direct offers from Tex Rickard or any one else. "In fact," said Tilden, "I did not know that Rickard was interested in the proposition."

Despite the stand of the U. S. L. T. A. on the player-writer question, Tilden said that personally he still considered himself an amateur.

ZEV MAKES HIS 1924 DEBUT AT JAMAICA TODAY

New York, April 28.—Zev, premier three year old of 1923 will make his debut as a four year old in the Paumanok handicap at the opening of the metropolitan season at Jamaica tomorrow. The Sinclair star will carry top weight against a field of eligibles which includes St. James, winner of the futurity of 1923 and now being pointed for the Preakness.

Zev won the Paumanok last year. Its value is $6,000.

FIRPO REFUSES TO CONSIDER ANY OFFER MADE BY RICKARD FOR BOUT

Buenos Aires, April 28. — (By The A. P.)—Louis Angel Firpo announced today that he had definitely rejected the offer of Tex Rickard for the Argentine boxer to return to America, and that he would not fight under any conditions.

He declared that he never could forget that Rickard insisted that he fight Dempsey last year before he was prepared to do so, and that Rickard's insistence had lost him the world championship.

"That is the real reason why I will not negotiate with Rickard," he said.

Rickard Makes Another Proposal.

New York, April 28.—Tex Rickard, today, cabled his final offer to Luis Angel Firpo to meet Harry Wills or Jack Dempsey in this country this summer. If this offer is rejected by the Argentine heavyweight, Rickard said he would abandon all negotiations with him and confine his dealings to American pugilists. The amount of the offer was not revealed by Rickard but he said it exceeded all previous ones.

Pending an answer, Rickard held up instructions to Juan Homs, his representative in Buenos Aires, to cancel all dealings with Firpo but he intimated that these would be dispatched immediately if Firpo rejected his latest offer.

When Rickard was informed of Firpo's statement that he would not fight for him in this country because Rickard had forced him into a match with Dempsey before he was ready and therefore jeopardized his chances of eventually winning the title, he expressed complete surprise.

"Firpo's attitude in this matter is a complete surprise to me. He never intimated to me that he was reluctant to meet Dempsey when he did. I never had a break with him over such a question," said Rickard.

Rickard said all the talk about matching Firpo to meet Harry Wills by rival promoters was useless, due to the existence of three contracts signed by Wills and Paddy Mullins, Wills' manager, to meet Luis Firpo, Erminio Spalla and Jack Dempsey, under Rickard's auspices.

Daredevils Win

The Taftville Daredevils opened their season with an easy victory from Bowen's Allstars by the score of 23 to 4 in a slow game Sunday. Gaudette knocked out 3 home runs for the Taftville boys. The score:

Allstars ..... 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 2 0 — 4
Daredevils ..... 3 5 0 2 1 6 2 2 4 —25

Batteries Daredevils Eccleston Gaudette and Dugas. Allstrus Mileski and Tenant.

The Daredevils would like to hear from the Maples or from any other team averaging 18 years. For games answer through Wednesday's Bulletin or write Ernest Phaneuf Box 88, Taftville, Conn.

21 Cars Entered For Race.

Indianapolis, April 28.—Twenty-one cars have been entered to date in the twelfth annual 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway on May 30. Several additional entries are expected before May first, the date for closing.

Three European drivers are included, Alfred H. Moss of London, Antoine Mourre of Paris and Frithof Ramsen of Copenhagen.

Princeton vs. N. Y. U. Today.

Princeton, N. J., April 28.—Princeton's undefeated baseball nine tomorrow will face New York university, for the first real test of the season. The New Yorkers have an unbroken string of six victories.

Coach Clark intends to use Townsend, the little southpaw, in tomorrow's game as Caldwell worked against Cornell Saturday. The Tigers have two other games this week, one Wednesday with the University of Georgia and the other Saturday when they meet Williams at Williamstown.

Spalla Comes Here Next Month.

New York, April 28.—Erminio Spalla, Italian heavyweight boxer who was knocked out by Luis Firpo in 14 rounds at Buenos Aires, will not arrive in this country until some time after May 15 when he fights Benedicto Santos at Sao Paulo, Brazil. He had been expected today. Spalla sailed from Buenos Aires on the Western World which arrived today but passengers stated that he had left the ship at Santos, Brazil. He will take the first ship to New York after the fight at Sao Paulo.

Hillies Beat Profs.

New Haven, April 28. — Swenson's steady pitching today held New Haven down to three runs against Pittsfield's five. The Profs took out Kelly in the second and put in McKenty after Pittsfield had scored three runs off the former. McKenty allowed but four hits and struck out seven men in the following seven innings. Graham took in a line drive of E. Gallagher's with two men on bases and New Haven's chances were gone. Score:

Pittsfield ..... 1 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0—5
New Haven ..... 2 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0—3

Two base hits, Webb. Three base hits, McPhee.

Jenkins' Double Wins For Waterbury.

Waterbury, April 28.—Tom Jenkins' double in the ninth, following passes to Schauffel and Long and a sacrifice by Pitcher Harry Fuller, gave Waterbury a 4 to 3 victory over Worcester in a slow home

WESTERLY

A Providence morning newspaper had the following item Monday:

Representative Samuel H. Davis of Westerly said yesterday that he was "not now a candidate for the republican nomination for governor," but intimated that he would have "a further announcement" to make if Col. Harold J. Gross refused to be a candidate or to announce his candidacy in the near future.

Mr. Davis said that he supported Col. Gross in the 1922 convention, seconding his nomination and saw no reason why he should not do so this year if the Colonel entered the campaign early. "I believe that much is to be gained in the way of party harmony," he said, "by a friendly discussion and alignment of candidates early in the campaign, so as to avoid convention contests and the bitter feeling engendered thereby."

Samuel Hoffman Davis of Westerly, was born in Jane Law, Lewis County, West Virginia, Nov. 27, 1867, receiving his education at Salem Academy (West Virginia), Alfred University, Yale University and was graduated from Boston University Law school. He is chairman of Westerly Chapter American Red Cross, was sergeant-major, first batallion, R. I. S. G., and was a four minute speaker in War Work campaigns. He has been representative from the Second Westerly legislative district since January, 1917. He is an attorney and a real estate dealer. In politics he is a republican.

At the close of the business day Saturday more than seven thousand dollars of the Westerly Fire district taxes had been paid at the town clerk's office, Everett E. Whipple, treasurer and collector. The total amount of the assessment in round numbers is $14,000 and the payments represent many taxpayers, although the totals do not show this to such an extent as many larger individual fire district taxpayers wait under the "eleventh hour" before paying their tax.

The newly organized Westerly Fire police met at the Westerly Fire station on Union street Monday night and the reorganization is now been effected. Fire police are: Captain, Shelby C. Nicholas; lieutenant, Henry W. Sutcliffe; clerk, William R. Wilcox; treasurer, Ralph Spargo; John Reardon, Milo M. Champlin, Harry L. Barber, William Hamilton, Samuel T. Patton, Alexander Greig, William Moizer and Hugh J. Mulvey. Uniforms have been ordered and it is thought they will be here in two weeks' time; they are of an up-to-date design of blue, with single breasted coat with military collar. The fire police are also to be equipped with belts and long night sticks. It is expected that they will make their first public appearance in full dress in the parade to be held in connection with the opening of the Westerly Veteran Firemen's fair, May 17th. It is possible that the fire police themselves may hold a fair at a later date.

The death of Morie Solovetitzik, 46, a well known second-hand furniture dealer of Mechanic street, Pawcatuck, occurred at his home, 119 West Broad street, at 4 o'clock Monday morning. Mr. Solovetitzik was born in Russia in 1878, the son of the late Sender Solovetitzik and Slave Slaven. About thirty years ago Mr. Solovetitzik came to this country and for the last 16 years has engaged in the furniture business. Some eight days ago he was taken ill with influenza and pneumonia, from which death resulted.

He was a member of the Loyal Order of Moose and Congregation Sharey Zedek.

Besides his wife, Sarah, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Sylvia Solovetitzik, three daughters, Misses Gertrude, Ella and Ethel Solovetitzik; two brothers, Solomon of Westerly and Harry Solovetitzik of Roxbury, Mass., and three sisters, Mrs. Max Lahn and Mrs. Abram Lelbovits of Westerly and Mrs. Ida Greenberg of New York.

The funeral service was held Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the synagogue on Union street, Rabbi Harry Deutsch officiating. Burial was in the Jewish cemetery at Poquetanuck. Members of the congregation acted as bearers.

The bi-monthly meeting of Westerly Probate court, Judge Edward M. Burke, is to be held this (Tuesday) afternoon.

The sessions of the April term of the superior court for Washington county, which was adjourned by Judge Edward M. Blodgett last Wednesday, will be resumed this (Tuesday) morning at West Kingston. The petty jurors will report at 9.30 at the court house at Kingston, when the following cases will be up for trial: Charles H. Arnold vs. Ida W. Smith, alias; Nathan C. Richmond vs. Frank A. Green and Alice M. Richmond vs. Frank A. Green.

Many Westerly baseball fans are planning to visit Stonington this (Tuesday) afternoon to witness the game between the Stonington High and the Norwich Free Academy team.

A. Joseph Jordan was an automobile visitor in Plympton, Mass., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Martin returned to their home in Pawcatuck Monday evening after a visit in Providence.

Edward W. Pierce of Wakefield, was a Westerly business visitor on Monday.

Miss Mary Dolan was a week end visitor with relatives in New London.

Stephen Potter of Hope Valley was a Westerly business visitor Monday.

A special session of Stonington town court will be held this (Tuesday) morning.

The blazing journal box of a freight car in a long through train eastbound Monday afternoon, caused the engineer to blow for the towerman to let the train in on the siding east of the High street bridge that attention might be given the freight car.

Some dozen or more freight cars in the Westerly freight yard have been loaded with spruce trees, dug in Stonington, which have been shipped to Long Island and to Cincinnati. Special permits had to be obtained of the federal authorities before the shipment could be moved, which were obtained only because the trees were already dug and the past cold weather has prevented insect activity, which ordinarily would place an embargo on this class of shipment.

A special meeting of the Westerly town council was held Monday night to canvass the jury list.

Miss Susan McKnight of Norwich was the guest of friends in Westerly Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Weston are entertaining guests at their home in Westerly during this week in which the public schools of Westerly are having a vacation. Mr. Weston is the teacher of science and mathematics in the high school.

Miss Kathryn M. Sturtevant, teacher of French in Westerly High school, left Friday, accompanying her mother for a week's visit in Boston.

R. Raymond McWeaney was an automobile visitor in Norwich Sunday.

Miss Ethel M. Frisell is at her home in Woburn, Mass., on a week's vacation from her duties as mathematics instructor in Westerly High school.

Peter Pisardi was a Boston visitor Sunday.

Miss Lena J. Russell, stenography and typewriting teacher in the Westerly High school, has gone to Boston for a week's visit.

Mrs. Alexander Ferguson accompanied by her daughter Elizabeth visited in Providence Monday. Mrs. Ferguson was accompanied by her mother on her return to Westerly.

Visiting in Medford, Mass., for a week's vacation from school duties as teacher of commercial subjects in the Westerly high school is Miss Mabel R. Comstock.

Miss K. Marie Lloyd, teacher of English, is in Boston this week.

Mrs. Edwin Whitford left Monday for two weeks' visit in New York.

Miss Marguerite Whitney, a special teacher in domestic science and art in the public schools of Westerly is visiting relatives and friends in Wellesley, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Meikle of Pawtucket, R. I., were automobiles visitors in Westerly Sunday.

Chief Stanton acknowledged receipt of the check and turned it over to City Treasurer Stephen H. Reeves, who added it to the pension fund.

In the baseball game Monday afternoon on the Elm street school grounds the Elm street grammar team defeated the Stonington High second team, 12 to 2.

The current number of Life has this to say under the heading "Mrs. Pepys Diary, April 25": "Paying the tax at all is bad enough, but to be hauled up and interrogated by strangers when one's report has been honestly made out, is, methinks, an addition of an insult to an injury * * * Came home early this night, bringing along to my delight, Charlie Sherman, of Westerly. And we did fall a talking about liquor, as is the custom these days in cultured company and Charlie said that the first question he asks a new Jap butler is, can you mix a good cocktail? The answer is invariably in the affirmative and if the servant makes good on it, Charlie locks up his cellar. If not, he doesn't even watch the bottles."

It so happens that there is a Charles Sherman in Westerly and that he has at times a Japanese butler. Furthermore nothing need be said!

At the Submarine Base, Lieutenant (jg) Claude Farmer, U. S. navy, was recently relieved of duty as communication officer, and assumed the duty of torpedo (ordnance) officer.

CHRISTOPHER MORGAN, 71, DIED SUNDAY AT MYSTIC

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Mystic, April 28.—Christopher Morgan, 71, died Sunday evening at Lawrence hospital, New London, following an operation earlier in the day by a New York specialist, by which it was hoped that his life might be saved. He had had several severe attacks of illness from each of which he had rallied sufficiently to go out of doors again, but for the past two weeks had been critically ill with an aneurism which resulted in his death.

He was one of a family of four children, was born in the old Morgan homestead in Ledyard Oct. 11, 1852, and belonged to an old New England family which can be traced back as far as 1607, being the son of Colonel William Morgan and Cynthia Billings. His boyhood and early school days were spent in Ledyard but he became an orphan at the age of 8 and went to Norwich to reside with his sister, the late Mrs. William A. Gallup. While in Norwich he was assistant warden of the Norwich jail for a short time, and taught school in Ledyard, also at East Great Plain, after which he attended the State Normal school in New Britain.

In 1875 he entered the employ of Hall, Elton & Co., of Wallingford, as traveling salesman, and from 1885 to 1889 was engaged with Rogers & Brother, of Waterbury, when this became a part of the International Silver company of Meriden, with which company he was associated up to his retirement from business about five years ago.

June 21, 1887, he married Edith May Noyes, daughter of Benjamin F. and Lydia W. Noyes. Two sons were born to them—Christopher Lyston Morgan, who is married and living in Chicago and Richard William Morgan, who died in France while waiting to embark for home at the close of the war, during which he saw much active service, and for whom the local branch of the American Legion is named.

Mr. Morgan was a member of the Congregational church of Preston City, St. James lodge No. 73, of Norwich, Franklin Chapter, No. 4, St. Elmo Commandery, No. 8, of Meriden, Connecticut Consistory, 32nd degree, of Norwich, and Pyramid Temple, Bridgeport, Sons of the American Revolution, New London County Historical Society, and the Mystic League for Village Improvement of which he was one of the organizers in 1900 and in which he held the office of president at the time of his death, having also been its first president and an active worker ever since its organization.

In the business world Mr. Morgan was unusually successful. Being of fine physique and distinguished and dignified bearing, yet possessing a genial personality and a frank, candid manner, he won friends wherever he went. He was well known not only in this state but throughout the west where he had traveled widely. He was a man of varied interests and in his travels both in the interests of business and for pleasure he met many interesting people and, being possessed of a keen sense of humor, his ability as a reconteur was exceptional. In the village where he has resided since 1887, Christopher Morgan was one of the outstanding men in the community, devoted to Mystic and interested in all that pertained to its welfare and ever zealous in preserving and improving the natural beauties of the village. He was very fond of his home, and took great pride in beautifying his property, his residence and the grounds surrounding it being one of the most attractive spots in the village. By his deeds and works Mr. Morgan has made a notable contribution to the history of the village, leaving a record of a life well spent and worthy of emulation.

Besides his wife and son, Christopher Lyston Morgan, of Chicago, he leaves two grandchildren.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BRIDGEPORT MAN TO ADDRESS HOSPITAL MEETING

Those who saw the great gathering of Norwich workers in the drive last fall realize what a tremendous interest there is in the Backus hospital. They were the largest gatherings for a common cause ever held in town. It is hoped by the committee in charge that the meeting this evening at the Community House will show again what a personal interest each one takes in the welfare of the hospital.

An interesting program has been arranged and so that we may learn from the experience of others the committee had invited the superintendent of the Bridgeport hospital: Dr. John F. Bresnahan, to tell us how a hospital can best serve the community and to present a vision of the place of the hospital in the community. Dr. Bresnahan is a straight-from-the-shoulder speaker and it is felt that a great opportunity is presented to the public. Dr. Bresnahan is taking the long trip by motor over and back this evening just to help in the organization of the Woman's auxiliary.

The Bridgeport hospital has recently printed a short explanation of the cost of the care of a patient and of why the hospital must be assisted by private subscriptions. It is as follows:

"Average cost of each patient was $20.83 per week last year. 5407 patients were cared for last year. At the end of the year $99,988.01 over and above what was taken in, was paid out for expenses. This loss was made up from contributions, from interest on money left to the hospital and from a share of the Community Chest Fund.

"If you will stop to consider what a room and meals cost per day at a hotel, then add the cost of medicines, dressings, nursing services, hospital clothing such as pajamas, slippers and a single thickness of gauze costs 4 1-2 cents a yard, the cost of dressings alone is astounding.

"The hospital serves you—do not forget to serve the hospital some day when the opportunity comes."

The opportunity has come now for every man and woman who is interested in the Backus hospital to join the auxiliary which is to be formed, the women to be active and the men to be honorary members. The plans of this organization will be laid before the meeting this evening at 8 o'clock in the Community House and all are urged to be present. Mrs. Walter F. Lester will preside.

Broadway Theatre

A capacity audience greeted what was termed as the best bill of the year at the Broadway theatre yesterday. Not only did they see a perfect show of B. F. Keith vaudeville but a great picture with Pola Negri in "Shadows of Paris."

Campbell & Esther in Words and Music, gave the vaudeville a good start. Music is the violin and words of every meaning were coupled advantageously.

Roberts, Jackson & Co., a trio, followed with a very fine variety selection Auto Suggestion. Eccentric comedy singing, talking and dancing predominated.

Casson Bros. and Marie in Dance a la Graphonola, have combined original novelty character dancing that gets over well.

Casey & Warren Trio offer a splendid comedy act.

The Four Bellhops close the program with a bang! They bound and tumble, offering a fast routine of acrobatic feats.

At the Strand

Sincerity and beauty are the outstanding marks of distinction of "The Barefoot Boy," a splendid picturization of Whittier's immortal poem, which opened at the Strand theatre last night for a three days' run.

A keen student of youth's hopes and aims and loves, David Kirkland has in "The Barefoot Boy," brought the very spirit of our finest youth to the screen. Here is not the sophisticated youth of the city with its jazz, synthetic gin, "petting parties" and mad helter-skelter existence, but the country boy and girl with their wholesome view point, their fine ambitions, and their friends overtures at life.

He becomes one of the biggest captains of industry in the country, but is not half so happy as in the days when he was known as "The Barefoot Boy." The climax is thrilling to the nth degree, and it would be a pity to divulge it here.

"The Barefoot Boy" boasts a real all-star cast, headed by Frankie Lee. He is supported by such able performers as John Bowers, Marjorie Daw, Sylvia Breamer, Tully Marshall, Otis Harlan, Brinsley Shaw, Raymond Hatton, Virginia True Boardman, George Periolat, Gertie Messinger and Lottie Williams.

Strand Theatre

Powder River, the sensational world war picture will be presented at the Strand theatre the last half of this week under the auspices of the R. O. Fletcher post of the American legion. Part of the net proceeds will be given to the post for their building fund.

All members of the legion will be admitted free if they present their card at the door.

All advance notices tend to show that a capacity audience will be the rule for three days.

These pictures are the only official films of the holocaust that shook civilization. They are the complete records of every division that saw action in France against the Germans.

Palace Theatre

"The Meanest Man in the World" as presented at the Palace theatre yesterday proves that there is still available somewhere, sufficient material that goes toward making a highly successful photoplay.

The picture was adapted to the screen from the famous stage play in which appeared George M. Cohan. Augustin MacHugh is the author who obtained the idea of the story from the playlet of Everett S. Ruskay. Principal Pictures Corporation produced the screen version of the story and the releasing is being made through First National Pictures.

Here is a picture that is going to please everybody that witnesses it. The cast is truly all star and in addition to Lytell, boasts such names as Blanche Sweet, who enacts the role of Jane, Bryan Washburn, Marion Aye, Helen Lynch, Forrest Robinson, Victor Potel, Warde Crane, William Conklin, Frances Raymond and a host of others equally popular. Also specially selected comedy and latest Pathe news.

Two Health Lectures.

Miss Margaret K. Stack, R. N., director, bureau of public health nursing, Connecticut State Department of Health, is to be the speaker at Chapman Technical High school, New London, Wednesday evening, at a free public lecture upon Public Health Nursing.

The lecture will be followed by a motion picture entitled, An Equal Chance. This shows the work of the public health nurse and her part in a community health program.

Miss Stack will be introduced by Mrs. Nicia M. W. Whitestia, R. N., supervisor of medical inspection of school children, New London.

Next Friday evening Dr. Charles J. Bartlett of the bureau of laboratories, will lecture upon Laboratory and Disease.

The great Gothic Cathedral at Linz, in Upper Austria, a structure which has been 63 years in building and which rivals the Gothic masterpieces of the middle ages, is to be dedicated with imposing ceremonies beginning today, and in which eminent prelates from many parts of Europe will take part.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PALACE THEATRE.

All great American dramas of semi-historical origin seem to hit the times just at the right period and no fuller illustration of this can be shown than the phenominal success of The Covered Wagon, which comes to Norwich at the Palace theater for a special engagement of four days starting Sunday evening, May 4th at 7:30 p. m.

This story is the picturization of the great Saturday Evening Post serial of the same title by Emerson Hough which is now in its sixth edition as a book and which was made for Famous Players-Lasky under the able direction of James Cruze.

Emerson Hough as everyone familiar with his works knows was one of the foremost writers of the west and he said just before his death that he had reached the height of his dreams when he witnessed the screen success of his greatest endeavor. Contrasted with that ill timed movement of aggression, the story of how these men and women of great courage and high resolution set forth upon their perilous trip of 2,000 miles across the uncharted plains and desert is inspiring. In the covered wagons drawn by oxen and resting off an average of twelve miles a day they laughed and sang, and loved and suffered and fought to build what is now the great western heart of this greatest of all countries. Its appeal is the personal one of courage to do and hearts to serve that an unknown land might be opened up and the rich stream of wealth comes pouring forth each year in crops that reach to the ends of the world. There is romance and adventure in every forward move of the winding trains as they trek onward and onward toward the end of the trail and the golden west which was no mere rainbow or chimera but something that will live forever in our minds and hearts. The production has been successfully presented in all the principal cities of the country and in London and Paris.

How far should a man go to make the man who had saved his life a "happy man"?

There are various answers that could be given to this question and all would be different. However, one answer forms the theme of Edwin Carewe's production of "The Bad Man," a First National attraction, which comes to the Palace theatre beginning Thursday for three days.

In "The Bad Man" all of Gilbert Jones' cattle from his Arizona ranch have been stolen. A mortgage is about to be foreclosed on his ranch. He is in love with the wife of a Wall Street millionaire and she is the same girl he gave his heart to before the great war.

To disclose how this is done would be telling the story of "The Bad Man." However, Lopez does it and does it in a manner that is as replete with thrills, tender love, romance and intrigue as any motion picture that has ever been taken.

Holbrook Blinn is seen as "The Bad Man," the part he made famous on the stage, while supporting him are Jack Mulhall, Enid Bennett and Walter McGrail.

COMING TO THE BREED THEATRE

Jackie Coogan is back in rags! After appearing as a little crown prince in Long Live the King, the screen's great child star will now be seen in more familiar garb in his latest Metro picture, "A Boy of Flanders," which is coming to the Breed theatre for a four day engagement, starting on Wednesday.

A Boy of Flanders, called by critics the best of Jackie's productions, is a free adaption of the literary masterpiece by Ouida, A Boy of Flanders, which tells the beautifully touching story of a boy and a dog. This gives the little star the greatest chance at acting—real acting—he has ever had, and provides the finest entertainment he has contributed to the screen.

BREED THEATRE

Today, at the Breed theatre, marks the last run of the William Fox offering The Net, a mystery drama of thrills and romance with Barbara Castleton, Raymond Bloomer, and Albert Roscoe in the principal roles. The director of this production, J. Gordon Edwards, remembered for his stupendous Fox specials, Queen of Sheba, and Nero, has sustained the element of mystery with remarkable effectiveness throughout.

Especially exciting is the studio scene, the set alone of which cost upward in six figures, wherein the murder takes place. Around this event unfold circumstances of marked novelty and a charming romance that appeals in all its sweetness.

Jack Luby will be heard in illustrated songs and the Pathe news and an Educational Comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

SHORT STORIES
OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

A New One Every Day

By Margaret Taylor

ONE evening Judge Day sat in his box at the opera. Across the hall, unobserved at the moment, was a country girl, sitting in a box with her fashionable city aunt, Mrs. Marcella Jamison-Smith. Judge Day knew Mrs. Smith and mildly wondered just who the pretty girl was. Or was she pretty? He believed not. He watched the girl for a while, then turning to his son, said: "Albert, who is the girl in Mrs. Smith's box?"

"I do not know who she is. I heard some person say she is the daughter of a pork butcher, living some place in Ohio. I understand she is a natural-born mimic. Isn't she ugly? Probably she is dreaming of going in for grand opera. Mrs. Smith is entertaining her, but not noticeably, as you see. These, with a sigh, country relations!"

The play was very simple, like most of the primal things of life, the same thing in fact: A lover of the village went to the wars and the waiting girl became the wife of another. An old story. A tiresome play, despite the soft Italian music, charming in its finished style.

But Judge Day had had a serious day of it at the court. He wanted something bright, sprightly, wild of the vaudeville, something humorous, a wrinkle dispeller.

Then again he looked at the girl.

Her delicate chin was slightly lifted. Her large eyes, too large for the small face, looked with wondering delight at everything and every person. It was so new, so remarkably fascinating to her. She was very sad when it was over and she was walking with her aunt to the waiting car.

Judge Day followed them. He knew he was going to. He received the introduction and only too gladly got in the car with the two women, while Bert drove home alone.

The end came swiftly. It always does when a widower falls in love with a young woman and wants to marry her. It was the finest compliment in the world for the girl, and everything to be desired by the wonderful aunt. In fact it pleased everyone; but everyone kept wagging their tongues and gossip grew fat and lazy. She would, as sure as the heavens shone above them all, be no wife for the man who was so much older than she.

Probably not, but they were married.

She went to his home and Bert tried with all his soul to understand just what was the charm that pleased his father. Certainly the girl-wife was not pretty. She was not even attractive-looking. There was a winsome tenderness in her face, but a most ordinary one seen in the average girl, so why this young woman had suddenly come into their lives with absolutely nothing to recommend her, was ten times more of a mystery to the son than the wondering public.

The judge went abroad and took his young wife with him. When they returned she seemed the same. That she was never to be any more animated than the day she married, was plain to be seen. What was the charm? She read little, talked less, did nothing which the accomplished woman is supposed to do, and her lover was ten times more in love with her than the day he married her.

Bert wildly awaited the fate of the two. Why did she not quarrel with him or with his father? Why was she so patient, so intensely satisfied? Why did she not visit her family? Why did they not visit her? Bert wished she might be human enough to smoke a cigarette. Bert prophesied that, probably, she might have been an artist, but he invented huge imaginative powers to console himself with that idea. And just because she was a mystery, and because he did not understand her, he studied her the more and—manlike fell in love with her himself, without knowing why.

What right had his father to this woman, now beautiful, desirable, tenderly womanly, with wonderful possibilities of maternal worship and earthly adoration? Why did old men, like his father, select such lovely characters? Did she love his father, he wondered, and as quickly supposed that it could not be possible. She was extraordinary, but how?

He did not know and she made a love world in his home.

Then one night Bert and his new little mother were sitting in a porch swing. Back of them was an open window and hiding close to the screen was Bert's father. Night after night he sat there with a revolver in his hand. He meant to kill the boy if he discovered that his fears were true. Well he knew that Bert was in love with the little woman. Such rivalry being unusual, it reached the tragic stage quicker than was expected.

"Honestly, Miriam," coaxed Bert, "do you love Dad? Dear old Dad, he richly deserves you, but," here he took a long breath, "do you love him?"

She looked up and laughed. A laugh that made another tighten his hand over the revolver. "Are you crazy, Bert? Do I love him? Why, there is nothing on earth like him. I actually pray at rare intervals that I—poor little old ugly Miriam, will never lose a moment of his wonderful love. I worship him. I wonder why you ask it?"

"Simply because I want Dad to be happy," he replied.

Later a silent figure was seen walking down the dark side of the long drive way. It was Judge Day, happy, prayerful, joyful of the glory in his heart. Back on the shadowy porch a young man was devouring kisses on coy lips that tip-tilted to meet his.

"I wonder if that old simpleton imagines we did not know he has been hiding every night back of that curtain," she laughed.

The Pup's Reward

By Hazel Courtney

NOW, pa, don't you lose that umbrella, whatever you do!" quoth Ma Hanley, with a touch of aggressiveness as she gave the tie under her better half's ear a twitch around to plumb and ascertained that a crisply, white folded square of line lay in his back pocket. "Don't forget an' leave it anywheres, 'cause umbrellas is dreadful expensive this year an' besides, we've got the back of the barn to shingle this Spring and we might jest as well be a-savin' of umbrellas as anythin' else!"

Pa submitted meekly to a resounding kiss on his chin and departed with the importance of the rain-shedder firmly implanted in his mind and the necessity lightly crooked over the elbow of his left arm. Trudging along the snow encrusted road, his old shoes crunching and squeaking at every step, pa thought and thought and thought. For pa had always been, since the beginning of things, a mild and quiet sort, and 22 years of Ma's competent bossing had increased this state of mind considerably.

Ma was generally right, and pa knew it, but he was nevertheless aware that there was something wrong—vaguely amiss—with that umbrella. Many times before had he been the butt of satirical comments when carrying thus the pride of his wife's heart on a rainy day. Nor was he in any mind to repeat the performance. The worm was turning, and with quite a considerable flop for this particular worm!

"I believe I'll jest drop into Abe Finley's on my way downtown," he thought. "Perhaps I can put this pesky petticoat behind his door or leave it on his piazzy or somewheres, though heaven knows no sensible livin' bein' would want that contraption decoratin' his front yard! Land sakes alive, I should say not! And Abe's house is yaller, too!"

Pa shuddered at the thought of a pea-green umbrella on a yellow veranda. "Sakes alive! Folks 'ud think the circus was a-comin' to town! Nope! I jest can't do that. I'll have to leave it behind his kitchen door."

But luck wasn't with him. His guardian angel had joined the union, and never worked overtime. Abe Finley was not at home. Pa was strongly tempted to leave his burden all the same, but hadn't the heart to commit the sacrilege. So on he trudged, quite dejectedly, now the point of the precious umbrella digging behind, leaving a wavering track in the snow.

"Oh, I know! I'll go in here and see Mis' Smith a minute," he decided, as he neared a very neat white house under the rise of the next hill. "I'll jest stop around an' see how 'Bijah is this mornin' an' inquire after 'Tildy's husband. But, land alive, she's neater than wax, an' she'll see this here annoyance afore ever I get out of sight over the hill."

Quite so! No sooner had pa surveyed Almeda Smith's tale of troublous times and deported minus umbrella and worry, then Almeda spied the cause of his shame and, grabbing it in a determined hand, rushed to the front door.

"Uriah!" she shrieked. "Uriah Hanley! Here's your umbrella!" Pa's back was non-committal, and he feigned temporary deafness. Again came the shrill cry: "Uriah! U-r-i-ah Hanley! You left your umbrell-a!"

With a resigned sigh pa turned and went back! Almeda was smiling from ear to ear. "Land! But Mis' Hanley 'ud be mad if you lost that umbrella," she said. "It's dretful han'some an' you can't buy silk like that is now-a-days."

"Thanks," said pa. "Yes, yes," and went on. Could he never dispose of that awful green umbrella! Would he always have to carry it! Aha! Just then he spied a barrel setting near Joe Snow's barn, and promptly acting upon impulse he thrust the umbrella in and well out of sight. Then care free and light-hearted, he set out at a much brisker pace for town. If his conscience troubled him at all nobody knew it and all the loafers at the "Grocery and Provision Store" declared, with cracker barrels for firm foundation, that "Ol man Hanley was a-gittin' younger every year."

On the homeward journey, laden down with his recent purchases and lost in thoughts of cedar shingles and staging, pa had little time to notice the darkling skies and leaden clouds. Only when a fair-sized hailstone bounced off his nose did he realize the state of the weather. He began to hurry as fast as his tired old feet would take him toward Joe Snow's barrel and the despised umbrella. Horror of horrors! The barrel was gone. And there upon the ground lay the remnant of a violent green umbrella, the yellowish ivory handle showing the unmistakable marks of a puppy's teeth, the ribs pointing hither and thither and tatters of green silk flying toward the four winds of heaven!

Abstractedly pa raised the wreck over his head and walked the mile and a half more home. And even though he tried his sainted best to feel conscience stricken, he couldn't find it in his heart even to be sorry.

And then there was an unmistakable, if slight, twinkle in his eye as he entered his wife's kitchen—the corpse of the pride of her soul still raised above his head and dripping streams of water through its countless rents. "Well, ma, me and the umbrella be home."

Ma Hanley looked at him a moment and then sank weakly into a chair. "My land!" quoth she—and that was all.

Sam told that on his next trip to town pa bought two rather strange articles that were commented on by the grocery store loafers. One was a very quiet black umbrella with a plain handle and the other was a collar for little Sammy Snow's pup.

It May Never Happen Again

By Claire Wesson

SUCH incidents seldom or never happen. This might happen to you, though the chances are it never will. That it occurred to Chan Hadden is a greater mystery, for Chan is so remarkably analytical and more than careful. This probably is the result of his surveying career and the minute detail of everything he did with his engineering corps.

One Autumn afternoon, one of those long Sunday afternoons when shadows stretch full length and all the miniature underworld of insects buzz and cavort around in that lazy slug-song way, while he was meandering through the woods, Chan followed a ragrant sunbeam, not because he wanted to, for he was remarkably tired, but merely because he had to find a place where his men could bunk and eat while their work progressed in the valley.

In his own language, and he shook his head sadly as he remarked it, "It was the darndest, lonesomest place this side of where you don't want to go when you die." Nevertheless, he had to go and as he walked up one hill, down another, and made a new path where, seemingly, human foot never had been set before, he felt that there could be no place on earth quite so forsaken. A few wild birds, gathering to go South, rose in a cloud, and swept across a dark valley, rank with fern, and wild, poisonous things. A crane followed by its mate, flew out of sight.

Presently he gained the highest summit of what is known as Laural Point. Below him ran a turbulent stream of water, probably very deep in that gorge. It was spanned by a railroad bridge. At least it denoted that he was within hailing distance of civilization. The next move was to get down on that track. No person but a man in Chan Hadden's work could have made it. The breaking of new paths, the exploring of strange places, the measurement of most of it, was as common to him as your knife and fork at your plate. In the far distance could be seen a gray outline. He raised his powerful glass, looked and found exactly what he expected—a small mining town with the Catholic cross rising like the hand of God, proclaiming to the whole wide world that His people were even here, here in the desolate valley where the days were alike and only the passing of coal trains caused an event. He knew them, having found them the full length of that railroad. Again he raised his glass, swept it over the wild, picturesque loveliness of the scene, and saw other crosses in far distant places. He liked the sight, not that he was a Catholic, but for all that the cross stands for, its emblem to mankind and its promise of the future.

He heard a train whistle. It was not far distant and presently the engine appeared right below him where he knew there must be a very long tunnel. He did not know it before. The train pulled out on the bridge, crossed, dragging after it an enormous length of empties. Soon they were gone and he reached the railroad, walked back to the mouth of the tunnel, then retraced his steps and was about to go across the bridge when he heard the whistle. Thinking it must be another train, he stepped back to let it pass, fearing to go on the long, straight bridge where there wasn't an inch of siding to step upon should a train catch a fellow upon it. The jutting ties were too narrow on each side to offer any accommodation.

Below the bridge was a cavern of tangled underbrush, overswept with water that flung itself angrily into a whirlpool, widening, circling, boiling. It was deep, terrible-looking and while it had none of the usual maddening roar of such deep water caverns, its very quietness was more strongly indicative of its dangerous depths.

The whistle reverberated faintly in the distance, then ceased entirely. The wanderer stepped upon the bridge, looked cautiously both ways, then started across. Midway he again heard the whistle of the departing train, then—louder, still louder, maddeningly loud, right behind him.

God! It was coming through the tunnel.

He ran. Knowing he could not make it, he flung himself over the side, caught a tie end and held himself as best as he could, hoping the train would soon pass; then he would be able to crawl back on the track. His enormous weight sent fire through his hands, so great was the strain. Then, suddenly, he remembered he was right over that awful chasm of water and brush where, if he fell, no human being would ever find him. He remembered the crosses. He prayed, not a new thing for him, and still the cars passed over his head. He kept his eyes closed with fear. There were too many cars!

He knew he could hold on no longer. It was a freight!

His time had come. Out in the lonely part of the mountainous district he was to meet his death. His wife and children would never know just where he went or how he died. That maddening ache in his hands! One second more and he must drop. He heard the low murmur of the water like a siren calling him to death. And still the train plunged on and on, and no person saw him.

He fell!

He was just six inches above ground when he let go!

He looked at the retreating train, and laughed. Laughed like an idiot, with tears in his eyes. He had been nearer the far end of the bridge than he imagined!

A Tale of a Dog

By Monte Darrell

NOSE on extended paws, Buttons watched with devoted, but troubled eyes the shoulders of his pretty young mistress as they heaved convulsively with each heart-broken sob.

The previously undisturbed calm of Buttons' domestic happiness had been rudely shattered during the last week by frequent quarrels between the two beings he loved most on earth—his master and mistress. One short year of perfect, home-loving bliss and then—this!

Buttons had grown up with his pretty young mistress and loved her with the devotion she deserved. His master had been a later acquisition and was accepted by him at first because his mistress seemed to desire it, and later because Buttons learned that he was a man to trust. Now, something—a foolish thing, Buttons thought—had pricked this rose-colored bubble of domestic joy and it had burst with a bang.

As he watched his mistress' out of soft, brown, adoring eyes it gradually dawned in buttons' alert mind that it was up to him to patch that bubble up or go drown himself as a no-account quadruped.

That it was Mistress Nan's erring brother that had been the cause of all the trouble, Buttons knew. Brother Jack was old enough to know right from wrong, and young enough to regard family interference in his affairs as nothing short of impertinent presumption. Master Harry had protected, coaxed, threatened and finally warned him to conduct himself with greater discretion, or seek another home. Gambling, drinking and several escapades in which he was requested to "tell it to the judge" had been overlooked, but this last incident had been too much.

Buttons wasn't satisfied (any more than Mistress Nan) that brother Jack was guilty of stealing—even if circumstances and Master Harry did convict him.

Jack was wild, yet; but Buttons thought he could spot a criminal when he saw one, and he had never regarded Jack, as anything worse than a little-too-good fellow. He didn't believe (and here again he agreed with Mistress Nan) that Jack had taken that roll of bills from Harry's bureau.

Sorrowfully Buttons rehearsed the quarrel between Harry and Nan. Harry had finally told her that she must choose between Jack and himself, as he refused to remain in the same house with a thief. Nan had loyally defended her brother, and Buttons, remembering, loved her the more for it. He reflected, also, that his master could hardly be blamed for the stand he had taken, in the face of the evidence.

Jack had been left alone in the house the previous afternoon and the money had been on the bureau then. (Nan knew that, too; and though she couldn't account for its disappearance, she didn't believe that Jack had taken it.) Jack hadn't returned that night and was still absent which looked bad. Buttons admitted this to himself, but still—

He wished he hadn't allowed his canine nature to lead him on that chase after the Baker's yellow tomcat and hold him at the foot of the big maple, where "Tom" had taken refuge, for nearly an hour; he might have kept an eye on Jack or the money—or both. Oh, well—dogs will be dogs!

Let's see; how could that money have gotten out of his master's bedroom? The window had been open—the curtains were rustling in the soft Spring breeze—Master Harry's soiled of slippers, a wilted collar and a pair of slippers a wilted collar and a pair of socks littered the floor. Buttons remembered that because he had taken Master Harry's afternoon paper to him just after lunch (a trick Nan had taught him along with some others).

What else? Oh, yes, a pair of old shoes that Buttons had heard his master say could be thrown away.

That was it! That pair of shoes! Why couldn't the wind blow that money off the bureau and—

Buttons jumped up and disappeared through the open doorway that was letting in the soft Spring sunshine. After many circlings and sniffings and pawings of the rubbish pile in the back yard he emitted a little "Woof" of triumph and carefully lifted an old shoe in his mouth. With his tail wagging joyfully, he took it inside and deposited it in Mistress Nan's lap.

She wiped her tear-stained cheeks and regarded it with surprise. Buttons pushed his damp nose into her soft palm an gazed up at her with pleading eyes. How he hoped she'd understand!

Nan looked at the shoe wonderingly and something green inside caught her eye. With a little gasp of surprise she thrust her hand into the shoe and drew out the missing roll of bills.

That evening Buttons lay with nose on extended paws and with supreme content gazed at a happy little family group of three.

"Don't worry about me any more, folks," Jack was saying. "I've landed that job with Wheeler Brothers, and yours truly will have to toe the mark from now on."

"Wheeler Brothers? Oh, Jack! Why, that's—"

With a sigh of satisfaction Buttons curled up and went to sleep.

Old Men's Dreams

By Phil Moore

IN the blistering white sunlight the flies hummed drowsily. The door of the little store stood open, a dumb invitation to passers by. Many a big blue-green fly took advantage of the invitation; now and then a stray cat stole furtively in. After each passing team or automobile a cloud of gray dust slowly settled over the battered counter, the motley collection of canned goods, the Christmas toys still on the top shelf. The rubber boots hung in silent expectation that some provident person might wish to prepare for a rainy day.

In the far corner a gray-haired man stood reading a small book and absently tracing patterns in the dusty counter.

He was a man of about 55 years, stoop-shouldered and wizened. Long years of small, unhappy service had left their mark on his face; if he could be said to have an expression, it was that of indifference, not of dissatisfaction. As he read he occasionally repeated a few words aloud. "Blue waves lap a marble beach." He spoke slowly, as though trying to conjure up the scene from the sounds of the words. After a moment he rose, went to the safe in the back of the room, and opened it. Yes, it was still there; oblong green and yellow bank notes; shiny, heavy gold pieces, the price of the new building. Only a few hours before it had been placed there; the next morning it would be forever beyond his reach.

Here, in his hands, was happiness. First, the quick trip to South America, then Switzerland, Spain, Egypt! What magic dreams could he not fulfill! Aladdin's lamp was his for the taking.

Did he owe loyalty to his employer? He had given his youth, chained unprotesting to a battered counter, in exchange for a mere pittance—for bread and butter so that he might toil as he had toiled. Loyalty he dismissed without hesitation. A thief—but were not all rich men thieves? Did they not rob the poor, setting their usurious prices on food according to the demand for it, not according to the toil or money it had cost them to produce it?

He had slaved his life away in return for—what? A roof over his head, plain clothes, simple cooking. These things he did in order to be able to go to work the next day. In what way was he any better than a slave?

He was supposed to be free—free, white and and twenty-one. Free to pursue happiness. He smiled grimly. His life was the negation of freedom and happiness. His time was occupied with petty occupation. Could they be called happiness? Certainly not!

The only happiness that he had known had been his ambitions and dreams and hopes for some future happiness. Instead of dreaming of it, why not seize it when it was as now within his reach?

Never again would he sweep the store in the early gray morning. Blue seas, snow-capped mountains, ivory-carved temples, gaudy-flowered tropical islands—all these were his had he but the will to dare.

Warned by approaching voices, he slammed the safe door shut, and was back reading his book as two slow farmers entered leisurely, arguing the relative merits of a high or low tariff. After he had sold each a out of their favorite tobacco, they seated themselves, from force of habit, near the cold, rusty stove.

Half amused, he listened to their conversation. A few words seemed to hit him like a hammer and stay in his mind.

"Yes, our Jim wants to try his luck out West. Funny. Now, when I was a young lad, I was crazy to go, too. Now, oh, shucks! Folks that's old, like I be, what with the rheumatiz and everything, is glad enough to stay to home. Leastwise, seems as though they'd ought to be."

Suddenly he felt old and very tired. His rosy dream had faded, leaving nothing but gray in its stead. He was too old to venture, too cowardly to risk all on one toss. The glory of new worlds was not for him. He would miss passing the plate in church on Sunday morning; he would long even for the condescending greetings of the customers. Old habits had woven chains too strong to be easily broken. Even the old store would haunt him; it had become a part of him. For new countries for youth; for age, a pleasant fireside, old books, and old companions.

A country woman came in to do her trading. She laid her basket of precious new eggs carefully on the counter. From her worn purse she took her long shopping list.

"What are you paying for eggs today?" she inquired timidly.

ROBT. D. TAYLOR, NEW LONDON CLERK DROPS DEAD AT HIS WORK MONDAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 28—Robert D. Taylor, aged about 60, of 6 Bristol Street, employed at the James Hislop & Co., State Street store, dropped dead of angina pectoris this morning at his work. He is survived by his wife and by a daughter, the latter a resident of California. Mr. Taylor was for a number of years prior to entering the employ of the Hislop Company, proprietor of an ice cream and confectionary store on Broad street.

He had been complaining of inability to breathe and of pains in his chest for several days. This morning he was apparently in his usual health and left for work about 8 o'clock. About 10 o'clock Mr. Taylor went to an open window for the purpose of obtaining fresh air. Hardly had he reached the window when clerks in the department were startled by the sound of someone falling and found Mr. Taylor lying on the floor. By the time the clerks reached him Mr. Taylor was dead.

A peculiar coincidence in connection with the sudden death of Mr. Taylor is the fact that two years ago, Dennis Ford, at that time in charge of the carpet department and holding the same position as did Mr. Taylor, dropped dead in the same room where death overtook Mr. Taylor today.

Mrs. Esther Stricter, 76 Golden St., was removed to the Mitchell ward of Lawrence hospital Sunday night, suffering from erysipelas.

James and Mary Sullivan have sold a building lot on Darrow street to James McNamara.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the license of Mrs. Bertha S. Bartlett, 95 Vauxhall street, to be suspended. Mrs. Bartlett's automobile was in collision recently with a machine owned and operated by Harry Stenger of Waterford at the corner of Connecticut avenue and Broad street. Stenger's car was badly damaged.

It is possible that Lawrence W. Caston, formerly of New London who was arrested in New York, charged with forging a check of the Structure Oil Company of New London, in the sum of $166, will not be presented in the New London police court for a number of weeks, for the afternoon Prosecuting Attorney wired the New York authorities requesting them to hold Easton 90 days. Whether the request will be granted, it is not known.

William H. Farrell, United States internal revenue collector, who is a patient at Lawrence hospital, suffering from peritonitis as a result of an operation for appendicitis, is reported as being considerably improved today and hopes are now held out for his recovery.

The funeral of Mrs. Helen Keeney Floyd, wife of John James Floyd, was held this afternoon, a prayer service being conducted at 1:30 o'clock at the family home, 15 Williams street, by Rev. Joseph R. Elder at 2:30 o'clock at the Huntington Street Baptist church. The church was filled with mourners. In the assemblage were city officials and city employes, former officials and former employes for Mrs. Floyd was executive secretary of former mayors Bryan F. Mahan, Ernest E. Rogers and E. Frank Morgan and to Former City Manager Harlow and Manager William A. Holt. The floral tributes were especially beautiful. The bearers were Dr. Winthrop H. McGinley, George E. Watters, superintendent of the Water and Sewer Board; Herbert L. Huntley, city treasurer; Carey Congdon, director of finance, Frank Payne of New York and Frederick Jacques of Waterford. Burial was in the family plot in Jordan cemetery.

Norman Hellum, colored, changed his address quickly in New London today. He was ordered out of town and told to leave before 6 o'clock this evening, or go to jail for a stay of six months. Hellum was living here upon the earnings of a prostitute, if the statements of Marian Lewis, a comely colored woman are to be relied upon. Mrs. Lewis, for she says she is married, went to the prosecutor Saturday and represented that Hellum had beaten her and that he had threatened to take her life. She said he drove her into the street from her rooms and ordered her to earn money from other men and to bring the cash to him. Prosecutor Cronin ordered the arrest of Hellum as soon as it could be made. In the police court today Mrs. Lewis sought to dodge questions put to her by the attorney, but he would not allow her to and brought from her the recital she had made to him Saturday. Hellum with all the cunning that he could muster said he came here with $150 in cash intending to go to work at the hotel in Groton (the Griswold which will not be open until about the 1st of July) but that story didn't set well on the mind of the prosecutor, so he led the witness along till he admitted practically that he was living with the Lewis woman (as a roomer). The whole story of the pair was clear to Judge Prince told Hellum to get out of the city before sundown or get ready to spend six months in jail. Hellum was glad to have that easy choice. The woman in the case will probably be similarly treated if she is brought before the court again.

Ben Toupin, an Uncasville farmer who comes to New London to supply a milk route, was charged with the reckless operation of an automobile Saturday forenoon, when he ran down an aged man, Timothy Dwyer of 37 Winthrop street. Mr. Dwyer was cut over the left eye, his hand is bandaged and he has bruises on the left leg. Dr. F. M. Dunn treated him for his injuries when he was picked up at the crossing of Main and Douglass street and was taken to the doctor's office. Toupin claimed, it was said foolishly, that he was driving his car at a speed of only a mile an hour. Michael J. Meade, who was a witness of the accident, said the Toupin car was going at 10 miles an hour. Judge Prince took the view that Toupin should have stopped his car when he saw he was going to hit Mr. Dwyer and fined the farmer $25. The accused appealed, much to the surprise of every one who heard the testimony.

Tony Cucola, a Waterbury Contracting company's representative here was fined $5 for passing intersecting streets without slowing the speed of his car. He was mighty glad to settle at that price for he might have been charged with recklessness.

Harold C. Albo had a "dancing jag" on Saturday night, when he went to the dance hall at the beach and there became so offensive that his street was "raked for." Patrolman Babcock, who was on duty in the dance hall, first "mixed up" with Albo and then Officer Clyde Murphy took a hand. The latter said that a volume of vulgarity and profanity flowed from Albo that would chill one's blood. That made the officer more determined than ever to see that Albo paid the penalty for his offense. He was arrested. Albo claimed he is an epileptic and that when he realized that he was to fall he grabbed hold of Manuel Cabral to avoid a fall. He said the officers thought he was rough and they grabbed him. Mr. Murphy said that Albo was very drunk and outrageously abusive. That was why he was arrested. Albo was fined $10 and paid.

It was established in the police court today that the bags of coal which are sold as containing twenty pounds of fuel and which are priced at the rate of $20 to $22 a ton do no always weigh up to the specified standard. The facts came out when Morris Greenblatt, representing the Howard Street Coal company, was prosecuted for selling short weight. Greenblatt denied that he had violated any law and the sealer of weights and measures was called to tell about the case. He said it was a common practice for wholesalers to sell bags of coal that were not always of the weight they were alleged to contain, but that the total weight of the coal they sold to the dealers was right. If the bags were a few ounces short an extra bag was thrown in to make up the weight. The buyer at retail got the short weight. Just the same, but the retailer did not sell with the intention of deceiving as to weight, nor cheating the purchaser. Louis Gadbois, a former store keeper who has met with financial reverses, was the complainant in the case, but he knew very little as to what he was trying to prove. The weights of the coal bags shown by the sealer of weights and measures ranged from 19 pounds and 3 ounces to 21 pounds. Mr. Greenblatt was declared not guilty of attempting to defraud by short weight. The case is likely to arouse a movement for correct weight from the wholesalers, for when coal is selling at $22 a ton the buyer should get what he pays for.

An automobile owned by Charles L. Booth, 93 Montauk avenue, and operated by Mrs. Boothe, was in collision with two machines on Bank street late this afternoon. All three cars were damaged.

Mrs. Boothe was operating her car in a southerly direction and just after passing Montauk avenue, the machines of Mrs. William Maynard of Station 13 1-2, Waterford, motionless and a car owned by George Maynard of Waterford, also motionless were approached. From some unknown cause, Mrs. Boothe operated her machine against both parked cars, the crash causing the two parked cars to be forced from the curb six or eight inches into the highway and the Boothe machine coming to a stop only after it had climbed to the sidewalk and hit an electric light pole. A child of about five was entering the Maynard car as the Boothe machine approached and it is believed Mrs. Booth became excited by seeing the child endeavoring to climb into the car.

Eugene Maynard, 81 Coit street, was before Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton in the Waterford town court this morning charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was fined $100 and received a suspended sentence of 60 days in jail. Maynard was arrested Sunday when the truck he was driving and in which two men were riding overturned through the careless handling of the machine.

Justice Morton also imposed a fine of $25 in the case of Fred Alko of Providence, charged with reckless driving the day before. Alko was arrested by State Police Officer Albright after the officer had followed Alko's car, which was traveling at a rate of 45 miles an hour.

John Lyons, of New London, was before Justice of the Peace William Smiddy in the Montville court this morning, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and without being possessed of registration. On the first count Lyons was fined $100 and a fine of $5 was imposed on the second count. Lyons was taken into custody Sunday night by State Police Officer R. W. Kenerson following the automobile that Lyons was driving hitting two machines in Montville. After the accident the state police barracks was communicated with and Officer Kenerson, who was assigned to the case, discovered the condition of Lyons and brought him to the New London police station where he was held over night.

Mrs. William Schofield of Montauk avenue, Mrs. John Gibson, Waterford, Mrs. Henry Bogue, Montville, Daniel Gagnon, Jewett City, Frank Trowbridge, Waterford and Frank Wentworth, of Masonic street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

The funeral of Henry Tyler, who was found dead in bed at his home, 160 State street last week, was held Sunday afternoon at 15 Masonic St. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Beveridge Lee, pastor of the Second Congregational church and Chaplain A. J. Chandler of W. W. Perkins Post, G. A. R., of which organization Mr. Tyler had been a member for many years. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery.

Miss Lillian Rice, 27, until recently a resident of Providence, but who had been residing at the home of Miss Annie Stevenson, 69 Hempstead street, died Saturday night at the Mitchell ward of Lawrence hospital.

A still alarm this forenoon caused the Nameaug Engine company to be dispatched to the rear of the brick building on North Bank street owned by Robert J. Sisk, where a brisk rubbish fire threatened to reach adjacent buildings. Two streams of chemicals were necessary to extinguish the blaze.

The song recital by Rashaele Diaz, noted tenor of the Metropolitan opera company, under the auspices of New London National Guard units, and scheduled for the Lyceum theatre, did not take place. The reason ascribed for the failure of the artist to appear was throat trouble, but it is believed that the small advance sale was the principal reason for the failure of the concert to be given.

City Manager William A. Holt and Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin have decided that there shall be no semblance of gambling at Ocean Beach this summer. Heretofore many of the concessionists have been permitted to operate the various games of chance, such as wheels for the winning of prizes and the Chinese rolling ball game. These games have been conspicuous at the shore resort for several years and by their absence hereafter, will be equally conspicuous.

Thomas Perry of Chappel street and Miss Sarah Agnello were married this morning at 8 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley. Samuel Perry, nephew of the groom was best man and Miss May Parsi was maid of honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Scharfs have returned to their home, 406 Williams street, having spent the winter at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Announcement is made of the engagement of George C. Carver of Brooks street to Miss Helen Downing, daughter of Mrs. W. Frank Downing, of 28 Rogers street.

Louis C. Gadbois, proprietor of a store, corner of Montauk avenue and Willetts avenue, has sold the business to George Sherburne of Stonington.

The American & European Bakery has filed intentions of sale.

Mrs. Lavina Conklin, 73, widow of Mathew E. Conklin, died Sunday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Louis C. Gadbois, 115 Truman street. Mrs. Conklin who had been in feeble health some time, was a member of the Flanders Baptist church. She is survived by Mrs. Gadbois and three sons, William Conklin of New London, Frank Conklin of Waterford and Henry Conklin of Norwich.

William Turski was charged with breach of the peace, and Peter Trunkins charged with intoxication and breach of the peace, were arrested this afternoon when Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray found the pair battling in the highway on North Bank street, near John street. Both were released upon furnishing a surety on their respective bonds for appearance in the police court tomorrow morning.

An automobile owned and operated by Robert C. Rice of 245 Ocean avenue, struck an unidentified child on Shaw street late this afternoon. The youngster sustained injury no more serious than bruises.

Nicholas Kinasz, of 282 Main street complained to the police late this afternoon that a youth broke into his fish market on Friday and Saturday nights and stole a small quantity of fish on each occasion.

Eugene (Tinker) Sullivan late this afternoon acted as stool pigeon for the police whereby a place was successfully raided and after Sullivan had purchased a small quantity of "hooch" in the place and with money provided him by the police. The place raided was the home of Feliz Neidzewiecki, 125 Main street and from it a considerable quantity of home-made liquor, essences and colorings were obtained, together with about 15 gallons of alcohol.

Sullivan was in the automobile of John Lyons of New London at Montville Sunday when the automobile was in collision with two others cars. Lyons was prosecuted and disciplined in Montville today and Sullivan, who was about the police station during the court this morning was approached by Sergeant Nelson Smith as to where he procured his liquor the day before. Sullivan turned informant and this afternoon he was given a marked bill and instructed to go to the Neidzewiecki house and make another purchase. Sullivan was followed by Sergeant Smith, and Patrolmen Braxton Hill, Howard Sloan, John Sullivan and Frank Linehan. When Sullivan emerged from the house he was met by the officers and the bottle he had purchased was taken from him. The officers, having armed themselves with a search warrant, then entered the place and started their search for liquor. Neidzewiecki was not home, but his wife was in charge of the house. A receptacle that had apparently contained liquor a short time before the officers arrived, was found, but no liquor was revealed. A diligent search was started with the result that when the stairs were ripped away the hiding place of the ingredients for making the liquor was found. This was seized and was taken to the police station as evidence against the woman. When the police attempted to find the marked bill that Sullivan had tendered the woman in payment of the liquor he had purchased they were unsuccessful. It was then recalled that when the officers entered the place Mrs. Neidzewiecki seized a child of about two and a half years, and cuddled it to her bosom. A search of the child was then made and the marked bill was found beneath the youngsters clothing. This was also seized as evidence.

An idea of the money that the Neidzewiecki family has made probably through the illegal sale of liquor, was evidenced by a bank book showing a deposit of $5,000 in the Savings Bank of New London within two years and another bank book showing deposits in the child's name to the amount of several hundred dollars, a cigar box containing bills of every denomination and another box containing dimes, quarters and half dollars. The couple also own their own home.

Mrs. Charles M. Brockleper suffered a shock at her home on State street Sunday, the second stroke within six months. The condition of Mrs. Brockleper tonight was stated to be encouraging.

The identity of two youths as bicycle thieves was revealed tonight when Patrolman Carlos Selesnitsky apprehended a boy with the cycle of Raymond Fogg, Groton, an employe of the Economy store, whose wheel was stolen from Groton Saturday night. The youth revealed the name of another boy, who was with him when the theft occurred and who, it is alleged stole another wheel.

NORWICH GIRL IN TRIO TAKEN FROM HARTFORD BUS

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 28—Della Shea, 19, of Norwich; Constance Manning, 18, of Bridgeport and Beatrice Wooders, 18, of Waterbury, were arrested here late last night when the girls, inmates of the House of the Good Shepherd, at Hartford, who had run away from the institution were taken from a bus entering the city. The girls left Hartford early in the evening and they declared that their fare was paid by a man they became acquainted with in Hartford and to whom the trio stated that they wished to get to New London. On the way to New London the appearance of the girls attracted attention and when the bus reached Colchester, Constable Jerome Sullivan boarded it and being positive that the girls were runaways he caused New London police headquarters to be notified and requesting that officers meet the bus upon its arrival here. Motorcycle Officer George Laboue and Patrolman Patrick Sheehan went to Broad street and when the bus appeared the officers halted it and took the girls into custody. They were given shelter at the Learned mission over night and this morning Katherine Quinn, an employe of the Hartford institution came to New London and took charge of the girls. Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield also accompanied the girls back to the institution.

BOZRAHVILLE

The schools of Bozrah held their annual spelling and speaking contest Thursday night at Palmer's hall, in Fitchville. The enthusiasm of the participants was aroused because of the additional feature of the evening, namely, the mid-winter athletic contest.

Bozrahville school made a splendid showing. Seymour Gilman was not only the winner in speaking and spelling, but his speedy feats, completed the five stunts in 29 seconds. The boys showed remarkable ease and assurance throughout their performance.

The winning of the town contest entitled the team to compete with the winning teams of Ledyard, Preston, Stonington and Preston.

The district athletic contest was held Friday night at Poquetanuck. The teams competing were all determined to win as was shown by their alertness upon entering.

This time the Bozrahville boys were matched against speed apparently equal to their own. They were again victorious, however, finishing the five stunts in twenty-five seconds.

All the credit is due Mr. Reed, town supervisor, whose faithful work filled the boys with that implicit confidence which made them the victors.

The Mississippi State College for Women, founded in 1885, has the distinction of being the first state college for women in the United States.

THIS WOMAN'S MARVELLOUS RECOVERY

All Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Truman, Minn. — "I was badly run-down and had pains in my side and back; sometimes I couldn't hardly move around in bed. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking it I was so much better I could do all my work again. I do my housework, have a garden, raise chickens, and in har vest time I worked in the field and helped pick corn. Sometimes I do chores and milk. I took the Vegetable Compound before and after my four-months-old baby was born, and it has always helped me wonderfully. I believe there is no better medicine made for women, and I hope every woman will give it a fair trial." — Mrs. AUGUST R. WISCHEROPT, R. No. 2, Box 34, Truman, Minnesota.

Women suffering from troubles so common to their sex should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

The Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has relieved women of such troubles for the past fifty years. For sale by druggists everywhere.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY.

New York, April 28.—Renewal of bear pressure, based on the federal reserve board's report of decreased production and sales of basic commodities, brought about a sharp reaction in today's stock market, most of the active issues showing net losses of 1 to 2 points at the close. The sharp rally in the closing days of last week had deprived the market of much of its technical strength, leaving the general list vulnerable to selling pressure.

U. S. Steel common was singled out for attack in an apparent effort to destroy the hopes built up in expectation of favorable developments at tomorrow's directors' meeting, the stock being hammered down nearly 3 points to 98. It snapped back at the close to 99 1-8, off 1 3-4. Reports that some of the steel manufacturers were making price concessions to attract new business also was a contributing influence to the heaviness of this group, Bethlehem, Republic, Crucible and Gulf States Steel showing new declines of 1 to 3 points.

Motor shares had another sinking spell on publication of reports showing that sales and earnings of the first quarter this year were running slightly below the first three months of 1923. Studebaker was hammered to 23 3-8 and then rallied to 24 for a net loss of 1 7-8. Chandler Motors, Yellow Cab, Stromberg, Mack Truck and Steward Warner closed 1 to 3 points below Saturday's closing figures.

Oils failed to respond to preliminary reports that gasoline consumption on Sunday probably was the largest of any single day on record. Pacific, Cosden, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Houston, General Asphalt, and Standard Oil of California were among the many stocks in that group to record losses of a point or more.

Textile shares continued to yield on reports of unfavorable trade conditions, American Woolen preferred and Munsingwear established new low records for the year at 97 1-8 and 53 1-2, respectively. Other outstanding weak spots included American Can, American Agricultural Chemical preferred, DuPont, Cuyamel Fruit, National Lead, Fisher Body, Sears Roebuck, and U. S. Rubber first preferred, all off 2 to 5 points. One of the features of the session was a sharp run-up in U. S. Cast Iron Pipe issues just before the close, the common and the preferred establishing new high records at 91 5-8 and 92 1-4, respectively, after each had sold as low as 85 3-4. Railroad shares held firm despite the publication of relatively poor March earnings statements by Atchison and New York Central, Norfolk and Western was the chief feature of that group, closing about a point higher at 122 5-8 after having changed hands as high as 123 3-4.

Call money held at 3 3-4 per cent. Offerings of funds in the time money market was somewhat larger with the result that the higher maturities were available at 4 1-4 per cent., the ruling rate for the longer dates and commercial paper being 4 1-2 per cent.

Foreign exchange rates were slightly reactionary on quiet trading. Demand sterling ruled about a half cent lower around $4.38 and French francs held relatively steady just below 6 1-2 cents. Absence of recent pressure and scarcity of offerings brought about a 50 point jump in Japanese yen to 50.50 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, April 28.—Continued ease in money rates and the progress made toward a reparations settlement and a German loan brought about general improvement in bond prices today. Six foreign issues, including the Belgian 7 1-2s, Serbian 8s and several French municipal obligations, established new high levels for the year.

Leadership of the market unquestionably fell to the Serbian 8s, which in rallying more than a point, sold at a new 1924 top price of 81 3-4. The remarkable improvement in Jugo Slavia's financial position in the last year and the country's desire eventually to do additional borrowing here have formed the background for the rise in the bonds.

Negotiations were concluded today for a $40,000,000 American dollar loan to the Kingdom of The Netherlands, marking one of the most important pieces of foreign financing since the sale of a-bond issue.

In view of the rapid progress being made in negotiations for a German loan, other foreign borrowers are expected to enter the market before the larger operation takes place. Among prospective industrial offerings is a $5,000,000 issuance of the West Kentucky Coal Company, a subsidiary of the North American Company.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, April 28.—Wheat prices declined today owing more or less to selling out on the part of miscellaneous traders unwilling to accept impending deliveries on May contracts. Beneficial rains, especially in Illinois and Indiana counted also as a bearish factor. Closing prices for wheat were unsettled, 1-4c to 3-4c net lower. May $1.02 7-8 to $1.03 and July $1.05 1-8@1-4 to $1.05 1-4, with corn ranging from 1-4c decline to 1-8 gain, oats 1-8 to 3-8c down and provisions unchanged to a setback of 13c.

Notwithstanding that a falling off of 2,045,000 bushels in the United States visible suply total was announced the wheat market at no time showed sufficient buying power to offset the rather persistent but otherwise unimportant selling which was going on. Some of the selling was apparently attributable to an opinion current that the price of May delivery in particular was out of line in view of nearly complete absence of export demand, with the new crop in this country only seven or eight weeks distant. On the other hand, all big new speculative selling appeared to be held in check by a general disposition to await developments at Washington in regard to proposed farm enactments.

So far as the growing wheat crop was concerned, the reports at hand left little to be desired. Indications pointed to ample moisture for the present in the spring crop states and to a liberal reserve in this respect throughout the winter wheat sections. Reports of delay to farm work in the Canadian Northwest were virtually ignored.

Corn and oats sympathized with the weakness of the wheat market. Shipping demand here for corn remained laggard.

Lower quotations on hogs tended to pull down provisions.

CURB MARKET.

New York, April 28.—Today's curb market recorded a complete reversal of speculative sentiment, stock prices displaying a decidedly reactionary trend with the oil shares bearing the brunt of the selling pressure.

Standard Oil of Indiana, one of the most active shares in the oil group, closed nearly 2 points lower at 55 1-4. Prairie Oil and Gas broke 7 1-2 points to 210 and then rallied to 220 1-2. Losses of 1 to 4 points were reported by Cities Service, Imperial of Canada, Ohio Oil, Prairie Pipe, Vacuum, and Standard Oils of Ohio, Kentucky and Kansas.

Trading in the industrial group was in reduced volume, price changes as a rule being narrow and irregular.

Interest in the bond list centered principally in the further weakness of Morris and Company 7 1-2s which dropped 3 points to 98 1-2.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

With fairly good weather prevailing during the past week good progress has been made on building projects in and about Norwich. There is a noticeable amount of new building on the Norwich-New London highway, especially in the Mohegan hill section where several new houses are being erected. The house for Walter F. Lester on the Laurel Hill road is practically completed as are the two houses on Broadway for Mr. Gordon.

The work on the new warehouse for the Richmond Radiator company is practically complete with the exception of some small work on the southern portion of the building. At the Norwich State Hospital work on the new buildings is progressing rapidly and the contractors will start the foundation and superstructural work within a few weeks.

During the past week seven building permits were granted at the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. These permits include two for new houses and the others for garages and alterations. The new houses are to be erected for Gilbert Bowers on Watercress avenue and for Rufus H. Vaughn on Williams street. The total valuation placed on the new building amounts to practically $16,000 as estimated by the owners. The permits issued are as follows:

To William C. Young, to erect a frame house on Williams street for Rufus H. Vaughn. The house will have a stone and concrete foundation. There will be two verandas, one 2x13 feet in front and one, 6x15 in the rear. The exterior will be covered with clapboards and the roof with stained shingles. The interior will be in plaster and hardwoods. There will be three rooms on each floor with a bath on the second.

To Richard Belle, to make alterations to present house at 12 Fairmount street for Hyman Rothman. The roof will be raised 3 feet to make higher rooms.

To Gilbert Bowers to erect a frame garage on Watercress avenue. The garage will be set on a stone foundation and will be 10x16 feet.

To Gilbert Bowers, to erect a frame house, 24x28 feet, on Watercress avenue. The foundation will be of stone and concrete. The frame will be spruce and the exterior will be shingled. The interior will be finished in sheet-rock and hard pine. The house will be 1 1-2 stories and 24x28 feet.

To John Donovan, agent, to erect a frame garage for Mary Donovan at the rear of 43 Roath street. The garage will be 18x30 feet, covered with composition shingles.

To Lawrence J. Ahearn to erect a frame garage on West Thames street for Dr. C. A. Thompson. The garage will be 12x18 feet and will be finished in red cedar shingles.

To Mary Mathews to erect a frame garage, 12x18 feet, on Tenth street. The garage will have a cement foundation.

NEW LONDON

The contract has been awarded for the erection of a frame dwelling on Ocean avenue for Thomas E. Troland. The house will be arranged for six rooms with tile baths, hot water heat and other conveniences. It will cost about $6,000.

The permit has been issued to Zabarsky & Levine for the erection of a two-story building at 13 Divinity street. The building will be constructed of cement blocks. It will be 21x87 feet, and will be arranged for use as a bottling works.

An addition 10x50 feet to the brick building owned by Mary J. Rogers at 445 Bank street, is being erected. The new construction will be of brick. Interior alterations to the building will also be made. The proposal work will cost about $3,000.

M. L. O'Connell, 561 Montauk avenue, is erecting three cottages at 96, 92 and 96 Stewart street. The dwellings will be 18x36 feet of frame construction. It is estimated that they will cost about $3,000 each.

Plans for a cottage to be erected at Ocean Beach for J. J. Lutin, Hartford, are being prepared. The dwelling will be of frame construction, 32x42 feet, arranged for ten rooms with all improvements except heat.

From private plans a house is being built by Arthur S. Roe at 136 Squire street. The proposed dwelling will be 26x30 feet, arranged for six rooms with the usual improvements.

Applications for Building Permits

S. L. Ewald, addition, 860 Mohegan avenue $200.

Mary J. Rogers, addition, 455 Bank street $3,000.

Zabarsky & Levine, concrete building, 13 Divinity street $5,000.

Arthur S. Roe, dwelling, 136 Squire street $3,500.

M. L. O'Connell, three dwellings, Stewart street $6,080.

Mrs. Charles H. Goss, garage 207 Huntington street $1,200.

Vito Belucci, alterations, Fuller street $2,000.

Louis Elfenbein, addition, 194 Hempstead street $1,300.

Joseph Irlandi, garage, 72 Ocean avenue $400.

E. C. Ford, garage, filling station, 226 Main street $1,000.

Thomas E. Troland, dwelling, Ocean avenue $7,000.

Number of permits issued for the week, 16; estimated cost of buildings, $46,800.

MYSTIC

Bids for the construction of the proposed dormitory for the Mystic (Trail school for the Deaf were opened at the office of the architects in New London on Tuesday. The lowest bid was submitted by the Pardy Construction Co., Bridgeport. Other bidders were: Miller & Symington, and Arthur Jackson & Co., both of New London.

NIANTIC

Plans are being prepared for the erection of a frame and stucco store building in Niantic for Frederick Roameling. The proposed building will be 60x120, feet, and will contain eight stores with plate glass and copper fronts and other improvements. The building will be one story and basement, and will have a tar and gravel roof. An electric water pump system will be installed.

EAST LYME

Joseph A. St. Germain of New London, submitted the lowest bid in the competitive figuring for the erection of the Catholic church in East Lyme. The church building will be 36x70 feet, of frame construction.

MANSFIELD

From plans drawn by Architects Cudworth & Thompson of Norwich, work is to be started at once on the erection of the hospital and dormitory for the Mansfield State Training School & Hospital, for which the general contract has been awarded to Tracy Bros. Co. of Waterbury. M. J. Daly & Sons of Waterbury have been awarded the contract for the plumbing, the F. A. Shafter Co. of Bristol, the heating, and O'Neill Bros. of Norwich, the electric wiring. The architects are now preparing plans for a nurses' home and bids will be called for about the middle of May.

THE STATE BUILDING

The record of building operations according to the Commercial Record, shows that during the past week 379 permits were granted in the leading towns of the state, for buildings costing $1,108,112, against 389 permits issued in the like week of 1923, when the cost of buildings was $803,978 and in 1922 for the same week 296 permits, for buildings the cost of which was $1,067,090.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 17 sales of real estate as compared to 19 sales for the corresponding week in 1923. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $52,228 and $34,050.

There were 9 sales of real estate in New London during the past week, four more than for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $44,800 and $38,875.

LIFE IN COUNTRY PRAISED BY LIEUT.-GOV. BINGHAM

Lieutenant Governor Hiram Bingham, of New Haven and Salem, in an address to more than 250 club members and local leaders attending the Connecticut Boys' and Girls' State Agricultural Club "round-up" at the Hotel Garde, Hartford, Saturday afternoon, emphasized the importance of healthy country outdoor life, with plenty of quiet and fresh air, free from the noise and smoke and dust of the city. He particularly pointed out the influence on the development of character by living close to nature and becoming more familiar with the beautiful things the Lord has made rather that the artificial things man has made.

Workmen's Compensation

Workmen's compensation agreements as follows have been approved by Commissioner J. J. Donohue:

City of Norwich Gas & Electric Department, employer, and Stanley Tomzik, Norwich, employe, badly lacerated and crushed left index finger, a rate of $18.00.

Lorraine Mfg. Co., Pawcatuck, employer and Anthony Martel, Pawcatuck, employe, finger bruised, at rate of $9.60.

Kosciuszko-Pulaski Corporation Norwich, employer, and Andrew Godek, Taftville, employe, toe fractured at rate of $13.00.

The church congress of the Protestant Episcopal church, an executive organization of 50 years, will meet in Boston for four days beginning today.

POETRY

The News

I think I'd half forgotten
How sweet the cherry blooms,
Till spring brought back their marvel
Of blossom and perfume.

But dimly I remembered
The song the bluebirds sing,
Until I heard it trilling
The special news of spring.

How green the grass comes springtime
Was but a memory, too,
Till spring had wrought its magic
And proved the memory true.

The news the south wind whispered
Today into my ear
Was the oft-repeated story
That spring again is here.

But oh, the wonder of it,
Each year that it comes true!
It charms you with its story,
For every spring is new!
—Frances M. Morton in St. Nicholas.

Byron Centenary

But what of that? the Gaul may bear the guilt;
But bread was high, the farmer paid his way,
And acres told upon the appointed day.
But where is now the goodly audit ale?
The purse-proud tenant, never known to fail?
The farm which never yet was

TAFTVILLE

There were no sessions at the Wequonnoc school, Monday because of a Teachers' convention.

Arnold Heaton and Fred Erlbeck were visitors in Providence, R. I., on Sunday.

Seven handsome dog puppies have been whelped at the kennels of Mr. and Mrs. John Haeberle of Occum Road.

The minstrel troupe of the Ponemah Wheel Club held a rehearsal Monday for the entertainment that they are to stage Wednesday at the Plainfield Community House.

The Community Sewing Class met Monday evening in the Red Cross rooms in the Ponemah Building.

Troop 4, Boy Scouts held their regular weekly meeting Monday evening with Assistant Scoutmaster Joseph Waldron in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Emile Dubeau and Miss Rose Dubeau of Plainfield have been recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dubeau's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lambert of North B. street.

Miss Lydia Dubinetsky and Miss Catherine Dubinetsky have returned to their home in Cross River, N. Y., after spending a short time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earle M. Wood of North Third avenue.

One of the enjoyable social events of the past week was the subscription dance given at Ponemah Hall Saturday evening by Arthur Dufour and Charles Daigneault. About 350 were in attendance and the Royal Orchestra furnished music for the affair.

The marriage of Miss Yvonne Bourdon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bourdon of South A street, and Philip Marien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Marien of South B. street was solemnized at a nuptial high mass celebrated at Sacred Heart church, Monday morning at 8 o'clock, by the pastor, Rev. U. O. Bellerose. The bride was tastefully gowned in white canton crepe, with tulle veil and carried a shower of bridal roses. The couple was unattended. The wedding march was played by Miss Alice Frechette. A reception and breakfast followed the ceremony, and many went to the home of the brides' parents to attend. The wedding gifts were numerous and useful. Early in the afternoon the young couple left for Canada where they will spend a wedding trip of four weeks. Upon their return they will reside in a newly furnished home in Goodyear, Conn., where the groom is employed by the Goodyear Cotton Mills, Inc.

Master Peter Lukoff of South B street spent the weekend in Hallville the guest of his cousin, Stephen Patrylo.

At the regular monthly meeting of Court Wequonnoc, No. 38, F. of A., held in St. Louis Hall Thursday night, the Court decided to hold a big class initiation on Sunday afternoon, May 18th, when a class of 25 will receive degrees. [illegible] The work will be in charge of the rank degree team of Court City of Norwich. This degree team is fast [illegible] a name for itself and is regarded as the second best in the state. The members of the local court are working hard to surpass all previous efforts in showing the people of Taftville that they are the most progressive fraternal organization in the village. The Grand Court officers and delegates from the courts of surrounding towns will be present and every member is assured of a good time. Refreshments are to be served by a special commitee in charge.

COLCHESTER WOMAN SEEKS $15,000 DAMAGES FROM HARTFORD MAN

Suit for $15,000 damages for injuries received in an automobile accident has been brought against Max Walker of Hartford by Mary Chemerynski of Colchester, in which papers were filed Monday at the office of Clerk George E. Parsons of the superior court. It is alleged that the automobile driven by Walker on Aug. 27, 1923 on the Hartford turnpike in Colchester ran into the plaintiff's wagon, demolishing it and giving her serious external and internal injuries.

Divorce and alimony from Howard E. Main of North Stonington are sought by Myrtle Potter Main on the ground of intolerable cruelty since Jan. 2, 1923. They were married Feb. 14, 1913 and have a 10 year old daughter of whom the mother asks the custody.

Seely Parker Williams of New London seeks divorce from Harold W. Williams of Fort Wright, Fishers Island, whom she married Nov. 29, 1921. She alleges unfaithfulness between Feb. 1, 1922 and the present time with an unnamed person.

Suit for foreclosure of a mortgage lien for $1,500 against Sarah F. Schofield and Nellie S. Barber of Stonington has been brought by Frank Iacano & Co., of Westerly. The claim is that the plaintiffs did work and furnished materials to the value of $2,582.75 between Dec. 8, 1921 and May 15, 1922 on which the defendants have paid only $1,574 and have refused to make payment according to the terms of a certain oral contract. The work in question was digging and building a cellar on a lot on Fellows Street, Pawcatuck, laying cement floor, building two chimneys, digging two cesspools and doing all the plastering in the house. Party defendants named in the suit are Harold A. Doney of Westerly claiming a $2,000 mortgage and the Washington Trust Co., claiming a $5,500 mortgage.

RESCUED FROM RIVER, FINED FOR INTOXICATION

There was a lengthy session of the city court Monday morning with Judge Arthur F. Libby on the bench. There was the usual week-end number of men appearing, charged with intoxication, these being cleaned up when Judge Libby fined the several men appearing, all settling.

One autoist charged with violating the parking regulations settled his case by a payment of $3 fine.

Samuel Corton, charged with indecent exposure, had his case tried in chambers, the case being nolled after he had received a severe lecture.

The case against Peter DeLisle, charged with violation of the liquor law, was continued until Wednesday. DeLisle went to jail until the hearing.

Nicholas Harle, charged with intoxication, was fined $10 and costs amounting to $23.75 and being unable to pay, went to jail. He was found Sunday night floundering in the Thames river near the N. Y., N. H. & H. freight house and was in such an intoxicated condition that Dr. W. T. Driscoll was summoned to treat him at the police station.

The cases against Stewart Long and James Sellas were argued at length, a number of witnesses being called for testimony. Long was fined $10 and costs amounting to $19.25 for breach of the peace and the charge against Sellas was nolled. This case grew out of trouble at the Sellas lunch Saturday night when Long, who was said to have been in an intoxicated condition, started trouble, a fight ensuing when Mr. Sellas ordered him out of the restaurant.

The case against Cohen, charged with [illegible] went over for six months after several witnesses had testified in the court.

ARCHDEACONRY MEETING AT GRACE CHURCH, YANTIC

The Clericus of the New London Archdeaconry met in the parish house of Grace Church, Yantic on Monday at noon. A very fine luncheon was served to the members by the ladies of the church, Mrs. May Lynes being in charge, ably assisted by Mrs. W. E. Manning, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderwaart, Mrs. Albert Johnson and Miss Marion Gibbs.

Rev. Dr. Alexander H. Abbott of the United Congregational church was the guest of the Clericus and after luncheon had been served and the meeting opened with prayer by the vice president, Rev. P. M. Kerridge of St. James' church, New London, Mr. Abbott gave a very interesting paper taking for his topic, "Moving Into Liberty". The paper having been given the meeting was opened to discussion which proved both instructive and enlightening. A vote of appreciation was given Dr. Abbott for the interest he had given. The ladies were thanked for their luncheon and presented with the flowers which had graced the luncheon table.

The following clergy were present: The Ven. Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown; Revs. Richard R. Graham, Norwich; P. M. Kerridge, New London; F. H. Bigelow, Pomfret; H. M. Ockford, Poquetanuck; F. C. Williams, Willimantic; Leonard R. Richards, Danielson; R. B. Day, Yantic.

BOYS FILLED OFFICES AT CENTRAL BAPTIST SCHOOL

In recognition of the observance of the present week as boys' week all over the country it was arranged by Superintendent James L. Case of the Central Baptist Sunday school to have boys act as officers of the school Sunday and the plan was very successfully carried out under the direction of Walter N. Block and Emery Davis.

The school was officered for the session as follows: Charles Sage, superintendent; Russell Storms, assistant superintendent; Albert Leffingwell, secretary; Ellsworth Geib, treasurer; Shepard Palmer, Jr., junior superintendent; Benjamin Covey, chorister. Brief talks were given by the superintendent and the junior superintendent and all fulfilled the duties of their position with much credit.

Next Sunday the school begins a membership contest for the month of May to which it has been challenged by the City Bible Class for Men.

OHIO METAL WORKER A VICTIM

Ray S. Ball, Huron, Ohio, was a victim of coughs and colds. Both he and his sister suffered with them, but found "speedy relief" through the use of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, the old favorite cough remedy. He writes: "I have found Foley's Honey and Tar Compound a most excellent remedy for coughs and colds. My sister had a severe cold and cough a year ago and found speedy relief in Foley's Honey and Tar Compound." Lee & Osgood Co.

"FRIENDS IN DEED" WILL BE C. E. CONVENTION THEME

Under the general theme of "Friends in Deed" the thirtieth convention of the Connecticut Christian Endeavor Union will be held in Hartford May 16 to 18th. The subject is sub-divided into topics for each session bearing on the general theme. For Friday evening, Friendship and Fellowship will be considered, Saturday morning, Friendship in Vocation, Saturday afternoon, Friendship and its Possibilities, Saturday evening, Friendship in Christian Service, Sunday morning, Friendship and the Denominations, Sunday afternoon, Friendship and the Community, while the closing session Sunday evening will have the general theme as its special consideration.

On Saturday morning a new feature in the Christian Endeavor programs is to be considered—that of vocational guidance. To answer some of the difficulties which confront the youth of the state Rev. S. Ralph Harlow, a returned missionary from Smyrna under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions is to address the convention on the topic, A Vision of Friendship. Mr Harlow is at present teaching religious education at Smith college, and his practical experience with young people both in this country and abroad ably fits him to handle the subject assigned. Following Mr. Harlow's talk a special conference of an hour and a half on that subject. Choosing a Field for Friendship, will be conducted by Rev. Douglas Horton of Middletown. Many a young person has expressed the desire to do something definite to carry out the principles for which the church and Christian endeavor stand, but have never felt called for full-time christian service. This address and conference will aid some in solving this problem.

THE PROMISE OF POWER WAS SHOP MEETING TOPIC

The promise of Power was the topic presented at the Richmond Radiator plant Monday at the regular noon hour meeting, which was given as usual under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts. He spoke in part as follows:

"Jesus made eleven manifestations of Himself during the forty days between the resurrection and the ascension. From one point of view the last was the most spectacular of all. The disciples were in the "upper room" in Jerusalem with the door locked and the windows fastened—a secrecy made necessary by the increased hostility of the Jews against Jesus and his followers. To their amazement and fright, Jesus appeared in their midst, and, seeing their credulity he said: "See my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and blood as ye see me have." In confirmation that he was still material, he ate a piece of fish before them.

After he had said, "And, behold, I send the promise of my Father unto you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." Then he led them out into the vicinity of Bethany, he blessed them, "and was parted from them and carried up into heaven."

In unfolding the theme the speaker said, that man was not born with power but with the capacity to receive it, and that the power he received was gauged by the degree of his development. He applied this first of all, to the body. No form of animal life comes into the world more helpless than the human child, and yet it develops into complete lordship over all other forms of organic life. By play first and then by work the body grows to be physically strong.

Now this little babe sooner or later shows signs of intelligence; mental power begins to assert itself and grows parallel with physical power and continues to develop long after the body has ceased to grow.

Then comes the awakening of moral convictions; the capacity to distinguish between right and wrong, good and evil. This power comes when we are ready to receive it. The early disciples were to tarry at Jerusalem until the power came. The tarrying place for us is the throne of grace, the church, or wherever God reveals himself to us. The reception of this power by the early disciples transformed ordinary fishermen into evangelists of such power that through their labors 3,000 souls were brought into the kingdom in a single day. May not such success be ours when we get the power?

CHARGED WITH TRYING TO KILL HIS WIFE

Steve Stankewich of Preston was bound over to the criminal superior court Monday afternoon on the charge of assault with intent to murder his wife last Saturday. Stankewich was given a hearing in Preston Monday afternoon before Justice of the peace V. P. A. Quinn who found probable cause for binding over. Bonds were placed at $1,000, in default of which Stankewich was taken to the Norwich jail by Constable Michael Nolan.

The man was arrested at his home Saturday by Constable Nolan after the officer had received a report that Stankewich had been trying to choke his wife to death. She stated that he came to the house knocked her down and proceeded to choke her and she believed he meant to kill her. She managed to break away and fled to the McClimon home near by from which a telephone call was sent for the constable.

QUASHES RUMOR OF FALLS MILL FOR SALE

Agent Arthur C. Brown of the Falls Company put an end to a rumor that has been going about Norwich, Monday morning, when he said that the mill was not for sale and had never been put on the market. Agent Brown stated that although the plant had been working part time, a full week working schedule would be started in about a month.

All rumors concerning the sale of the mill of tenement houses owned by the company are without foundation, said Agent Brown, and we are about to start on a full time basis, prospects looking good for the future.

WHEN you get the feel of a brush dipped in Vitralite, the Long-Life Enamel, you wonder why you ever used those "stiff, painty enamels" that left streaks and brush marks all over the work. Vitralite flows like rich cream and levels itself without laps, streaks or brush marks to a smooth, porcelain-like surface that lasts longer than paint. It is guaranteed for three years inside or outside! Use the same high type of enamel on your furniture that the best painters put on their finest work. Come in and see Vitralite in white and five rare tints.

PETRIZZO WAS VETERAN OF YANKEE DIVISION

Joseph Petrizzo, who was instantly killed Sunday afternoon in an automobile accident in North Franklin, was a familiar figure in democratic politics in the Second Ward in Hartford. He was familiarly called Joe "YD," the appellation being based on the fact that he had served overseas with the Yankee Division. To many people in politics and sporting circles, he was known by no other name than Joe "YD". For some time he had conducted the "YD" tobacco shop on Village street, Hartford.

He was also known wherever sporting men gather, both in Hartford and in other places in the state.

Petrizzo was born in Italy, thirty six years ago. He lived in Bridgeport and then came to Hartford. He enlisted in 1917 in Company H, 161st Connecticut Infantry, and took part in many engagements in France, where he was gassed and wounded.

He leaves his wife, four children, Jennie, Frances, John, Rose, and three brothers, Dominick of Bridgeport, Vito and Michael both of Hartford.

BLACK SNAKES SLAUGHTERED IN ONECO CEMETERY

Three Taftville men, Elmer Handy, his son Fred, and Fred Stone, who were visitors Sunday afternoon at the home of C. B. Montgomery at Oneco, proved to be snake killers of no mean ability. The little daughter of Mr. Montgomery came to the house saying there was black things wriggling over in the cemetery. When the men went to look they found a regular family of black snakes and in ten minutes they had killed eleven, of which the total length was 50 feet. Nine had been killed in the same spot earlier in the day, all bona fide reptiles and not figments of the imagination.

Boys Guests of Raymond B. Case

Raymond B. Case of the Norwich Free Academy Faculty returned to Norwich Saturday, after a weeks stay at Liberty Lodge, Atlantic Beach. Mr. Case had as his guests for the Easter recess, several N. F. A. boys including—John Hinrichs, Churchill Scott, John MacDougall, Robert Eastwood, Arthur McGowan, John Haslam, Raymond Camp, Philip McNamara, John Fellows and John Sayles. The first seven spent the entire week, the three last named remaining two days.

The young men who were most hospitably entertained by Mr. Case, enjoyed all kinds of sports while there, returning to Norwich Saturday, in time for the ball game between N. F. A., and Putnam.

EKONK HILL FIRE BURNED OVER 35 ACRES

A fire that burned over about 35 acres near the Gallup cemetery at Ekonk Hill Sunday afternoon was checked by the work of a gang of fire fighters under the direction of John T. Tanner, Ekonk Hill fire warden. The fire was going in good shape when the fire warden got word of it, but he quickly assembled a force that fought the fire back after it had run half a mile. No buildings were threatened by the flames.

CHECK FOR $25 IS SENT TO FIRE CHIEF

Chief Howard L. Stanton received a check for $25 Monday from the Uncas Paperboard company, the money to be added to the firemen's pension fund. Enclosed with the check was a letter commending the firemen for their fine work at a recent fire at the plant. Chief Stanton acknowledged acknowledged the receipt of the check and turned it over to City Treasurer Stephen H. Reeves, who added it to the pension fund.

MERCHANTS NAT'L BANK FILES DIRECTOR VACANCY

Joseph P. Connor, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Charles H. Phelps, as director of the Merchants National Bank, at a meeting of the directors, held on Monday morning. Mr. Connor is connected with the Joseph Connor & Sons company in this city and is well known in business circles in this section of the state.

WILL GIVE MAY PARTY FOR MINSTREL CAST

White Cross council, Knights of Columbus, and Mercier assembly, Catholic Ladies of Columbus, are to entertain the members of the recent minstrel show that was put on with such success at the Broadway theatre. The two organizations are to give a May party Wednesday evening at the Elks hall, when each member of the cast is privileged to bring a friend and an evening of cards and musical entertainment has been arranged for by the committee.

AGREEMENT IS IMMINENT ON JAPANESE EXCLUSION

Reports Communicated to President Coolidge Indicated a Settlement Within 24 Hours—President Coolidge Has Suggested to the Senate and House Conferees That Operation of the Exclusion Provision Be Postponed Until July 1 — Agreement Probably Has Been Reached on That Basis.

Washington, April 29.—Postponement of operation of the Japanese exclusion provision of the immigration bill until July 1 is understood to have been suggested by President Coolidge to senate and house conferees on the measure.

This suggestion was said to have been considered by the conferees at a meeting today and afterwards word was sent to the White House that an agreement on this basis might be reached within 24 hours. The vote in the conference committee, however, is expected to be closed. Forecasting the fight which appears certain, at least on the senate floor, when the exclusion agreement is reported, a final report from the conference committee is not looked for on the measure for several days.

Suspension of the effectiveness of the Japanese exclusion provision until July 1, when other sections of the bill will become operative, would give opportunity for negotiations of a treaty or other arrangement with Japan for exclusion of the nationals of that nation, such action, it has been contended in some administration circles would bring about the end sought in the bill and give less offense to the Japanese government and people.

The president's views were placed before the conferees today by Senator Reed, republican, of Pennsylvania, who has been active in directing the immigration bill through the senate, after the chief executive had conferred with him this morning. When word of a probable conference agreement on the exclusion provision reached the White House late in the day the president conferred with Secretary Hughes, but no announcement concerning their discussion was forthcoming.

Several senators from Pacific coast states have indicated the intention to oppose adoption of the committee report, if it attempts in any way to alter the senate's decision on exclusion as expressed by several decisive votes.

One of these votes was upon the adoption of the amendment proposed by Senator Reed, and providing that exclusion of Japanese would become immediately effective upon enactment of the bill, although other sections would not be effective until July 1, when the present law expires by limitation. The house bill contained no such stipulation.

Opposition in the senate to approval of a conference report providing for delayed operation of the Japanese section, it is indicated would be based largely upon arguments made by Senator Reed himself when he urged that it be made immediately effective. In proposing that amendment, the Pennsylvania senator was understood to have in mind the possibility of a rush of immigrants before the effective date of the bill.

"I have a final amendment to the bill caused by the insertion of the Japanese clauses," he said. * * * "If the application of these sub-divisions is postponed to July 1 we may have unpleasant consequences in the meantime."

Senator opponents were said today to be prepared to press Senator Reed for an explanation of his change of views. It was pointed out by the same members that the addition of this amendment afforded the only basis upon which the conference under the rules, could have touched the exclusion question.

JAPANESE CABINET TALKS OF AMERICAN SITUATION

Tokio, April 29.—(By the A. P.)—The cabinet meeting today was chiefly occupied with the Japanese-American situation, arising out of the exclusion legislation of the American congress. Baron Matsui, foreign minister, reported on the latest developments.

The tone of the session was more optimistic, according to the vernacular newspapers.

BRITISH BUDGET WOULD REDUCE THE TAX ON TEA

London, April 29.—(By the A. P.)—The first budget ever prepared for the government of Great Britain by a socialist was presented in the house of commons this afternoon by Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer.

There was very little obvious socialism in it, if any, indeed the liberal leaders hailed it as a "free trade budget." and H. H. Asquith, head of the liberal party, informed the house that there was nothing in the budget to which a single one of the liberals could not heartily subscribe.

Its speedy passage through parliament is probably assured. Whatever the conservatives may think about Chancellor Snowden's proposed method of dealing with the public purse, their position will not be publicly known until the debate is resumed tomorrow. But in the pleasantries that passed from one side of the house to the other this afternoon, there were hints about Philip Snowden giving away conservative money on nonsocialistic lines. Many of the stories frankly described the labor budget as a good one and a sound one.

So far as the great bulk of the people is concerned the big thing about the budget is its appeal to the heart of every Britisher through his stomach as well as his pocketbook. The duty on tea, the great daily beverage of rich and poor alike, is cut in half, to figure three and one-third pence per pound less than before the war. The duty on sugar that goes into the teacups and elsewhere in the national diet is reduced more than one-half from 2 3-4 to 1 1-4 pence per pound, the chancellor pointing out that it is now being taxed fourteen times as heavily as before the war.

The effect of these reductions in the cost of Great Britain's great indoor pastime and rite—afternoon tea—will be immediately. Tea dealers have already announced that the price will drop tomorrow.

Coffee, cocoa and chicory also get off with half the duty heretofore imposed, and the duty on dried fruit will pass out of existence August 1. On that date also will lapse the duties known as the McKenna duties, imposed as a war revenue measure on imported automobiles, foreign films, motorcycles, clocks, watches and other manufactured goods.

This should be good news for the American manufacturers of these commodities, as they are active competitors in the British market.

MUST SERVE ONE DAY IN COUNTY JAIL FOR PERJURY

Buffalo, N. Y., April 29—State Senator Robert C. Lacey started serving at 4 o'clock this afternoon a one-day sentence in the Erie county jail imposed upon him today when he pleaded guilty to perjury before Federal Judge John R. Hazel. A fine of $500 was also imposed.

The perjury indictment followed his testimony in January, 1923, before a federal grand jury investigating the dynamiting of the Niagara Falls High Speed line, in August, 1922, resulting in the wrecking of an International railway company train with injuries to interstate passengers.

SENATE ADDS $275,000,000 TO HOUSE NAVAL SUPPLY BILL

Washington, April 29—The annual naval supply bill, carrying $275,000,000, was passed today by the senate without a record vote, the senate added about $700,000 to the bill as it came from the house.

PRESIDENT AWAITING REPORT ON BURSON BILL

Washington, April 29—President Coolidge will await a report from the commissioner of pensions before deciding whether he will sign or veto the Burson bill increasing pensions for civil war and Spanish-American war veterans, and their dependents.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION FOR PAPPAS BROKERAGE FIRM

Boston, April 29.—The brokerage house of William S. Pappas & Co., with headquarters in Boston and branches in Providence, Norwich, Haverhill, and other New England cities was petitioned into bankruptcy in the United States district court at Boston yesterday. Claims totaling $1820 were filed by three Boston creditors.

The bankruptcy petition followed by two days the virtual forcing of the Pappas concern to quit business in Rhode Island by Bank Commissioner George H. Newhall and Attorney Herbert L. Carpenter.

The action took the form of a subpoena ordering the officers of the firm to produce its Providence and Boston books before Mr. Newhall and Mr. Carpenter last Friday. A hearing was held at 2 p. m. Friday. William S. Pappas and Dr. C. C. Purdum appeared before Mr. Carpenter and Mr. Newhall with the local records, but failed to produce the books from the Boston office. A longer time in which to produce the Boston books was requested by the Pappas attorney, but this request was not granted. Pappas later offered to liquidate his business in Rhode Island "to prove to Attorney General Carpenter and Bank Commissioner Newhall that the firm was solvent and doing a legitimate business."

The filing of the bankruptcy petition in Boston will eliminate any immediate liquidation of Rhode Island customers' accounts. Their claims will, if the firm is adjudged bankrupt, have to go through the regular legal process of liquidating a bankrupt business.

FIERY FLOOD POURING FROM BURNING TANKS

Taft, Cal., April 29.—Danger that a fiery flood from four burning oil tanks just outside Taft would engulf two nearby settlements, was believed eliminated tonight.

The flames in one of the four burning tanks died out tonight and the oil in the other three burned so low there was little likelihood they would boil over. Several hundred fire fighters continued to heighten and strengthen ear th dykes built to hold back the fiery fluid.

THE PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE WEDDING GUESTS

Washington, April 29—President and Mrs. Coolidge were among the guests at the wedding here tonight of Miss Laura Emily Dial, daughter of Senator Dial of South Carolina, and Mrs. Dial, and James L. Brownlee, of Birmingham, Ala. The wedding was followed by a reception at the Congressional club, largely attended by those in official life.

GLOBE CIRCLING PLANES AWAIT "FLYING" WEATHER

Cordova, Alaska, April 29 (By the A. P.)—Prospects for flying weather were reported excellent early today between Chignik, Alaska, and Dutch Harbor, Alaska, and it was hoped Major Frederick L. Martin would be able to take the air at Chignik to join at Dutch Harbor the army world flight expedition.

POLICE CHIEF KILLED IN COURT BY HIS ASSISTANT

Pineville, Ky., April 29.—Joseph Asher, police chief was shot and instantly killed in police court here late today by Garrett Smith, assistant chief, following an altercation between the officers concerning an arrest of a prisoner for liquor law violation.

Cash on hand of the Ford Motor Company, Inc., at the end of 1923 totalled $271,616,668, the largest of any industrial corporation in America.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Demonstration for King Gustav

Stockholm, April 29—King Gustav today returned from his visit to the French Riviera and was given a demonstration by crowds of cheering people on his way from the railway station to the royal castle.

Rebels Seized Safe in City Hall

Havana, Cuba, April 29—Rebels have seized the safe in the city hall at San Juan de las Yeras, according to information obtained by the newspaper La Prenza. An exchange of shots between loyal forces and rebels followed the attack on the city hall and then the rebels fled, it was declared. It was not known how much money was in the safe.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

The senate passed the naval appropriation bill carrying $275,000,000.

The white house announced that President Coolidge favored suspension of section 28 of the merchant marine act for one year.

Imposition of a 10 per cent tax on radio sets and reduction of taxes on automobile trucks and tires was voted by the senate.

Presentation of evidence was begun before a grand jury investigating criminal charges growing out of the senate oil investigation.

Opponents of the Barkley bill to abolish the railroad labor board began a fight to prevent the house taking it up next Monday.

Attorney General Stone agreed to have the department of justice aid the senate Daugherty committee in litigation with M. S. Daugherty.

The senate Daugherty committee heard further testimony on prohibition enforcement and anti-trust policies of the department of justice.

President Coolidge revealed that he personally suggested Representative Burton of Ohio, as temporary chairman of the republican national convention.

Mrs. Jake Hamon, appeared before the senate oil committee but was excused after a wrangle among senators over who was responsible for summoning her.

President Coolidge received reports forecasting an agreement within 24 hours by the senate and house conferees on the Japanese exclusion provision of the immigration bill.

P. O. INSPECTORS TESTIFY IN TEXAS LAND FRAUD CASES

Washington, April 29.—Daniel S. Shook, chief clerk in the division of post office inspectors today denied authorship of a telegram sent November 9, 1921, to the post office inspector in charge at Kansas City telling him to present land fraud evidence to a grand jury if it involved R. H. Creager of Brownsville, Texas, until Post Office Inspector O. B. Williamson completed his investigation.

"Should not Williamson have consulted Shook?" Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, the committee prosecutor, asked Rush D. Simmons, chief postal inspector who was among the spectators, just previously having been excused from the witness stand.

"I should not think so," Simmons answered.

"If he did it without consulting anybody, he was certainly interesting himself?" Senator Heflin asked.

"He certainly was," Simmons replied. "But my information is that it was the result of a conference with the solicitor.

"The Williamson that dictated the telegram was the name Williamson that already had made any investigation he ever made?" Page asked.

"So far as I know the Williamson report hadn't been completed," Simmons replied.

"The investigation never has been completed," Page declared.

"We have never been down to the valley," Simmons conceded.

The hearing adjourned until tomorrow.

Just before adjournment was taken for the day, George A. Hill Jr., of Houston, Texts, attorney for Creager, examined Shook, asking if anyone had sought to hinder any investigation against Mr. Creager or any of the companies he was interested in, in any way.

"No," replied Shook.

"In the department, did you hear of any favors that Mr. Creager was to be shown?"

"No sir."

"If Williamson had submitted the telegram to you, would you have sent it out?"

"If he had consulted the solicitor, I should."

Senator Heflin asked "if favors were to be shown to Creager, if wouldn't be talked about the department, with every clerk?"

"No sir," responded Shook.

Page notified the committee that he planned to call O. L. Wilkins, of Kansas City, formerly secretary of the Lower Rio Grande Valley Land Men's Association, and J. M. Collins, of Kansas City, once a general agent for C. H. Swallow and Company, at tomorrow's session.

WAGE REDUCTION IN THE BIGELOW-HARTFORD PLANT

Thompsonville, Conn., April 29.—A general wage reduction, affecting about four thousand employes, and effective Monday, May 5, was announced at the local plant of the Bigelow-Hartford Carpet company today. The reduction the announcement stated, is on a varying scale declared by the company to be areadjustment to bring about the equalization of wages. Employes state, however, that the reduction is from ten to twenty per cent. This is the first general reduction to be made by the company in several years although wage cuts had been made in individual departments at various times.

The plant will close Thursday from ten to one o'clock out of respect for the late president, Robert P. Perkins, whose funeral will be held in New York city at that time.

ARBITRATION REQUESTED BY PRODUCING MANAGERS

New York, April 29.—The Producing Managers' association late today adopted a resolution proposing that an umpire or board of arbitration be appointed to act upon the differences between the mangers and the Actors' Equity association. The resolution declared that the proposed equity shop "carries with it grave elements of danger in the future conduct of the theatre."

JAMES EASTWOOD SCHOLEFIELD GETS TEN YEARS FOR BIGAMY

Greensboro, N. C., April 29—James Eastwod Scholefield, former secretary to serve ten years in the state prison when he pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy.

Judge H. P. Lane, ordered that he wear felon's stripes throughout his term. The sentence was the limit of the state law.

Scholefield came here from Connecticut.

Vote 10 Per Cent Tax On Radio Sets

Senate Also Restores Tax on Drafts, Checks and Promissory Notes.

Washington, April 29.—The senate gave approval today to finance committee amendments to the revenue bill imposing a 10 per cent. tax on radio sets, reducing automobile taxes, repealing the capital stock tax, and restoring to the bill the tax on drafts, checks and promissory notes.

All were adopted practically without debate or opposition in rapid order after more than two hours had been spent in discussion of minor proposals. Further contests are expected, however, on the radio and automobile rates.

Approval of these amendments left only vital provisions of the bill to be taken up. These include the income tax rates, reduction on earned incomes, corporation tax, estate and gift taxes, publicity of returns and the board of tax appeals. Proposals to tax incomes from tax-exempt securities, also are to be disposed of.

Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, has introduced an amendment proposing to eliminate from the bill the radio tax approved today, and he declared tonight a roll call vote would be asked on this provision later. Likewise, Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, has introduced an amendment proposing entire repeal of the tax on automobile tires, parts and accessories, and he said tonight a fight would be made for this when amendments of individual members are in order.

The reduction in automobile taxes approved today are practically the same as made by the house—repeal of the three per cent. tax on automobile trucks and chassis of which sell for less than $1,000 and the bodies of which sell for less than $200; and a cut in half of the five per cent tax on automobile tires, parts and accessories. These changes, Chairman Smoot of the finance committee said, would mean a cut in revenues of $25,000,000 annually. The new radio tax would bring in about $10,000,000 it has been estimated.

Elimination of the capital stock tax was in accordance with the action taken yesterday in increasing the corporation tax from 12 1-2 to 14 per cent.

The tax of two cents a $100 on drafts, checks and promissory notes was eliminated from the bill by a close vote on the floor of the house. Its restoration was recommended by the finance committee.

Pending opening of the income tax fight, postponed from Monday, republican leaders did some more figuring today on possible compromises on the Mellon rates which they feel are doomed to defeat but without definite results.

Actual voting on the income rates is not expected before Thursday.

EFFORT TO COMPEL M. S. DAUGHERTY TO TESTIFY

Washington, April 29.—The department of justice will aid the senate Daugherty committee in the litigation arising from the refusal of M. S. Daugherty of Washington Courthouse, Ohio, brother of the former attorney general, to testify.

Discussing the situation resulting from the court action at Cincinatti instituted by Daugherty, Attorney General Stone said today that the department was required by law to give its assistance where an official of the senate or house was made defendant in a suit involving his official duties.

While no formal request had come to the department for its assistance in the Daugherty contempt case, the attorney general said members of the senate committee had communicated with him to ascertain his views. He added, that he had informed them the act of Mrach 3, 1875 placed these obligations upon the department and it was his intention to have have the department personnel do their duty in this instance.

It was to be assumed, he continued, that any request for assistance would be made to the local United States attorney in the district wherein the proceeding arose, and that therefore, the request in this case would be made to the United States attorney at Cincinnati.

TO HOLD PUBLIC HEARINGS ON WORLD COURT PROPOSAL

Washington, April 29—Public hearings on the proposal for American participation in the world court will be opened tomorrow before a subcommittee of the senate foreign relations committee. Both proponents and opponents will be heard, but Chairman Pepper is hopeful of winding up the hearings within 10 days or two weeks.

The sub-committee is not authorized to make any recommendation on the subject and will simply report the evidence to the entire committee. While no announcement has been made it is not expected that there will be any effort to push the world court proposal at this session of the senate.

Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin, who is the author of one of the plans before the committee embodying reservations suggested by Secretary Hughes, is absent from Washington on account of illness and it may be some weeks before he returns to the senate.

SECTION OF HARTFORD ROCKED BY QUARRY BLAST

Hartford, April 29.—Scores of homes in the south section of Hartford and surrounding places were rocked until they swayed as in an earthquake this afternoon at 4 o'clock as the result of a blast in a quarry at Newington, five miles from here. Chairs were shuffled, high-standing furniture in homes nearly toppled over and people ran from their homes, fearing collapse. No one was injured. Owners of the quarry said experts from the Dupont Powder company prepared and fired the blast.

$10,000 SUIT FILED FOR AUTOMOBILE INJURIES

New York, April 29.—Injuries suffered in an automobile collision were made the basis for a suit for $10,000 brought today by Grace George, actress wife of William A. Brady, against Frank E. Rosen, owner of a car which collided with Miss George's motor last March.

The actress was struck by fragments of flying glass and remained a prisoner in the car until rescued by passersby. The driver, David Winfield, Rosen's chauffeur, was arrested on charges of assault and of driving an automobile while intoxicated.

Daniels Testifies Before Oil Jury

Former Secretary of the Navy, Who Advised Congress to Authorize Leasing of Lands.

Washington, April 29.—With Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy in the Wilson administration, as the first witness, the special grand jury which is to investigate criminal charges growing out of the senate oil inquiry began its labors today in the District of Columbia supreme court.

Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special government counsel in the oil litigation, are presenting the case and they devoted the first day to laying the ground work for evidence that is to be adduced later through a number of witnesses who have appeared before the senate committee.

Photographers twice were admitted to the grand jury room during the day, the first time before the beginning of the morning session and the second time after the jurors had assembled at the end of the noon recess. Government counsel were photographed with the 23 jurors.

District Attorney Gordon subsequently denied reports that he had sought to recall the pictures. Counsel also made light of reports current at the capitol and elsewhere that the appearance of the photographers in the jury room might cause a dismissal of the jury. It was explained that the rule of secrecy applied only when the jury was actually at work.

Former Secretary Daniels was before the jury for nearly an hour and a half. It was at his request that congress passed the act of June 4, 1920, giving the naval secretary control of the naval reserves and authorizing him to lease lands and to sell store or exchange oil extracted from the reserves.

One of the chief contentions of the government in the oil cases has been that President Harding's executive order of May, 1921, transferring control of the reserves to the interior secretary was in violation of this statute and that the leases to Harry F. Sinclair and E. L. Doheny were invalid for that and other reasons.

Fraud and corruption in the making of the leases also has been charged and there has been testimony before the senate committee designed to show that the lease of Teapot Dome to Harry F. Sinclair's Mammoth Oil company was attended by a conspiracy.

Before Mr. Daniels reached the jury room maps and charts of the Wyoming and California reserves had been fastened to the walls so the jurors might visualize the fields under discussion. Also a large batch of documentary evidence, including copies of the leases, and voluminous correspondence concerning them, was delivered to counsel by representatives of the interior department.

Several days probably will be required for the presentation of the documentary evidence. E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior, and H. Foster Bain, director of the bureau of mines, were summoned today, but were excused until tomorrow without going before the jury. They will identify a number of papers in the case and also will be questioned concerning the leases as they have been on several occasions before the senate committee.

M'CRAY HAS RESIGNED AS GOVERNOR OF INDIANA

Indianapolis, Ind., April 29.—Warren T. McCray, who resigned today as governor of Indiana following his conviction in federal district court yesterday on charges of using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud, bade farewell to his family this afternoon and was returned to the Marion county jail.

McCray will be taken before U. S. District Judge Albert B. Anderson tomorrow morning and it was expected that shortly thereafter he would be started upon his way to begin a sentence in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga.

The penalty may be a fine of not more than $1,000 or not more than five years imprisonment, or both, in the court's discretion, according to the statute. A penalty may be imposed on each count in the indictment. The indictment against McCray contained 13 counts.

McCray spent more than an hour with his family at the governor's mansion here.

As the governor left the state house for his home, the lines in his face had deepened and he apparently was holding himself together with great effort. State employes gathered silently in the corridors and on the balcony as McCray, for the last time as governor of Indiana, left the executive office.

NO HOPE FOR MEN BURIED IN BENWOOD MILL MINE

Wheeling, W. Va., April 29.—The battle against high water, fallen rock and poison gas in the Benwood mill mine of the Wheeling Steel Corporation, where 111 miners were entombed by a gas explosion yesterday, centered tonight in the passage leading from the Brown's Run air shaft as fatigued rescue crews pushed forward over almost insurmountable obstacles in their search for bodies of the victims.

Twenty bodies had been removed from the mine. Rescue crews had located 27 others in the workings and were progressing slowly toward one section where other miners were working atthe time of the blast. There was no expectation that any of them would be found alive.

NEW YORK BROKER WAS INDICTED ON TWO COUNTS

New York, April 29.—Herbert Arthur Mack, a member of the stock brokerage firm of Snograss, Mack & Co., Inc., today was indicted on two count charging grand larceny in the second degree. He was arrested and locked up in the Tombs pending a pleading tomorrow.

Mack is charged on one count with having sold bonds belonging to a woman customer and keeping the money. The second count charges him with selling for himself securities which he obtained from a Wall street brokerage house in exchange for a worthless check.

Lieutenant A. O. Weber, pilot of the other machine, was uninjured.

BAY STATE, OHIO, MISSOURI ALL FOR CALVIN COOLIDGE

In Massachusetts the Sole Contestant Expressing a Preference For Senator Hiram Johnson Was Defeated—Early Returns From Ohio Indicate an Overwhelming Victory For Coolidge—Harry Daugherty is Running Last in a Field of Seven Coolidge Candidates For Delegate-at-Large—Missouri State Republican Convention Votes to Send Instructed Delegation — Cox Has Strong Lead Over McAdoo in Ohio.

Boston, April 29.—The defeat of Dwight B. McCormick, of Westfield, candidate for delegate in the first district and the only republican candidate to declare a preference for Hiram W. Johnson, in the Massachusetts presidential primary today insured the sending of the 29 delegates to Cleveland favorable to President Coolidge. The seven delegates at large elected without opposition are pledged to Coolidge and in the few districts outside the first where there were contests all the candidates favored the president.

In the democratic contest for delegates-at-large, Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, who has declared a preference for Governor Smith, of New York and who is running, in opposition to the regular unpledged slate of eight, each with half a vote, was running second on the list in the early returns. Senator David I. Walsh, was in the lead.

COOLIDGE ASSURED OF THE OHIO DELEGATION

Columbus, Ohio, April 29.—Returns from 47 scattering precincts in today's presidential primary election in Ohio gave President Coolidge more than a ten to one lead over Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, for the republican nomination and former Governor James H. Cox, of Ohio, better than a 4 to 1 lead over William Gibbs McAdoo.

Returns from 3,210 out of a total of 3 350 precincts in Ohio from today's presidential primary election, gave Coolidge 37,018 votes to 8,681 for Johnson, and Cox 17,464 votes as compared with 7,076 for McAdoo.

DAUGHERTY LAST IN FIELD OF SEVEN CANDIDATES

Columbus, Ohio, April 29.—Former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty was running last in the field of seven delegates at large pledged to President Coolidge in returns from 958 precincts out of a total of 3350 precincts in the state. He was 856 votes behind Mrs. David Tod of Youngstown, the next lowest, and 3,- 346 votes behind Senator S. D. Fess, who was leading the Coolidge slate. Daugherty, however, was leading State Senator George Bender, the highest Johnson delegate, by 6,953.

MISSOURI INSTRUCTS ITS DELEGATES FOR COOLIDGE

COLLAPSED WHILE WITNESS IN HER $500,000 DAMAGE SUIT

New York, April 29.—Helene Jasmer, model and motion picture actress, collapsed after being called to the witness stand today in the supreme court in her suit for $500,000 damages against Philip Morgan Plant, twenty-three year old millionaire, as the result of an automobile accident.

Miss Jesmer had just listened to the testimony of Dr. William Steinach of Bellevue Medical college in which he enumerated the injuries sustained by the young woman, including the partial loss of the sight of one eye, the destruction of her facial beauty and "irreparable injury to her nervous system."

Miss Jesmer then was called to the stand. She shaded the scarred side of her face with a handkerchief and swayed noticeably as she was being sworn. Opposing counsel asked for a recess and the judge and jury had no sooner left the court room than she fell to the floor.

When the jury returned and the case was about to be resumed Miss Jesmer looked directly at Plant for the first time since the case began. She recoiled and threw her hands to her face. She said she met Plant in 1920, when he told her he loved her and had insisted that she go on the motor trip to New Haven, which resulted in the accident. Just before the accident, she said, Plant and three young men with him went into a road house and got some whiskey. She asserted she took a drink given her by Plant and did not remember anything else, until she regained consciousness in a hospital.

A photographer testified to paying her $10 for each pose she did for him and that she frequently made $40 in a morning at this work. The accident had rendered her unavailable for posing, she said.

CHURCH CONGRESS OF P. E. CHURCH IN BOSTON

Boston, April 29.—A historical address by Dr. Roland Cotton Smith, rector of St. John's church, Washington, D. C., marked the opening in Ford hall tonight of the Church Congress of the Protestant Episcopal church, which this year is celebrating its 50th anniversary. "It will hold sessions through the next three days.

Dr. Smith said that the men who initiated the movement for the congress at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson in 1874, the year before it held its first session, were "founders of a great institution that has had a profound effect upon the history of thought in the Protestant Episcopal church."

"The first meeting was held in in New York on October 6 and 7, 1874. The history of the church congress is a history of the church thinking aloud in a thunder storm. The first twenty-five years was a period of analysis, destructive criticism, tearing down. The second twenty-five years was a period of building up."

$1,000,000 BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT FILED IN SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, April 29.—A breach of promise action by Evan Burrows Fontaine, of New Haven, Conn., against Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, seeking $1,000,000 was filed today in federal district court here. Similar action in superior court here recently was ordered transferred to the federal district court because Whitney, now in business in San Francisco, is a resident of California and Miss Fontaine is a resident of the eastern state.

The complaint repeated the allegations of the former action, the Whitney, while a student at Yale in June, 1920, promised to marry her; that they loved together three months and that Whitney is the father of a child born to Miss Fontaine.

LEADER OF RUM-RUNNERS SHOT DEAD IN NEWARK

Newark, N. J., April 29.—Benjamin Geltrejer, long known to the police as leader of a rum-running gang, was shot and instantly killed today in his second floor office near the city hall by two assailants, one of whom was captured.

The second man leaped out of a window and escaped over roofs of adjoining buildings.

BUSINESS IN CAUCUS OF NEW HAVEN DEMOCRATS

New Haven, April 29.—The New Haven delegation to the state democratic convention tonight named four state central committeemen, elected members of various committees for the convention and endorsed Mayor David E. FitzGerald for delegate at large and Registrar of Voters Thomas E. Cahill as district delegate to the national convention. There was no opposition to any of the tickets presented. Attorney Frank S. Bergin, chairman of the town committee was elected secretary of the delegation. A short address was made by Mayor FitzGerald, asking for harmony in party ranks.

The state central committeemen elected are Thomas F. Keys and Clara Brown, eighth district; James E. Keegan and Margaret Reif, ninth district; David E. FitzGerald and Clara Clancy, tenth district and Thomas Harlan and Catherine Dailey, eleventh district.

The two New Haven delegates to the national convention will, it is understood, favor the candidacy of two different persons for president. Registrar Cahill is a McAdoo man and it is the general belief that Mayor FitzGerald is for Governor Smith. Neither delegate has declared himself publicly. James J. Walsh, who will be the delegate from Meriden, is said to favor Smith.

GIRL "SAILOR" DISCOVERED BY ADMIRAL ROBINSON

Washington, April 29.—Discovery that a bob-haired sailor miss was serving on the battleship Arizona, of the Pacific battle fleet, was officially reported to the navy department about two weeks ago by Admiral S. S. Robinson, commander-in-chief of the battle fleet, it was revealed today. Her arrival yesterday in New York was the net consequence of the report made by Admiral Robinson.

Navy department officials said the Arizona had been carefully searched several times but the presence of two other women, said by Miss Madeline Blair, the bob-haired sailor, to be aboard the ship, had not been discovered. Miss Blair's story, however, was not doubted at the department where it was pointed out that the women probably had left the ship at Panama when Miss Blair's identity was first discovered.

DEMAND FOR REMOVAL OF DETECTIVE BURNS

New York, April 29.—Demand for the removal of William J. Burns, head of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, was made of the senate appropriations committee in a letter from the American Civil Liberties Union made public tonight.

The letter charged that the bureau's request for a $2,350,000 appropriation was based largely on a proposal to combat radicalism despite the fact that such cases were "far from numerous." The union further charged that many of the activities of the bureau are "illegal, unnecessary, and violative of the civil rights of American citizens."

SHOE MACHINERY OFFICIAL CHARGED WITH LARCENY

Brockton, Mass., April 29.—William H. Martin, local office manager of the United Shoe Machinery company, was arrested here today charged with the larceny of $3,250 from George H. McComick, of East Bridgewater. McCormick told the police that he gave Martin a check for that amount in payment for 100 shares of United Shoe Machinery stock. He did not receive the stock he said, and later found that Martin's claim to ownership was false.

Martin was arraigned in the district court and held in $3,000 bail for a hearing next Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Edmond Hurley have arrived at their home on Spring street after three months' tour of California, where they visited relatives in Oakland. Although the pleasure of their trip was marred by the death of a relatives of Mrs. Hurley in California, the tourists have a great deal which is of interest to relate in regard to their journey. Hollywood in particular was a source of much interest. At Oakland Mr. and Mrs. Hurley met and visited Rev. Harry S. McCready pastor of the Congregational church there and a former pastor in this city. Harry as he was familiarly known here bears the same cognomen out West and appears to be favored with the same popularity. He has grown slightly stouter but remains quite as active and enterprising. Another former Willimantic man with whom they visited was Allan M. Hubbard now a prominent business man in Los Angeles and head of the Master Fan Corporation. Frank Merrill, for years a passenger agent of the Central Vermont Railway was also met. At Waukesha, Wisconsin, the Hurleys called on Roy F. Richardson, professor in a college and a few years ago connected with Willimantic state normal school.

Two guards of honor, one composed of members of St. Jean Baptiste Society and the other of San Jose council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus, kept an all-night vigil over the body of Mayor Hormisdas Dion, in St. Mary's church Tuesday night.

Resolutions of respect on the death of Mayor Dion have been adopted by the town school committee and signed by Frank E. Guild, chairman, W. J. Sweeney, Walter R. King, L. Leo Thompson, George W. Hickey, H. C. Lathrop, W. P. S. Keating, Harriet B. Fenton and Egbert A. Case, secretary. Similar resolutions signed by Chairman John R. Pickett have been adopted by the Democratic Town and City Committee and the Willimantic Chamber of Commerce, signed by Valentine L. Murphy, President.

Robert F. Stanton, 79, one of this city's respected residents, died at his home 114 Pleasant street early Tuesday morning. Mr. Stanton was born in Windham October 31, 1844 a son of Samuel B. and Harriet L. Maine Stanton. Forty-four years ago he married Lucy Ann Larkin, who is his sole survivor. He was a well-known Mason being affiliated with Eastern Star Lodge, No. 44, A. F. and A. M., Trinity Chapter, No. 8, R. A. M., Olive Branch Council, No. 16, R. & S. M. St. John's Commandery, No. 11, K. T. of this city; King Solomon Lodge of Perfection, Van Rensalaer Council of Prince Jerusalem, Norwich Chapter of Rose Croix de H., Connecticut Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S., Norwich and Sphinx Temple A. A. O. M. M. S., Hartford.

The funeral of Jefferson H. Hooker was held at his home 280 Prospect street, Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock. The officiating clergyman was Rev. F. C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's church. Burial was in Willimantic cemetery The bearers were, Charles L. Alpaugh, Charles E. Leonard, Fred Hooker and Robert E. Mitchell. Arrangements for the funeral were in charge of Avery and VanZandt.

Mary, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Coury, died Tuesday morning at their home, 461 Main St., from infantile trouble. The funeral was held in the afternoon from the house at 2 o'clock. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. The Martineau-Bacon Corp. had charge of the arrangements.

At his home in South Coventry, funeral services for Henry Heather were held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Charles G. Johnson of that place, officiated. Burial was in Nathan Hale cemetery. The bearers were Fred Edgarton, John Kandra, David Monty, Walter A. Grenier, Horace Geer and Edward Frans. The arrangements were in charge of the Hurteau-Bosse Corp.

Mary D. Little, 88, died from infirmities of age, early Tuesday, at her home in Windham Center. She had resided in Windham for many years. She was born in Columbia, December 1, 1835, the daughter of George H. and Nancy Hunt Little. She is survived by several nieces and nephews.

At Andover, for the second time within three days the garage rented by the state highway department was entered late Monday or early Tuesday morning. The five gallon gasoline measure which was stolen on the previous break, along with automobile accessories and a fur coat, was returned, but the thieves made up for this reparation by emptying the contents of a 100-gallon gasoline tank partly filled. Arthur Nye, foreman of the road construction gang discovered the break. The officers have a clue and are hot on the trail.

Dog owners in the town of Windham need to step lively, if they have failed to secure their dog licenses. Only two days remain for registration. The fee is $1.25 for males and $10.50 for females. Any dog owner not complying with the law faces the prospect of an arrest and a fine in court. The dog population is on the increase, according to Town Clerk Fanton, but of the 800 animals in the town of Windham only about two-thirds are registered for 1924.

Street Superintendent John S. Sullivan has his men occupied in the work of giving the city streets their annual spring coat of oil. The sticky mixture of sand and oil is adhesive and pedestrians and automobiles will not fare well for a few days.

The assignments for the officers of the police department for May have been posted as follows by Chief Alan MacArthur: Officer Grant Bombria, Sodom; Officer Arthur Hurley, Jackson street; Officer William Hurley, center Main street; Officer Roderick Lariviere, up-street beat. Officer Edward Leahy will play a lone hand during the day as traffic officer on Main.

A capacity attendance and outbursts of aplause from a most appreciative audience were the rewards of the efforts of St. Joseph's Boy Scouts' Band, at the annual concert given Tuesday evening at St. Joseph's Hall. Leader Charles N. C. Wheeler directed the juvenile band. The proceeds will be devoted to the camping fund of the scout troops of the parish.

Tuesday night, at the Al-Pierre Tabarin, the annual Ladies' Night of Willimantic Chamber of Commerce is to be held. The entertainment committee is cooperating with the general committee in making elaborate preparations for the affair. Professional entertainers will appear. The Peerless Orchestra will play for the dancing.

NURSE CHAPPELLE SAYS TANLAC BRINGS MOST GRATIFYING RESULTS

Nurse With 15 Years' Experience Urges Use of Tanlac —Tells of Her Mother's Experience With World's Famous Tonic.

"I have direct and personal knowledge of so many cases where TANLAC has restored health and strength and helped weak, run-down people to get on their feet that I know it to be an unusual medicine," is the emphatic manner in which Mrs. M. E. Chappelle, Blue Mount and Thomas Ave., Wauwetosa, Wis., a practical nurse of fifteen years' experience, pays tribute to the famous treatment.

"Time and again I have urged TANLAC's use and it always brings the most gratifying results. My own mother, now eighty years old, took TANLAC five years ago, and it has been her standby ever since. Nothing helps her as TANLAC does and she is as strong an advocate of the medicine as I am. Only recently, mother became generally run-down. Her stomach was disordered, her appetite utterly failed her, and she came near having a nervous breakdown. TANLAC gave her a vigorous appetite, corrected all complaints and left her not only well and happy but so strong and active that she looks after the home and visits around, as well. And mother thinks the TANLAC Vegetable Pills are the greatest ever.

"In all my long years of experience as a nurse, I have never known the equal of TANLAC.

TANLAC is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Take TANLAC Vegetable Pills.

Gum Chewing Aids the Teeth

You have the authority of doctors and dentists for this statement. Your own experience will prove it, if you will use WRIGLEY'S after every meal.

The following quotations from a recent work on teeth and health are worth remembering:

"Dentists have found that the exercise of gum chewing brings about a better nutrition of the teeth . . . . ."

"The cleansing action of the gum between the teeth helps to keep them free from the particles which lodge in the crevices and cause decay."

The busy man—or woman either—rarely has time to clean the teeth after eating. Yet they should be cleaned, and

Rev. Charles G. Haun preached on Sunday morning, his subject being Christ Preparing the Way, when He said, "Behold, I go before you, take up your cross and follow me," applying it to the missionary work to be done everywhere in the world.

During the past week when the road on West street, between the home of Charles Bailey and his barn on the opposite side of the street was being repaired, an old well was found in the middle of the road, which was covered with a flat stone, from which the recent rains had washed the dirt. The well was 15 feet deep and contained good water, but on account of its position, it was necessary to fill it up, which required several loads of stone and dirt. It is considered probable that the well has been there 160 or 200 years, indications being that the location of the road has been changed and the well covered when the highway passed over it.

An artesian well is being sunk on the Abbott property at the lake, wells having been sunk during the winter on the Wells, Toumey, Perry, Roberts and Crittenden properties.

A meeting of the Columbia Improvement society, attended by about 30, was held at the town hall Saturday evening. The election resulted as follows: Edward P. Lyman, president; Mrs. Henry B. Hutchins, secretary; H. W. Porter, treasurer; J. N. Clarke, Raymond E. Lyman, Philip H. Isham and Mrs. Hubert P. Collins, directors. The officers and directors constitute the executive committee.

There was an opinion expressed that the by-laws should be amended at the proper time, making it necessary that the consent of the town and first selectman should be obtained before changes on the green are made, but no action was taken.

Miss Lila Seeley is the only pupil from Columbia to graduate at Windham High school this year. She is on the honor roll and has maintained the high average of 90 23-100 per cent during her entire high school course.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Included in the business talk Tuesday was a rumor that a Boston furniture concern is considering locating in Danielson Other than that this concern is interested in Danielson as a sales and distributing center and that it will require at least 3,000 square feet of floor space at beginning operations, information relative to the project was not given out by those in a position to know about the matter.

Almost daily, from many points in the surrounding country reports of grass and brush fires are coming in. None of these have caused any serious damage to date in this immediate vicinity, but brings from owners of land in outlying sections the request that extreme care be exercised in disposing of lighted matches, cigarettes, cigars, etc., while traversing such territory. Such fires also may be started by carelessly throwing lighted matches and cigarettes from motor cars into roadside accumulations of dried leaves and grass.

John Greeley, in the employ of the Quinebaug Lake Ice Company, a patient at a hospital in Providence, was reported Tuesday as improving. He has been under treatment for an injury that has caused him considerable inconvenience.

Numbers of Danielson men, it is noticed, who advocate that "girls should let nature take its course and not bob their hair" treat themselves to a clean shave every morning, evidently believing that the cultivation of whiskers somehow has nothing to do with natural processes.

Preparations were being made Tuesday for oiling the state highway between Dayville and Attawaugan. This will be the first oiling operation in this section this season.

Today is the last of the month and tomorrow, May 1, marks the time limit for registering dogs. A penalty is attached after May 1 for failure to pay prior to that time.

Carelessness of fishermen in causing a grass and brush fire that burned over several acres of land before it was brought under control, has been the means of getting another section of Snake Meadow brook barred to fishermen. So it goes from year to year, until only a short time can remain when fishermen by their own negligence will debar themselves from every brook worth fishing in this section of the country. No amount of warning seems to have sufficient effect to materially improve conditions.

Relatives and friends from Danielson will be at Willimantic today (Wednesday) to attend the funeral services for Mayor Hormisdas Dion.

Officer Streamens, who has been at the Danielson barracks for the past few months, is now assigned as a member of a special squad of the state police department engaged in patrol of highways throughout the state.

Good progress continued to be made Tuesday by the 100 men who are engaged in digging the trench for the new high pressure gas mains.

Though there is plenty of available labor for some lines of endeavor, one hears farmers tell of difficulty in getting good farm hands.

Shipments that will eventually total 500 looms are arriving here almost daily for installation in the Main street plant of the Paco Manufacturing company, formerly the Danielson Cotton company mill. This machinery is being set up and made ready for operation.

Carnivals for May and June are booked for Danielson. The fire department, as has been its rule for several years past, will have one of the carnivals.

Thomas J. Aylward was in New York Tuesday on a business trip.

For a period of six months, beginning May 15, Rev. J. W. Houck, a former Danielson pastor, will be acting pastor of the Marcey Avenue Baptist church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Miss Helen Perkins had the members of the Fortnightly club at her home for a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

S. A. Douglas, proprietor of a store at South Killingly, is making steady progress toward recovery at the Day-Kimball hospital, after the amputation of his leg above the knee.

Louis Sibley, recently returned to this country from Australia, has been here for a visit with his mother, Mrs. F. B. Sibley. Mr. Sibley contemplates returning to Australia, where he has business interest.

Money deposited in the savings department of the Windham County National Bank on or before May 5th, will draw interest from May 1st.—adv.

The feature picture, Scaramouche, at the Orpheum theatre the past two days, proved an unusually interesting attraction for the theatre-going public.

Clara Adams, 11 year old, resident on East Franklin street, was reported as recovering Tuesday, as her 7-year old brother also was doing, from the effects of eating a poisonous chemical mixture used in spraying plants. The complete recovery of the children seems assured.

Mrs. Albert Bernier sang Ave Marie at the LaBonte-Durand marriage at St. James' church Monday morning.

Special devotion for May are announced to be held on certain evenings each week at St. James' church.

Another light frost was noted Tuesday morning, but the season has been slow in developing that practically no damage to growing things resulted.

Hunters for cowslips find that they are slow in growth this year, though they promise to be plentiful within a few days.

Members of the Service battery were interested in the announcement that there is a prospect of having a day's stop-over in Washington, when they are on their way back from the coming summer encampment at Camp Eustins, Va., a privilege that is promised for the members of the 192nd Field artillery, of which the local battery is a unit.

PUTNAM

Anything that developed at the Smith and Culley trials before the city court Monday, apparently derogatory to the police department does not pre-suppose an investigation of the department, Mayor Victor Chapdelaine said Tuesday. The mayor has taken cognisance of what was said pertaining to Officer John Ryan, during the course of Monday's hearings, but is not inclined to be hasty relative to any notice or action the city may officially take in the premises. He has made a note of the charges made against Officer Ryan and of the latter's stout denial of the truth of them. The mayor does not accept an accusation as establishing truth. He said Tuesday that he had made no official move in the premises. "I believed," the mayor said, "that we had the best police department Putnam has had in years, and I still hold to that opinion."

The mayor was not inclined to indicate what action upon the part of the common council might be expected from the developments of Monday. He said the matter probably had come to the notice of the police committee of the council, as it had to other citizens. The future will determine whether or not action is necessary.

George H. Snow, whose house, barn and sheds, with their contents, excepting a horse and three cows and some few things saved from the house were destroyed by a fire at North Woodstock Monday, was quoted Tuesday as stating that what was lost was covered by only $2,000 in insurance. Persons interested in antiques and familiar with the collection at Mr. Snow's home express regret that they should be lost in such a manner. Mr. Snow had carefully preserved his collection, and had declined many offers from those who would buy them. Some who have seen these antiques estimate that they alone were worth as much as the amount of the insurance on the property destroyed. The origin of the fire remains a mystery. Of the contents of the house, only a small part of the furnishings and equipment on the lower floor were saved. The things taken out included a few antiques.

Only about 100 electors took the trouble to go to the polls and cast their ballots at the special city election called to pass upon appropriation matters and of this number all but a few voted favorably on the matters presentde. Appropriations approved included the following:

1st. The sum of $8,000 for the improvement of certain streets and the laying of sewers, as follows:

The sum of $4,500 for the laying of about 1,440 feet of 8-inch sewers connecting the present sewer system together with manholes as follows: About 420 feet on Van den Noort street near Green street; about 120 feet on Church street near the Battey house; about 300 feet on Gilman street; about 600 feet on Walnut street, easterly of Farrows street.

The sum of $3,500 for the improvement of Walnut street for a distance of 220 feet westerly of the easterly line of Farrows street, by removal of ledge and laying course of gravel over a stone base; also by the installing of curb and gutter on the east and south side of street between School street and Farrows street and grading said street.

2nd. The sum of $1,200 for the sprinkling of certain streets with oil or water.

3d. The sum of $750 for the Putnam Red Cross Chapter for the maintenance of its public nursing service.

4th. The sum of $500 to install about 150 feet of curbing and gutters on Livery street in front of the land of the Farley estate and St. Onge property; about 160 feet of drains and gutters on Livery street in front of the lands of Hurlbut and Ryan, and the grading of said street.

5th. The sum of $700 for installing curbing and gutters as follows: About 160 feet in front of the land of Charles Seder on Le street; about 320 feet in front of lands of Bennor, Crawford and Benbit on Barber street; also for grading said streets where curbing is to be laid.

6th. The sum of $660 for the laying of about 350 feet of drain on Church street, southerly of Battey street, connecting with the present drain on Providence street.

7th. The sum of $53.80 for the reimbursement of Simon Kaminsky and M. Brennan and also David Beausoliel for one-half the cost of installing curbing in front of their properties, on Church street and Harrison street.

8th. The sum of $165.75 for the reimbursement of Frank R. Witman for one-half the cost of laying sewer on Whittemore street, 160 feet in length.

The common council was authorized to borrow a sufficient sum to meet the appropriations until other provisions for same are made.

Putnam is getting away to a good start in recruiting for the headquarters company, infantry, of the Forty-third division, that is to be located here. Up to Tuesday morning twenty-one young men had presented themselves for enlistment and were examined as to their physical qualifications by Dr. E. F. Perry, who was in the medical corps of this country's forces overseas during the World war.

The number of young men who have so far presented themselves for enlistment is very encouraging and seems to insure beyond reasonable doubt that the minimum membership required—50 men—will be obtained promptly. The maximum number that may be enlisted is 76. Among those who have so far presented themselves as recruits are a number of ex-service men, a number of them non-commissioned officers in the army during the World war.

Captain J. J. McGarry, who has had years of experience in the national guard, has been appointed captain and recruiting officers of the command being organized here. Captain McGarry is enthusiastic over the prospects of having a splendid military company in this city. He has meetings planned for next Monday and Tuesday evenings in the rooms of the chamber of commerce at which prospective recruits may learn about what it is proposed to do toward establishing a headquarters company here and recruiting its membership. All the young men of the city who are interested have been invited to attend.

Until the company is recruited to at least its minimum strength no officers or non-commissioned officers in addition to Captain McGarry will be named. At the rate recruits are coming in, it is possible that the minimum strength of enlistments desired maye be obtained within a month.

Then will come the formal organization and the obtaining of a place to drill. It is stated nothing definite has been done as yet about a drilling place, but Union hall is considered as very desirable. It is not in use at present and would fill the requirements of the company until such time as hte state armory that Putnam is likely to get in the future is a reality, a possibility hinging on the maintaining of the national guard in this city.

For many years Putnam had a company in the National Guard of Connecticut, and G company of the Third Connecticut infantry represented it in the Spanish-American war.

The brilliant society wedding Tuesday at All Saints church, Asheville, N. C., of Miss Cornelia Stuyvesant Vanderbilt and Hon. John Francis Amherst Cecil, first secretary of the British embassy at Washington, recalled to residents here that the bride's mother, Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt, is of the Dresser family of Pomfret, and for that reason there was more than passing interest in Tuesday's ceremony.

The wedding was marked by the largest gathering in the Vanderbilt family at a distance from New York since the marriage twenty years ago of Miss Cathleen Neilson and Reginald C. Vanderbilt, which was celebrated in April at Newport.

From day to day for the past fortnight guests have been assembling at Biltmore house, the party there including many relatives and friends of the bride and groom. In the party is Lord William Cecil, who came from England to be present at the marriage of his son, also the groom's sister, Miss Margaret Cecil.

Putnam lodge of Elks will not hold a great outdoor fair this year, as has been the rule for the past two years. The lodge has decided that conditions this year do not warrant the venture. In the meantime the organization is busy with other matters, especially with that of membership gains. At present a class of over 50 candidates is being made ready for the degree. This is one of the largest classes ever organized for reception in Putnam which has a membership of over 500.

Today might be designated as Rotarians' day in Putnam. It will be the first anniversary of the Putnam Rotary club and that fact will bring a special train conveying Norwich and New London Rotarians to Putnam and the arrival by motor of the Willimantic Rotarians to assist the members of Putnam Rotary club in a suitable observance of the anniversary. The program of the day has previously been outlined in this colum.

Included in a string of trout caught by John Maynard of this city was one weighing 13 1-2 ounces.

St. Mary's Catholic Welfare council has a Japanese whist scheduled for the coming month.

A little dog gave up its life in the business section Tuesday morning when struck by an automobile driven by a Woodstock man.

Maurice Friedman of Norwich, formerly of this city, was here on a business trip Tuesday.

James Kennedy, formerly manager of the French River inn, at Mechanicsville, now resident near the Children's home, said while in this city Tuesday morning that he has set aside an 8-acre tract on his property as a camping site for motor tourists. This will be the largest and most attractive camp of its kind in this corner of the state. Mr. Kennedy believes that the establishment of such a camp will do much to hold tourists over a night in this territory, to the advantage of tradesmen in general. The Kennedy place is on the Chepachet trunk line route to Providence and only about two miles out from the center of Putnam.

BOLTON

School Supervisor W. S. Dakin of West Hartford conducted a teachers' meeting at the Center school house Friday afternoon.

Bolton Center people were in Belknap last week Thursday to attend the auction on the farm which Henry J. Thompson recently sold to George Fort of Windsor. The farm is one where Mr. Thompson's foreman, A. L. Oliver, has lived.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Rose, who were married in Baltimore, Md., April 21st, are visiting Mr. Rose's mother, Mrs. Cora V. Rose.

Lawrence Rose a studefit at a New York Theological seminary has been with his mother, Mrs. Cora V. Rose, for a week.

Louis D. Eaton and Mrs. Eaton have returned to Bolton from Nashville, Tenn., where they spent the winter. They made the trip in their automobile.

Miss Helen Comstock of Manchester has been a guest of Miss Annie M. Alvord the past week.

Miss Maude Floyd and Warren Toomey of Hartford spent the week end with the latter's brother, David Toomey.

Miss Helen Taylor of Holyoke, has been visiting her parents Rev. and Mrs. Frederick C. Taylor, at the Congregational parsonage.

Miss Elizabeth Daly and Miss Margaret H. Daly of Manchester were at their Bolton home over Sunday.

Julius Strong of Manchester and Ernest Strong of Hartford were guests Sunday of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Strong.

Only 3 per cent of the women of Persia are able to read and write.

PLAINFIELD

A number of members of Royal Primrose Lodge, I. O. O. M. U. of this village, were in Taunton, Mass., Saturday, and witnessed the conferring of the pink degree on a class of candidates. One of the members of Plainfield lodge, Miss Hilda Collins, took the degree. Others who attended, were Mrs. Thomas Cooper, Mrs. Arthur Holmes, Mrs. Edward Dawley, Miss Agnes Ellis, Noble Grand Mrs. Samuel Walker, and Past Grands Mrs. James McNulty, Mrs. Robert Sykes, Miss Alice Sykes and Mrs. Patrick Delaney.

At the 17th cottage service, held at the home of Rev. William C. Prentiss, last week, it was decided that the people of the Congregational parish wished for the continuation of the cottage service, which have been held so successfully throughout the past fall and winter. In agreement with this, the eighteenth cottage service is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Exley, on the Canterbury road, with Edward Hall in charge of the meeting. The soloist will be Mrs. C. L. Butler, with Miss Helen Gallup pianist.

Work is nearly finished on the new showroom and station being erected by Leon Frink, just north of the store of John Albro. It is expected that the structure will be completed this week, and it is planned to open the building with an old-fashioned dance, given by the Plainfield Military band, in the showroom Friday evening.

The game with Burrillville High school, which was to have been played at Pascoag today (Wednesday) has been postponed. This makes Plainfield's next game the one with Stonington High, at Stonington Saturday of this week. Plainfield has to date won five games, and lost two, and expectations are that another win will be added to the column, after Saturday's game.

A meeting of the Benedict Library association was held in the Benedict Library at the Congregational parsonage Tuesday evening.

Friends of Elmer Gaskell, formerly of this village, and at present residing at Miami, Florida, are interested to know that a copy of the Miami Daily News was received here this week, with a section devoted to the activities of the Dade County Agricultural High school, which Mr. Gaskell's son Newell is at present attending. In the article was shown some of the work being done by the boys of that school, and special mention was made of the work done by Newell Gaskell, his picture being shown with two of his cows. The school has a dairy house, and a large number of cows, the boys of the school taking care of the stock, and having established a large milk route. Newell Gaskell is one of the foremost students, having taken several prizes at exhibits and fairs, and having done a great deal toward the upkeep of the department. At present, a milk week is being held at Miami, and several fairs and numerous other exhibits have been held.

Mrs. Frederick Lyon was in Providence Tuesday on business.

The Woman's Guild has postponed its meeting from Wednesday afternoon to Friday afternoon so as not to conflict with the Woman's conferences at the Community House.

Several in Plainfield are planning to hear George B. Gilbert, of Middletown, give his lecture at the Congregational church, Central Village.

The Ponemah Wheel club minstrel troupe, accompanied by the Palace Orchestra, of eight pieces, is scheduled to make its annual appearance in Plainfield Community House.

SOUTH KILLINGLY

William Hayfield of Foster was a caller at The Oaks, Tuesday.

Mr. Norcross of the Burlingame Co. of Worcester was here Wednesday to make repairs on the engine at A. E. Hall's steam plant.

Very encouraged reports have been received from Stephen Douglas, who is still a patient at Day Kimball Hospital. He is now able to sit in the sun parlor for some time each day.

William Lyon spent Sunday with his father in Putnam.

Gertrude Hall of Lynn, Mass., is spending a week's vacation at her home.

The pupils of the local school under the direction of their music teacher Miss Bowmas, gave a most interesting musical entertainment in the Community house, Tuesday evening. The program consisting of choruses, drills and solos, was well carried out, each child performing his part with ability. Several solos by Miss Bowman with Miss Fuller accompanist were much enjoyed. The proceeds from the evenings entertainment are to start a fund to purchase a victrola for the school.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hall and Gertrude Hall spent Sunday with Mrs. William Holland of Putnam. Mrs. Holland who is eighty-nine, exhibited a bed quilt which she has just finished and which has one thousand and ninety-two pieces in it.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brown have returned to their camp after spending Easter at their home in Killingly Center.

At the church Sunday evening, Rev. W. B. Williams conducted the service taking for his subject, The Disobedient Prophet. A pleasing feature of the service was a solo by Helen Keach of Danielson. Miss Fuller was organist.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Tilton are glad to learn that their little daughter who has been seriously ill has fully recovered.

Mrs. Charles Spaulding, Ada and Myra Spaulding and William Potter all of Auburn spent Sunday at Spaulding cottage.

A greyhound can travel thirty-five miles an hour for a short distance,

NOTICE

I want to thank my friends and customers of Dayville for the loyal support they have given me in the several years that I have sold milk in their village.

I have now sold my farm to dairy people that will carry on the business and keep up the high standard of milk that I have always tried to do. I extend my good will to them and hope my customers will continue with them. Where as you know they are equipped much better than anyone else in the vicinity to supply you with sanitary products.

Thanking you again for your loyal support, I remain,

Yours truly,

Dayville, Conn. C. E. KEMPTON,

You'll Like Its Looks and Praise Its Power

HERE is the reason for the wonderful popularity of this new Cleveland Six model:

It carries the lowest price ever placed on a 5-passenger sedan that has plenty of power, genuine good looks and substantial construction throughout.

It all comes down to a matter of dollars and cents.

Sensible folks cannot be argued into paying more than $1295 for a 5-passenger 6-cylinder sedan—

—when for $1295 they can enjoy the comfort and relaxation of a roomy Fisher body, the power and pep of the finest performing motor in the whole light six field, and the dependability that they know they always get in a Cleveland Six.

Prove this by driving this new model yourself.

Watch how easily it passes bigger and costlier cars on hills—how swiftly and smoothly it accelerates.

That's the low torque power of the Cleveland Six motor—the extra power where power counts.

Note the beauty of the body lines—the brilliant finish that comes from seventeen painting operations—the wide, low seats—the deep upholstery—the smart appointments.

It's today's best buy in closed cars—a value that speaks for itself!

Genuine balloon tires (31 x 5¼) optional, $70 extra. Cleveland chassis design permits their use without affecting road, frame, or fender clearance.

PHILIPPINE BILLS.

Bills have been introduced in congress for the purpose of dealing with the Philippines in a manner different from that which prevails. The idea seems to be to try to keep them satisfied with a lot of promises over a term of years, but without having any assurance that conditions would be ripe at the designated time for carrying out the provisions that are urged. They seem to be the outcome of the present agitation by the Filipinos, but their prospects are not impressive.

By the Fairchild bill the Philippines would be made a dominion, having similar relations to the United States that Canada does to Great Britain. There would be a governor general named by this government but the islanders would also have the right to elect their own governor, there being certain veto powers vested in the representative of this government. After 30 years a plebiscite would be held to let the islanders say whether they wanted complete independence or not.

Such a move would of course be directly against the policy that has been followed in connection with our island possessions. To do this for the Philippines would only create a demand for it elsewhere, and it would be a demand which could not be properly refused. Already Porto Rico is seeking changes which it is not likely to get, but Porto Rico has reason to expect that it should not get secondary consideration to the Philippines.

The other bill would result in the [illegible] independence to the islands [illegible] agreed by the leading [illegible] that sovereignty will be [illegible] respected.

There is no advantage for the Filipinos under either of the proposed measures than exist today. They have the opportunity to expand and develop, to govern within the limits of sanity and safety and at the same time have the protection of this government. They have safeguards under existing conditions which are beneficial for themselves and keeps them out of difficulties with others. Till the time comes when they are ready for independence and it can be given them there is little to be gained by holding out false promises or encouraging them from the paths of constructive activity.

THE LYNCHING SPIRIT.

What must be regarded as a fitting reproach to the lynching of a Negro boy in Woodbury, Ga., is that which appears in the Chattanooga Times of April 13 in which it is not only deplored that a 15-year-old boy should be treated in any such manner but it points out "the total failure of our present system to maintain the ideals of a Christian people we so often and so smugly boast we are."

In this lynching case the boy had been arrested for larceny and while in custody shot a policeman. He was at once taken out and put to death without the semblance of a hearing, without a "day in court" and without a chance. He was treated no different than a dog would have been, and the glaring inconsistency in the whole affair is that those who took his life had no greater respect for the law than the boy had when he stole or shot, yet they were those who had had the advantages of an education and had been brought up to know and resume the difference between right and wrong. Under such circumstances there can be little question as to which was the greater crime and who committed it.

No one will maintain that the boy should have gone unpunished, either for the larceny or the shooting. There is law governing such cases, but there is no reason why he should not have been treated quite the same as if he had been white. The idea of those who rate themselves as good citizens undertaking to commit a worse crime in order to teach others a lesson makes a sad impression. It is little short of savagery. It is a display of the greatest disrespect for their own laws and creates more crime instead of less.

Well does the Chattanooga Times say, "This and similar incidents stamp us with the hard, unmistakable and disheartening fact that ours is still a society, for the most part, made up of pharisees. We shout love of God, truth, righteousness, justice, fair play and law enforcement from the housetops, and then we go out and lynch a Negro."

FELL FLAT.

When Secretary Mellon reports to President Coolidge that the investigation of the bureau of engraving shows that charges of fraud and grave irregularities therein have been disproved, it brings to an end a situation which has been surrounded with much misunderstanding.

When President Harding authorized the searching of a score or more employes of this bureau it was done [illegible] information that was furnished by a government employe who [illegible] investigating conditions [illegible] was that he had [illegible] as they were, and [illegible] it was a time for [illegible] a bureau in which no place for irregularities and it is not a bureau in which it was desired to permit those charged with contributing to the conditions to cover up their work or continue it.

The charges were sufficient for the fullest kind of an investigation to be started. What the outcome was likely to be was indicated some time ago when the reinstatement of the discharged bureau employes was ordered. Going into all details of the charges it has not been possible to disclose any wrong doing. The report shows however that the charges were made up from misstatements, half truths and distorted facts.

It was a case where the government employe who brought the charges was looked to to support them. This he has not been able to do and it has been found that they never ought to have been made. This reveals the unfortunate position in which the bureau employes were placed by another employe, but it is gratifying to know that this important division of the treasury department is not honeycombed with fraud, but is functioning with the very safeguards with which it is supposed to be surrounded. The charges fell flat.

TIME TO BEGIN.

A man may be presumed to be innocent until he is proved guilty, but in the case of W. T. McCray of Indiana, governor of that commonwealth, it didn't require the jury long to reach a verdict of guilty of attempting to use the mails to defraud. When the report brings the information that he is to serve his sentence and that his resignation is ready, there cannot help being a feeling that he is none too prompt in reaching this decision.

Even though he may have insisted upon conviction before handing in his resignation, the fact that such serious charges had been brought against him and that he was to stand trial seems to have been sufficient for his withdrawal from the activities of governor of the state until such a time as innocence or guilt was established. Such doesn't appear to have been done. Instead he has insisted upon carrying on the duties of the responsible office during a considerable period and administered the governorship as if no charges were pending and there was no possibility of his being convicted. This includes the signing or vetoing of bills passed by the legislature.

The situation may be one that is entirely legal and therefore the signatures must be accepted. It is entirely probable that the work has been conscientiously and properly done, quite the same as if there had been no charges hanging over him, but it nevertheless presents a situation which cannot be exactly pleasing to the people of Indiana. The resignation should put an end to any further continuance of such a process, and there's no question now but what it is time to resign.

THE PRIMARY RESULTS.

Neither in the state of Massachusetts nor Ohio was there any question as to the outcome of Tuesday's primaries. It was regarded within as well as without as a foregone conclusion. Sentiment was fixed so firmly in advance that only one outcome was possible, and the anticipation differed in no respect from the realization.

Perhaps it might be said that Massachusetts should be expected to send a solid delegation to the Cleveland convention pledged to the support of its former governor. That was the very attitude that Massachusetts took, there being no contest in the republican circles except in one district where the candidate who had indicated his purpose to support Hiram was snowed under. Such a test in the president's own state and his own district seems amusing. If the senator from California can derive any satisfaction from it he is welcome to it.

In Ohio there was no conflict. The only interest was created by the Daugherty candidacy as delegate, and that he was only indicates the following which he has in his own state and the confidence which the people of his state still have in him. As far as the republican results are concerned the primaries simply increase the insistence upon the nomination of President Coolidge.

With the democrats the Massachusetts primary was a quiet adherence to the regular slate, while in Ohio there was a pronounced demand for James M. Cox, who was so overwhelmingly defeated for the presidency four years ago, with McAdoo running a strong second.

Massachusetts and Ohio have shown their hands and they have not deviated from expectations.

SERIOUS INDISPOSITION

"Is your husband seriously sick?" asked the woman who could see through the kitchen windows of the next apartment when she stepped out onto the rear porch. "I saw you filling the hot water bag and nowadays only men think of demanding a hot water bag! I noticed Dr. Chargoom coming in, too—don't you feel he is terribly expensive?"

"Sshh!" warned the lady whose husband was sick, carefully closing the door into the passageway to the bedrooms. "This is a case where you do not stop to consider expense, my dear Mrs. Bangle!"

"Is—is he going to die?" gasped the inquisitive visitor.

"Oh, Albert is not in the slightest danger!" reproved the placid wife, shaking the hot water bottle to eliminate the air. "Up to a month ago Albert was just like the ordinary run of middle-aged men whose points are creaky, breath rather short and direction not as good as it once was. He was given to various aches and pains, plodded upstairs stiff-kneed and began to recite poetry about growing old together, silver threads and that sort of thing."

"The worst of it was he insisted on bringing to my attention the idea that I, too, was tottering on the summit of life's pathway and about to take my first steps on the downward slope," continued the placid wife. "This annoyed me considerably since I pride myself on spending considerable

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Major Fiorello La Guardia, who has announced his candidacy for the mayoralty of New York City, is at present a representative in Congress of the Twentieth New York district. He was born in the metropolis, but received his early education in the public schools of Arizona, where his father, an American soldier, was stationed with his regiment. Later he was graduated at the New York University Law School, and was admitted to the bar in New York, where he has practised his profession. Singularly gifted as a linguist, he easily found his way into the diplomatic service, and later into the consular service with a post at Fiume. During the World war he served on the Austro-Italian front in the United States Aviation Service as major in command of an aerial bombardment detachment. He was actively engaged in day and night aerial bombing and was decorated for gallantry. In 1916 he first ran for Congress and surprised politicians by his victory.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
by DAVID CORY

Attacked by the Owl.

Well, I'm sure something dreadful would have happened if the two little lightning bugs hadn't crawled inside the Luckymobile lamps to light the way home, for it was getting plenty dark and the road was rough.

"Be careful how you steer the car," Said one of the lightning bugs.

"Little Jack Rabbit, get out your gun in case we meet robbers and thugs."

"Look out!" cried the other lightning bug.

"There's a hole in front of my wheel. Turn sharp to the right or I very much fear You'll upset the Luckymobile."

"My, but those lighting bugs are good pilots," said the old gentleman rabbit. "I'll give them each a lollypop when we get home." But, oh, dear me! just then something happened. Isn't it a shame? A wicked old owl flew down from a tree and tooted the automobile horn: "Too woo, too woo!" Or maybe he did it himself; I'm sure I don't know, and neither did Uncle Lucky, for the old gentleman rabbit was so frightened that his hair stood up on end, spoiling off his old wool-

"Too wit, too woo, now I've got you," tooted that dreadful owl, making the little rabbits quake with fear for owls eat rabbits and mice, you know.

"Get off my Luckymobile," shouted Uncle Lucky bravely, but that dreadful owl only laughed and clawed his claws and flapped his wings and blinked his eyes and sharpened his beak on a little file he carried in his waistcoat pocket.

The poor little rabbits didn't know what to do, and if they hadn't suddenly come to an old hollow stump, I guess that wicked owl would have eaten them up, then and there.

No sooner had Uncle Lucky shut off the engine, quick as a wink than he and his bunny nephew turned three somersaults and a half backwards over the Luckymobile, and before Old Barney Owl could turn about they were safely hidden inside.

But that wicked old owl didn't give up. No, sireeman. He flew round and around that hollow stump, but he couldn't get in for Uncle Lucky had stopped up the hole with his old wedding stovepipe hat.

"I'll be a night watchman and stay here all night,
And when I once catch you, Oh, my, how I'll bite!"

sang that dreadful owl as he fluttered and flew around and around where that hollow stump grew.

"You can hang around till Christmas," said Uncle Lucky. "We don't care for we've found a cupboard inside this stump full of carrot pie, lettuce sandwiches, turnip toppers and raspberry soda water."

When that old owl heard this, he was so hungry that he bit off the end of his tail and almost choked.

"Well, if that's the case," he said, "I'll fly away home and see if Mrs. Owl hasn't caught a mouse or three," and away he flew. But the little rabbits didn't come out all night, and in the next story I'll tell you what they did in the morning.

In our kindergarten are 101 children, at least 60 of whom are foreign and without proper accommodations for the whole number. Considering that many of these must be sent to first grade next year, although unable to speak English or to receive full kindergarten training, owing to the over-crowded condition of the room, we can see what a serious condition faces the first grades next year.

In the two second grade rooms are 82 children, in each of which 38, or 80 per cent. are Polish, and the rest are divided among several nationalities. In one of the fourth grades are 45 children, 66 2-3 per cent. being Polish. In the fourth and fifth grade room are 47, 80 per cent. being foreign. These are only a few of our rooms and the same conditions exist in all. In a room of 40 children, if all came from homes where culture and education prevail, there would still be more pupils than one teacher can do full justice to. But in rooms whose children have illiteracy and ignorance for a background, where only a very few can speak even fair English, and in the majority of cases whose parents speak none; whose heritage is not mental efficiency because of the parents fine mental trainings—in these rooms a teacher cannot do either the work required or that to which the children are entitled. In two rooms of 82 children (one grade) where 80 per cent. are backward from various causes—lack of English, national slowness, improper food, rest, ventilation, etc.—more than two teachers are necessary in order that the backward ones may have the individual instruction necessary. Time spent in teaching or in learning is wasted unless the work is thoroughly done. Yet our school is expected to go through the curriculum and answer the same requirements as are certain other schools of the city with a different class of children. Because the crowded condition has been growing worse for several years past, the upper grades are feeling the effects, for the foundation work below cannot be done properly. If children cannot master the rudiments of the common branches, the "reversion to illiteracy" of which John M. Finley speaks in "The Debt Eternal" is a pretty sure thing for the future, as most of these boys and girls leave school as soon as they can legally do so. Our foreign children are most lovable and they are teachable, but many of them are handicapped by heredity, by environment, training, and if we are to make of them desirable citizens and also reap the reward of the dollars spent for education, not only in the same rooms, we must spend more until there is an adequate teaching force and equipment to render adequate service to the schools.

We know that the public and the school committee being busy men have not had the opportunities to see all these conditions, for people must come into actual contact with them to know, not once but many times. We therefore ask the intelligent interest and cooperation of all our citizens to see that we have in our Greeneville schools that which is right and necessary we should have. No school in the city has stood higher in the grade of its scholarship in the past than this same Greeneville grammar school, now is there a more efficient corps of teachers in Norwich, Conn., and see for yourselves. Neither our superintendent nor our teachers can solve this problem without the tax paying, intelligent, progressive public behind them.

WINIFRED BLACKLEDGE.

Norwich, April 28, 1924.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Situation in the Greeneville Schools

Mr. Editor: Those citizens interested in the schools of Norwich, are always pleased when any improvement either in our schools or in our teaching equipment is added. Certainly the West Town street school building is one of the relics of the past which we shall be glad to see go. But there is another part of Norwich which merits the attention and interest of the intelligent citizens of the community as much if not more than any other part. As we all know, Greeneville is essentially a manufacturing section with a population increasingly foreign. The largest Americanization problem of Norwich is centered right here. In Greeneville we have two school buildings—one of brick, which while old fashioned, is roomy and fairly well lighted and ventilated from the windows. The other building is a wooden structure, at least 75 years old, absolutely out of date, with cross lights, part of the windows on springs, too heavy for a woman to manage, etc. Into this school of four rooms are crowded 185 children—115 in two rooms under two first grade teachers. In one of the rooms are only 16 children, who hear English spoken at home. This year and last there have not been proper seats and desks for all the pupils, while the old double seats and desks, tabooed in most schools, make the conditions worse.

WRIGLEY OFTEN WAS BROKE

Expelled from school many times, going broke when away from home, undergoing three failures and being burned out of his factory twice, did not stop William Wrigley, Jr.

When he was ten years old he ran away to New York, arriving there with less than a dollar in his pockets. He sold newspapers, did errands and worked on boats, but sleeping out of doors grew monotonous and he went back to his home in Philadelphia.

In public school again, he threw a fit against the schoolhouse, his education was stopped, and he stirred soap in his father's factory—wages $1.50 a week. At 13, selling soap on the road, he made more money than he dreamed could be earned.

The mining fever started him toward Leadville, Colo., the wind blew his ticket out the car window and he was put off at Kansas City. Waiting in a restaurant and selling rubber stamps, he earned enough to get back home.

Selling soap once more, at $10 a week, and married, he quit and started for Chicago, with $32 capital, to open a branch office. Merchants there could not make enough profit retailing the bars at five cents, therefore he raised the price to ten cents and gave the dealer an umbrella with every box. It won. Then he tried selling baking powder with a cologne bottle as a premium, and went broke. Next he gave gum as a premium, then sold it, using other premiums. Business boomed, but he kept on being his salesman, bookkeeper, packer and manager.

Advertising in the South was successful. Other fields also responded. Accumulating $100,000, he tried it in New York, but without effect. Saving another $100,000, he invaded Manhattan again, with no apparent result. Back off, he tried Buffalo, Rochester, Albany and other cities with success. Then he contracted in New York and gave gum samples away. Had the campaign failed he would have been ruined, but he succeeded.

Now Wrigley has gum factories in this and other countries, his product is sold all over the world, he is rich—and he never has worried.

"A man's doubts and fears are his worst enemies," he says.

Tomorrow — Bradford Still Was Thankful.

Stories That Recall Others

Getting the Habit

A woman friend dropped in the other evening to chat with the family. Conversation progressed finely for a time and prompted the visitor to tell a story that rather astonished the one to whom it was told.

"Where did you get that story?" was the promptly asked question.

"Oh, down at the barber shop, yesterday," was the nonchalant reply.

Physically Handicapped

Susanne had been punished for some minor misdemeanor and went about her play sullenly.

Finally she burst out with all the pent-up feeling her small frame could muster, and with clenched fists and gritting teeth delivered the following ultimatum to her amused parents.

"O I wish I had four feet and a tail —and long claws—and teeth sharp as nails—I'd eat you both up."

Mansfield Memorial Theatre

It is announced that Mrs. Mansfield, widow of Richard Mansfield, will turn over the Mansfield property on Ocean avenue, the Pequot, New London, for a theater, to be called the Mansfield Memorial Players Theater. Miss Ruth Mason, a talented actress plans to bring a company of well-known players and will produce plays worthy of the memory of Mansfield. It will be similar to the Theatre Guild of New York. Miss Mason has recieved the encouragement of Miss Anna Hempstead Branch, Mrs. Rosemary O. Anderson, Mrs. Augustus C. Tyler, Mrs. Horace C. Learned, Mrs. Joseph Hardwick and President Benjamin T. Marshall of Connecticut College, who is chairman of the Richard Mansfield Memorial Association. Several members of the college faculty and alumnae have also expressed a willingness to co-operate.

Gave Programme at Fair

Members of the A. M. E. Zion church spent a delightful time with the A. M. E. Zion church in New London one evening last week at their annual fair. Those in the party were Rev. and Mrs. Dixon Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Reeves, Prof. and Mrs. Geary, Mrs. Speed Evans, R. Jubrey, Mrs. Annie Deury, Miss Idela Scott, Miss Irene Gwathney, Mrs. Maria Sylvia and Miss Almyra Hall. A fine program was rendered by members of the choir under the direction of Prof. William E. Geary, taken from a part of the Easter cantata From Death Unto Life.

Mrs. Brown to Speak

A county meeting of the women's Federation of Windham county is to be held in the Community house at Plainfield Wednesday.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

You Poor Kid, Why Are You So Skinny?

Don't your mother know that Cod Liver Oil will put pounds of good healthy flesh on your bones in just a few weeks?

Tell her every druggist has it in sugar-coated tablet form now so that you won't have to take the nasty, fishy-tasting oil that is apt to upset the stomach.

Tell her that McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are chock-full of vitamines and are the greatest flesh producers and health builders she can find.

One sickly, thin kid, aged 9, gained 14 pounds in 7 months.

She must ask Lee & Osgood Co., or any good druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets—60 tablets, 60 cents—as pleasant to take as candy.

Get McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablet.

WEDDINGS

Rathbun-Johnson

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, 49 Union street, Norwich the marriage of their daughter, Anna Theresa and Benjamin Franklin Rathbun, took place at three o'clock Tuesday. The ceremony was performed under a large wedding bell by Rev. Dr. S. H. Howe, pastor of Park Congregational church in the presence of a number of friends and relatives.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Katherine E. Johnson. Floyd W. Thompson was best man. Miss Harriet R. Coit of New Haven played the wedding march.

The bride entered walking with her father, as the wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Miss Coit. The bride was attired in white satin-faced canton crepe, with brilliant trimmings. Her veil was caught in place with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and sweet peas.

Her bridesmaid wore peach crepe and carried pink sweet peas.

Mrs. Johnson, mother of the bride, was gowned in grey brocaded crepe.

The groom's gift to the bride was a string of pearls and the bride's gift to the groom was a gold scarf pin with aquamarine setting. She presented her bridesmaid a silver purse. The groom's gift to the best man was a gold fountain pen. The bride presented Miss Coit a gold fountain pen.

The bride received many beautiful and valuable presents, including cut glass, silver, china, linen, checks and gold, also furniture. A Navajo Indian rug from Arizona came as a gift from the groom's mother.

The house was beautifully decorated, the color scheme being green and white.

Mr. Rathbun and his bride left late in the afternoon, for a wedding trip by automobile to Maine and Canada. After June first, they will be at home to friends at their newly furnished cottage on Riverview avenue, Noank.

BURIED IN SAND PIT CAVE-IN AT ANDOVER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 29.—Michael Ladda of this city narrowly escaped serious injury this afternoon while working in a sand pit at Andover for the state highway department. The crew had been digging in the pit when the top of the bank suddenly caved in burying Ladda to the waist. Bert Doubeday, David Brown, Michael Conway and Arthur Nye, other members of the highway force, dug him out in a short time. To prevent possible fractures of the bones two of the men held his legs in a firm position while the others were digging. Ladda had barely been taken out of the pit when another cave-in occurred, the sand rolling over the spot carried a large tree stump with it. Ladda was uninjured and was able to continue his work.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. C. C. Bliven.

Mrs. C. C. Bliven died at her residence in Voluntown, April 26. She was born in Scituate, Rhode Island, May 4, 1857, the daughter of Bradford Briggs and Celia Ramsdell. She spent her childhood days in Voluntown. In 1878 she married Charles Courtland Bliven of Exeter, Rhode Island. They lived in Exeter a little over twelve years and then moved to Voluntown, living for sixteen years on the old Doctor Campbell farm about three miles out of the village, and the remainder of her life at the present Bliven residence.

She is survived by her husband, Charles Courtland Bliven, by three children, Mrs. Annie B. Andrews of Rockville, Mrs. Everett T. Tillinghast of Danielson, and Arthur C. Bliven of Jewett City, and by seven grandchildren.

During her early married life she joined the Baptist church at Exeter Four Corners, and since living at Voluntown, she has been an active and consistent worker at the Baptist church.

Death came quickly and unexpectedly after a period of failing health which had lasted several months.

Her passing from this life takes from a happy home circle an ideal wife and mother, and from the community a worthy woman whose kindly spirit was ever alert in the neighborhood in which she lived.

FUNERALS.

Mrs. William R. Mott.

Funeral services for Mrs. William R. Mott were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the parlors of C. A. Cantons from Willimantic, Providence, New London, and Danielson will send delegations and there is to be a big parade at 6 o'clock in the evening, previous to the degree work. All members will attend in full dress uniform and the affair promises to be one of the greatest of its kind ever held in Mystic.

At the meeting of Canton Oneco to be held at Odd Fellows' hall Thursday evening final arrangements will be made for the trip and a large number of members are expected to attend.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF BACKUS HOSPITAL SEEKING MEMBERS

The Woman's Auxiliary of the W. W. Backus Hospital launched its drive for memberships Tuesday evening at an enthusiastic meeting in the Community house, Church street. The membership drive is to continue one week. The meeting, which was open to the public, had a good sized attendance.

With Mrs. Walter H. Lester, president of the auxiliary, presiding, the meeting opened at 8 o'clock with the singing of one verse of America. Frederick W. Lester, treasurer of the executive board of the Backus hospital, at the organ. In her opening remarks Mrs. Lester said that human kindness is a religious duty. She told of the modern hospital being organized to succeed the Good Samaritan. The hospital of today, she said, has ever increasing demands on it. Thus comes the necessity and opportunity to serve it. In our city this services comes largely from individuals. Mrs. Lester explained briefly the aims and organization of the hospital auxiliary. She said the membership dues are one dollar a year and that a life membership is $25. For funds we depend on your generous support through the solicitation of memberships, Mrs. Lester concluded. The chairman of the various standing committees were called on to explain the duties and plans of the committees, which in brief were given as follows:

Committee Duties

Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, finance committee—The most important feature of this work is the formation of the budget.

Mrs. F. W. Lester, visitation committee—To arrange for visits to the hospital of various church hospital committees.

Mrs. Luther Packer, religious service committee—To see that each Sunday a religious service is held at the hospital. It must be a service that is helpful to all.

Mrs. Edith Young, publicity committee—Our purpose is to keep the public informed on the work and needs of the auxiliary.

Mrs. E. LaRue Bliven, donation committee.—Our purpose is not to solicit money, but we will gratefully accept anything of use to the hospital that is offered. Jelly, fruit, clothing, etc., are welcome. We plan to hold a donation day in the fall.

Mrs. Joseph P. Cummings, flower committee—To provide for the different wards at the hospital each week.

Mrs. Carl Brown, literature committee—We expect to have a fine library soon for the nurses. Just now we need magazines for the convalescing patients.

Mrs. Frederic W. Cary, secretary, speaking for the suburban committee.—The chairman of this committee has appointed suburban chairmen in Lebanon, Jewett City, Moosup, Gales Ferry, Preston City, Franklin, Lisbon, Central Village and Taftville. These chairmen are to have charge of the membership solicitations in their towns.

Mrs. E. W. Perkins, holiday committee—To provide cheer for those at the hospital each holiday.

Henry A. Tirrell, chairman of the hospital executive committee, was then presented by Mrs. Lester. The auxiliary is likely to be one of the best things that has happened for the hospital, said Mr. Tirrell. If the women of a community take hold of a thing it will go through. I congratulate you on your organization and hope it will prosper and increase in numbers. This increased force is going to prove valuable to the hospital.

Mrs. W. C. Burgy, accompanied by Mr. Lester at the organ, was heard in a soprano solo, Homing, by Del Riego.

The aims and accomplishments of the auxiliary to the Lawrence and Memorial hospital, New London, were then briefly presented by Mrs. M. E. Sherman, vice chairman of the New London auxiliary. We are proud of our Lawrence and Memorial hospital, said Mrs. Sherman. Our organization (the auxiliary) was founded ten years ago. Sewing meetings are held each month with an average attendance of 75. We have a reception committee to receive and introduce new members and in this way an atmosphere of harmony and cooperation is created.

Mrs. Sherman told of the activities of the various committees and departments of the auxiliary. The auxiliary membership, she said, has increased from 350 to over 500 in the past year.

Bridgeport Speaker

The speaker of the evening, Dr. John F. Bresnahan, superintendent of the Bridgeport hospital, was then introduced by Mrs. Lester. Your hospital will be exactly what the people of Norwich want it to be, said Dr. Bresnahan. Most of us never expect to use the hospital. Most of us look at the hospital as something for someone else to use. Can you have life in its full sense if you are not well? Can you have liberty if you are not well enough to get around. Can you have happiness if you are not well? No. The hospital is a repair shop for damaged human beings.

It makes a lot of difference as to the amount of interest you show in the hospital as to whether you want to use it yourself or expect someone else to use it. People in the olden days did not appreciate their physicians and the result was that they soon had no physicians. With reference to the need of hospitalization, Dr. Bresnahan said that probably some two hundred years from now the people will look back on our jails and prisons as we now look back on the methods of the insane asylum at Bedlam. People will realize by that time that many of those in our jails and prisons are suffering from some form of disease that needs hospital attention.

You must have trained nurses. Where are you going to get them? You can't have trained nurses without a good hospital and you can't have a good hospital without support. You can't have modern physicians without modern hospitals. You have one hospital here and everyone ought to be behind it. Dr. Bresnahan advocated a house to house canvass to secure memberships for the auxiliary. If you want good care for yourself and children when they need it, you must support the hospital, he said.

Miss Katherine Prindiville, superintendent of nurses at the Lawrence and Memorial hospital, spoke briefly on the work of several departments at the hospital. She told of the making of surgical dressings by auxiliary members. In conclusion she explained the object of the $300 scholarship which is to be awarded annually to the student nurse of the graduating class having the highest record.

Membership Campaign Plan

Miss Seregny, chairman of the work committee of the Lawrence and Memorial hospital auxiliary, described the activities of her committee after which Mrs. Allyn L. Brown, chairman of the membership committee of the Backus hospital auxiliary, explained the plans for the membership campaign which is to continue this week. Mrs. Brown said that the drive is to be thoroughly organized. Life memberships have been received so far without any solicitation. The town is to be canvassed in districts with the following in charge of the districts.

Greeneville, Mrs. Joseph P. Cummings; West Side, Mrs. Harry E. Higgins and Mrs. J. N. Rosenberg; Laurel Hill, Mrs. Harold S. Burt; Washington street, Mrs. Edmund W. Perkins; Norwich Town, Mrs. C. B. ## WAUREGAN LODGE PYTHIANS CELEBRATE 55TH ANNIVERSARY

Pleasure reigned supreme and joy was king at the 55th anniversary banquet of Wauregan Lodge, No. 6, K. of P., held Tuesday evening at Elks Hall. Nothing was left undone by the committee in charge of the big affair to provide for the entertainment of members and guests and to call the anniversary banquet a success would only serve to describe the affair in the most mild terms.

Shortly after 8 o'clock D'Atri's Blue Ribbon Orchestra, directed by Michael D'Atri, struck up the first strains of a popular medley and the Knights and the wives and guests gathered about the beautifully decorated tables. Concluding the medley the orchestra played America and the assemblage joining in the singing of the national song with heartiness.

It was an attractive picture when all were seated about the tables in the finely decorated hall to enjoy one of the best banquets ever served to the Knights of Pythias at an anniversary gathering. Table decorations were assorted cut flowers, arranged by Geduldig. The committee had promised a fine menu and this was served under the supervision of Harry Diachyshyn, manager of the Mohegan Restaurant, being specially prepared for the Knights by Chef Perfom, formerly with L. H. Saltzmann, New York, now with the Mohegan Restaurant. The menu was as follows:

Grape Fruit Cocktail
California Celery — Queen Olives
French Rolls
Turkey Gumbo Soup
Filet of England Sole
Sauce Remiade — Potato Rescelete
Roast Vermont Turkey
Chestnut Dressing
Potatoes au Gratin — French Peas
Cranberry Sauce
Neapolitan Ice Cream
Assorted French Pastry
Coffee — Cream

Following the banquet Chancellor Commander Harry Salomon welcomed the members and guests including Mayor and Mrs. Milo R. Waters, Past Grand Chancellor Thomas Troland of New London and District Deputy Grand Chancellor William J. Robinson of Jewett City and extended the greetings of Wauregan Lodge No. 6, to the anniversary banquet.

He then introduced Past Chancellor H. E. Parmarlee as toastmaster of the evening and Toastmaster Parmarlee called upon Milo R. Waters for a few remarks.

It is needless for me to say that I am delighted to be with you once again, said Mayor Waters. The first social occasion I attended as Mayor of Norwich was a banquet of Wauregan Lodge, No. 6, Knights of Pythias, held at Buckingham Memorial and at that time I told you I had enjoyed myself and only awaited another invitation to be with you—and I am here. At that time I told you that by pushing ahead you would more than double your membership, and I understand that this mark has been more than bettered in two years. I only hope I have been as successful in the past two years as Wauregan Lodge has been. Your lodge is a benefit to the community, an asset to the city. I congratulate you upon your success and hope that it might continue.

The second speaker of the evening was Past Grand Chancellor Troland, a former Norwich boy who spoke on fraternalism. The last time I had the pleasure of attending a Wauregan Lodge banquet, said Mr. Troland, His Honor, Mayor Waters was with us, and I am pleased to see him and his wife with us this evening. Wauregan Lodge has been a success, just as your mayor has said.

Our order is not young, it is 60 years old, born shortly after the Civil war when five men who read the ritual of the order, feeling that there was need in the world of the principles taught by Pythianism started the work, that has now spread throughout the land. We endeavor to teach friendship, the strongest bond that holds men together.

I love the order, and have the best times of my life when I am with Pythians. Before the days of New London lodge, Wauregan Lodge of Norwich was one of the most powerful in the state and the ritual work of the members was of the highest type. Night after night they came to New London to show us how Pythianism should carry on. In later years when Wauregan Lodge seemed to lag we of New London repaid a debt by doing all we could to bring it back, and today Wauregan Lodge is again a live lodge with a membership grown from 18 or 16 members to nearly 100. I hope soon to bring the present Grand Chancellor to Norwich to see for himself the wonderful work being done here in Norwich, my home city.

The last speaker was District Deputy Grand Chancellor Robinson of Jewett City who spoke briefly on the Social Side of Fraternalism.

Following the speaking, Vice Chancellor Adolph Henschel, chairman, announced the surprise of the evening, a cabaret put on by entertainers from Hartford.

The first number was a song and dance number by Pearl and Ruby Carpentier, who charmed their audience with a rendition of Swanee River. The second number was by Ruby Carpenter entitled, Oh! You-Son-of-a-Gun, being given in regular cabaret style with special lines dedicated to officers of Wauregan Lodge.

Trixie Pillar made several appearances during the evening in interpretative and jazz toe numbers her feature number being the Hawaiian Maidens dance in full island regalia of [illegible] Maids.

Later dancing closed the evening about midnight.

The arrangements for the 55th anniversary banquet and entertainment were in charge of a general committee as follows: Vice Councilor Rudolph Henschel, chairman, Master of Work, Dr. S. M. # ACADEMY WINS FIRST LEAGUE GAME FROM STONINGTON HIGH

Although they were outhit two to one by Stonington, the Academy baseball team won the first league game of the season from Stonington, 4 to 3, at Stonington on Tuesday afternoon. The game was close from start to finish the Academy boys having the advantage after the fourth inning. No small amount of credit for yesterday's victory is due to Ellie Segal, the Academy pitching ace. Segal fanned 13 of the Stonington hitters and it was his hit and wide-awake base running in the fifth inning that put the Academy into the lead.

Emmet, the Stonington moundsman, pitched a good game and although his strike-out record did not measure up to Segal's he held the Academy team to four scattered hits, and it was errors and poor judgment that lost the game for him. Foote the Stonington catcher was the heavy hitter for Stonington, getting a double and two singles in four times at bat. Kilroy with two infield hits led the Academy.

In the first half of the first inning the Academy went out in quick order Kilroy fanning, Burke grounding out and McGowan on a fly to the outfield. Stonington in their half managed to score one run. Segal fanned Chesebro the first man up, but Maine who followed him hit safely through the infield. Emmet drew a pass but Pupillo fanned. Kinney hit a sharp drive to right field that McNamara in wading through the soft mud dropped and Maine scored. Segal fanned the next man.

There was no more scoring until the fifth inning when, after two were out, Tombari hit sharply to Pupillo at third who threw wild to first, Tombari going to second. Segal hit a sharp single to right field scoring Tombari. Segal then stole second the throw hitting the baseman and rolling to the outfield. Segal made a dash for third but Pupilla let the throw get away from him and Segal scored.

There was no more scoring until the eighth inning although Stonington threatened in the last of the fifth when McCaffery singled and Hatfield walked. Foote hit a line drive to left field and McCaffery after rounding third attempted to make home but a perfect throw from Hinricks to Holender caught the runner at the plate. It was one of the prettiest plays of the game.

In the first half of the eighth inning Kilroy beat out his second infield hit and then stole second. Burke hit a slow blow down the first base line and Emmet chose to try for Kilroy at third but missed him. McGowan fanned and McNamara hit another slow roller to Emmet who threw to Foote at the plate. Kilroy slid under the ball but Umpire Metevier called him out. Burke went to third on the play. Hollander hit a sharp grass-cutter to McCaffery who booted the ball and then threw wild both Burke and McNamara scoring on the play. Busch fanned ending the inning.

The Stonington team made a desperate rally in the last half of the eighth but superb pitching by Segal cut short the rally after two runs were scored. Chesebro the first man up crashed out a long fly to center for two bases. Maine singled and Chesebro pulled up at third. Emmet popped to Burke. Pupillo after letting Maine go to second crashed the second double to left field scoring Chesebro and Maine. Segal settled down and fanned the next two hitters.

In the ninth the Academy went out in order, Stonington made their last stand but Segal made Stowell pop out after Foote had hit safely and Hatfield had fanned. Chesebro was an easy strike-out victim ending the game.

Dinty Kilroy and Busch performed well in the field. For Stonington Chesebro was the fielding sensation.

BULKELEY PLAYS WINDHAM TODAY AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 29.—The Bulkeley baseball team faces a busy week [illegible]mond this week. Two games [illegible] he Bulkeley schedule, and [illegible] be played at home. The first [illegible]ame Bulkeley will stack up [illegible] Windham High Wednesday afternoon at Morgan Park. The game will get under way at 3 o'clock sharp with Joe Cranker acting as arbiter. The second game of the week will be against the fast Naugatuck High nine on Saturday afternoon.

When the champions of the state last year take the field against Windham High Wednesday afternoon, it will be the third game this season. Bulkeley was successful in her first two games, piling up a total of 30 runs in these two contests, so when Windham travels to the Whaling City it will have to have a good pitcher to stop the hitting of the Orange and Black. The contest against Plainfield stands out prominently on the winning side of the Bulkeley ledger. After Chapman Tech lost to this team in the initial contest of the season for that nine at Plainfield, Bulkeley turned around and sent Plainfield back with a 17 to 2 drubbing to think about. Whatever doubt existed as to the best high school team—since the breaking of relations between the schools makes it impossible to compare the strength of either team through having the teams meet each other—shows that the Bulkeley team is favored over that of Chapman Tech.

Bulkeley was without a game last week and but two days of practice was had by the team. Tuesday afternoon the last practice was held before the contest with Windham. More attention was paid to batting practice than to fielding.

During the afternoon, Coach Robert T. Aldrich, who is back from his home in Vermont, had Dassy Parisi warming up. He will start the contest and Tillie Daniels will be held in reserve until the game with Naugatuck Saturday. When Parisi faces Windham Wednesday, it will be the third time within three years that he has opposed this team.

The rest of the Bulkeley lineup will be as follows: Hutchinson 3b, Tuttle 1b, Rice lf, Mansfield rf, Booth cf, Gaetano ss, Barry 2b, Shefcott c, Parisi p. It looks as though Sad Sam Tuttle will be a fixture on first base. His playing in the last two contests was good. The rest of the infield also handled themselves in a fine manner, making but a single error.

This game is thought to be the first of the season for the Windham outfit. Not much has been heard of the prospects of that team this year and just what opposition they will furnish Bulkeley with is left very much to one's own imagination.

CHICAGO BEATS DETROIT WITH EIGHTH INNING RALLY

Detroit, April 29.—Chicago defeated Detroit today, 6 to 4 behind Thurston's steady pitching despite a threatened ninth inning Tiger rally, featured by a home run by Wingo, pinch hitter. Dauss collapse in the eighth inning resulted in three Chicago scores. Thurston hit a home run in the ninth. The Tigers ran their double play record for the season up to 13. The score:

How It's Done in the Majors

By Frank Frisch, Fordham Star Base Player

Eight inning. The score is 6-2 in favor of the team in the field. None out. Opposing team has men on first and third. Batter hits a fly to center fielder.

After catching the ball where should the center fielder throw it?

As the team in the field has the advantage of a four run lead it should play safe and the center fielder should not bother about the man on third but throw the ball to second base to prevent the runner on first going to second. That would leave the score 6-3 with a man on first base.

This is done because the next man up may hit into a double play or if he did single it would move the man on first to third and there would still be the possibility of a double play to retire the side. In a situation of this kind, the fielding team should always play to make sure of one out it should not hurry its plays.

ALEXANDER WINS OWN GAME WITH A DOUBLE

Chicago, April 29.—Grover Alexander, making his first start at home for the season, smashed out a double in the 11th inning which enabled him to defeat Lee Meadows in a pitching duel. The score was, Chicago 2, Pittsburgh 1.

Alexander had great control, not walking a man, the visitors' only run resulting from Barnhart's single and a double by Wright. The score:

STRIBLING AND BERLENBACH WIN THEIR BOUTS

New York, April 29.—Young Stribling, Georgia's sensational contribution to the ring, gave Mike Burke, pride of Greenwich Village, a scientific boxing lesson in the six-round go of the Olympic fund boxing carnival at Madison Square Garden tonight. The youthful southerner completely outclassed his aged opponent in every one of the six rounds, launching an attack that gave him a clean cut verdict.

Stribling jabbed and hooked the opponent at will, chasing him around the ring from round to round. Burke resorted to holding on tactics but the Dixie boy countered with a vicious swinging attack that left its mark on Burke's face.

The picturesque southerner was master of the situation at all times and was never in trouble.

Paul Berlenbach, New York middleweight, found a tough mark in Harold Abbott of Rockaway Beach, who didn't know when to quit when he was virtually out on his feet. After battering Abbott with a relentless attack that floored him for the count of nine in the third round, Berlenbach followed up his advantage in the fourth round until the referee stopped the fight after one minute and 59 seconds of fighting.

Jack Zivic, Pittsburgh lightweight, won a judges' verdict over Ever Hammer of Chicago in a fame 10-round bout. Neither displayed a damaging punch. It was a slow bout.

In the fastest and most spectacular match of the evening, "Cannonball" Eddie Martin, Brooklyn bantam, and Charlie (Phil) Rosenberg of New York, fought a ten-round draw. Rosenberg appeared to have a slight advantage over his rugged opponent by employing a left jab, sandwiched in with a right cross, but Martin survived the attack. The verdict of a draw was exceedingly unpopular with the fans who hooted and jeered the decision at intervals during the remainder of the show.

ZEV DECISIVELY BEATEN IN HIS FIRST START

New York, April 29.—Making his first appearance under colors as a four-year-old, Zev, the Rancocas stables thoroughbred champion of 1923 and greatest money winner of all time, was decisively beaten today by St. James, George D. Widener's crack three-year-old colt, in the $6,000 Paumonok handicap at Jamaica track, opening feature of the metropolitan racing season.

St. James, whose victory boosted the stock of the Widener entry for the Kentucky derby next month, led his renowned rival to the wire by three lengths after leading most of the way. Zev, ridden by Earle Sande, made a gallant bid for victory but the advantage of 18 pounds in weight which the Rancocas star conceded to St. James proved too great a handicap to overcome. Zev packed the top weight of 130 pounds and St. James 112.

The Paumonok was the medium of Zev's first triumph as a three-year-old last season and sent that colt forward on a winning streak that has had few parallels in thoroughbred racing. Eight starters faced the barrier in today's race but the race was between St. James and Zev, Dunlin finished third. The time was 1:11 3-5 for the six furlongs.

LEONARD AND DUNDEE MUST DEFEND TITLES

New York, April 29.—The state athletic commission today fired the opening gun in its campaign to force titleholders to bring their fistic crowns out of "cold storage" every six months when Billy Gibson, lightweight champion Benny Leonard's manager, and James J. Johnston, representing featherweight champion Johnny Dundee, were summoned before the body to explain why they have not placed their titles on the market since last summer.

Gibson explained that the inability to find suitable opponents for Leonard was the reason for the lightweight titleholder's inactivity. However, he agreed to accept as an opponent for Leonard any lightweight the commission selected. It is likely that the champion will be signed to meet the winner of the Pal Moran-Luis Vicentini bout scheduled for Madison Square Garden next Friday night.

Johnston explained that Dundee is now managed by his brother, Charles Johnston, who will be asked later to explain why the featherweight king has not risked his crown despite several challenges.

The Massachusetts boxing commission notified the local body of its suspensions of Harry Greb, middleweight champion, and Kid Norfolk, colored middleweight, for unsatisfactory performances in a recent bout at Boston but did not request that this ban be applied outside of Massachusetts. Although Chairman Brower intimated that no action against these boxers would be taken here he said the Massachusetts board has been asked for details of the suspension.

An application for a license for the Polo Grounds A. C., signed by Charles A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, was tabled until complaints concerning alleged unsatisfactory seating conditions at bouts in the park last summer are investigated.

Cvengros Draws $200 Fine.

Detroit, Mich., April 29. — Mike Cvengros, pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, has been fined $200 by Manager Evers, for deliberately walking out of the box in Saturday's game with the Detroit Tigers, it was revealed today. Cvengros refused to pitch after the Tigers had scored five runs off of his delivery, walked out of the box and went to the club's hotel headquarters here it was learned.

Profs Shut Out Bridgeport.

New Haven, April 29. — Excellent fielding behind Loftus' fine pitching gave New Haven a 4 to 0 victory over Bridgeport today. The visitors got only one man as far as third base: Goff proved a hard hitter for the Profs. Score:

MOVEMENT ON FOOT TO HAVE THE RULE REGARDING WRITER PLAYERS REVIEWED

New York, April 29.—Reconsideration of the whole tennis player-writer question, leading possibly to a move to repeal the amateur rule interpretation which would bar from amateur ranks next year stars who profit substantially from their newspaper work may result from agitation stirred by the resignation of William T. Tilden and Vincent Richards from the Davis cup and Olympic teams.

Color to this prospect was given today by information that clubs and tennis organizations in many parts of the country, particularly in some sections of the east and middle west, were preparing to take the initiative in bringing about a review of the player-writer situation, which has shaken tennis circles as has no other controversial subject in years.

Typical of this movement was the action of members of the West Side Tennis club of Forest Hills, N. Y., one of the most prominent organizations in the country, in seeking a special meeting to register their opinions on the player-writer question. Although Louis Carruthers, president of the club, asserted the meeting, a date for which has not yet been set, was sought by members who favor as well as those who oppose the player-writer rule, it was learned the latter group sponsored the effort to have the organization's feeling put on record.

Similar steps, it was learned, have been taken by scores of other clubs, although as yet no official information of such action has reached the offices of the United States Lawn Tennis association, where, it was said, today, the reflection of opinion on the player-writer question was widely divergent.

No further steps are contemplated at present by the association, however, it was said today, nor are officials convinced as yet that sentiment is strong enough to warrant any change in attitude, but opponents of the new rule regard as inevitable an overhauling of the entire question within sufficient time to clear the status of Tilden and Richards as amateurs and pave the way for their return to international competition.

Richards' definite decision to follow the example of Tilden in resigning from the Davis cup and Olympic teams, although forecast by him several days ago in Philadelphia, did not become known until today when he said he had forwarded his resignation to Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the Davis cup committee of the U. S. L. T. A. Mr. Myrick, however, had not received this resignation late today and declined to comment upon it.

Tilden is Elated

Philadelphia, April 29.—William T. Tilden, 2nd., National Tennis champion, was elated tonight when he learned there was a possibility of a movement by tennis clubs for a review of the player-writer ruling of the United States Lawn Tennis association. He expressed the hope that the movement would gain sufficient momentum to bring about the repeal of the amateur rule interpretation of the U. S. L. T. A.

"I am delighted," said Mr. Tilden, "to know that a crystallization of sentiment of the tennis public on the player-writer rule seems imminent. I sincerely trust that some way out of the present difficulty in the association will be effected."

VIBBER WINS ROAD RACE AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 29. — Howland Vibber, by overtaking James Granata, Jr., in the last 200 yards of the junior road race held here last night, finished first in the heavyweight class, making the two and a quarter miles, more or less, in the fast time of 11 minutes and 55 1-5 seconds. James Granata finished second to the fleet-footed Vibber, coming about ten yards behind the Chapman Tech long distance runner. Granata's time was an even 12 minutes. In the lightweight class Clark Peck, a first year man, was the winner, completing the course, which was shorter than that traversed by the heavyweight class, in 11 minutes 15 2-5 seconds. Newton Smith was second, only four yards behind the winner, Harold Robinson was third.

The race from the very start developed into a hot battle for the lead. Vibber, the winner, however, let the other runners set the pace and was the last of the seven runners entered in the heavyweight class. Terry took the lead from Granata at the start but as the runners reached Bulkeley Place, marking off one-fourth of the course, Granata took the lead and was never headed until Vibber overhauled the Bulkeley junior about two hundred yards from mthe finish. At all times Granata led Vibber a good two hundred yards and at the half way mark at the corner of Connecticut avenue and Broad street, the gap between Granata and Vibber was slightly over 200 yards.

When the runners reached the half way mark they were pretty well strung out along the course. Before Granata began to weaken and Vibber to strengthen, Granata showed good form that seemed to indicate that he would be the eventual winner. The pace he set from the outset began to tell on him before the runners had reached the three-quarters mark. Coming down the home stretch there was a battle on between Granata and Vibber for first place. Just as the St. James church was reached, Vibber gave all that was in him for the final spurt. He cut in front of Granata just at the corner of Huntington and Federal streets and dashed in front of the Bulkeley runner. Granata was persistent and kept at the heels of Vibber as both broke into a sprint as they reached Meridian street a hundred yards from the finish line. Vibber broke the bunting a good ten yards in front of Granata. It was a pretty finish.

In the lightweight class Clark Peck, the winner just about finished. He had about 10 yards on Newton Smith in the home stretch, the youngster who finished second and the latter almost overtook the fagged out Peck. Smith made a good finish and came within four yards of catching up with the winner.

The results in a summarised form. The heavyweight class, first, Howland Vibber, time 11 minutes 55 1-5 seconds. Second, James Granata, Jr., time 12 minutes. Third, Joseph Skocaylas; fourth, John DeGange; fifth, Thomas Terry. The winners in the light heavyweight class, first, Clark Peck, time 11 minutes 15 4-5 seconds; second, Newton Smith; third, Harold Robinson; fourth, J. Brennan; fifth, Edgar Thomas.

Syracuse Beats Cornell

Syracuse, N. Y., April 29.—Coriolani Granai, pitching in rare form during all but one inning, won his own game for Syracuse against Cornell here today by lining out a double in the eighth inning which scored two runs. The score was 6 to 4.

The score by innings:

|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cornell | 0 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 3 | 0 | 0 | —4 |

Milligan, Harrington and Tome; Granai and Kerwin.

Hartford Beats Hillies in Ninth

Pittsfield, Mass., April 29.—Hartford scored four runs in the ninth inning and defeated Pittsfield 6 to 2 here this afternoon. It was a good pitchers' battle until the last inning, Snover fanned Gehrig three times, twice with a man on. Hesse's fielding featured. The score:

| | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Hartford | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1 | 1 | 0 | 4 | —6 |
| Pittsfield | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0 | —2 |

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BREED THEATRE

Opening today at the Breed theatre is Jackie Coogan's newest Metro picture, A Boy of Flanders, taken from Ouida classic, A Dog of Flanders, in which the starlet once more appears in the rags of poverty.

We really want you to know how much you will miss if you fail to see this film. It has a beautifully moving and poignant tale centering around a boy and a dog who are the victims of fate and cruel-hearted neighbors, and has been done with rare fidelity to the subject, locale, and appealing qualities of the story.

Jackie's dog pal in the picture is none other than the famous Teddy, the Great Dane who has appeared in countless films. He and Jackie had a wonderful time together during the making of the film play, and their actual friendship shows in the beauty of their devotion to one another in the scenes of hardship on the screen.

The Boy of Flanders will remain at the Breed for

HENRY HEWITT, A BARGE PILOT, DIES SUDDENLY AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, April 30.—Henry Hewitt, 73, employed as pilot of the barge G. A. Fagan, owned by the Romaine & Connors company of 17 Battery place, New York, dropped dead this forenoon while engaged in duties aboard the barge. Death was caused by heart trouble. Aboard the craft with Hewitt was his wife and so far as could be ascertained the victim had no other relatives.

Hewitt had been about the boat, which was discharging a cargo of sand at the pier of the Howard Street Coal company in Shaw's Cove and about noon decided to clean the deck. Taking a broom Hewitt went well forward and started to sweep dirt and sand from the boat. Mrs. Hewitt had knowledge that her husband was not as well as usual and on looking through the window of the cabin she saw the man lying on the deck. Summoning assistance from the boatmen and employes in the coal yard, Mrs. Hewitt went to her husband's aid, but finding Hewitt lifeless, death having been instantaneous. Medical Examiner Harold H. Heyer was notified and pronounced death due to heart trouble.

Mrs. Hewitt stated that her husband had been complaining for several days of not feeling well and prior to the arrival of the barge in port Sunday, her husband had showed symptoms of being far from well. Mrs. Hewitt stated that it was against her wishes that her husband consented to make the trip to New London because she was aware that his health was not such as it should be.

Mary Miedziowski, woman residing at 830 Main street, entertained Eugene (Tinker) Sullivan when she sold him liquor yesterday. That brought Mary into court this morning when she was fined $200 for violation of the Volstead act. But that was not all the loss Mary experienced for she lost by confiscation some twenty gallons of alcohol and a gallon more of booze that she might have sold for $35. To that expense was added the cost of trial. So Mary paid pretty well for her indiscretion. She pleaded guilty and said she did not care to make any statement.

All the business that came to the court today was through the liquor route. Theodore Reheiser was there for intoxication and the abuse of an old man whom he met on Bank street when he came ashore from a lightship where he has been employed of late. Reheiser has been without liquor there, but that gave him a thirst that he could not conquer and he lit the fires that even water would not quench here and loaded up. Reheiser was fined $10 and paid, by borrowing the money from another.

Two Colchester men, William Turaki and Peter Truken, got into a quarrel when they absorbed some of the refreshing beverage they got on coming to New London. They had been engaged in a real estate transaction at Colchester, the details of which were not satisfactory to the buyer, Peter, so when he met William on Atlantic street he criticised his action. Of course the men got into an argument and that led to blows, so that the police were called to separate them. The men were locked up. Judge Prince was considerate of them when he learned that the men were industrious farmers and were ashamed of what had occurred. The prosecutor recommended a nolle of the complaints and the court followed the suggestion.

The public schools of the city resumed sessions today after a holiday that began the day before Good Friday.

The condition of State's Attorney Jadlai A. Hull, ill at his home on Vauxhall street, many weeks, was somewhat brighter today than has been the case in a number of days. However, the attending physician did not consider this condition more than a temporary improvement.

Mrs. Albert Lamb of Mystic, William Shea of Bank street, Trebby Loring of Mystic, Mrs. John S. Savage and infant son of Bellevue place, James Copes, Saybrook and Morris Wein of Grand street, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

William S. Goldie has sold to Lucy B. and Cephas S. Ball a house and lot on Jay street.

Miss Harriet Emmerich, clerk in the probate court, has returned to her home on Connecticut avenue, having spent a fortnight in Southern Pines, N. C.

A fire that was burning briskly and threatened to cause damage, was discovered at 2.20 o'clock this morning in the cellar of the residence at 22 Berkley avenue, occupied by Miss Inez J. Blood and G. Adelaide Stillman. An alarm was rung in from Box 27, corner of Broad and Williams streets, summoning most of the city's fire fighting equipment. The blaze, which had gained considerable headway, was located among a quantity of inflammable material such as excelsior and wooden boxes. Streams of chemicals quickly subdued the fire, but not before a small section of the wooden interior of the cellar had been damaged. How the fire originated it is not known.

Funeral services for Miss Lillian Rice of 69 Hempstead street were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at 43 Shapley street. Rev. Sinclair Grimstead, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist church, officiated. Burial was in the Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. John O'Brien, of 17 Rogers street has returned home, having spent a fortnight in Toledo, Ohio, where she was the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Doherty.

Mrs. James P. Sullivan of Neptune Park is spending several days in New York.

Henry F. Bolz, formerly of Norwich, now of Groton, and Miss Margaret E. Herrington, daughter of Mrs. John E. Harrington of Asharafts road, were married yesterday at the rectory of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley. John Ryan of Waterbury was best man and Miss Alice Harrington, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Bolz are on a wedding trip and will reside at 17 Morse street, Groton. Mr. Bolz is a machinist at the plant of the New London Ship & Engine company.

Lieut. James E. Maher, U. S. N., stationed at the submarine base, has received orders transferring him to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis for special instructions in the engineering school.

One of the big motor trucks stationed at the submarine base and a touring car, owned by Mrs. Lelia Burrows, of Mystic, and operated by Jerome Northrup of 158 Lincoln avenue, this city, were in collision at the approach to the Thames river highway bridge last evening. The truck escaped damage, but the touring car did not fare so well.

Isadore Bolgrado, 773 Bank street, was ordered into the police court at its session to be held tomorrow morning by Prosecutor of the traffic bank.

Officer John Contrasy detected Bolgrado's automobile parked on Bank street for a period longer than 30 minutes.

An automobile in passing through State street late this afternoon caused one of the windows in the Gardield block to be broken when a tire of the machine threw a small stone against the window with sufficient force to break the glass. The building is owned by the Woolworth company.

John F. Gray, 65, of Ledyard, is missing from home and the New London police were requested into this afternoon to maintain a watch for the man, who is mentally unbalanced and, it is believed, will head toward this city. Gray disappeared from his home about 4.30 o'clock and when his disappearance was discovered his son, Leslie Gray, asked the local authorities to be on the alert, should the man show up in this city and cause his detention until a member of the family could come to New London and take charge of him. Gray has a ring with the initial "G" on it. He frequently calls upon the police for assistance whenever he strays away from home.

This afternoon a bicycle was stolen from the barn of A. C. Woodruff on Fremont street and then was sold to a boy for $4. The police this evening detected the thief and he admitted that he had the bicycle and had sold it to a boy named Ackley, at Poquonoc Bridge. The police took the culprit and another lad concerned with him to Poquonoc this evening and made arrangements for the return of the money Ackley gave for the wheel. The bicycle of a boy named Fogg, stolen yesterday, has also been recovered and with a third wheel is at the police station awaiting the owner.

A fox terrier was stolen from Robert Kelly Sullivan, 100 Blinman street Monday morning.

Mrs. W. H. Ackley, of 18 Adelaide street, has notified the police of the loss of a couple of bank books, in one of which there was a sum of money and a Christmas club book. There was cash in the book she mentions particularly.

Louis Elfenbein seems to have been within his rights when he secured permission to enclose the veranda of a house he recently purchased on Hempstead street, between Federal street and Bulkeley square, even though he provided for a garage within the enclosure erected. It was a sharp way of getting the permission sought, for nothing was said in the application that it was intended to construct the garage. He got the permission desired to add four feet to the veranda and that gave him the space he wanted for the garage. Councilor Whiton holds that there was deception practiced in getting the permission else Mr. Elfenbein would have asked for permission to construct a garage as well as to enclose the veranda. Then comes the statement that cottages have been erected at Ocean Beach without anything being said about garages, but when the cottages are completed the owners of them house their automobiles in the basement of the cottages. That is a fact not denied, and being so, it is not legally clear that Elfenbein did try to deceive. The city council was inclined to censure the building inspector for recommending the addition, as it is claimed that he realized before the work was completed just what the "enclosed veranda" was to be used for. The explanation has taken the sting from the censure, and all seems to be serene in the matter. The discussion of the case has brought about conditions wherein no applicant for permission to build or to alter will, in the future, be allowed to proceed until drawings showing the work to be done have been submitted with the application for the permission sought. There was such a rule in existence during the life of the old common council, but the modern body seems to have cast that aside.

MYSTIC

Scarlet fever has again broken out on the east side of the village, there being two cases at present, one patient being Dorrance Grimes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grimes of Misturet avenue, and the other Joan Farnham, young daughter of Rev. and Mrs. George L. Farnham, on Denison avenue. It is thought that the infection in this instance may have come from some of those who took part in the presentation of the play, Katcha Koe, at the Broadway school, last Thursday, there being cases of the disease among students of the Stonington High school, also the West Broad street school, in Pawcatuck. The official report from the state department of health issued Monday morning, April 28, at 10 o'clock reports 11 cases of scarlet fever in Mystic the previous week, also states that scarlet fever is epidemic at Pawcatuck. On Monday three more cases were reported, one of those being one of those noted above, and the other two being in Pawcatuck.

James A. Moran, fire insurance surveyor, of the Sanborn Map company, New York city, is in Mystic compiling a fire insurance map of the village, for the insurances companies of the United States. The work covers the construction of the buildings, hydrants, streets, types of roof, etc., and it will take about two weeks to complete the survey of the village on both sides of the river.

Harry B. MacKenzie, who has been confined to his home with tonsilitis for more than a week, is able to be about the house.

A delegation from the Epworth League of the Methodist church is planning to go to New London Friday evening to attend the Mohawk Trail Circuit League which is composed of all the Methodist churches in this district and which meets with the New London Methodist Episcopal church.

Miss Martha Kalm has returned to New Rochelle, N. Y., after spending the spring vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Kalm.

The service was in charge of Rev. J. M. McClellan, the pastor, and Rev. George P. Jones, pastor of the Baptist church in Old Mystic. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery.

MYSTIC PASTOR ACCEPTS CALL TO WASHINGTON

Rev. George L. Farnham, of Mystic, has accepted a call to the Cleveland Park Congregational church, Washington, D. C.

No artist can paint a self-made man as big as he thinks he is.

WESTERLY

In answer to a complaint, Fred Nowell, employed by David Novogrod, proprietor of the Central and Lyric moving picture houses on West Broad street, appeared at a special session of Stonington town court before Judge William A. Wilcox, in the Stonington town court room Tuesday morning. The complaint alleged that defendant had operated a moving picture machine involving the use of a combustible film more than ten inches in length, in a building used for public entertainment without having received a license therefore from the state police. Reading of the complaint was waived. Prosecuting Attorney George R. McKenna called as the first witness State Policeman Fred L. Caron, who testified that a complaint had been received in Hartford and Sergeant Gorgas had detailed him to investigate. Saturday afternoon the state policeman said he purchased admission to the Central theater and after being in the theater a short time went to the picture booth about 3.20 and asked the young man there if he had an operator's license, the man in the booth informing him that he had not and that he was employed by the owner. He directed that Mrs. Jessie Davison, assistant manager, send for the man who ran the place, and was informed that Mr. Novogrod had left a short time before for the other theater, a matter of some ten or fifteen minutes.

David Novogrod, the theater proprietor, testified that complaint had been made that the boy was an operator without a license. He stated that his regular operators were Grills and Fancher and that Saturday, between 2 and 4 o'clock, at the time of the visit of the state policeman, he had been called to the Lyric theater. At that time Nowell was not an operator but a helper who had been working for a year to learn the business and it was his intention to take an examination for an operator's license in a short time. This was an emergency case as the boy operated on no other occasion as he came in on Saturdays, Mr. Novogrod said, and he would not have been absent the twenty minutes if he had not been called to attend the other theater.

Prosecuting Attorney McKenna said that intention had been shown to have licensed operators and Nowell was going to take examination for an operator's license in a short time. No wilful violation of the law had been shown; he thought the state could accept a nolle, with payment of costs.

Judge Wilcox ordered the case nolled with the payment of costs. The costs amounted to $13.48 which were paid. A short recess was then taken by the court.

Walter Taylor, whose place in the town of Stonington was raided a week ago Saturday by Connecticut state police and 18 barrels of cider seized and locked up in the Liberty street jail, Pawcatuck, appeared in Stonington town court represented by Attorney Thomas M. Shields of Norwich. A special plea of abatement in the case was entered by Attorney Shields for alleged defect in the citation. Prosecuting Attorney McKenna requested that the appeal be overruled and a bond taken. Attorney Shields argued that as this, under the circumstances, was not a criminal case, but a civil one, the bond be nominal, say $50, the proceedings to be in common pleas court. In answer to question by Judge Wilcox, Attorney Shields said that he represented Walter Taylor, also his wife. Prosecutor McKenna thought the bond should be $100.

Judge Wilcox overruled the appeal and fixed bonds at $200, in which Mrs. Eliza Taylor, wife of Walter Taylor, was recognized as surety The special plea in abatement sets forth that there was a technical error in the service of the summons.

Court was adjourned by Court Officer McMahon at the conclusion of the two cases.

Superior court for Washington county resumed session in the April term at the court house at West Kingston Tuesday morning, Judge Edward W. Blodgett on the bench. The case of the state vs. Thomas Fisher in which a change of venue was asked on last Wednesday was the first case taken up. Assistant Attorney-General John P. Hartigan stated that attorneys had agreed to a hearing of the request to have the trial taken out of the county. This is the case in which Attorney Benjamin Ciampi arujo of Providence, representing Fisher, last Wednesday morning asked that the case be removed to another county for trial because of the local prejudice by reason of newspaper accounts of the case.

Fisher was indicted on three counts charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, the complainants being Theodore Lawton and Dr. Alexander L. McDonald of Wakefield and John I. Way, a prohibition agent. The alleged assault is said to have taken place in Wakefield Oct. 20. Judge Blodgett said he would take the papers and reserve decision.

The jury was impanelled in the cases of Nathan C. Richmond vs. Frank A. Green and Alice M. Richmond vs. Frank A. Green, which are to be tried jointly. The jury chosen comprised Harry Clerk and Byron Gould of South Kingstown; Thomas S. Walsh and Harrison Gardiner of North Kingstown; Welcome C. Ennis, Charles A. Dion and Benjamin C. Richmond of Westerly; John J. Hallander, Frederick A. Bailey and Leon Ashfield of Hopkinton; Everett L. Cahoon of Richmond, and Fred E. Northup of Narragansett. Mr. Bailey of Hopkinton was chosen foreman.

Attorney Clarence E. Roche, counsel for the plaintiffs in the two cases, stated to the jury that these cases grew out of an accident which happened in Davisville, town of North Kingstown, Feb. 6, 1924, and the plaintiffs would show that Mr. and Mrs. Richmond were on their way from a store on Main street, Davisville, to their home, when a machine owned by the defendant came along and struck the plaintiffs, causing injuries. Mr. Richmond was running a wheelbarrow containing grain at the time and he was accompanied by his wife. The plaintiffs allege that the defendant was carelessly driving his machine on the left hand side of the street at the time of the accident and the automobile was not lighted. Attorney Jack of Providence represents the defendants. All of the parties concerned in the suits be out in the town of North Kingstown.

Miss A. E. Chard of Providence has been a business caller in Westerly this week previous to a visit to Norwich next week.

Many Westerly fans attended the Norwich Academy-Stonington High school baseball game in Stonington on Tuesday afternoon which resulted in a 4 to 3 victory for the Norwich boys.

A late purchase of handsome suits, plainly tailored models in long line effects. Plain colors and hair line stripes are the favored colorings, together with checked fabrics, and the assortment, though not large, gives ample room for choosing.

SILK FROCKS WHICH DELIGHT THE EYE AND CHARM THE POCKETBOOK

This is an offering unusual in its character and scope, and must be taken advantage of on Wednesday. About fifty dresses are offered, a group of extraordinary values, in Flat Crepe, Satin Canton, and a very few choice wool frocks, in sizes from 18 to 46. This is a little mid-season clean-up, and represents a considerable sacrifice on our part. Buy that frock Wednesday..... $10.00

NECKWEAR NOVELTIES
Which Challenge Your Attention

Almost barbaric in their colorings, they savor more of the Orient than they do of rock ribbed New England. For that very reason, perhaps, they have met with instant favor, and everywhere these flaming bits of color gladden the eye.

There are scarfs of Crepe de Chine, or of exquisitely printed soft silks with Crepe de Chine border—
From $1.75 to $4.75

There are Batik scarfs of odd design and gay silk Bandannas in wide variety—
From $1.75 to $3.50

Knitted scarfs in charming array present all of the season's best colorings for your choice—
From $2.37 to $7.50

Quaint Little Handkerchiefs
25c to 50c

They made them to match the scarfs in some cases—not very practical but very pretty. Crepe de Chine in Spring colorings, Pongee handkerchiefs and some very striking Batik handkerchiefs add definite color notes to the Spring costume.

MARKET REACTIONARY.

New York, April 28.—Stock prices continued to lose ground in today's market on selling inspired by reports of poor trade conditions in several important industries.

Speculative uncertainty over the dividend action of the U. S. Steel Corporation directors, who met after the market closed, had a tendency to restrain trading. The declaration of the regular dividend of $1.25 and an extra dividend of 50 cents on the common, together with total earnings of $46,575,445, was about what most brokers expected although the showing made by some of the independent companies in the first quarter had led some bullish enthusiasts to predict earnings of $56,000,000 and an extra of 75 cents or $1.

Fluctuations of U. S. Steel common during the day were rather erratic, the stock opening 5-8 lower at 98 1-2, moving up to 98 3-8 later and then see-sawing until it finally touched 98 in the final sale. Heaviness also cropped out in the independent steels, Bethlehem, Gulf States and Republic closing at net losses of 3-4 to 1 1-4.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe was again one of the individual features. It opened 1-4 lower at 91 5-8, slipped steadily to 89 and then bounded upward to a new high record for the year at 94 1-2, only to fall back again to 90 3-4 for a net los of nearly 1 point on the day.

Three companies in which special dividend action was expected today disappointed Wall street prophets. They were the Hayes Wheel Company, which declared the regular dividend of 75 cents instead of placing the stock on a $4 basis as many had predicted; the Punta Alegre Sugar Company, which declared the regular dividend of $1.25 although optimists had looked for a higher rate and the Wabash Railroad, which failed to take any action on the preferred A stock resumption of dividends on which has been widely discussed because of high current earnings.

Hayes Wheel, which opened at 37, broke to 32 1-2 on the announcement of dividend action, rallying later to 33 1-4 for a net loss of 3 3-4. Punta Alegre Sugar sold 1 1-4 lower at 56 5-8. Wabash preferred A, which has sold as high as 47 3-4 this year, closed at 45 for a net los of 1 1-2 points on the day.

Selling pressure was particularly effective in the motors, textiles and sugars, but many of these issues closed above their low prices of the day. Chicago Yellow Cab broke 6 1-2 points to 41 and then rallied to 43; Yellow Cab broke 5 1-2 points to 50 1-2 and then moved up to 52 7-8 while net losses of 1 to 2 points were recorded by American Woolen, Studebaker, Mack Truck, Pierce Arrow preferred and Stewart-Warner.

With few exceptions, the active rails were again reactionary. Heaviness of the Erie issues in the face of a good quarterly earnings statement was attributed to reports that April gross was running below March, the preferred issues losing about a point on the day. Lehigh Valley, "Nickel Plate," New Orleans, Texas and Mexico and Atlantic Coast Line closed 1 to 3 points lower.

Call money opened at 3 3-4 per cent, advanced to 4 1-2 where it closed. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges held firm on quiet trading. Demand sterling ruled nearly 1-2c higher, around $4.33 1-2 and French francs were quoted just under 6 1-2 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, April 28.—Bond prices lagged in dull trading today, with a sudden stiffening of money rates depriving the market of the motive for recent buying power.

The reaction which this change wrought in United States government bonds unsettled other sections of the list, with scattered recessions taking place in foreign, railriad and industrial liens.

Constructive activities were centered almost entirely in Serbian 8s, which forced ahead to a new high level for the year at 82 1-2. Bankers were inclined to credit the movement to continued reports of better conditions in Jugo Slavia.

Wilson and Company issues again were conspicuously weak, the convertible 6s dropping four points to a 1924 record low and the other liens yielding 1 to 3 points. A decline in Punta Alegre Sugar 7s reflected disappointment over declaration of only the regular dividends.

A good demand was repored for the $40,000,000 Dutch loan and several other important bond issues which were offered today.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, April 29.—With month and liquidating sales apparently about over and with the season for crop damage near at hand, the wheat market today scored a material advance in price. There was free buying on the part of traders who were short. Closing quotations were firm, 2-4 to 1c net higher, May $1.03 3-4 to $1.03 7-8 and July $1.05 to $1.06 1-8. Corn finished at 1-8c decline to 1-4c gain, oats at 1-4c off to 1-8@1-4c advance, and provisions ranging from 5c setback to a rise of 10c.

At first the bulk of the wheat trading consisted in changing over from May delivery to July or from July to May, with uneasiness continuing as to the outlook for farm legislation at Washington. Later in the day, however, attention shifted a good deal to the view that the market had shown stubborn resistance to selling pressure, although May deliveries were less than 45 hours distant. In this connection it was asserted by a leading authority that under such circumstances anything disturbing in the way of crop news of lack of new crop hedging could easily carry the market upward.

Estimates that one million bushels had been taken at the seaboard for shipment to Europe, chiefly Canadian wheat, tended further to lift Chicago wheat prices during the last part of the day. On the upturn in values, the demand from shorts and commission houses broadened decidedly and the marke tclosed at nearly the top figures reached.

Eastern buying of the July delivery of corn helped to bring about a rally in corn values, and so, too, did the display of strength in wheat. Oats reflected the action of corn.

Provisions averaged higher owing to scarcity of offerings.

CURB MARKET.

New York, April 29.—Heaviness gave way to irregularity in today's relatively quiet curb market.

Oils were in supply at the opening but stiffened later on improved trade reports. Fluctuations in the high grade shares were rather narrow, Standard Oil of Indiana closing unchanged at 58 1-8, Prairie Oil and Gas, closing a point higher at 221 1-2 and the other issues showing mixed fractional changes.

A gain of more than one point in Dubilier Radio and a los of 1 point in Lehigh Valley Coal certificates were the outstandinr developments in the industrial group. Public Utility issues held firm on quiet trading.

Kingdom of Netherlands external six per cent. bonds of 1954 were admitted to trading on th ebond market, but there were no sales.

Russian Cathedral Male Quartette Here 4th of May

Rare Musical Program Will Be Given Sunday, May 4th

Music lovers in this city and vicinity are looking forward with unusual interest to the rare treat to be afforded on Sunday, May 4th, in Community House, when Russian Cathedral Male Quartette of New York City, will present an artistic program of Russian and American songs. Programme will be given by representative Russian artists, and it is expected that the hall will be filled on that afternoon and evening.

The Company to appear here have been proclaimed the most unique of their kind in the world and since their arrival in this country their program of Russian Church, Operatic, Classical and Folk Song compositions have been most excellently received in the larger cities.

Tickets can be obtained at The Cranston Co. on Broadway, and at The Talking Machine Shop—$1.15, Including Tax.

READ

Editorial in The Lewiston Evening Journal, Thursday, March 6, 1924, Lewiston, Maine

"THE COVERED WAGON"

The film story—The Covered Wagon—which has just closed at one of our theatres in Lewiston is more than a picture; it is a Psalm, an Epic, a Battle Cry of Freedom.

There is not a blot on the tale as told. It is serene, as strong and powerful, almost, as the Book of Exodus.

This picture ought to be shown to every school child in America (native-born or alien-born, it makes no difference); for it tells a story of how America was made. Does your son or daughter take America as he or she finds it? If so let them see this Epic and Prayer combined and learn who gave them their heritage.

Wonderful. Wonderful the mingling of men and women in this story of primitive hardship, danger, courage, faith and fight. Wonder, this simply-told story of 2,000 miles by Covered Wagon to found a Nation by the Plow. One's heart thrills to things that these men and women, fair maidens and resolute youth, aged mothers and infants born beneath the wagon top were founders. "These were Americans."

What may I do to be worthy of them?

"The Covered Wagon" will be shown at the Palace Theatre, Norwich, beginning Sunday Evening, May 4th, at 7:30 p. m., twice daily thereafter, 2:30 and 8:15. Seat sale opens tomorrow at 10 A. M. at Box Office. Mail orders now.

Symphony Orchestra en tour.

JEWETT CITY

Old Cluey Watson came over to town Tuesday afternoon with his pockets stuffed with bulletins. He said after reading the reports about the Danielson columns about the strange and fierce animal that had been seen up there, that he simply stand it any longer. If this (Wednesday) morning's Bulletin tells nothing of the varmints having been run to earth, he will go right up and straighten things out.

First off, he went up to Tracy's and bought two pounds of powder and three bars of solder. Here it might be explained that Old Cluey makes all the bullets for his old muzzle out of solder. The reason for this is, that at the time the bullet gets to the game, it is partly melted, and in an animal the size that this one must be, it will make a hole about the diameter of a nail keg. The old man expresses satisfaction that there is a footprint to see, and as he can tell the track made by any animal this side of the Rockies, he is certain that he will be able to determine the species, and then load his gun accordingly. He said late Tuesday evening that he rather leaned to the kangaroo

TAFTVILLE

The death of Mrs. Antonia Patrylo Lukoff, 33, wife of Nicholas Lukoff, occurred Tuesday morning at the Backus hospital, Norwich, where she had been a patient for several weeks. Mrs. Lukoff was born in the Ukraine, Russia, and came to this country when a young woman, having resided in Taftville for the past 15 years. Although of a quiet nature and a woman whose first thoughts were for her home, she had many friends in the village, whose sympathy goes out to the bereaved family. She is survived by her husband, and two children, Florence and Peter. There is also a brother in Hallville and one in Blackstone, Mass.

Wilfred Lavalle of the Norwich State Hospital spent Tuesday with friends in the village.

conference was held on ... evening at the Taftville Congregational church with Acting Superintendent Victor H. Davis presiding. After a business session, refreshments were served by the members of Miss Elsie Heap's class.

NORWICH TOWN

The first quarterly conference is to be held Friday evening, at 7.30 o'clock, daylight saving time, at the First Methodist Episcopal church.

All services at this church are to be held on daylight time throughout the summer, by general consent of the members of the parish.

At the Sunday morning worship the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich, preached from Romans 8:28. And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. Mrs. Richard Carter was the leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening. The topic was, What Opportunities Do Missions Offer For Life Service? In his evening sermon, Rev. Mr. Aldrich spoke from John 15:15, Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in My Name, He may give it to you.

Four Summer Colors Announced

The four colors selected by the National Garment Retailers' Association for the new summer and sports apparel season were announced this week. They are: Titian sand, citrina, ruby red and shrimp pink. Titian red, known as Maya on the latest color card of the Textile Color Card Association, is a reddish brown and is suggested for coats, suits and skirts. Citrina is a bright yellow for dresses, blouses, sports wear, knitwear and bathing suits. Shrimp pink is the cameo pink shade appearing on the color card. It is primarily a sports wear color, as is ruby red, which is a deep red.

NEW BELTING COMPANY HERE EQUIPPING CHESTNUT ST. PLANT

The Connecticut Belting Company was incorporated Tuesday, at the office of Judge Arthur F. Libby, with an authorized capital of $40,000.

The officers and directors are: Ernest L. Baldwin, president and general manager; Francis H. Stager, vice president and Stanley M. Kingsbury, secretary and treasurer. The new company has leased the upper part of the Rogers building at 98 Chestnut street, where machinery and equipment are now being received, and will soon begin operations. It is expected that it can begin operations in about two weeks.

Mr. Baldwin came to Norwich from New York about three years ago as vice president and sales manager for the Ulmer Leather company. He is widely known in the leather belting trade and has built up a large circle of friends and acquaintances here. Mr. Stager was superintendent of the Ulmer Leather company and has been well known in Norwich for twenty years or more. Mr. Kingsbury was connected with the Graton & Knight company, large leather belt manufacturers of Worcester, Mass., and was later in the leather business manufacturing business near Worcester. He will establish his home in Norwich as soon as he can make arrangements here.

The company is well financed, and with its strong organization, should become one of the city's permanent and successful industries.

ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE NORTHFIELD CLUB

The New London Northfield club held a meeting Saturday afternoon in the parlors of the First Baptist church, in that city, from 3 to 5 o'clock. Miss Fannie C. Hatch, Alumnae Secretary, was present, and presided at the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Miss Maude E. Allen, Norwich; vice president, Mrs. Richard J. Whitham; secretary, Miss Jennie G. Perkins, Gales Ferry; treasurer, Miss Charlena Elliott New London. After singing Northfield the Beautiful, Miss Hatch brought greetings from the Seminary, showing pictures of the Campus, and telling of its many improvements. As she talked most interestingly of familiar faces at the school, and places dear to every Northfield girl, giving glimpses into the lives of other Northfield girls, those present relived the happy days spent there, and the time was far too short to ask the many questions that arose. A beautiful bouquet of arbutus was presented the girls, picked and brought direct from Northfield by the speaker. A cordial invitation was given to each girl to return for commencement, June 6-9, and the celebration of the 45th anniversary of the school. Refreshments of cake and ice cream were served during the social hour.

Those present were Miss Charlena Elliott and Miss Lois Gordon, New London; Miss Nellie M. Comstock, Ivoryton; Mrs. Dwight C. Stone, of Stonington; Mrs. Harry E. Langworthy, Mrs. William W. Goff, Mrs. May Collins Chadburn, Mrs. Ralph Catlin, Miss Ruth Taylor, Westerly; Miss Jennie G. Perkins, Gales Ferry; Miss Nellie J. Starr, Uncasville; Mrs. Geo. H. Lincoln, Oakdale; Miss Blanche V. Smith, Franklin, Mrs. Richard M. Harding and Miss Maude E. Allen, Norwich.

WILLIMANTIC MAN TAKES BRIDE IN CHICOPEE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Chicopee, Mass., April 29—An event of considerable social interest in Chicopee took place this morning at 9 o'clock when Miss Mabel Lillian Nantais of Ames avenue became the bride of Philip Cote, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Cote of Willimantic, Conn., at a solemn high nuptial mass in the Church of the Assumption.

Miss Nantais is well known in Chicopee, having served as private secretary in the office of the mayor during the administration of Mayors William J. Dunn, Daniel J. Coakley, James E. Higgins and Joseph M. Grieo. She was born in Chicopee, was graduated from the Assumption Parochial school, the Chicopee High school and Springfield Business College. Mr. Cote secured his education in Willimantic and served with the Intelligence branch of the army overseas. He is now connected with a Springfield firm.

WILL PREACH GOSPEL OF "EAT MORE FISH"

The State Board of Fisheries and Game announces that it has secured the services of Mrs. Evelene Spencer, expert in fish cookery, and connected with the United States Bureau of Fisheries, for the month of May. She will spend the month in Connecticut and be available for talks before clubs, schools and granges and any groups of housewives or potential housewives.

Mrs. Spencer began preaching the gospel on "Eat More Fish" during the war when she was working for Mr. Hoover and now she goes on stimulating the languishing fish consumption of the present day.

She will be in and about Hartford until the 15th of May and then make a tour of the Sound cities and their neighboring towns. Mrs. Spencer will give radio talks from Storrs station on the evenings of the 5th and 6th of May.

CONVENTION FOR DEALERS IN SELF-SEAL TUBES

The H. W. Allyn Rubber Corporation, the new Norwich industry that manufactures the self-seal leak proof inner tubes in the factory at 18-28 Thames street, is to hold a dealers and salesmen's convention here today (Wednesday) which will be attended by all members of the organization. The men are to meet at the Wauregan hotel at 10.45 and go from there in a body to make an inspection of the plant, where all the processes of the manufacture of the tubes will be shown.

A demonstration of the tube will be given on Union square at 12.45 which will be followed by a dinner at the Wauregan house at 1.15. All times are daylight saving.

Elected School Superintendent

Carl E. Parsons of Old Lyme, a graduate of Williams, has been elected superintendent of schools in the school union of Templeton, Hubbardston, Boylston and Phillipston, Mass. Mr. Parsons will succeed Asa M. Jones, who has accepted a similar position with the Brookfield district.

NORWICH APPEAL ARGUED BEFORE SUPREME COURT

An appeal taken by the town of Norwich was the first case argued before the supreme court when it opened its May term here Tuesday morning in the superior court room with Chief Justice George W. Wheeler presiding and Associate Justices Beach, Curtiss, Keeler and Marvin on the bench, the last named sitting in place of Justice Burpee who is sick.

The Norwich case was an appeal from a decision against the town in a suit against the Shore Line Electric Railway company over repairs made to the planking of the so-called Preston bridge over which the trolley tracks run. The town made a claim for $1,649.89 against the trolley company for the repairs to the planking between the tracks and for two feet outside but the trolley company claimed that it was chargeable only for eight inches, instead of two feet, outside the tracks. On this basis the amount to be charged would be $549.96, which Judge George E. Hinman found was the amount to be paid by the receiver of the company.

The point at issue is whether the grace for which the trolley company is to pay for repairs is the part covered by a contract made with the Norwich & Westerly street railway under the statute, section 3837, revision of 1902, which specified two feet outside the rails, or whether the space is to be measured by Chapter 214, Public Acts of 1921, which made the space eight inches.

The appeal was argued for the town by H. H. Pettis, corporation counsel, and Attorney C. L. Stewart, and for the trolley company by Attorney C. B. Whittlesey.

Deed Measurements Involved.

The appeal of the Corticelli Silk company in a suit against Jacob R. Slosberg of this city and others was argued by Attorney Frank L. McGuire for the silk company and by Attorneys E. W. Perkins and J. J. Desmond for Mr. Slosberg. This was a suit for the reforming of a deed to a lot off South Golden street, which the silk company sold to Mr. Slosberg, but by mistake one measurement of the lot was given as 75 feet instead of 60 feet, the effect of which was to include a portion of the silk mill building. The case was tried before Judge Hinman who gave judgment for Mr. Slosberg.

Damages in Auto Accident.

The appeal of Henry F. Fritz of Stonington in a suit against Darius G. Gaudet and Victor Satti, two motor bus drivers of Groton, was also heard. Attorney B. H. Hewitt appeared for Mr. Fritz. There was no appearance for the defendant Gaudet but Attorney George R. McKenna appeared for Satti.

In the trial of the case in the superior court before Judge Wolfe and a jury Fritz lost his suit for $5,000 damages against both defendants. A non-suit was granted against Satti and the jury gave a defendant's verdict in the suit against Gaudet.

Fritz was injured Nov. 14, 1919, while a passenger in the Gaudet bus on Thames street, Groton, where the bus upset as the Satti car was passing it from the rear. The claim of the plaintiff was Satti was to blame because he failed to give the Gaudet bus room enough as he was passing and that Gaudet was to blame because he turned his car sharply to the left just at this time and caused his left front wheel to strike the Satti car. Fritz was riding in the Gaudet bus, sitting on a camp stool in the middle of the aisle and he was buried under the pile of other passengers who fell on him. He received cuts in the head and leg and a badly sprained shoulder.

On Claim For Services.

The last appeal argued Tuesday was plaintiff's appeal in Robert H. Appleby of Old Lyme vs. Robert Hull, executor of the will of Augusta M. Clark of Old Lyme. He sued on a claim for $2,640 against the woman's estate, based on an alleged agreement that she made with him to pay him $100 per month as caretaker of her homestead, of which $40 was to be paid in cash monthly and the balance to be paid by a provision that she was to make in her will, which she failed to do. Appleby rendered the services until Mrs. Clark died in June 1, 1922, when he claimed there was $2,640 due him. The case was tried before Judge Wolfe and a jury which gave a verdict for the defendant executor.

Attorney C. H. Hull argued the appeal for the plaintiff and Attorney A. T. Keefe for the defendant.

Submitted on Briefs.

The contested will case over the will of Theophilus M. Allyn of New London, which came before the supreme court on reservation, was submitted on briefs by Attorney A. T. Keefe for James E. Snow, administrator, and Mary E. Allyn, Attorney John Cullinan of Bridgeport for Marie H. Allyn, and Judge William Belcher, attorney for Ida A. Daboll, executrix of the will. The court is asked to construe the will.

Taken to New Haven.

On a motion by Attorney A. T. Keefe, counsel for the defendant, Frederick Colt Wight of New London, who had taken the appeal to the supreme court, the appeal in Harry H. Lee, individually and as trustee, vs. Benjamin H. Lee, executor et al., appeal from probate, was transferred to the June term of the supreme court in New Haven as the appeal is not printed yet. The same action was taken in the appeal in the suit of Frederick Colt Wight as administrator and individually vs. Harry Mower Lee of New London, trustee, appeal from probate.

Court came in at 9 a. m., standard time, and adjourned at 3.30, standard time, to come in again at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning to complete the business of the docket.

PREMATURE OLD AGE OF WOMEN

It is no secret that so many women suffer from ailments peculiar to their sex. Dark circles appear under the eyes, a pale, drawn haggard expression to the countenance, and the weakness which accompanies such ailments is evidenced by the lagging step, headaches, backache and nervous conditions. Every woman who is afflicted in this way should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which for half a century has been overcoming some of the most stubborn ailments of women.

POETRY

By Hoodo

Alst well I love these books of mine,
That stand so trimly on their shelves
With here and there a broken line
(Pat quarter" spelling "modern "reserve.")
A curious company, I own—
The poorest ranking with their betters;
In fact—a thing almost unknown—
A Pure Democracy of Letters.

A motley gathering are they—
Some fairly worth their weight in gold;
Some not too good to throw away;
Some scarcely worth the place they hold.
Yet well I love them, one and all—
These friends so meek and unobtrusive,
Who never fail to come at call,
Nor (if I scold them) turn abusive.

If I have favorites here and there,
And, like a monarch, pick and choose
I never meet an angry stare
That this I take and that refuse;
No discords rise my soul to vex
Among these peaceful book relations,
For envious strife of age or sex
To mar my quiet lubrications.

And they have still another merit
Which otherwhere one vainly seeks;
Whate'er may be an author's spirit,
He never uninvited speaks;
And should he prove a fool or clown,
Unwarth the precious time you're spending,
How quickly you can "put him down,"
Or "shut him up" without offending.

Here pleasing light—the touchy brood
Of critics from dissension cease;
And stranger still!—no mote at feud,
Polemics smile and keep the peace.
See! side by side, all free from strife
(Save what the heavy page may smother)
The gentle "Christians" who in life
For conscience' sake had burned each other.

I call them friends these quiet books,
And well the title they may claim,
Who always give me cheerful looks
(What living friends has done the same?)
And, for companionship, how raw,
As these, my cronies ever present,
Of all the friends I ever knew
Have been so useful and so pleasant?

Spring Morning

Where am I going? I don't quit know;
Down to the stream where the king-cups grow—
Up on the hill where the pine trees blow—
Anywhere, anywhere. I don't know.

Where am I going? The clouds sail by,
Little ones, baby ones, over the sky.
Where am I going? The shadows pass,
Little ones, baby ones, over the grass.

If you were a cloud, and sailed up there,
You'd sail on water as blue as air;
And you'd see me here in the fields and say:
"Doesn't the sky look green today?"

Where am I going? The high rocks call;
"It's awful fun to be born at all!"
Where am I going? The ring doves coo:
"We do have beautiful things to do."

If you were a bird and lived on high,
You'd lean on the wind when the wind went by You'd say to the wind when it took you away:
"That's where I wanted to go today!"
Where am I going? I don't quite know,
What does it matter where people go?
Down to the wood where the bluebell grows—
Anywhere, anywhere. I don't know.
—A. A. Milne in St. Nicholas.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Miss Playne ... declares that I am his greatest pleasure.

Mr. Blunt—Indeed! Then he isn't as wealthy as I supposed.—Boston Transcript.

Musician—... is the practical side of music?

Guest—Well, ... the fingerographs of ... keep the hair from falling out.—Exchange.

Tot—So you ... with Jim. Did he fall on ... ask you to forgive him?

Dot—Not ... You see his knees were occupied at the time.—New York Sun and Globe.

It's just as wrong to gamble when you win as when you lose.

"Yassuh," asserted Erastus Pinkley, "De immorality in lee as great, but de inconvenience ain't."—London Tit-Bits.

Was the party at Blinkenip's house last night a success?

It must have been. When it broke up no one was on speaking terms with the rest.—New York Sun and Globe.

"Are you sure these field glasses are high power?" asked the lady potential customer.

"Madam," replied the ambitious salesman, "when you use these glasses anything less than 10 miles away looks like its behind you."—American Legion Weekly.

KALEIDOSCOPE

The first passenger elevator in London was put in use in the Albert hall and was called "the moving room."

Chewing gum has at last come to be manufactured in Germany. The Teutonic variety comes wrapped in oiled paper, and the packages are a little smaller than the American size. It is known in Berlin as "kau gummi," and is especially recommended to athletes and stenographers.

On the flat housetops of Morocco girls may often be seen flying kites which they believe will give an augury of their future. If the kite remains unbroken good fortune in the happy marriage and handsome husband is in store for them; if mishap befall the kite evil days will be their portion. So much faith do the girls put in this test that if the kite is broken they are depressed for many days to come.

Mine-mouth power plants, about which much has recently been written, are only practicable where coal and condenser water occur side by side, says an article in Power, devoted to a description of one of the latest of these plants, that of the Penn Central Company, at Saxton, Pa. Coal is supplied from nearby semi-bituminous mines, while water is carried into the boilers from the Raystown branch of the Juniata river, which flows within a few hundred yards of the plant. The present development is 20,000 kilowatts, but conditions are favorable for expansion to four or five times that capacity.
